This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of James Augustin Greer, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 3d day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 14th day of June, 1905. JAMES W. GREER, EDWARD R. GREER, by H. Prescott Gatley, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,284. Admr. 24-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Walter C. Balderston, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Anna L. Quinban, otherwise known as Amy Lathrop, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of June, 1905. JOHN J. O'BRIEN, 1339 14th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,970 Adm. 23-3t

R. Golden Donaldson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Edward McMahon, Deceased.
No. 12,853. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Ellen McMahon, and summons having been duly issued against Joseph Patrick McMahon and Thomas McMahon, and returned not be found, it is ordered this 2d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Joseph Patrick McMahon and Thomas McMahon, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 7th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

Nelson Wilson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Otis B. Bullard, Deceased.
No. 12,965. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration, with will annexed, on said estate, by Henry M. Cutler, it is ordered, this 6th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown next of kin, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

Legal Notices.

Walter C. Clephane, Solicitor

In the Supeme Court of the District of Columbia.

H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee, v. John W. Pilling, Alan O. Clephane, Eliza Andrews, and the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link.
No. 25,433, Equity Docket.

The object of this suit is to declare the title to the real estate hereinafter described to be good in fee simple in the complainant by adverse possession, subject to the deed of trust in the bill of complaint described, said real estate being described as follows, to wit: the north one (1) foot six (6) inches of sublot thirty (30), and all of sublots thirty-one (31), thirty-two (32), and thirty-four (34), and the north fifty-two (52) feet of sublots thirty-five (35), thirty-six (36), and thirty-seven (37), of Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots twenty (20) to twenty-four (24), inclusive, of F. T. Browning, trustee's, subdivision of original lots numbered nine (9), ten (10), and eleven (11), in square numbered eighty-four (84), in the city of Washington, D. C., as said Miller's subdivision appears of record in book numbered twenty (20), at page 48 of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by Walter C. Clephane, his solicitor, it is, this 12th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Andrew Link, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of the period of publication hereinafter described; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Good cause having been shown, it is not necessary that this order shall be published for a longer period than that herein required. This order shall be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for four successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

John R. Shield, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Bridget Reardon, Deceased.
No. 12,611. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration c. t. a. on said estate, by Edward J. Duffy, it is ordered this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Annie Connell, Kate Philpot Elliott, and Hannah Philpot Smith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 24-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Emma L. Elliott et al., Complainants, v. William Prout et al., Defendants.
No. 25,317. In Equity. Doc. 56.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title of the complainants in fee simple by adverse possession to all of original lot numbered seven (7) in square numbered one thousand (1,000), improved by the two (2) dwellings, 1240-1242 on Eleventh street southeast, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, it is this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that William Prout, William King, and William Prout, Jr., or their respective unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees (if they be dead), cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter next after the day of this order; good cause for shortening the period of such publication having been shown. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

B. P. Mimmack, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Edward C. Halliday, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. HENRIETTA M. HALLIDAY, 1814 N st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,877. Administration. 24-3t

---

Philip Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Lucinda Bailey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM E. AMBROSE, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,929. Administration. 24-3t

---

A. A. Hoehling, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel H. Griffith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. WARREN G. GRIFFITH, 641 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,914. Adm. 24-3t

---

Hallam & Hallam, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of George Fouse, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. PATTY C. H. FOUSE, 7 Ledyard Place, Newport, R. I. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,861. Administration. 24-3t

---

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Magdalina Tugitt, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of June, 1905. JOHN P. HINKEL, 119 C st. S. E.; HENRY E. TRIPP, 410 A st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,937. Admin. 24-3t

Legal Notices.

Chase Roys, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Daisy E. Belt v. King Wilson Belt.
Eq. No. 22,898. Eq. Doc. 51.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bond of marriage. On motion of the complainant it is this 23d day of January, 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. (Signed) THOS. H. ANDERSON. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

---

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Ann Slight, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. FLOYD E. DAVIS, 7th and E sts. S. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,656. Administration. 24-3t

---

F. S. Bright, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding the Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Samuel Thomas Labby, Deceased. No. 12,988.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding the Probate Court, by Gustavus E. Labby and Morris H Labby, brothers of the decedent, for the granting of letters of administration on said estate to F. S. Bright, it is ordered this 13th day of June, 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ella Cabell Miller, daughter of, and Robert, Brandon, Lewis, William, Joyce, Garnett, and Nannie, grandchildren of Mary Joyce Neville; H. Denison Cole, Francis and Walter Denmead, Harold and Florence Denmead, Margaret and Elizabeth Amos, and any other unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Samuel Thomas Labby, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on July 17, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and the Baltimore Sun once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 24-3t

---

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Jennie R. Willoughby et al., Complainants, v. Philip H. Mires et al., Defendants. No. 25,437. Equity Docket 56.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant to original lots 11 and 12 in square 61 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainants by adverse possession. On motion of the complainants, by Barnard & Johnson, their solicitors, it is by the court, this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that Philip H. Mires, Philip Meyer, George Burnes, Christian Hines, Michael Myers, Matthew Hines, and William Robertson, or if they be dead, their unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days after the first publication of this order, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The court is satisfied by good cause shown by the affidavit filed herein that it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month during the period of not less than three (3) months. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks before said rule day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. L. Pollard and Mason N. Richardson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frank Marrow, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of June, 1905. WILLIAM L. POLLARD, 609 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,951. Administration. 23-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of Allegheny City, Pa., has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Elbert Clagett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of June, 1905. LAVINIA E. CLAGETT, care Smith Thompson, Jr., Colorado Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,953. Administration. 23-3t

John Paul Earnest, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Champe B. Thornton et al. v. Jennie T. Powers et al.
Equity, No. 21,956.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, herein filed, it is, this 2d day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered by the court that said trustee be, and he is hereby, authorized to accept the offer of Carl C. King, to purchase for $1,000 lot 8 in block 8, and also the offer of Harry C. Fisk to purchase for $600 lot 1 in block 13, both of said lots being in Grammer's addition to Takoma Park, recorded in county book 7, page 112, in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and included in the decree of sale in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sales of said lots be ratified and confirmed by the court unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 2d day of July, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 23-3t

W. H. Sholes, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
George Winsmore v. Samuel G. Thompson et al.
Equity, No. 25,323. Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to remove cloud on complainant's title to east one-half of lot 23 in Wright & Cox's subdivision of part of Pleasant Plains, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 5th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Samuel G. Thompson, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order is published in The Washington Times and The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 23-3t

R. E. Paire and John J. Brosnan, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of William G. Phillips, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of June, 1905. CHARLOTTE E. PHILLIPS, 1732 Connecticut Ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,957 Administration. 23-3t

Legal Notices.

Douglass & Douglass, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Balddy Ashbourne Capehart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of May, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of June, 1905. FANNY CAPEHART, care of Douglass & Douglass, Colorado Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,854. Adm. 23-3t

Julius I. Peyser and Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Herman Baumgarten, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of June, 1905. ADA BAUMGARTEN, 466 Mass. ave. N. W., ARTHUR BAUMGARTEN, 414 10th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNFR, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,977. Administration. 23-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Bernard H. Johnston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 7th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 7th day of June, 1905. JAMES M. JOHNSTON, WM. G. JOHNSON, 344 D st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,786. Administration. 23-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Norton Frank, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of June, A. D. 1965. EMMA R. ELIAS, care Geo. F. Williams, 606 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,954. Administration. 23-3t

F. D. McKenney and J. S. Flannery, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscribers, of the State of New York and the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alice L. Cilley, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 6th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 6th day of June, 1905. HARRIET C. RUSSELL, 21 West 11th st., New York City; EMMA CILLEY, 1539 I st. N. W., Wash., D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,913. Adm. 23-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

G. Percy McGlue, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Daniel M. Ryan, Deceased.
No. 12,922. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by James Ryan, it is ordered this 8th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to Johanna Carew, of Tipperary, Ireland, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 21st day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

Sydney F. Marshall, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Anna J. King, Deceased.
No. 12,926. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased and for letters testamentary on said estate, by A. Virginia Chessman, it is ordered this 7th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Joseph Plankington, Jesse Plankington, Rebecca Plankington, and Gertrude Plankington, of Netawaka, Kansas, and Horace Chessman, of Philadelphia, Pa., and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

Robert E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Aletia Ferguson, late of the State of Pennsylvania, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of June, 1905. MARK FERGUSON, 5154 Brown st., Phila., Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,899. Administration. 23-3t

W. C. Prentiss and C. S. Muir, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Saunders et al. v. William Holmead et al.,
Equity, No. 23,552. Docket 58.

Upon consideration of the sixth report of William C. Prentiss and Charles S. Muir, receivers in the above entitled cause, filed this day, stating that they have received from Thomas E. Jarrell an offer of twenty-five cents ($0.25) per square foot, all cash, for the west twenty (20) feet front, by the depth thereof, of lot numbered thirty-two (32) in block thirty-one (31) of the Washington Loan and Trust Company's subdivision in Petworth addition to the city of Washington, District of Columbia, it is by the court, this 7th day of June, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said receivers be and they are hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon payment of the purchase money, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of June, 1905. Provided a copy of this order shall be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 23-3t

Legal Notices

Irving Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth Behrens Kenny, Deceased.
No. 12,832. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicils of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by John W. Pilling, it is ordered this 2d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Hannah Williams and the unknown next of kin of Elizabeth Behrens Kenny, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 18th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Francis M. Moore, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of June, 1905. DAVID MOORE, 717 14th st. N. W.; WM. G. JOHNSON, 344 D st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,924. Administration. 23-3t

Irwin B. Linton, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Sarah Guffin, Deceased.
No. 12,938. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Susan A. Guffin and Harriet C. Guffin, executrixes, it is ordered this 8th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Richard Guffin, of Columbus, Ohio, and the unknown heirs of James Austin Guffin, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 23-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Wilson Gregory, Deceased.
Administration No. 12,948.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration, with the will annexed, on said estate, by Francis G. Gregory, it is ordered, this 8th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Anna Gregory Carl, Margaret Gregory Taylor, William H. Gregory, Mary Gordon, Phœbe Oliver, Edward F. Brooks. Mary Brooks, Lula Brooks, Katie Brooks, Webster Stauffer, Mary Myrtle Ranck, Walter Stauffer, Drew Stauffer, Mabel Brooks, and all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 19th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each week for three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 23-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 26

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - - JUNE 30, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 401
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Frank. W. Palmer, appellant, v. The District of Columbia 402
Amelia C. Travers, et al., appellants, v. Maria L. Reinhardt et al 406
Fannie E. Morgan, petitioner, v. Charles R. Morgan et al 409
Legal Notices 411

Retirement of Mr. Justice Martin F. Morris.

After a term of service of more than twelve years, and extending from the time of the creation of the court, Mr. Justice Martin F. Morris will retire from the Court of Appeals of this District on Friday, June 30, 1905. This action on his part, while expected for some time, causes general regret, not only to his associates on the bench, but the members of the bar and the community in general. Justice Morris has taken high rank as a judge. Coming to the bench after a long and most successful career at the bar, the qualities that made him eminent as a lawyer have distinguished him as a judge. The record of his judicial life is written in the reports of the court of which he has been an honored member. Justice Morris has also achieved wide distinction as an instructor in the law. He was one of the founders of the Georgetown University Law School, and in the long years of his service with that institution did much to give it the high rank it enjoys among the law schools of the country.

Justice Morris enjoys not only the highest respect of the members of the bar, but in a very large measure their cordial affection as well. It is the earnest wish of all that, while his active connection with the administration of justice in this District will end with his retirement, his life may be spared for many years to enjoy the rest to which his faithful labors in behalf of the best interests of the District entitle him. His retirement leaves but one of the original members of the court sitting—Mr. Chief Justice Shepard—and it is hoped it will be very many years before there will be occasion to name his successor.

Mr. Justice Louis E. McComas.

To fill the vacancy in the Court of Appeals of this District occasioned by the retirement of Mr. Justice Morris, the President has designated Hon. Louis E. McComas, of Maryland. The appointment will meet with general approbation. Justice McComas is not a stranger to our District bench, having served very acceptably for seven years as a justice of the Supreme Court of this District, and from which court he retired to accept an election as United States Senator from Maryland. It has been generally understood for some months that upon the contemplated retirement of Mr. Justice Morris he would be succeeded by Justice McComas. He is a lawyer of fine ability, and the success achieved by him during his previous occupancy of the bench is a guaranty that in the higher position to which he has been elevated he will render efficient service. It is expected that Justice McComas will take the oath of office on Saturday, July 1, 1905, though his active duties with the court will not begin until after the usual summer recess. He has many warm friends among the members of the District bar, who will welcome his return to the bench.

Resignation of Mr. Beach as United States Attorney

Mr. Morgan H. Beach, for several years United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, has tendered his resignation, and it has been accepted by the President, to take effect August 31, 1905. Mr. Beach was appointed to the position in November, 1902, to succeed Hon. Ashley M. Gould, who had been elevated to the bench; and his able discharge of its important functions has been the subject of very general recognition, and is especially referred to in the letter accepting his resignation. The work of the office during the period of his incumbency has been especially heavy, and included the preparation and trial of the cases in which officials of the Postoffice Department and others were charged with conspiracy. He has proven himself in many respects an admirable prosecuting officer. While seeking with relentless vigor to bring to justice those guilty of crime, he has been at all times fair in his methods and unfailing in courtesy to counsel appearing for the accused. Mr. Beach retires from the position with the cordial respect and esteem of both bench and bar. He will resume private practice, in which he was very successful before becoming a law officer of the Government.

The announcement of the successor to Mr. Beach in the office of United States Attorney has not yet been made.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

FRANK W. PALMER, APPELLANT,

v.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

SMOKE LAW; LIABILITY OF PUBLIC OFFICER FOR VIOLATION.

The Public Printer, as the custodian for the time being of the Government Printing Office, is liable for a violation of the act of Congress of February 2, 1899, prohibiting the emission of dense black or gray smoke from smokestacks or chimneys in the District of Columbia, other than chimneys of private residences; Mr. Chief Justice Shepard dissenting.

No. 1534. Decided June 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Affirmed.

Mr. Morgan H. Beach and Mr. A. R. Mullowney for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. B. Duvall, Mr. E. H. Thomas, and Mr. F. H. Stevens for the defendant in error.

Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellant was arraigned in the Police Court of the District, and there was judgment rendered against him there for the violation of what is known as the "smoke law" of the District, that is, the act of Congress of February 2, 1899 (30 Stat. 812), entitled "An act for the prevention of smoke in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes." The act has been repeatedly before this court for construction, and its validity has been uniformly upheld. This, however, is the first occasion in which a public official, charged with the custody and control of one of the great public buildings of the city, has been held for a violation of the act. The appellant is the Public Printer, and the question now to be determined is whether, as the custodian for the time being of the Government Printing Office, he is amenable to the courts for a violation of the law in permitting the issue of dense black or gray smoke from the chimneys of that office. Under the numerous adjudications cited on his behalf, there is undoubtedly great plausibility in the appellant's contention that the executive offices of the Government in this city are not subject to the municipal regulations which all other citizens are required to obey. But we can not give our assent to the proposition that there is any class of officials above the law, or that there is one law for the official and another for the private citizen with reference to the same duty equally incumbent upon all, and which requires the equal obedience of all, if the statute which commands it is to be at all effectual for the purpose for which it was enacted. We can not think that it was the intention of Congress to suppress the nuisance of smoke emanating from a private hotel, and at the same time to authorize it tenfold, perhaps a hundredfold, greater in volume in the great public building across the street. Such discrimination, if it be assumed to exist, would be manifestly unjust, and by its palpable injustice would tend to bring the statute into odium and contempt, and would contribute more than aught else to prevent its effective observance.

If there is any one principle of our American institutions which is dear above all others to the hearts of our people, and of which the disregard is above all other things repugnant to our sense of justice, it is that of equality before the law. And this principle of equality is more applicable than anywhere else to the matter of municipal regulations. Municipal regulations intended for the safety of life and limb, and for insuring the public health, if they would be effectual, can not be permitted to be violated with impunity by any one, no matter what may be his station or his official position, and even though the offender should seek to shield himself behind the protection of international privilege. The individual citizen, desirous to obey the law and to conform to all its reasonable requirements, will feel himself sorely tempted in a contrary direction, and will not be solicitous to suppress the nuisance of smoke on his own premises or to remove the dangerous accumulation of snow and ice from the sidewalks in front of his residence if on the opposite side of the street from him the agents of the municipality or the agents of Government are under no obligation on their part to contribute anything to the public safety in that regard.

The act of Congress, for the violation of which the appellant has been charged, is an exercise of the police power of the State, and is intended to suppress a public nuisance injurious to human comfort and human life. The nuisance is equally deleterious and equally a nuisance whether committed by a private person in the management of a factory, store, hotel, or apartment house, or by an officer of the Government in the management of a large building, such as the Government Printing Office, temporarily intrusted to his care; and neither in the letter nor in the spirit of the law is there any apparent purpose to be found to discriminate against the private citizen and in favor of the public official. The terms of the statute are general and comprehensive. In the broadest and most emphatic language it declares the emission of dense black or gray smoke from any smokestack or chimney in the District, other than the chimneys of exclusively private residences, to be a public nuisance, and punishable as such. It did not content itself with forbidding and punishing the act, but it characterized the act as a public nuisance, in order that there should be no doubt about the scope and purpose of the enactment, and in order to eliminate the nuisance of smoke from the District of Columbia. For apparently good reasons, which are obvious to every one, the movable engines used for the propulsion of railroad trains and steamboats were excluded from the operation of the act. And for still more obvious reasons, of which this court may take judicial cognizance, namely, because in them hard or anthracite coal was almost universally used, which emits little or no smoke—the chimneys of private residences were specially excepted. But with these exceptions the prohibition is general, and the buildings used for the business of the Government are as much within the spirit and the letter and the purpose of the enactment as are department stores, office buildings, and hotels. Indeed, were there discrimination in this regard, a grave question of constitutional right might arise, based upon the ground of palpable inequality, which such legislation would then suggest.

Digitized by Google

The same general purpose is evidenced in the sweeping enumeration of the persons liable to the penalty of the act, which comprise "the owner, agent, lessee, or occupant of any building of any description." Here, of course, if the scope and purpose of the enactment were such as to exclude the agents of the Government from its operation, we would not hesitate to hold, in accordance with the adjudications and with well-established principles of law, that these were not intended to be embraced within the statute, notwithstanding its very general and comprehensive language. But when we find the purpose to be general and to be best subserved by the inclusion of the agents of the Government, and when the language of the statute is amply sufficient in its generality to include such agents, we fail to see why they should not be regarded as embraced within its terms.

This conclusion is further strengthened by the fifth section of the act, which prescribes "that no discrimination shall be made against any method or device which may be used for the prevention of smoke and which accomplishes the purpose of this act." This would seem to be rather a direction by Congress to the agents of Government than an intimation to private citizens that they are entitled to use any proper device for the prevention of smoke. As an acknowledgment of private right in individual citizens, it would be meaningless; as a direction to officers of Government, it was eminently right and proper to insert it in the act; and the fact of the insertion of such a provision tends to show that the Congress intended that the officers of the Government in charge of public buildings should be included within the purview of the act.

On behalf of the appellant reliance is placed upon the well-established rule of law that where the State is not named in an enactment it is not bound by its provisions. Thus, the State ordinarily is not bound by the Statute of Limitations to which individual citizens are held, and there are numerous other illustrations to be found in the books; but this rule, it seems to us, is not here applicable. The appellant is not the State, nor does he represent the State, in this case. On the contrary, the State, or its representative, the municipality, is the party in interest against him. The State is interested, even as against its own officials, in having its laws enforced, especially those laws which are made for the preservation of the public health. It is not left to the public officials to determine for themselves whether they will obey the laws or not. It is not left to them to create a public nuisance at their pleasure and then shield themselves behind the pretense that they are the State and can not be held for that which the legislature expressly prohibited from being done. In France, in the days of Louis XIV, when he said that he was the state, this plea might hold. It might have availed a defendant even in the days of personal government in England, when the infamous maxim was in force that the king could do no wrong and his officers were shielded by his privilege. But we can not see how, in our country, and in this age and generation, a public official, charged with the commission of a public nuisance, which the legislative power of the State has endeavored most rigidly to prohibit, can protect himself by the claim that in the performance of the act he represents the State.

We have held in the case of Roth v. District of Columbia, 16 D. C. App. 323: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 432, that the municipality, even in the course of its performance of its governmental functions, is not entitled to perpetrate a nuisance. And the same rule will apply still more strongly to the executive officers of the Government, whose duty it is to execute and obey the laws, not to violate them. All laws are presumed to be consistent with each other until the contrary is shown; and, therefore, it is no excuse to a public official to secure him immunity for the violation of one law that he is obeying another. He must obey both. He must take all laws as qualifying each other, and, if he is the Public Printer, he must do the public printing under such rules and regulations as Congress has prescribed; and especially he must not do it under such conditions as Congress has prohibited.

Apart from the general principles which we have considered, and which we hold do not excuse him, the plea of the appellant is that he made estimates for the use of soft coal in the building under his charge; that he submitted those estimates to the proper committees of Congress, and that Congress approved them, and made its appropriation of money for the conduct of his office in accordance with them. But we fail to see how, in law or in reason, this affords any justification for a violation of the law against public nuisances. If this were the case of an agent for a private building, submitting to an absent or intangible owner, an estimate for the soft coal to be used in such building, and having the approval of such owner for his estimate, could it reasonably be contended for one moment that such estimate and approval would relieve the agent from liability for the creation of a public nuisance? Repeatedly in this court have we heard in this connection the pleas of parties that they have taken all the precautions in their power, and yet have been unable to prevent the prohibited emission of smoke from their chimneys; but, in the face of the express prohibitions of the act, and in the face of the fact taught by practical science that the nuisance is preventable, even with the use of soft coal, by the use of proper appliances and proper management, we have never held such pleas to be valid.

Congress has never prohibited the use of soft coal in this District. Such prohibition may be the inevitable result, if obedience is not otherwise rendered to the statute. But thus far it has evidently been the view of Congress that the use of soft coal is not inconsistent with the prevention of the public nuisance created by the emission of dense smoke from chimneys. This being the case, it is not apparent why the appellant should regard his use of soft coal under the authority of Congress as a justification of a public nuisance, which Congress has been careful to prohibit. In other words, it is not the use of soft coal that causes the public nuisance, but the use of it in an improper way or without the proper appliances, and the appellant has not said that he has used this coal in the proper way, or that he is without the proper appliances for the prevention of smoke from it. His true defense is, not that he has used soft coal under the authority of Congress, but that Congress has not furnished to him the proper appliances wherewith to divest such use of its resultant nuisance of smoke. And this defense he has not made. But let us assume that he has made it, and that this is what he means. Is it a good defense? We think not.

Digitized by Google

The smoke law has now been in force for upwards of six years. So far as the record before us discloses, it does not appear that during that whole period the appellant has at any time made any effort to conform to the requirements of the statute. It will not do for him to say that Congress has not provided him with the proper appliances when he has made no effort to procure such appliances. It can not be assumed that, in the multitude and magnitude of its public duties, Congress can take the initiative in the determination of the details needed for the conduct of any public office or department of Government.

The appellant was appointed to his office with the duty imposed upon him to conduct that office according to law—according to all the laws affecting it—the smoke law, as well as others; and he is not at liberty to conduct the business of that office in violation of law. The duty was incumbent upon him, as upon all executive officers, to report to Congress the requirements necessary for its management in accordance with the law. It does not appear that he has done so. If it appeared that he had made application for the proper appliances and that the application had been refused or ignored, perhaps a different question might be presented here. But that question is not presented now, and we can not assume that Congress will deliberately refuse to executive officers of the Government the necessary appliances for giving effect to its own act and its own specific and reiterated requirement.

We are of opinion that the judgment of the Police Court in this matter was right and just, and that it should be affirmed.

But, inasmuch as the operations of the Government Printing Office might be seriously interfered with by rigid enforcement of the act at the present time when Congress is not in session and application can not immediately be made to it by the appellant to remedy the result of past negligence, the municipal authorities, we think, would do well to exercise discretion in the matter of further prosecutions at this time.

Affirmed.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD dissenting:

Regretting that I can not concur in the judgment of my brethren, I think it proper to state the reasons for my dissent.

To the information presented against him the defendant entered a special plea alleging, in substance, that the said building was solely owned, used, and occupied by the United States; that in the discharge of his duties as Public Printer in the execution of the work carried on in said building, it was his duty to report, annually, to the "Joint Committee on Printing" of the two houses of Congress, submitting estimates of the materials and so forth, including fuel, for the use and consumption of said printing office, together with all contracts and payments therefor; that Congress has regularly appropriated the money for the purchase of bituminous coal to be used as fuel in the furnaces of said building, all of which purchases have been duly reported as aforesaid; that in the discharge of his duties he has used due care and prudence in the use of said bituminous coal in carrying on the work required by the United States in said building; and that the emission of smoke was occasioned by the use of said fuel notwithstanding his exercise of due care and prudence in the performance of his said duties.

The Attorney-General filed a motion on behalf of the United States to set aside and dismiss the information for want of jurisdiction of the court, on the ground, as he informed the court, that the building is the property of the United States, possessed, held, and occupied by them for public purposes, and that the defendant is a public officer of the United States and not the owner, agent, lessee, or occupant of the same.

The court denied this motion and sustained a demurrer to the said plea. The defendant electing to stand upon his plea, the court adjudged him guilty and sentenced him to pay a fine of $50, and in case of default in payment thereof to be imprisoned for sixty days.

There is no occasion to consider whether the Public Printer would be liable for the commission of a nuisance through his own wrongful act or neglect of duty, because the allegation of the exercise of due care and prudence in the use of the appliances furnished by the United States has been admitted by the demurrer to the plea. Nor is the effect of this allegation avoided by the further allegation that it was the duty of the Public Printer, among others devolved upon him by Congress, to make estimates of the supplies and fuel needed in the operation of the printing office, for the consideration of the "Joint Committee on Public Printing." For neglect of duty or misconduct, if any, in that respect he can be held responsible by the United States, but not by the District of Columbia in this proceeding.

Whatever effect his recommendations or want of recommendation may have had upon said committee, the fact remains that Congress provided by law for the operation of the engines of the Government Printing Office through the use of bituminous coal, without providing, at the same time, for the necessary appliances to consume the smoke therefrom.

The single question for determination, then, is, whether the act of Congress approved February 2, 1899, applies to the buildings in the District of Columbia belonging to and operated by the United States?

The act reads as follows:

"Section 1. That on and after six months from the passage of this act the emission of dense or thick black or gray smoke or cinders from any smokestack or chimney used in connection with any stationary engine, steam boiler, or furnace of any description within the District of Columbia shall be deemed, and is hereby declared to be, a public nuisance: Provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed as applied to chimneys of buildings used exclusively for private residences.

Digitized by Google

"Section 2. That the owner, agent, lessee, or occupant of any building of any description from the smokestack or chimney of which there shall issue or be emitted thick or dense black or gray smoke or cinders within the District of Columbia on or after the day above named shall be deemed and held guilty of creating a public nuisance, and of violating the provisions of this act.

"Section 3. That any person violating the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction thereof before the Police Court of the District of Columbia, be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense; and each and every day wherein the provisions of this act shall be violated shall constitute a separate offense."

The general object of the exercise of legislative power is the enactment of laws for the regulation of the acts and rights of citizens, and not of the sovereign. And the universal rule of construction is that the sovereign state is not bound or its rights affected by a statute of apparent general application unless expressly named therein, or unless the words used are so clear and unmistakable as to leave no doubt that such was the legislative intention. This rule has been uniformly applied in the construction of general statutes of limitations and bankruptcy, and others relating to revenue licenses and impositions, to interest upon debts and demands, to judgment and mechanics' liens, to practice and the like. U. S. v. Knight, 14 Pet. 301, 315; U. S. v. Insley, 130 U. S. 263, 266; U. S. v. Herron, 20 Wall. 251, 255; Lewis v. U. S., 92 U. S. 618, 622; Stanley v. Schwalby, 147 U. S. 508, 515; Page v. D. C., 20 App. D. C. 469, 474-5: 30 Wash. Law Rep. 758; State v. Milburn, 9 Gill. 105, 117; Carr v. State, 127 Ind. 204, 220; Seton v. Hoyt, 34 Oregon, 266, 273; Josselyn v. Stone, 28 Miss. 752, 763; Mayrhofer v. Board of Education, 89 Cal. 110; Fuller v. Roosevelt, 4 Cowen, 143; State v. Garland, 7 Iredell L. 48; Cole v. White, 32 Ark. 45, 51; Stoughton v. State, 5 Wis. 291, 297; Butler v. Merritt, 113 Ga. 238; Mayor v. King, 91 Ga. 522, 524; People v. Gilbert, 18 Johns. 227.

Authorities need not be multiplied in support of a general principle that has met with no judicial denial so far as my research has extended. In the main those have been selected which would seem to bear most directly upon the application of the general principle to the conditions presented by the case at bar; and some of these will be briefly reviewed.

In Page v. D. C., supra, it was held that an act providing in broad terms that no person shall sell liquor in the District of Columbia without a license, etc., did not apply to persons conducting restaurants in the Capitol under arrangements made with committees of the House and Senate respectively.

In State v. Milburn, supra, it was held that a general statute declaring that no bond shall be received in evidence that had not been stamped, as provided by a revenue law relating to bonds of every nature whatsoever, did not apply to an unstamped bond sued on by the State of Maryland.

In Josselyn v. Stone, supra, a general statute required the registration of all judgments in order to give liens, and another was subsequently passed providing that all such liens shall be enforced within a certain period or else lost. Held, that the latter statute, which did not name the State, though sweeping in its terms, did not apply to the lien of a judgment in favor of the State.

In Mayrhofer v. Board of Education, supra, it was held that a general statute providing for a mechanic's lien upon "any property," and "any building," did not extend to a school building in a district acting by authority of the State.

In Fuller v. Roosevelt, supra, it was held that a general statute abolishing imprisonment for debt did not bind the State because it was not named.

In Seton v. Hoyt, supra, a general statute providing for the running of interest on all debts and demands was held not apply to the debt of a county, because it was a subdivision of the State, and the latter was not named in the act.

In Cole v. White, supra, a general fee bill authorizing certain costs for the service of all writs by officers was held inapplicable to writs served in proceedings on behalf of the State. To the same effect, People v. Gilbert, supra.

In State v. Garland, supra, it was declared that the State was not bound by a general statute regulating jurisdiction in cases of appeal.

In Butler v. Merritt, supra, the following facts appear: The State, by authority of law, maintained a dispensary in a town for the sale of liquor. Subsequently, the town, by a popular vote taken in accordance with the provisions of a general local option law, put the latter in force. This was a sweeping act prohibiting the sale of liquor by all persons. The court held that sales by the State were not within the prohibition, and that the word "persons" did not include the agents of the State. In Stoughton v. State, supra, the defendant was indicted for a nuisance directly resulting from a dam maintained under grant of power by the State. The conviction was reversed on the ground that the State could not punish as a crime an act which it had expressly authorized. No question of injury done to private individuals by reason of the nuisance was involved. To the same effect, People v. Gas Works, 64 Barb. 69.

Tested by the principle stated, in the light of its application in the analogous cases before cited, I am of the opinion that the act of Congress does not apply to the public buildings of the United States in the District of Columbia. Had the regulation been enacted by the municipal authorities under broad general police powers conferred upon them by Congress from time to time, it would not be contended that they, without express authorization, could bring the buildings of the United States under their jurisdiction. From the beginning, a distinction has been carefully made, in respect of management, control, and police, between the public property occupied and used by the United States for governmental purposes, as well as much that is not so used; and that of ordinary public use which falls naturally within the scope of municipal control and supervision.

Digitized by Google

As regards the regulation of the uses of public property of the latter kind, as well as that of private owners, Congress, which is invested with plenary powers of legislation within the limits of the District of Columbia, has rarely, if ever, conferred upon the municipal authorities other than the minor powers of regulation that are common to municipal corporations in this country generally. Congress reserves to itself the granting of franchises in the public streets, their extension and improvement, as well as the regulation of some of their ordinary uses by the public. By direct legislation it has established some market places and provided for their general regulation; created hack and cab stands in certain public places, and has undertaken to provide for the removal of snow and ice from the sidewalks. See Coughlin v. D. C., 33 W. L. R. 376. Other instances might be cited. The act under consideration is a municipal regulation of the same nature. Clearly its primary object was to direct the uses of property ordinarily subject to municipal police regulation. The United States are not named in the act, and I do not find in the use of general words, common in all such local legislation, an unmistakable or certain intent to include their public buildings within its operation. The words "agent" and "occupant" in addition to "owner" and "lessee" are aptly used to meet the case of corporate ownership, and of private ownership where the owner retains no constant personal direction and management. The word "persons" used in the third section necessarily refers, and is limited in its meaning, to the "owner, agent, lessee, or occupant" named in the second section.

Neither "agent" nor "occupant" aptly describes the relation of the Public Printer to the owners of the building in this case. The occupation as well as the ownership of the building is unquestionably that of the United States; and the Public Printer, who superintends the business which they carry on, with the means and appliances furnished by the legislative department, is not their agent within the ordinary meaning of that word. He holds a public office created for the purposes of the Government, and to that end certain powers have been delegated to him. And a public officer is quite different from an ordinary agent. U. S. v. Maurice Z. Brock, 96, 102; Atty.-Gen. v. Drohan, 169 Mass. 534, 535; Atty.-Gen. v. Jochim, 99 Mich. 358, 367.

In the absence of some express declaration to the contrary, I regard it as most unreasonable to presume that Congress contemplated his prosecution and punishment, equally with the agents of private owners, when, in the exercise of ordinary care, he was engaged in the performance of public duties imposed upon him by law with the only means and appliances provided for the purpose. It requires more than inference to convict the Congress of the gross injustice and oppression of enacting a law embracing in its term the administration of a dapartment of the Government, and then subjecting the officer charged with that administration to punishment for the careful discharge of duties imposed upon him by express provisions of the law.

The apparent injustice of making a distinction between public and private ownership of buildings in respect of the emission of noisome smoke and cinders is a matter with which the courts have nothing to do. This injustice, however, consists not so much in the exemption of the buildings of the United States from the operation of a municipal regulation, as in the failure to provide the necessary fuel or appliances through which the emission of objectionable smoke might reasonably be prevented. In my opinion the judgment of the Police Court ought to be reversed with direction to sustain the plea and motion.

AMELIA C. TRAVERS ET AL., APPELLANTS,

v.

MARIA L. REINHARDT ET AL.

WILLS; CONSTRUCTION OF DEVISE; MARRIAGE, PROOF OF; EVIDENCE.

1. Testator devised the greater part of his real estate to his sons in two classes of devises—the first in fee simple; and as to the second, he directed that if any of the sons should die without leaving a wife or children living at his death, the estate devised to him should go in fee to the surviving sons and the child or children of such as might be dead, such child or children representing the share of the father; but if either son should, at his death, leave a wife, with or without child or children, she should be entitled to dower. Two of the sons died, each leaving a widow but childless—the one intestate, his heirs at law being two brothers and three sisters; the other leaving a will devising his real estate in this District to his brothers and sisters, and his estate elsewhere to his widow. Subsequently the sole surviving son died, leaving as his heirs several children who claimed the entire interest of their two uncles under the limitations in the second class of devises above referred to, though their father made no such claim in his lifetime. Held, denying this contention, that upon the death of the first son, leaving his wife surviving, his interest under the second class of devises passed to his two brothers and sisters as his heirs at law; and, upon the death of the other, leaving his wife living, his interest passed to the devisees under his will.
2. Whether a lawful marriage subsisted between parties domiciled in New Jersey at the time of the death of one of them depends upon the law of that State, in which a valid marriage may be entered into by contract per verba de presenti, no particular ceremony being necessary.
3. The evidence in the present case reviewed, and held sufficient to show a valid marriage under the laws of New Jersey.
4. The admission by a witness on cross-examination that she had testified falsely in one particular held not to require the rejection of her entire testimony.

No. 1525. Decided May 23, 1905.

APPEAL by complainants from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 21,484, in suit for partition. Affirmed.

Mr. E. A. Newman, Mr. A. A. Birney, and Mr. Charles H. Stanley for the appellants.

Mr. W. A. Gordon, Mr. Geo. E. Hamilton, and Mr. M. J. Colbert for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This suit was begun by a bill filed by Amelia C. Travers and her husband, Charles E. Travers, whose assignee she is, for the partition of certain real estate in the District of Columbia formerly belonging to Nicholas Travers, who died testate in January, 1849. The defendants are heirs at law or claimants under certain devisees of the said Nicholas Travers. The property has been sold by order of the court, all parties consenting thereto, and the distribution of the proceeds of the sale awaits the final determination of the interests of the several claimants thereof.

Digitized by Google

Nicholas Travers devised a large estate in unequal proportions to his four sons and three daughters—Elias, Nicholas, Joseph, James, Mary, Elizabeth, and Sidney Virginia. The greater portion was devised among the sons named in two classes of devises. In those of the first class he used the words "in fee simple." In the second class these words are omitted. The distinction made between the two is expressly recognized and referred to in the following general provision: "With regard to the several estates hereinbefore devised to my several sons, it is hereby declared to be my will, and I do order and direct, as a general provision, that if any of my sons should die without leaving a wife, or a child or children living at his death, then his estate herein devised to him, saving and excepting those portions thereof expressly granted and so named to be "in fee simple," and which they can sell and dispose of as they think fit, shall go, and be invested in fee, to my surviving sons and the child or children of such as may be dead, such child or children representing the share of the father—but if either of my sons shall, at his death, leave a wife either with or without a child or children, such wife shall be entitled to her dower rights and privileges." The property involved in this controversy is the real estate (and now the proceeds thereof), coming within the limitations of the foregoing general provision, that was devised to Joseph Travers and James Travers. Joseph Travers died intestate in September, 1882, leaving a widow since deceased, but no child or children or descendants of such. His heirs at law were his brothers Elias and James and his three sisters before mentioned. James Travers died in October, 1883, leaving a will devising his real estate in the District of Columbia to his surviving brothers and sisters, and all property elsewhere to his wife. Whether he was ever lawfully married to the person named in the will as his wife is one of the questions to be determined.

Elias Travers died intestate on April 29, 1887, and his heirs at law are his children, Charles E. Travers and the defendants John H. Travers, Joseph Travers, James W. Travers, Sidney Travers, and Kate M. M. Owens. These last claim the entire interest in the real estate devised to Joseph and James Travers that comes within the limitations of the provision of the will of Nicholas Travers before quoted. The auditor, to whom the settlement of the account of sales and the settlement of the interests of the parties had been referred, found against this contention. He found also that James Travers had been married to the wife named in his will who survived him.

His report was confirmed and a decree entered for the distribution of the proceeds of the sale in accordance therewith, from which this appeal has been prosecuted by the heirs of Elias Travers.

Upon the admitted fact that Joseph Travers, who died intestate, had been lawfully married to a wife who survived him, and assuming, for the time being, that James Travers, who devised all of his estate in the District to his surviving brothers and sisters, left a surviving wife also, the question to be determined is, whether their interests in the real estate embraced within the terms of the general provision of the will of Nicholas Travers passed to the heirs at law of the one, and the devisees of the other, or became vested in the surviving brother Elias?

The answer involves the ascertainment of the intention of the testator as expressed in the language of the general provision which, having been set out above, need not be repeated.

The claim that the entire estate became vested in Elias Travers, upon the death of his brothers Joseph and James, respectively, without leaving a child or children, rests upon the contention that the dominant intention of the testator was to retain the succession, as regards the property embraced in the limitations of the general provision, in the direct line of his male heirs; and that this dominant intention compels a construction of the general provision that would substitute the word "and" for the disjunctive "or" where it first occurs in the line "without leaving a wife, or a child or children." We agree with the opinion expressed by the auditor and the learned trial justice that there is no expression of such a controlling intention as to require this substitution. The words used are plain and unambiguous. This being so they must be given their ordinary and usual meaning, and can not be controlled by conjecture. The same words are repeated in another part of the general provision itself; and at the end of the first item of disposition in the will it is provided that certain of the devises therein "shall be subject to the general provision hereinafter made in case of any of my sons dying without having a wife or a child or children." This repetition of the phrase tends to show deliberation and care in the selection of words expressive of the testator's intention.

That Elias Travers himself, and after his death his heirs, took an entirely different view of the testator's intention from that now maintained on their behalf, is conclusively shown by the testimony introduced by the appellees in support of an allegation in their answers setting up an agreement by way of family settlement. It was alleged that in December, 1882 (after the death of Joseph), Elias and James Travers entered into a written agreement with their three sisters, by which it was provided that the interest of Joseph in the property under the operation of the general provision aforesaid should be treated as the joint and equal property of all of the said parties, which said agreement was carried into effect by entrusting the property to a joint agent who distributed the revenues thereof in accordance with its terms. That after the death of James Travers the same agreement was extended to his interest. And that after the death of Elias Travers the revenues of the undivided property were collected and distributed by the same agent among the heirs of all in their proper proportion until a short time before the filing of the amended bill in this suit.

Digitized by Google

No such written agreement could be found, nor could direct proof of it be made, because all of the parties who would have had any actual knowledge of the same had departed this life before the controversy began. In the view that we have taken of the proper disposition of the case it is not necessary to determine whether the circumstantial evidence is sufficient to show that such an agreement was in fact executed as alleged. Whether so or not, Elias Travers certainly acquiesced in the claim of his sisters. The evidence shows beyond question that after Joseph's death the rents of his portion were distributed equally between Elias, James, and the three sisters. On January 1, 1886, Elias joined his sisters in the lease of a parcel of the property now in question to one Smith, in which the lessors are recited as "the only heirs at law of the late James Travers, deceased," and which provided that the rent should be paid to the lessors and surrendered to them and their heirs. After Elias' death the same distribution of the rents of the parts of the property devised to Joseph and James was continued.

The only materal question that remains for determination is whether James H. Travers was survived, as alleged, by a lawful wife. The only evidence of the marriage consists of the testimony of the alleged wife, since married to another person. She testified to the following facts substantially: She was an orphan 17 years old when she met James H. Travers, and her domicile was in West Virginia. James H. Travers lived in the District of Columbia. She went with him to Alexandria, Virginia, in August, 1865, where what she supposed to be a regular marriage ceremony was celebrated between them. There was no marriage license in fact, and the person who performed the pretended marriage ceremony was not a minister, though she believed him to be one at the time. They cohabited thereafter until James Travers' death at Point Pleasant, New Jersey, on November 1, 1883. They first took a trip to New Jersey; were in New York on several visits, and spent about three weeks in the city of Washington, boarding with a tenant of Travers. She believed that she had been lawfully married until she learned the truth about six years afterwards. He always said "that it was all right, and we were just as much married as if we had been married before a priest or a minister." In 1867 he bought a farm in Talbot County, Maryland, where they lived together nearly sixteen years. During the whole time he called her and introduced her as his wife, and she was so recognized in the community generally. They removed to Point Pleasant, New Jersey, in 1883, and she was there recognized and reputed to be his wife until his death. She had two children by James Travers, both of whom were stillborn. By way of corroboration a mortgage, executed on September 27, 1867, to secure the purchase money of the Talbot County farm, by James Travers and his wife, Sophia V. Travers, was read in evidence. She was named therein as his wife, and her acknowledgment was so taken and certified to by a justice of the peace. The instrument was duly recorded. An unattested will purporting to have been executed by James Travers in Talbot County, Maryland, on February 8, 1881, in which the bulk of his estate is devised and bequeathed to "my wife, Sophy Virginia Travers," was also produced. Another will was read in evidence, that was made at Point Pleasant, New Jersey, October 5, 1883. This was duly executed and attested by three witnesses. It was probated in the proper court in New Jersey, and letters testamentary were issued to said Sophia V. Travers. Later it was registered in the District of Columbia. By this will the testator devised all of his estate in the District of Columbia to his brothers and sisters. The remainder of his property of every description he devised and bequeathed, as recited, "to my wife while she remains my widow," with full power of alienation, etc., with remainder over to a daughter of such as may remain undisposed of at her decease. It is further recited: "In the event of my wife's contracting another marriage then it is my will that she shall possess and enjoy as of her own right only one-third of the property remaining." . . . By the last clause his wife is appointed sole executrix.

It is contended that no weight whatever should be given to the oral testimony above summarized, because on cross-examination the witness admitted that she had testified falsely in one particular. It appears that on her first examination she became greatly excited and abruptly left the examiner's office. Later her cross examination was resumed in Philadelphia, where she had her residence. She then confessed to having made a false statement relating to a matter not hereinbefore stated. We can not agree with the contention that the conditions presented compel the application to this evidence of the maxim, falsus in uno falsus in omnibus. The witness had no interest whatever in the subject-matter of the litigation. The single false statement related to a matter not material in the determination of the case. Its recital is unnecessary, it being sufficient to say that it involved the reputation of another person, and that the temptation to shield that reputation was a strong one indeed. Having made the statement, she subsequently admitted its falsity under no apparent fear of contradiction or penalty. No withdrawal was made of any statement concerning her relations with James Travers, and no attempt was made to contradict any one of them, although the cross-examination shows that inquiry had been made in the community in which she lived so long in Maryland concerning his representations that she was his wife. Moreover, the documentary evidence before recited corroborates every statement made by her save that relating to the pretended marriage ceremony. That statement does not appear to be incredible, but whether it be true or false is, in our view of the case, of no practical importance.

The legal status of the said Sophia V., as the wife of James Travers at the time of his decease, does not depend upon the law of Virginia where the pretended marriage ceremony was performed. And it may be conceded that the pretended marriage was absolutely void in that State for the want of the statutory license. Offield v. Davis, 100 Va. 250. Nor does it depend upon the law of Maryland wherein so many years of the alleged married life of the parties were spent. Consequently it is unnecessary to determine whether, in that State, though a valid marriage will be presumed upon proof of cohabitation, general reputation, and acknowledgment of the existence of the relation, it will so be in a case where it is shown that cohabitation began without the requisite ceremony. See Barnum v. Barnum, 47 Md. 251, 296; Richardson v. Smith, 80 Md. 89, 93.

Digitized by Google

That an informal marriage by contract per verba de presenti constitutes a valid marriage by the common law, which then, at least, prevailed in the District of Columbia, there can be no doubt. Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 78. But whether a lawful marriage has been shown in this case depends upon the law of New Jersey; where the parties had their domicile at the time of the death of James Travers. If lawful there it will be recognized here. It seems well settled in that State that a valid marriage may be en tered into by contract per verba de presenti; no particular ceremony is necessary. Nor is it of any consequence that the original relations of the parties may have been illicit, provided there be sufficient evidence that a contract of marriage was thereafter made. Atlantic City R. R. v. Goodin, 62 N. J. L. 394, 401.

That was an action for damages for an injury resulting in death, brought by the alleged widow of the deceased. There had been a ceremonious marriage between the parties many years before, but at that time Goodin had a lawful living wife from whom he had separated. After obtaining knowledge of that fact, plaintiff continued to cohabit with him. About 1892, the real wife died. Presumption of marriage, it was said, could not be indulged from the mere fact of cohabitation illicit in its commencement. The plaintiff testified, however, to a contract with Goodin, made verbally after the death of his first wife. There was no other evidence tending to show such a contract save a declaration made by Goodin sometime in 1892 or 1893, to a niece of plaintiff, and testified to by her alone, that, "Your aunt now is my lawful wife." Upon this evidence plaintiff was held to be his lawful wife.

The testimony in this case is far stronger. The alleged wife testified to statements made to her by James Travers, after her discovery of the fact of the unlawfulness of the marriage, tending in some degree to warrant an inference of contract. This was followed by his public recognition of her as his wife, testified to by her, and shown in the recitals of the mortgage and of the unprobated will written by himself. After taking up residence in New Jersey, he continued to recognize her publicly as his wife. Whatever doubt there might be of the sufficiency of this evidence alone is settled by the recitals of the will made in New Jersey. Therein he devised and bequeathed certain of his estate to her as his wife, without giving her name, the amount thereof dependent upon her remaining his widow. And by another recital, whether so intended or not, he met the very condition of a previous actual contract of marriage by the words, "in the event of my wife's contracting another marriage." She could not contract another marriage unless she had first contracted one with him.

We are of the opinion that the evidence is sufficient to show that James Travers had a lawful wife at the time of his decease. In accordance with the foregoing conclusions, the decree must be affirmed with costs; and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

FANNIE E. MORGAN, PETITIONER,
v.
CHARLES R. MORGAN ET AL.

APPEALS; TRANSCRIPT OF RECORD; POWER OF COURT TO COMPEL HUSBAND TO PAY COSTS OF.

This court is without power to order a husband, the appellee in a divorce proceeding, to pay to the appellant a sum reasonably sufficient to enable her to prosecute the appeal, where the appeal has not been perfected by the filing of the transcript of record in this court.

No. 209. Original Docket. Decided April 11, 1905.

PETITION for an order requiring respondent to provide funds for prosecution of appeal from decree granting divorce, etc. Denied.

Mr. A. S. Worthington for the petitioner.

Mr. Andrew Wilson and Mr. N. W. Barksdale opposed.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a petition asking this court to pass an order directing the respondent to pay over to the petitioner a sufficient sum to enable her to prosecute an appeal from the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the same to cover the costs of a transcript of the record, and reasonable attorney's fees. A further order is prayed enjoining the respondent from taking possession of certain real estate under said decree, and from, in any wise, interfering with the occupation thereof by petitioner and her children.

The facts disclosed by the petition and exhibits are these: (1) The respondent, Charles R. Morgan, filed a bill in the Supreme Court of the District, praying a divorce from the petitioner, Fannie E. Morgan, on the ground of adultery. (2) Thereafter, on November 7, 1902, petitioner filed a bill against said Charles R. Morgan, seeking specific performance of an oral agreement by said Charles R. Morgan to convey to her the title to certain real estate in the District, upon which she and her said husband and their children then lived. (3) Her said bill was dismissed on February 15, 1905, and from that decree she has appealed, intending to perfect her said appeal. (4) Petitioner filed a cross bill in the suit of Charles R. Morgan for divorce. (5) March 6, 1905, the court ente.ed a final decree, dismissing petitioner's cross bill and granting a divorce to said Charles R. Morgan upon his bill. (6) Said decree adjudged the costs of suit against Charles R Morgan and one Frank Michinard, co-respondent, and further ordered said Charles R. Morgan to pay to petitioner, within thirty days, $400, as alimony accruing due under former orders of the court, and $200 as additional counsel fees for the prosecution of her case in said court. (7) It was also ordered that, until the further order of the court, the petitioner shall have the custody of the children, three in number, and that said Charles R. Morgan shall pay to her the sum of $30 per month for the support of the said children. (8) Before the entry of the said final decree the petitioner, announcing her intention to appeal from so much thereof as denied the relief prayed in her cross bill, and granted the prayer of said Charles R. Morgan for divorce, prayed the court for an order compelling said Charles R. Morgan to pay a further sum to the petitioner for the services of her solicitors to be rendered in the prosecution of her said appeal. (9) As recited in the decree this application was denied. (10) The former order of the court restraining said Charles R. Morgan from entering the dwelling house where petitioner then resided and removing anything therefrom, or interfering with petitioner's possession, was dissolved. (11) From so much of the decree as dismissed her cross bill and sustained the bill of Charles R. Morgan, as well as from so much of the same as denied the allowance of solicitor's fees on appeal, the petitioner gave notice of appeal. (12) The appeal was allowed upon condition that an appeal bond for $50 be executed. (13) It does not appear from the allegations of the petition that this bond has been executed, but from the statement of counsel, it has been approved and filed in the court below. (14) The petition further alleges the innocence of the petitioner of the charge of adultery, her inability to raise the money necessary to perfect her appeal, and that she has been advised by counsel that her case is one that should be heard on appeal.

Digitized by Google

Whether this court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, has the power to order a husband, who is the appellee in a divorce proceeding, to pay to the appellant a sum of money reasonably sufficient to enable her to prosecute an appeal which has been perfected by filing a transcript as required by the rules regulating appeals in general, is a question that is not involved in the consideration of the prayer of petitioner.

Assuming, without deciding, that the power may be exercised in such a case, we are of the opinion that we have no jurisdiction to exercise it in the case presented by this petition. The filing of an appeal bond, if such be the fact, is but a preliminary step in the perfection of an appeal. Complete jurisdiction, for all the ordinary purposes of the appeal, is not acquired until the transcript shall have been filed. Having filed an appeal bond, the appellant is under no compulsion to obtain and file a transcript in this court, but may abandon the appeal. In case of his failure to file the transcript within the prescribed period, the appellee may obtain and file one at his own cost, if so advised, and obtain a hearing thereon; otherwise, he may, upon presenting the proper certificate showing the appellant's abandonment of the appeal, cause the same to be formally docketed and dismissed. Rule XIV.

Without such a transcript there is no proper foundation for the exercise of discretion upon a prayer for an order either affecting the merits of the appeal or the charges incidental to its effective prosecution. Even if the appellate court would have the power, after acquiring complete jurisdiction in the manner indicated, to make an order compelling the appellee to advance the money necessary to the prosecution of the appeal, the better practice would be to apply to the trial court for such an order, as was in fact done in this case. The power of the trial court to make such an order on behalf of the appellee from a decree awarding alimony, has been affirmed in a recent case. Sparks v. Sparks: 33 Wash. Law Rep. 344.

Moreover, in order to grant the prayer of the petitioner, the court, if vested with the power, would be compelled not only to act without the knowledge of the facts to be obtained from the transcript of the proceedings below, which is, in part at least, necessary to the exercise of a reasonable discretion, but also, in advance of the hearing, to reverse in part the decree from which the appeal is sought to be prosecuted.

The petition must be denied with costs, and it is so ordered.

Bailment—Negligence—Prima Facie.—A total failure of a bailee, to whom goods are intrusted for delivery, to deliver or account for goods, is prima facie evidence of negligence. Simonoff v. Fox, 91 N. Y. Supp. 757.

Frauds, Statute of—Conveyances—Ferry Landing.—A continuing right to use land for a landing place for a ferry is within Rev. St. 1895, art. 624, providing that no estate of inheritance shall be conveyed, except by an instrument in writing. Parsons v. Hunt (Tex.), 84 S. W. Rep. 644.

Patents—Infringement—Change of Form.—The fact that a defendant has appropriated the device of a patent and has been very successful in its sale is persuasive evidence against him on the defense of anticipation. A. R. Milner Seating Co. v. Yesbera, U. S. C. C. of App., Sixth Circuit, 133 Fed. Rep. 916.

Contracts—Validity.—A contract between a bank and a manufacturer, whereby the bank was to advance to him certain money, but the manufacturer was not bound to accept it unless he found it necessary, held unilateral. Swindell & Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Ga.), 49 S. E. Rep. 673.

Bailment—Piano—Action for Rent.—In an action for the rent of a piano, where there was no evidence as to its condition, nor as to value of its use, it was error to direct a verdict for plaintiff for a specified sum.—O'Donnell v. Wing & Son (Ga.), 49 S. E. Rep. 720.

Bankruptcy—Discharge—Individual Note of Partner.—A judgment on a note for a firm debt, though signed only by the partners individually, held within the discharge in bankruptcy of the partners from debts provable against the partnership estate. Young v. Stevenson, Ark., 84 S. W. Rep. 623.

Attorney and Client—Compensation—Reasonable Fee.—In the absence of an agreement as to the amount of an attorney's compensation, he is entitled to the reasonable value of his services. Dempsey v. Wells (Mo.), 84 S. W. Rep. 1015.

Digitized by Google

JUDGMENT FOR SALE.

I. Geraci vs. M. Leavy.

Judgment and costs, $54.50.

1t Apply 204 McGILL BLDG., CITY.

Legal Notices

FIRST INSERTION.

R. B. Behrends, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
In Re Estate of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, Deceased.
No. 8794.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper writing, dated the 13th day of April, 1898, purporting to be the last will and testament of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, has been returned as to Frederick W. Boucher, Edward Boucher, and Rosa Mitchell "not to be found," it is, this 27th day of June, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this case be, and they are hereby, set down for trial on the 10th day of October, 1905, and that this order and the substance of said issues heretofore framed shall be published once a week for four weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

ISSUES.

1. Was the said paper writing propounded as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, executed by her in due form of law? 2. Was the said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, of sound mind, and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? 3. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured through the undue influence, importunities, suggestions, and persuasions of any person or persons? 4. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured by the fraud, deceit, or misrepresentations practiced upon her by any person or persons? 26-4t

Wm. E. Ambrose, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Arshak Abramian, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM E. AMBROSE, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,021. Administration. 26-3t

W. A. McKenney, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
American Security and Trust Co., a Corporation, Complainant, v. Willard H. Myers et al., Defendants.
No. 25,432. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to procure a sale of the interest of the defendant, Willard H. Myers, in and to the real and personal property held by the defendant, the National Safe Deposit Savings and Trust Company of the District of Columbia as administrator de bonis non, cum testamento annexo, and as trustee, under the will of Martha P. Myers, deceased, to satisfy the judgment of the complainant against said Willard H. Myers. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order is published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

M. J. Keane and M. J. Colbert, Solicitors

[Filed June 22, 1905—J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Equity Court.
Patrick J. Daly, Complainant, v. Douglass S. Mackall, the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Samuel L. Sterrett. Equity No. 24,224. Doc. 54.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to lots thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in Patrick J. Daly's subdivision of part of square 539, as per plat recorded in liber 28, folio 13, of the records of the surveyor's office for the District of Columbia, located in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, by Michael J. Keane, his solicitor, it is by the court, this 22d day of June, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Samuel L. Sterrett, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court; otherwise this case will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Absalom Baird, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM BAIRD, State Home, Annapolis, Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,022. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta P. Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. JOHN H. F. MEYER, 904 23d st. N.W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,998. Administration. 26-3t

W. H. Marlow, Jr., Solicitor

[Filed June 21, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Thomas Tracy et al. v. James E. Mulligan et al.
Equity No. 24,670. Doc. 55.

Walter H. Marlow, Jr, the trustee herein, having reported sale at public auction of part of original lot one (1) in square seven hundred and forty-nine (749) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, more fully described by metes and bounds in these proceedings, and otherwise known as lot forty-two (42) in O'Donnoghue's subdivision of said square, as per plat in Book C. H. B., page 137, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia, improved by house No. 1004 Third street N. E., to Edward A. Scanlon, for the sum of ten hundred and forty-five dollars ($1045), all cash; it is therefore, this twenty-first (21st) day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the twenty-second (22d) day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by L. P. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. L. Elterich, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Heinrich Wilhelm Feador Dukehart, Deceased. No. 13,010. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by John Waldman and H. A. Schenerman, it is ordered this 23d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs of the decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 31st day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

E. B. Hay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Anna L. Norville, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY, Bond Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,931. Administration. 26-3t

Fillmore Beall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Trueman D. Beckett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. CATHERINE E. BECKETT, 454 10th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,932. Administration. 26-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Charlotte Conrad et al. v. Minnie F. Briscoe.
Equity. No. 25,135.

Upon consideration of the report of Thomas Walker and George F. Collins, trustees, this day filed, it is, this 29th day of June, 1905, adjudged and ordered by the court that the sale thereby reported of part lot 26, in square 411, to Clement Dorsey for the sum of $1,565, be and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 31st day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Theophilus Bray, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN YARNOLD, 1222 C st. S. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,017. Administration. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

C. F. Carusi, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Mary C. Shafer et al., by their Next Friend, John L. Sassin, v. George D. Shafer. No. 3221.

George D. Shafer, trustee, having reported that he has received from Thomas W. Barker an offer of five hundred dollars, cash, for a part of a tract of land situate in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, known as "Fox," lying adjacent to the Georgetown College property, and beginning for the same in the south line of the said college property thirty-eight feet east of the intersection of the said college property and the Foxall estate, thence south 1½° west 120.65 feet, thence east at right angles to said line 20 feet, thence north parallel to said first line 120.65 feet to the line of the college property, and thence west in a straight line to the beginning, it is by the court, this 29th day of June, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said trustee be and he is hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon payment of the purchase money, unless cause to contrary be shown on or before the 29th day of July, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 26-3t

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Johnson v. Alice Johnson.
No. 24,976. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the ground of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alice Johnson, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Oscar Nauck, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Mary Cosgrove, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 17th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN NAUCK, by Oscar Nauck, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,179. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. H. Baden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Israel E. Kirk, Deceased.
No. 12,983. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by August Donath, one of the creditors of said decedent, it is ordered, this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William G. Kirk, Charles Mahon Kirk, Raymond Kirk, and Nell Kirk Taylor, sole heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 1st day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. A. Donch, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martin Mangold, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MANGOLD, St. Elizabeth, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,874. Administration. 26-3t

Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James D. Sterling, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. THOMAS G. SMYTH, 2436 Pa. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,005. Administration. 26-3t

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary J. Cullen, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. CATHERINE C. CULLEN, 417 6th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,996. Administration. 26-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Jane E. Williams et al., Complainants, v. Mary R. Ketner et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,309.

John L. Cassin, trustee, having reported sale at public auction of the real estate decreed to be sold in this cause, to wit: lots 4 and 5 in square 62, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to M. Frank Ruppert, for the sum of $1,709.70, it is, therefore, this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale will be ratified and confirmed on the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before said last mentioned day. Provided that a copy of this order be published in each of three successive issues of The Washington Law Reporter prior to the last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 25-3t

Henry S. Matthews, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas B. Campbell, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 10th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. GEORGE J. EASTERDAY, executor, by Henry S. Matthews, attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 10,707. Adm. 25-3t

Legal Notices.

Geo. E. Fleming, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Albert T. Salter, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. SARAH G. B. SALTER, 1924 I st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,997. Administration. 25-3t

Bendheim & Rothschild, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Michael Dietz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of June, 1905. DAVID ROTHSCHILD, 472 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,982. Administration. 25-3t

Leckie, Fulton & Cox, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hannah Barnes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. CREED M. FULTON, Fendall Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,921. Administration. 25-3t

S. Herbert Giesy, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice. That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Mary W. Eveleth, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 17th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. GUSTAVUS B. MAYNADIER, Executor, by S. Herbert Giesy, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,130. Administration. 25-3t

Andrew Y. Bradley, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Bridget Werner, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. MARGARET RYAN, 103 Bank st., New York City. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No 12,923. Administration. 25-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Edward Shoemaker and Elizabeth Shoemaker, Complainants, v. John Curran and Hannah Curran, his Wife; George T. Shoemaker, Jesse Shoemaker, William F. Shoemaker, Isaac W. Shoemaker and Mary Shoemaker, his Wife; Eliza Davison and John F. Davison, her Husband; Ada V. Queen and Frank Queen, her Husband; Margaret E. Fowler and William S. Fowler, her Husband; Nancy R. Shoemaker, Elwood Shoemaker, Frank W. Shoemaker, and George T. Shoemaker, Defendants.

In Equity. No. 12,480.

Upon consideration of the report of John W. Bogley and Samuel H. Bogley, trustees, herein filed, showing that they have sold so much of that tract of land as lies in the District of Columbia, which was conveyed by deed of Clement Cox and others to Jesse Shoemaker, dated the 17th day of November, 1841, and recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, in liber 1577, at folio 235, et seq., being the same land commonly known as "Friendship," or the "Jesse Shoemaker" tract, containing about twelve and one-half acres, to John T. Meany for five hundred and one dollars ($501) per acre, it is this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once in each of three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 25-3t

F. Walter Brandenburg, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Walter Weston, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 3d day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 14th day of June, 1905. EDWARD L. WESTON, by F. Walter Brandenburg, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,148. Administration. 25-3t

Weston Flint, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of William B. Brown, Deceased.
No. 11,108. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration de bonis non on said estate, by Weston B. Flint, it is ordered this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mrs. Nannie B. Sabine, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 25-3t

Alex. Muncaster, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary Schnappauf, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of June, 1905. ALEXANDER MUNCASTER, 482 La. ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,000. Administration. 25-3t

Legal Notices.

Lester & Price, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Agnes M. Beuchert, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 19th day of June, 1905. JOHN A. RUPPERT, 726 9th st. N. E.; LENA BEUCHERT, 722 H st. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,867. Administration. 25-3t

Chas. W. Darr and Alex. Wolf, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of John Curtis, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers on or before the 20th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 20th day of June, 1905. ALEXANDER WOLF, Jenifer Bldg.; CHARLES W. DARR, 707 G st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 11,974. Administration. 25-3t

E. F. Colladay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hugh Masterson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of May, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of June, 1905. ALICE E. MASTERSON, 1529 32d st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,303. Administration. 25-3t

A. B. Duvall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James S. Robinson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of June, 1905. ANDREW B. DUVALL, Columbian Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 10,978. Administration. 25-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Thomas P. Woodward and W. Mosby Williams, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Georgine Simms et al. v. Elizabeth Taylor et al.
Equity 23,817.

W. Mosby Williams and William C. Martin, trustees, having reported sale at public auction of the real estate decreed to be sold in this cause, to wit: lot 15 in Corcoran's subdivision in square 587, Washington City, District of Columbia, to William J. Howard, for the sum of $1,876. It is, therefore, this 5th day of June, 1905, ordered that said sale will be ratified and confirmed on the 3d day of July, 1905, unless cause to the contrary be shown before said last mentioned day. Provided that a copy of this order be published in each of three successive issues of The Washington Law Reporter prior to the last mentioned date. By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

H. Prescott Gatley, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of James Augustin Greer, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 3d day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 14th day of June, 1905. JAMES W. GREER, EDWARD R. GREER, by H. Prescott Gatley, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,284. Admr. 21-3t

Wm. M. Lewin, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
John Turnbull, Jr., John T. Uthman, Daniel H. Doyle, and Samuel R. Waite, heretofore Copartners trading under the firm name of John Turnbull, Jr., & Co., Plaintiffs, v. Samuel A. Nattans, Defendant.
At Law, Numbered 47,722.

The object of this suit is the recovery from the defendant by the plaintiffs of the amount of a judgment recovered by the plaintiffs against the defendant, April 29, 1903, in the Superior Court of Baltimore city, Maryland, to wit, $829.55, with interest on $819.80 thereof from April 29, 1903, besides the costs of this suit, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiffs' claim. It is, therefore, this 16th day of June, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week in The Washington Law Reporter for three successive weeks. By the Court. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by W. E. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

John M. George, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles B. Hinton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of June, 1905. ELIZABETH HOEKE, 336 C st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,840. Administration. 24-3t

Thomas Walker, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Lucy Thornton v. John Thornton and Hattie Geary, alias Hattie Mathews.
No. 24,880. Equity Docket No. 55.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is this 8th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, John Thornton, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Record. By the Court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W.

Legal Notices.

Walter C. Clephane, Solicitor

In the Supeme Court of the District of Columbia.
H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee, v. John W. Pilling, Alan O. Clephane, Eliza Andrews, and the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link.
No. 25,483, Equity Docket.

The object of this suit is to declare the title to the real estate hereinafter described to be good in fee simple in the complainant by adverse possession, subject to the deed of trust in the bill of complaint described, said real estate being described as follows, to wit: the north one (1) foot six (6) inches of sublot thirty (30), and all of sublots thirty-one (31), thirty-two (32), and thirty-four (34), and the north fifty-two (52) feet of sublots thirty-five (35), thirty-six (36), and thirty-seven (37), of Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots twenty (20) to twenty-four (24), inclusive, of F. T. Browning, trustee's, subdivision of original lots numbered nine (9), ten (10), and eleven (11), in square numbered eighty-four (84), in the city of Washington, D. C., as said Miller's subdivision appears of record in book numbered twenty (20), at page 48 of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by Walter C. Clephane, his solicitor, it is, this 12th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Andrew Link, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of the period of publication hereinafter described; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Good cause having been shown, it is not necessary that this order shall be published for a longer period than that herein required. This order shall be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for four successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

John R. Shield, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Bridget Reardon, Deceased.
No. 12,611. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration c. t. a. on said estate, by Edward J. Duffy, it is ordered this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Annie Connell, Kate Philpot Elliott, and Hannah Philpot Smith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 24-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Emma L. Elliott et al., Complainants, v. William Prout et al., Defendants.
No. 25,317. In Equity. Doc. 56.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title of the complainants in fee simple by adverse possession to all of original lot numbered seven (7) in square numbered one thousand (1,000), improved by the two (2) dwellings, 1240-1242 on Eleventh street southeast, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, it is this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that William Prout, William King, and William Prout, Jr., or their respective unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees (if they be dead), cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter next after the day of this order, good cause for shortening the period of such publication having been shown. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

B. P. Mimmack, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Edward C. Halliday, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. HENRIETTA M. HALLIDAY, 1814 N st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,877. Administration. 24-3t

---

Philip Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Lucinda Bailey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM E. AMBROSE, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,929. Administration. 24-3t

---

A. A. Hoehling, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel H. Griffith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. WARREN G. GRIFFITH, 611 Land Title Building, Philadelphia, Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,914. Adm. 24-3t

---

Hallam & Hallam, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of George Fouse, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. PATTY C. H. FOUSE, 7 Ledyard Place, Newport, R. I. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,861. Administration. 24-3t

---

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Magdalina Fugitt, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of June, 1905. JOHN P. HINKEL, 119 C st. S. E.; HENRY E. TRIPP, 410 A st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,937. Admin. 24-3t

Legal Notices.

Chase Roys, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Daisy E. Belt v. King Wilson Belt.
Eq. No. 22,893. Eq. Doc. 51.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bond of marriage. On motion of the complainant it is this 23d day of January, 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. (Signed) THOS. H. ANDERSON. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 24-3t

---

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Ann Slight, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of June, 1905. FLOYD E. DAVIS, 7th and E sts. S. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,656. Administration. 24-3t

---

F. S. Bright, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding the Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Samuel Thomas Labby, Deceased. No. 12,988.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding the Probate Court, by Gustavus E. Labby and Morris H Labby, brothers of the decedent, for the granting of letters of administration on said estate to F. S. Bright, it is ordered this 13th day of June, 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ella Cabell Miller, daughter of, and Robert, Brandon, Lewis, William, Joyce, Garnett, and Nannie, grandchildren of Mary Joyce Neville; H. Denison Cole, Francis and Walter Denmead, Harold and Florence Denmead, Margaret and Elizabeth Amos, and any other unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Samuel Thomas Labby, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on July 17, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and the Baltimore Sun once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 24-3t

---

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Jennie R. Willoughby et al., Complainants, v. Philip H. Mires et al., Defendants. No. 25,437. Equity Docket 56.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant to original lots 11 and 12 in square 61 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainants by adverse possession. On motion of the complainants, by Barnard & Johnson, their solicitors, it is by the court, this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that Philip H. Mires, Philip Meyer, George Burnes, Christian Hines, Michael Myers, Matthew Hines, and William Robertson, or if they be dead, their unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days after the first publication of this order, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The court is satisfied by good cause shown by the affidavit filed herein that it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month during the period of not less than three (3) months. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks before said rule day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 27

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - - JULY 7, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 417
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Elizabeth B. Smith, admx., etc., appellant, v. The District of Columbia 418
Thos. E. Waggaman, administrator, appellant, v. Henry M. Earle, administrator; Henry M. Earle, administrator, appellant, v. Thos. E. Waggaman, administrator 420
Francis H. Duehay, plaintiff in error, v. The District of Columbia 422
Albert McIntosh, appellant, v. James W. Green 423
Mattie B. Slater et al., appellants, v. Thos. H. Rudderforth et al 424
Legal Notices 427

Ejection of Trespasser From Street Car.

In Barry v. Union Railway Company, decided by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, it appeared the plaintiff was a newsboy, 9 years of age and sui juris. He was summoned by a passenger on the rear platform of defendant's car, and boarded the same without permission from defendant for the purpose of selling said passenger a paper. He then passed through the car to the front platform and sought to sell papers to other passengers, but was discovered by the motorman, who, as testified by him, shoved him from the car while it was moving at ordinary speed, and he was seriously injured. On behalf of defendant it was testified that the plaintiff was hanging on to the outside of the car at the front truck and fell off without action by the operatives. It was conceded that the plaintiff was a trespasser. An instruction requested by the defendant, to the effect that the jury could not find for the plaintiff unless they found that the motorman, in throwing him from the front platform, was acting within the scope of his employment, was refused, and the trial court in effect instructed the jury that as matter of law the motorman in ejecting the plaintiff, represented the defendant. The appellate court holds that the plaintiff not being a passenger when ejected, defendant was not as matter of law liable for injuries wilfully or maliciously inflicted upon him, unless the only inference reasonably to be drawn from the evidence was that the motorman in ejecting the plaintiff was acting within the scope of his employment. As the inference might reasonably be drawn from the evidence that the motorman acted for the gratification of some personal feeling or motive uninfluenced by desire to serve and act in performance of a supposed obligation to his employer, the question whether the motorman acted within the scope of his employment was for the jury, and the requested instruction should have been given.

Competency of Insane Person as Witness.

In a murder case on trial recently in the courts of New Jersey the rather unusual spectacle was presented of an insane person taking the stand and testifying as a witness. The testimony was strenuously objected to by counsel for the defendant, who produced several expert witnesses to show that the witness, Taggart, could not appreciate the sanctity of an oath and could not be relied upon to relate accurately from memory occurrences that had happened some months before. For the State a medical witness was called who testified that he was fully convinced of the competency of Taggart to testify. Chief Justice Gummere decided to place Taggart on the stand for the purpose of determining in open court his capacity to act as a witness, and after a test most satisfactory to the court he was permitted to testify as a witness for the State, and gave most material evidence. The propriety of the course adopted by the chief justice, making as it did for substantial justice, would seem to be beyond question. The rigid exclusion of testimony by insane persons would in some cases result in a miscarriage of justice. In the case on trial before him five attendants at a hospital for the insane were accused of killing a patient in the institution, and it is conceivable that in such a case the only evidence that could be produced to prove the charge would be that of persons mentally affected. The true rule on the subject would seem to be, as stated by the Albany Law Journal, that insanity goes to the credibility rather than to the competency of a witness, and that if an insane person has sufficient understanding to appreciate the nature and obligation of an oath, and to be capable of giving a correct account of the matters which he has heard or seen in reference to the question at issue, he is admissible as a witness; and this is very properly determined by an examination in open court.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

ELIZABETH B. SMITH, ADMX., ETC., APPELLANT,

v.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; NEGLIGENCE; LIABILITY FOR IMPROPER CONSTRUCTION OF STREET RAILWAY.

1. No duty was imposed upon the municipality of the District of Columbia by the provision of the act of Congress incorporating the Georgetown and Tenallytown Railroad Company, providing that the construction of said road should be subject to the supervision and approval of the Commissioners of the District; and the Commissioners, in the discharge of that duty, acted not as the official representatives or agents of the municipality, but as the chosen agents or representatives of Congress.
2. In an action for injuries to a passenger on said railway, causing his death, it was sought to hold the District liable on the ground that it was its duty, through its Commissioners, to regulate the manner of the construction and maintenance of the tracks of said railway and the selection and operation of the cars used thereon, and that it had failed in the performance of that duty. Held, that no such duty was imposed upon the municipality, and the trial court properly directed a verdict in its favor.

No. 1418. Decided April 11, 1905.

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 45,257, entered upon a verdict directed by the court in an action for injuries causing death. Affirmed.

Mr. C. A. Douglass, Mr. E. S. Douglass, and L. H. David, for the appellant.

Mr. A. B. Duvall and Mr. E. H. Thomas for the appellee.

Mr. Justice ANDERSON, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, who sat with the court in the absence of Mr. Chief Justice ALVEY, delivered the opinion of the Court:

This case is before the court on appeal from a final judgment of the court below, in a suit at law brought under the statute by the appellant as administrator of the estate of Peter A. Smith to recover compensation for the death of the latter claimed to have resulted from an alleged omission of duty by the District of Columbia.

On the 1st of July, 1901, about 9 o'clock in the evening, the appellant's intestate was a passenger upon a north-bound car of the Georgetown and Tennallytown Railway Company, and was seated upon the rear seat of the car on the west side thereof, with his elbow resting upon the west guard-rail, when the car passed another car going in the opposite direction. While the cars were passing there was a swaying motion which caused them to almost touch one another, and the upright posts or other portions of the south-bound car struck the elbow of the deceased, dragging him over said guard-rail, between the cars, and throwing him upon the street, causing injuries which resulted in his immediate death. The testimony further showed that the distance between the inner rails of the tracks at the point of the accident was three feet and seven inches, and that from the time of the construction of the tracks until about six or eight months prior to the accident small cars were used thereon, but about six or eight months before the accident these cars were replaced by larger cars, which in passing each other at this point came within a distance of two and one-half inches of touching. And the appellant thereupon offered in evidence, and they were received without objection, the acts of Congress under which said railway company was incorporated and the construction of the railway authorized.

At the conclusion of the testimony on behalf of the appellant, the District of Columbia, by its counsel, moved the court to instruct the jury to return a verdict in its favor on the ground that no case had been made out against it. The motion was granted, a verdict rendered in accordance with the instructions, and judgment entered upon the verdict. From this judgment the present appeal has been prosecuted.

It is contended on behalf of the appellant that the District is, and was at the time of the accident, a body corporate and municipal and had the power, and it was its duty, both under the general law and under the special acts incorporating the railway company, through its commissioners, to regulate the manner of the construction and maintenance of railway tracks in the streets of the city and the selection and operation of the cars used thereon, and that because of default in the performance of such duty the municipality is liable in damages for the injuries resulting in the death of appellant's intestate.

The act of Congress approved August 10, 1888, under which the railway company was incorporated, authorized it "to construct and lay down a single or double track railway, with necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices for operating the same by cable or electric power, for carrying passengers in the District of Columbia from the Potomac River, near High street, to and along High street, in Georgetown, to the Tennallytown road, but wholly outside the limits of said road; and along the side of the said road to the District line; also the privilege of laying such conduits beneath the surface of Water street for the purpose of conveying or communicating power from any suitable point along said Water street to said High street, as may be found necessary, and subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. . . . Said railway shall be constructed of good materials and in a substantial manner, with rails of the most approved pattern, the gage to correspond with that of other city railroads, all to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. . . . It shall also be lawful for said corporation, its successors, or assigns, to erect and maintain at such convenient and suitable points along the line as may seem most desirable to the board of directors of said corporation, and subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District, an engine house or houses, boiler house, and other buildings necessary for the successful operation of such cable or electric road. . . . The said company shall place first-class cars on said railway, with all modern improvements, for the convenience and comfort of passengers, and shall run cars thereon as often as the public convenience may require, and according to a published schedule to be filed with the District Commissioners and be approved by them. . . .

Digitized by Google

Said company shall have at all times the free and uninterrupted use of the railway."

And by act of Congress, approved March 24, 1890, the charter of this railway company was amended, "by substituting after the words, 'and along High street, in Georgetown, to the Tennallytown road,' the words, 'and thence along and in said roads,' for the words, 'but wholly outside of the limits of said road and along the side of said way.' Provided, That the inner line of rails shall be at the minimum distance of eight feet from the center of the improved roadway. And provided further, That said railway shall be located on such side of the roadway as may be indicated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

It will be noted that this grant of the railway company was not a municipal but a private Congressional grant. The municipality had no voice in granting the privilege thereby conferred upon the railway company, and was equally impotent to restrain or terminate their enjoyment. No express duty was thereby imposed upon the municipality, and certainly none can be implied. Congress having sole power to bestow this grant had like power to nominate its own agents subject to whose approval said railway was to be constructed. And therefore it was that Congress designated the Commissioners of the District of Columbia as such agent, charged, not with a duty that was mandatory, but with one that involved the exercise of judgment and discretion. It was plainly not a ministerial but a judicial function imposed upon the Commissioners as individuals, and not as the official representatives and agents of the municipality.

As was said by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of District of Columbia v. Bailey, 171 U. S. 176:

"The sum of the municipal powers of the District of Columbia are neither vested in nor exercised by the District Commissioners. They are, on the contrary, vested in the Congress of the United States acting pro hac vice as the legislative body of the District, and the Commissioners of the District discharge the functions of administrative officials."

Congress has repeatedly conferred similar authority upon other federal officials in respect of private grants of franchises in the District of Columbia. For instance, Congress provided that the construction of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad, the Columbia Railroad, and the Metropolitan Railroad, should in each case be approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Again, in 1892 the Metropolitan Railroad was required to repair its bridge across Rock Creek in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by the Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia and under his direction.

Since it is manifest that no municipal obligation was created by the acts of Congress just referred to, in which the Secretary of the Interior and the Engineer Commissioner were, respectively, designated agents of Congress in supervising and approving the construction of the railways and bridge work therein provided for, upon what principle can it be said that the case at bar is differentiated from those just cited on the grounds that the agents designated by Congress in the act under conideration chance to be the Commissioners of the District of Columbia? It is manifest from the language of the acts of Congress already quoted that the authority therein given was not to the municipality but rather a superadded obligation laid upon the Commissioners as the chosen agents or representatives of Congress.

In McGraw v. District of Columbia, 3 App. Cas. (D. C.), 408: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 383, this court said:

"And even if it should be assumed that there was a duty imposed by it (the act of Congress) from which a liability might accrue, it is not at all clear that the District of Columbia is charged with that duty which was laid by express terms not on the District as a municipality, but upon the Commissioners of the District as a superadded obligation."

Again, in the case of District of Columbia v. Moulton, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.), 374: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 753, this court said:

"In a doubtful case the recovery ought not to pass against the municipality. It is only where there is a plain and obvious neglect of duty on the part of the municipal agents that liability can arise in such a case as the present."

So in the case at bar it can not be said that the Commissioners were guilty of a neglect of duty, much less the District of Columbia, in permitting the use of these larger cars when the act itself conferred upon them no control thereover. A careful reading of the act of Congress, approved August 10, 1888, above quoted, shows that, while the construction of the railway tracks, with the necessary switches, etc., the laying of conduits, as therein provided, and the erection and maintenance of an engine house or houses, boiler house, and other buildings necessary for the successful operation of such cable or electric road, were subject to the approval of the District Commissioners, they were given no control over or authority to approve or disapprove the cars to be placed upon the tracks, the language of the act in this respect being: "Said company shall place first-class cars on said railway with all modern improvements for the convenience and comfort of passengers," and the only authority conferred upon them by the act as to the operation of the road when completed being to approve the company time schedule, as thus expressed in the act, "and it (the railway company) shall run cars thereon as often as the public convenience may require. And according to a published schedule to be filed with the District Commissioners and be approved by them."

It is to be further observed that not only is there no proof whatever of any other accident previously occurring by reason of the proximity of the tracks or the running of the larger cars, and not only was there no notice, express or constructive, to either the Commissioners or the municipality, of any probable or threatened danger at the place of accident, but it is quite clear that neither the closeness of the tracks nor the size of the cars operated upon the tracks constituted the proximate cause of the accident, for the reason that such accident could, and would, have been avoided had the railway company exercised ordinary and proper care in controlling the movement of its cars at that point. One of the cars could have been brought to a full stop while the other passed over that part of the tracks, or the movement of the cars slowed down, or other reasonable precautionary measures taken, so as to safeguard the passengers from accident, and it was the duty of the railway company to take such precautionary measures. The closeness of the tracks and the size of the cars operated thereupon constituted mere conditions, and not causes. The efficient cause producing the injury was manifestly either the decedent's own negligence or the negligence of the railway company.

Digitized by Google

Finding no error in the judgment below, it must be affirmed with costs, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

THOMAS E. WAGGAMAN, ADMINISTRATOR, APPELLANT,

v.

HENRY M. EARLE, ADMINISTRATOR.

HENRY M. EARLE, ADMINISTRATOR, APPELLANT,

v.

THOMAS E. WAGGAMAN, ADMINISTRATOR.

ACCOUNTING; AUDITOR'S REPORT; EXCEPTIONS; LOBBYING SERVICES.

1. An appellate tribunal can not consider vague and indefinite and merely general exceptions to an auditor's report.
2. In a proceeding for an accounting as to the fees received by defendant in respect of French spoliation claims, under an agreement by which defendant contracted to pay complainant 25 per cent of the fees received by him, after deducting expenses, etc., held that the allowance of certain amounts for which credit was claimed by defendant as having been paid for "professional services," held improper for the reason that the services were of the kind known as lobbying services.

Nos. 1422 and 1423. Decided May 00, 1905.

APPEAL and cross-appeal from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 21,962, in suit for an accounting. Reversed.

Mr. Irving Williamson, Mr. Wm. J. Miller, Mr. S. T. Thomas, and Mr. M. J. Colbert for the appellant Waggaman.

Mr. John C. Gittings for the appellant Earle.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

These are cross-appeals from one and the same decree of the Supreme Court of the District in a proceeding in equity for accounting between the parties.

It appears from the record that James H. Causten, long since deceased, and formerly a resident of this District, had accumulated papers deemed to be of great value with reference to the numerous claims against the United States known as the "French Spoliation Claims," growing out of the treaty of ——— between France and the United States. Under some arrangement between his legal representatives and Mr. William E. Earle, now deceased, but formerly a lawyer resident in this city and District, these papers came into the hands of Mr. Earle. In course of time Thomas E. Waggaman was appointed administrator de bonis non with the will annexed of James H. Causten; and as the times seemed to have become more propitious than they had been for the allowance and payment of the claims in question, Waggaman, as administrator, with the ratification and approval of the Orphans' Court, entered into a contract in writing with Earle, whereby the latter was to have the continued possession of the Causten papers for use in the prosecution of the French spoliation claims, of all or nearly all of which he had then acquired, or afterwards acquired, the charge and control; and for such continued possession and use he was to pay to Waggaman 25 per centum of all the fees which he should receive on account of these claims, "after deducting the proper expenses incurred by him since the passage of the act of Congress referring said cases to the Court of Claims (act of January 20, 1885, 23 Stat. 283), in the prosecution of said French spoliation claims, such as clerk hire, printing, advertising, office rent, and the compensation of other attorneys necessarily associated with him, and in whose compensation said Earle does not share."

It was a further provision of the agreement that Earle should keep books of account of the expenses incidental to the prosecution of the claims, which should be open at all times to the inspection of Causten's administrator; and that settlements should be made every six months and the proportionate share of the fees paid to the administrator. This provision, so far as the semi-annual payments were concerned, was not observed; and Waggaman was not satisfied with the manner in which the books were kept.

The agreement was entered into on June 12, 1885, and Earle died on August —, 1894. In the meantime a large number of the claims had been prosecuted to a successful issue in the Court of Claims, and had been certified back to Congress for its final action thereon and for an appropriation for their payment, in the event of the approval by Congress of the action of the Court of Claims. By an act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. p. 897), Congress approved in part the findings of the court, which were only findings, and not formal judgments, and made an appropriation for partial payment. Out of this appropriation, according to his own showing at the time to Waggaman, Mr. Earle received as fees up to July, 1893, the sum of $38,745.63, while his books showed expenditures to the date last mentioned amounting to $57,318.66. Instead of the surplus to be divided, there was therefore a deficiency of upwards of $18,000. Fees, however, to the amount of nearly $50,000 were anticipated from an additional appropriation which it was hoped would be made in 1893, but which was not made. And there was no further appropriation until 1899, upwards of four years after Earle's death, when, under an appropriation act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. p. 1191), fees were received by the administrator of Earle amounting to $50,176.64.

Thereafter negotiations for a settlement between Earle's administrator and Causten's administrator having proved abortive, the present proceeding was instituted by the latter for an accounting. After pleadings in due form, the cause was referred to the auditor of the court for the statement of an account, and that officer, after considerable testimony had been adduced which was returned to the court with his report, found the sum of $7,462.20 to be due from the defendant to the complainant. Exceptions were filed by both parties which will be noticed more in detail hereafter. The court overruled them all and ratified the auditor's report without any order or decree for the payment of the amount so found due, and from the order of ratification both parties have appealed to this court.

Digitized by Google

The complainant Waggaman filed nine exceptions to the auditor's report; the defendant Earle filed six. We will first consider those of the complainant.

1. The first of the complainant's exceptions is to the allowance of $3,448.17 for office rent claimed to have been paid by Earle from August 1, 1885, soon after the agreement became effective, to August 1, 1893, the month and year in which Earle died. It is argued that Earle was a lawyer in general practice presumably maintaining an office for that purpose; that his whole office rent was $45 a month; that more than two-thirds of this, or $35.96 a month is charged against the Causten contract, and that one-half of this sum would have been a sufficient allowance. But the contract provides for the allowance of "office rent," and it is in evidence that Earle had little or no other legal business except that of the French spoliation claims. His office seems to have been maintained almost exclusively for the prosecution of those claims, and we do not find that four fifths, or thereabouts, of the $45 which he paid each month is an exorbitant charge against the business, which was almost his exclusive business. In the ultimate analysis, this is only a charge of about one-fifth of the rent against the Causten estate. We regard this exception as having been properly overruled.

2, 3. The second exception is to the allowance of items of "office expenses" amounting to $18,332.15, alleged to have been incurred to July 15, 1893, just before Earle's death; and the fourth exception, which is of a similar character, is to the allowance of a similar aggregate of items, amounting to $1,993.39, claimed to have been incurred between July 15, 1893, and November 1, 1900. And these are objected to for the reason that there is no sufficient proof of them, and that it was incumbent upon the defendant to adduce such proof. Undoubtedly it is the law that upon him who would make a charge against another lies the burden of proof that the charge is just. In this case, by his agreement, Earle undertook to keep proper books of account, which on their face would show the propriety of the items of expense which he would charge against the other contracting party; and it may well be that, in this aggregate sum of $20,325.54 there are numerous items which should not have been included in the account. But there are numerous other items, such as for printing and copying, for example, which are undoubtedly just and proper. But some allowance must be made for the difficulties of proof resulting from Mr. Earle's death, and other circumstances referred to in testimony; and the case is a proper one for us, in the hearing in this court, to apply the rule laid down and applied in the case of Richardson v. Van Auken, 5 D. C. App. 209: 23 Wash. Law Rep. 102, and in the several cases there cited, that an appellate tribunal can not consider vague and indefinite and merely general exceptions to an auditor's report. This court can not substitute itself for the auditor, and go over the details of an account for itself, beyond what it specifically pointed out as error.

In the case of Richardson v. Van Auken, above cited, it was said: "The findings of a master or an auditor, concurred in by the court below, are to be taken as presumptively correct, and will be permitted to stand, unless some obvious error has intervened in the application of the law or the principles of the decree under which he acts, or some important mistake has been made in the evidence, and which has been clearly pointed out and made manifest." We see no reason why this rule should not be applied to the complainant's second and third exceptions and the assignments of error based upon them. These exceptions are too general.

4, 5. The complainant's fourth exception is to the allowance of a sum of $6,150, paid by Mr. Earle during a period of eight years to Mr. William T. S. Curtis, which is less than at the rate of $65 a month; and his fifth exception is to the allowance of a sum of $10,400, paid by him during the same period to T. J. Pickett for similar clerical services, and ultimately also for legal services as an associate attorney, which is at the rate of a little over $100 a month. These compensations do not seem to be excessive. Curtis and Pickett testified that they rendered the services; that those services were practically continuous and engrossing enough, and that they received the money for them from Earle. In the absence of countervailing proof by the complainant, it is difficult to see why these items of expense should be held unreasonable. The contract provided for the allowance of "clerk hire" and for compensation to assistant attorneys, and we fail to see wherein the auditor has erred in these two allowances to the defendant.

6, 7, 8. The sixth, seventh, and eighth exceptions of the complainant are to three several allowances—one for $2,000, a second for $2,500, and a third for $2,000—to three several persons, claimed to be for "professional services" rendered by them. We find it impossible to read the record without coming to the conclusion that these alleged services were of the kind known as "lobying services." The proof, indeed, in regard to them is of the vaguest character, and utterly insufficient in any event to support them as proper charges in this accounting. But, so far as it goes, it points unmistakably to those illicit services, personal influence and personal solicitation, which the courts have branded as improper for their consideration, and for which they will not allow recovery. It is a peculiar fact that no one of the persons to whom these several sums are claimed to have been paid was called to testify in regard to them, although they were all accessible and could easily have been summoned. The inference from this omission is not favorable to the defendant's claim for these allowances.

There is some feeble pretense that one of the parties prepared a brief for use before one of the committees of Congress, but it is the merest pretense and wholly unworthy of consideration. There is no reason to suppose that a copy of the brief could not have been produced if it ever existed, nor does it appear what exigency there was for the preparation of such a brief.

Digitized by Google

If these alleged services were legitimate and professional, it is not apparent why they could not have been rendered by Mr. Earle himself. He was fully competent, and his contract with Waggaman included them. If, on the contrary, they were of the lobbying kind and illegitimate, they should not be allowed. In either case they are improper charges against the interest represented by the complainant. In fact, as disclosed by the record, Mr. Earle, during his lifetime, in his communications with some of the persons interested in the Causten estate, admitted the true character of these expenditures, and sought in vain to have them legitimated and recognized.

Under the decision of this court in the case of Owens v. Wilkinson, 20 D. C. App. 51: 30 Wash. Law Rep. 436, and under the decisions therein cited, we must hold that these items should have been excluded from this account, and that it was error to admit them.

9. The complainant's ninth and last exception was to an allowance of $700 to one L. B. Clark for his expense and compensation for making some investigation among the records of the custom houses in Rhode Island and Connecticut in connection with the French spoliation claims. The special purpose of this investigation is not fully disclosed; but the item on its face is not unreasonable, and under the rule heretofore stated, it is incumbent in this court upon the complainant to show the impropriety of its allowance. This has not been done, and we can not disturb the finding.

10. The defendant filed six exceptions, and bases assignments of error upon each and all of them. It would subserve no good purpose to consider them in detail. It must suffice to say that we regard no one of them as well founded. Some of them are directed to the refusal of the auditor to allow for certain alleged services, evidently of a lobbying character, but which he regarded as more objectionable than those which he allowed and which we hold should have been excluded from the account.

There is considerable insistence by the defendant upon the supposed laches of the complainant, that is, his delay in the institution of proceedings to enforce his claim; and the benefit of the Statute of Limitations is sought by him, not in his answer to the bill or anywhere in the pleadings, but only in argument. But if there are any laches in this case, they are the laches rather of the defendant than of the complainant. It was claimed by Mr. William E. Earle, and the statement is reasserted by the defendant in his brief, that up to July, 1893, there was no surplus of fees to be divided with the Causten estate, but rather a deficit of upwards of $18,000. Now, if this statement was correct, there was nothing to be divided until after the passage of the appropriation bill of March 3, 1899; if it was not true, the statement was a fraud, which the complainant would seem to have no opportunity to discover at the time. Assuming the statement to have been true, and that there was no money to be divided before March 3, 1899, we fail to see wherein there are any laches on the part of the complainant, who thereupon, after some fruitless negotiations with the defendant, filed the present suit within two years thereafter, on January 2, 1901. There is no ground for the imputation of laches.

Except in the one feature of the allowance of certain fees for lobbying services, we find no error in the auditor's report or in the order of the court below ratifying the same. But for this error the order appealed from must be reversed, with costs against the defendant Earle; and the cause will be remanded to the Supreme Court of the District with directions to reform its order in that regard and to enter a decree in accordance with this opinion. And it is so ordered.

Reversed.

FRANCIS H. DUEHAY, PLAINTIFF IN ERROR,

v.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Smoke Law; Apartment Houses.

An apartment house is not a "private residence" within the meaning of the proviso to what is known as the smoke law (30 Stat. 812), that the act shall not be construed as applying "to chimneys of buildings used exclusively for private residences," and such a building is therefore not exempted from the operation of that act.

No. 1524. Decided April 18, 1905.

In error to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Affirmed.

Mr. Samuel Maddox for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. B. Duvall and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Shepard delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a writ of error to review a judgment of conviction in the Police Court of the violation of what is known as the "smoke law." 30 Stat. 812.

This statute declares "the emission of dense or thick black or gray smoke or cinders from any smokestack or chimney used in connection with any stationary engine, steam boiler, or furnace of any description within the District of Columbia" to be a public nuisance, and provides a penalty therefor.

The proof shows the emission of such smoke several times on October 26, 1904, from the chimney of a building called the "Rochambeau," then owned and occupied by the plaintiff in error.

It appears from the uncontradicted testimony of the plaintiff in error, that the "Rochambeau" "is an apartment house of fire-proof construction, seven stories and basement, having eighty-one separate housekeeping apartments, all used exclusively as private residences. There is nothing of a public nature about the house—no bar, no cafe, no cigar or newspaper stands, no billiard room, no barber shop—in fact, nothing of a business nature is carried on in the house." It appears also that the building is supplied with three low-pressure boilers of seventy horse-power each. There is one large flue or chimney about three feet by three feet in space. It is unnecessary to state other evidence relating to the character of coal used, the efforts to prevent the emission of smoke, and the unpunished violation of the law by others, as it is all irrelevant.

Digitized by Google

The single question for determination is, whether a building of the kind and uses shown is exempted from the operation of the act, under the following proviso to the section above recited substantially: "Provided, that nothing in this act shall be construed as applied to chimneys of buildings used exclusively for private residences."

Without this proviso the act is broad enough to apply not only to emissions of smoke of the character defined from the smokestacks of all large buildings, but to those, also, from the chimneys of what are known as private houses. In our opinion the proviso was intended to exclude from this application only what are generally understood to be houses of private residence equipped with the chimneys ordinarily used therein. In the construction of a statute its words are to be given, where possible, their ordinary, popular meaning.

Now, while chimney is a generic word that would include smokestack as one of its species, it is commonly applied to the smoke conduits that are attached to the mass of separate houses of ordinary size and construction.

On the other hand, the word smokestack, probably first applied to the smoke escape of railway engines, is now commonly understood as meaning, also, a chimney of unusual size and height, attached to a furnace or combination of furnaces used for supplying heat or power, or both, in a large building or series of buildings that may be used as a factory, a place for offices, or what is called an apartment or tenement house.

Congress evidently had in view this common understanding of the separate and distinct signification of the words, else it would not have used both in the body of the act. Giving effect to every word used in the act, as must be done if possible, it can not be presumed, in view of the common understanding of the difference between these words, that they were regarded as synonymous.

Turning to the proviso, it will be observed that the word chimneys, alone, is used—"the chimneys of buildings used exclusively for private residences."

The general purpose of the act is to prevent the emission of smoke and cinders in such volume as was reasonably supposed to create a public nuisance, and the proviso was added, in our opinion, because it was likewise supposed that the emission of smoke from the chimneys of those buildings commonly called and generally understood to be private residences would not constitute such a nuisance as to call for their prohibition also.

We are clearly of the opinion that it was not intended to withdraw from the application of the act those buildings commonly called apartments or tenement houses, or flats, wherein a number of private families may live in separate apartments, as in this case, enjoying the benefits of boilers and furnaces attached to one or more great chimneys or smokestacks, and supplying heat and other conveniences for the common use.

Such buildings, although their owners may not carry on in them the ordinary business of hotels in connection with the lease of apartments, are not used exclusively as private residences within the meaning of the law.

The judgment of the Police Court was right, and it will be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered.

Affirmed.

ALBERT McINTOSH, APPELLANT,

v.

JAMES W. GREEN.

EQUITY; TRUSTS; EVIDENCE.

A decree dismissing a bill in equity on the ground that there was no foundation upon which to raise a resulting trust, and that the attempt was to create an express trust in land by parol, affirmed.

No. 1511. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,258, dismissing a bill to declare a trust in certain real estate. Affirmed.

Mr. Joseph H. Stewart for the appellant.

Mr. M. T. Clinkscales for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from a decree dismissing a bill to declare a trust in certain lands in the District of Columbia and compel a conveyance of the legal title.

The bill alleged that in June, 1902, complainant, through an agent, entered into an agreement with the Union Savings Bank to purchase the property described as lot 41 in Wright and Cox's subdivision of Pleasant Plains, for the sum of $2,600. That he then made an agreement with defendant whereby the latter, in consideration of $10 to be paid him, promised to take the title and thereafter to convey the same to complainant's daughter. That complainant arranged through his agent to negotiate two loans on said property, the first for $2,500 and the second for $300. That after the payment of a commission to complainant's agent, the fees of the title company, and other expenses, there was, "according to complainant's recollection," a shortage of about $40 to be paid to the title company before said company would deliver and record the conveyance. That complainant requested the defendant to lend him the said sum and promised to repay the same, whereupon defendant advanced the same and received the conveyance which was recorded. That complainant has offered to settle with defendant and to pay him the $10 agreed upon as his compensation, and the said sum of $40 advanced by him, with interest, upon condition of his execution of a conveyance of the property to complainant's daughter; all of which defendant refused.

Defendant's answer denied the alleged agreement and averred the purchase of the property wholly with money obtained and advanced by defendant, and for his own benefit.

Digitized by Google

It is unnecessary to review the evidence on behalf of the parties respectively, as we concur in the views expressed by Mr. Justice Gould, who presided in the Equity Court, in the following extract from his opinion that has been made part of the record: "Without passing upon the question of fact involved in this testimony, or considering whether the testimony preponderates in plaintiff's favor or not, I am of the opinion that plaintiff's bill must be dismissed. His case is obviously bottomed upon the theory of a resulting trust, which arises when the purchaser of an estate pays the purchase money and takes the title in the name of a third person. . . . In this case, plaintiff himself testified that he did not contribute a cent towards the payment for the real estate; he certainly assumed no liability on the incumbrances which practically paid for it; and he fails to sustain the burden of proof to establish the necessary proposition that the $40 balance paid by the defendant was a loan to him. In argument, his counsel contended that his discovery of the bargain whereby the purchaser could become the owner of the real estate by the use of money borrowed from others was such a contribution; in other words, that his information through which the property was obtained was such a valuable contribution towards the purchase price that he is entitled to credit therefor. But this view entirely mistakes the theory of a resulting trust. The purchase price goes to the vendor, not to the vendee of the legal title. As between one attempting to set up the resulting trust and his alleged trustee, the information furnished by the former to the latter in regard to the property might be a sufficient consideration to support a contract between them, provided such contract was in the form required by law when an interest in real estate is involved. But such 'information' is no part of the consideration of the deed from the original grantor, the payment of which by the cestui que trust is the basis of a resulting trust."

The learned justice was clearly right in the conclusion that there was no foundation upon which to raise up a resulting trust, and that the case resolved itself into an attempt to create an express trust in land by parol against the prohibition of the Statute of Frauds. Howland v. Blake, 97 U. S. 624, 628; 1 Perry on Trusts (4 ed.), sec. 134; McCartney v. Fletcher, 11 App. D. C. 1, 20: 25 Wash. Law Rep. 327.

In Howland v. Blake, the claim was that one Taylor, under a mortgage executed to him by Howland, had purchased the mortgaged property at foreclosure sale, and taken a conveyance under an oral agreement with Howland that the premises should still be held as security for the money due, and reconveyed upon extinguishment of the debt. Taylor, needing the money shortly thereafter, requested Howland to procure its advance by some other purchaser. Howland informed Blake and Elliott of the aforesaid facts, and requested them to advance the money and take Taylor's place under an absolute conveyance. They paid Blake and received the conveyance under an oral agreement to hold the property as Taylor had done. The court held that Howland's bill was rightly dismissed, saying: "Such an agreement is one creating by parol a trust or interest in lands which can not be sustained under the Statute of Frauds. It is a naked promise by one to buy lands in his own name, pay for them with his own money, and hold them for the benefit of another. It can not be enforced in equity and is void."

The facts in the case at bar bring it entirely within the rule above declared, and the decree must be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered. Affirmed.

MATTIE R. SLATER ET AL., APPELLANTS, v. THOMAS H. RUDDERFORTH ET AL.

ESTATES; RULE IN SHELLY'S CASE; TRUSTS FOR MARRIED WOMEN; DEEDS; WANT OF CONSIDERATION.

1. The rule in Shelly's case does not apply where one of the estates sought to be carried out is equitable and the other is legal.
2. A devise in trust to permit a female, in case she should reach the age of 16 years, to use and occupy the premises and the rents, issues, and profits thereof to receive and apply to her own sole and separate use, any coverture notwithstanding, for her life, and upon her death leaving lawful issue to convey the same to such issue, his, her, or their heirs and assigns, is not a passive but an active trust; and the rule in Shelly's case does not apply.
3. A deed executed by the remaindermen, three of whom were minors, who on coming of age repudiated and disavowed it, set aside as being wholly without consideration and as having been induced by misrepresentation, and a reconveyance directed.

No. 1493. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 23,636, in suit to set aside a deed for fraud. Affirmed.

Mr. O. B. Hallam and Mr. F. E. Mitchell for the appellants.

Mr. W. W. Edwards and Mr. C. M. Fulton for the appellees.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a suit in equity instituted in the Supreme Court of the District by the appellees as complainants against the appellants, and three other persons who were brought in by amendment, as defendants, for the cancellation of certain deeds, whereby the appellant, Mattie G. Slater, through the procurement of her husband, the coappellant John G. Slater, had become possessed of certain real estate in the city of Washington, and for the reconveyance and delivery of said real estate to the complainants as the true and lawful owners thereof.

It appears from the record that on and before the 28th day of May, A. D. 1898, the appellees and their mother, Emma F. Rudderforth, subsequently deceased, were the owners of the property in question and in possession of it under the will of one William Mockabee, of which will the clause which conveyed the said property to them, and which is important in these proceedings, is in the following words:

"I give and devise to my friend Ammon Green, of the city of Washington in the District of Columbia, and to his heirs and assigns, the following described part of lot of ground numbered three (3) of Berry and Mohun's subdivision of square of ground numbered seven hundred and seventeen (717) situate, lying and being in the said city of Washington, to wit: Beginning for said part of the said lot of ground at the southwest corner of said lot and running thence north with the line of First street east, fifteen feet; thence east fifty-three feet, ten and a half inches, thence southwestwardly fifteen feet and one inch, and thence westerly to the place of beginning.

Digitized by Google

"To have and to hold the said part of said lot of ground and premises, together with the buildings and improvements thereon, unto the said Ammon Green, his heirs and assigns, upon the trusts and confidence hereinafter named, and none other. That is to say, in trust to receive and collect the rents thereof and apply the same towards the payment of my said debts, funeral expenses, the legacy hereinbefore bequeathed and the maintenance and support of my son William H. C. Mockabee, until Emma Smitson, who during the lifetime of my late wife, was an inmate of my house, and who is now about seven years of age, shall attain to the age of sixteen years; and upon the further trust, in case the said Emma Smitson shall live to attain to the said age of sixteen years, to suffer and permit her, the said Emma, to have, hold, use, occupy, possess and enjoy the said part of said lot of ground and premises and the rents, issues and profits thereof to have, take, receive and apply to her own sole and separate use, any coverture notwithstanding, for and during the term of her natural life; and upon the further trust and confidence, in case the said Emma after attaining to the age of sixteen years shall die leaving lawful issue, to convey the said part of said lot of ground and premises by a good and sufficient deed to such lawful issue, his, her or their heirs and assigns; and also upon the further trust and confidence, in case the said Emma shall die, either before or after attaining to the age of sixteen years, without leaving lawful issue surviving her, to convey the said part of said lot of ground and premises by a good and sufficient deed unto my said son William H. C. Mockabee his heirs and assigns."

This will was executed in 1859, and upon the death of the testator very soon afterwards was admitted to probate in the same year. Emma Smitson lived to enjoy the devise in her favor, became by marriage Mrs. Emma F. Rudderforth, and died on February 15, 1902, leaving as her lawful issue surviving her five children, who are the complainants in this case and the appellees here.

On or about May 28, 1898, Mrs. Emma F. Rudderforth was approached by the appellant, John G. Slater, and as it is alleged in the bill of complaint, was induced by false and fraudulent representation on his part, which, however, he denies, to make a conveyance to him of the said property, which is stated to have been worth the sum of about $1,500, for the grossly inadequate sum of $150, and the settlement of some taxes in arrears. The allegation is that it was represented to her by Slater that, by the accumulation of taxes, she was in danger of losing the property and being turned out of it; and also that there was a judgment of a justice of the peace against her which was about to be enforced against the property. Thereupon, and, as it is alleged, in pursuance of these representations, Mrs. Emma F. Rudderforth executed the required deed of conveyance, not directly to Slater, but to another person, who in turn conveyed to a third person, who in his turn conveyed to Mrs. Mattie R. Slater. All these subsequent conveyances were wholly without consideration, and there is scarcely a pretense that they were not all for the use and benefit of John G. Slater.

Slater, however, was not satisfied with the deed from Mrs. Emma F. Rudderforth. Upon the pretense, as alleged, that a conveyance from her children also was necessary, although he stated that they had no interest in the property and that the deed from them was a mere formality, they were induced to join in the conveyance with their mother. The sum of $150 was paid to the mother, but no one of the children received anything; and as to them the conveyance was wholly without consideration of any kind. Only two of the children were then of age, three of them were under age, and one of the three was only 16 years old. The fact of this minority seems to have been well known to Slater, and it appears that he asked one at least of the minor children whether he would not ratify the deed after he became of age, and that the boy answered that he would do so.

By an instrument of writing under seal, recorded among the land records of the District, on June 25, 1901, the appellees joined in a deed disavowing and repudiating their deed of conveyance; and on February 15, 1902, Mrs. Emma F. Rudderforth died. Thereupon, on November 26, 1902, the appellees instituted the present proceedings to enforce their rights to the property. One of the complainants, Frank W. Rudderforth, was yet a minor, and he sued by next friend. He became of age, however, on May 25, 1903. All the complainants, it may be noted, seem to have been in very humble circumstances, and not very intelligent as to their rights.

The defendants answered the bill of complaint, and, after testimony taken and hearing had, the court decreed in favor of the complainants, and in accordance with the prayer of their bill, and two of the five defendants, being those only who are substantially interested in the controversy, have appealed to this court.

Upon full consideration of the record before us, and of the briefs and arguments of counsel, we find no reason to come to any different conclusion from that reached by the learned justice who sat in the court below, and we might well adopt as our own the very able and satisfactory opinion rendered by him in the cause. In view of that opinion we will content ourselves with a few brief observations.

1. That Emma Smitson, afterwards Emma F. Rudderforth, took only a life estate, and not an estate in fee simple under the rule in Shelly's case, in the property here in controversy, and that upon her death the appellees, as her issue surviving her, took an estate in fee simple in remainder, we regard as too clear to be a subject of controversy. Under the will of William Mockabee she had only an equitable estate, while a legal estate in fee simple was given to her issue; and it is well-settled law, indeed it is elementary law, that the rule in Shelly's case does not apply where one of the estates sought to be carved out is equitable and the other is legal. Sims v. Georgetown College, 1 D. C. App. 72, and cases there cited: 21 Wash. Law Rep. 595. It is sought to avoid the operation of this doctrine on the ground that the equitable estate to Emma F. Rudderforth, as it is claimed, was a passive and not an active trust, and therefore that, under the statute of 27 Henry VIII, chap. 10, the donee of the life estate must be regarded as taking a legal title. But the law is directly the reverse of this, and we have so held. Frey v. Allen, 9 D. C. App. 400: 25 Wash. Law Rep. 39; Fields v. Gwynn, 19 D. C. App. 99: 29 Wash. Law Rep. 834; Brown v. Wadsworth, 168 N. Y. 232; 4 Kent's Commentaries, p. 218; De Vaughn v. De Vaughn, 3 D. C. App. 50: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 224. A trust of this kind for a married woman is not a passive, but an active trust, to which the rule in Shelly's case does not apply. The appellees, therefore, took a legal estate in fee simple in remainder.

Digitized by Google

2. The conveyance from the appellees to the appellants was wholly without consideration, and it is impossible, under the circumstances, to believe that it was not superinduced by misrepresentation of some kind, whether intentional or unintentional. In any event it is void as to two of the three minors who executed it, for they had the right to disavow and repudiate it upon coming of age and they have exercised that right. As to the third and youngest child, it is claimed that he can not repudiate the act until he reaches his majority. But he has reached his majority, and it is sufficient evidence of repudiation on his part that he continues to prosecute this suit. A more definite act of disavowal can scarcely be supposed.

3. Even in the absence of misrepresentation, inasmuch as the conveyance by the appellees was wholly without consideration, it would have to be assumed, unless good reason to the contrary were shown, which certainly has not been shown here, that the appellants held the property as trustees for the appellees, and that they should reconvey to them.

We are of opinion that the decree of the court below was eminently right and just, and that it should be affirmed, with costs. The cause will be remanded to that court to carry it into effect. And it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Insurance—Exception—Disease—Accident.

In the case of White v. Standard Life & Accident Insurance Company, recently decided by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, it appeared that an accident insurance policy provided that the insurer should be liable for injuries or death caused solely by accidental means, and expressly exempted the insurer from liability if death resulted wholly or in part, directly or indirectly, from any bodily disease or infirmity of the injured. The evidence in the case showed that at the time the policy was issued, and at the time of the death of the insured, which was alleged to have been the result of an accidental injury, he was affected with diabetes, and the evidence was conclusive that such disease directly cooperated with the injury in causing death. The court held that the insurer was not liable.

Sale—Commercial Traveler—Evidence.

A written contract made by a commercial traveler for the sale of a soda fountain at an agreed price and upon agreed payments, provided that "this order can not be countermanded, and this is fully understood by the signer, and there are no other conditions or agreements with your salesman except those herein stated, and no claim will be made for any goods not specified herein." The contract was made on December 17, 1903. In an action upon this contract the purchaser answered, alleging that the salesman agreed with him at the time of the making of the contract that he was to have until the first day of January thereafter to rescind the order, and agreed to insert this agreement in the writing, but through fraud or mistake he failed to do so, and that he, the defendant, at the time he signed it, believed it had been so inserted, and that within six days after the signing of the contract he notified the plaintiff in writing that he had declined to accept the fountain, which allegations were controverted. The Kentucky Court of Appeals held, in the recent case of L. A. Becker Company v. Alvey, that the burden was on the defendant to sustain his plea of fraud or mistake in the writing, and that the issue being one of fact, was properly submitted to the jury. The court held further that where a sale of property is made by a commercial traveler subject to the approval of the principal, it is a mere order for the goods, and is revocable at any time at the option of the party giving it until accepted by the principal and notice of such acceptance is given to the purchaser.

Lease—Covenant—Insurance—Increase.

The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held, in the recent case of King v. Murphy Varnish Company, that a covenant by a tenant not to do any act on the premises which would cause an increase in insurance rates not merely prohibited any change in the tenant's business methods which would increase rates of insurance, but that the maintenance of varnish tanks, because of which the insurance rate was increased, was a breach of the covenant, although the tenant maintained such tanks at the time the lease was executed and had done so for many years before. The court said: "The covenant is in general terms, and if it operates as a restriction upon the use of the premises by the defendant as it has been accustomed to use premises occupied by it, that is no reason why it should not be enforced. It provides in express terms that no act or thing shall be done by the lessee which may make any insurance on the building against fire void, or may render any increased premium payable for such insurance. We see no reason for limiting the natural import of the language used, and we think that the act of the defendant in storing varnish in tanks on the premises comes within its terms."

Brokers—Acting for Both Parties.—A real estate agent, acting for both parties without the knowledge of the owner, held not entitled to a commission from the owner. Bunn v. Keach (Ill.), 73 N. E. Rep. 419.

Digitized by Google

Master and Servant—Safe Appliances.—The duty of a master to furnish proper appliances embraces human instrumentalities.—Hyland v. Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. (S. Car.), 49 S. E. Rep. 879.

Negligence—Driving Over Child in Street—In an action for the death of infant, plaintiff must show absence of contributory negligence on the part of the deceased or of those in charge of him.—Brennan v. Standard Oil Co. (Mass.), 73 N. E. Rep. 472.

Deeds—Sufficiency of Delivery.—In case of a voluntary settlement, the law presumes much more in favor of the delivery of the deed whereby the settlement is created than it does in ordinary cases of deeds of bargain and sale. Baker v. Atwell (Ill.), 73 N. E. Rep. 351.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Malcolm Hufty, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary F. Young, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of July, 1905. MALCOLM HUFTY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,002. Administration. 27-3t

T. Percy Myers, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Isabella Ricks v. Edward L. Edmonston et al.
In Equity, No. 24,716.

Upon consideration of the report of T. Percy Myers and Campbell Carrington, trustees, filed herein, stating that they have sold at public auction the east half of lot 23 in square 282, to Julius A. P. Dowling, Jr., as the agent for Mary A. Smith, for the sum of twenty-two hundred ($2,200) dollars, it is, by the court, this 6th day of July, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Paul E. Johnson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John W. Post, otherwise known as John Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. NELLIE POST, 611 3d st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,989. Administration. 27-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. F. Carusi, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Annie E. Ward v. Henry C. Ward, Blanche Walker.
No. 25,355. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bond of marriage from the defendant, Henry C. Ward, on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant it is this 3d day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Blanche Walker, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Levi H. David, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna H. Stewart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. ANDREW STEWART, 1420 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,994. Administration. 27-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Augustine Pavese, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. L. CABELL WILLIAMSON, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,029. Administration. 27-3t

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martha A. Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of June, 1905. SIDNEY A. TAYLOR, 1015 3d st. N. W.; PHEOBE MILES, 818 4th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,986. Administration. 27-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Charles Ippolito, Deceased.
No. 12,968. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Benjamin F. Guy, it is ordered this 7th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Raphael Ippolito, Orto Essoline, Joe Otito, and mother of Charles Ippolito, whose name and address is unknown, but is supposed to live in Italy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 8th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 27-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Wm. D. Hoover, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of James H. Hopkins, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 24th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 3d day of July, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS, AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by William D. Hoover, 2d V.-President. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,285. Administration. 27-3t

E. Hilton Jackson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Julia M. Adams, Deceased.
No. 13,028. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Decatur Morgan, it is ordered this 30th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Charles H. Adams, Carrie M. Adams, and Frank M. Adams, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of August, 1905, at ten o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 27-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Wm. E. Ambrose, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Arshak Abramian, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM E. AMBROSE, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,021. Administration. 26-3t

W. A. McKenney, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
American Security and Trust Co., a Corporation, Complainant, v. Willard H. Myers et al., Defendants.
No. 25,432. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to procure a sale of the interest of the defendant, Willard H. Myers, in and to the real and personal property held by the defendant, the National Safe Deposit Savings and Trust Company of the District of Columbia as administrator de bonis non, cum testamento annexo, and as trustee, under the will of Martha P. Myers, deceased, to satisfy the judgment of the complainant against said Willard H. Myers. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order is published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

M. J. Keane and M. J. Colbert, Solicitors

[Filed June 22, 1905—J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Equity Court.

Patrick J. Daly, Complainant, v. Douglass S. Mackall, the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Samuel L. Sterrett. Equity No. 24,224. Doc. 54.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to lots thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in Patrick J. Daly's subdivision of part of square 589, as per plat recorded in liber 28, folio 13, of the records of the surveyor's office for the District of Columbia, located in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, by Michael J. Keane, his solicitor, it is by the court, this 22d day of June, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Samuel L. Sterrett, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court; otherwise this case will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Absalom Baird, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM BAIRD, State Home, Annapolis, Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,022. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta P. Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. JOHN H. F. MEYER, 904 23d st. N.W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,998. Administration. 26-3t

W. H. Marlow, Jr., Solicitor

[Filed June 21, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Thomas Tracy et al. v. James E. Mulligan et al.
Equity No. 24,670. Doc. 55.

Walter H. Marlow, Jr., the trustee herein, having reported sale at public auction of part of original lot one (1) in square seven hundred and forty-nine (749) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, more fully described by metes and bounds in these proceedings, and otherwise known as lot forty-two (42) in O'Donnoghue's subdivision of said square, as per plat in Book C. H. B., page 137, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia, improved by house No. 1004 Third street N. E., to Edward A. Scanlon, for the sum of ten hundred and forty-five dollars ($1045), all cash; it is therefore, this twenty-first (21st) day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the twenty-second (22d) day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by L. P. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. L. Elterich, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Heinrich Wilhelm Feador Dukehart, Deceased. No. 13,010. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by John Waldman and H. A. Schenerman, it is ordered this 23d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs of the decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 31st day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

E. B. Hay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Anna L. Norville, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY, Bond Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,931. Administration. 26-3t

Fillmore Beall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Trueman D. Beckett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. CATHERINE E. BECKETT, 454 10th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,982. Administration. 26-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Charlotte Conrad et al. v. Minnie F. Briscoe.
Equity. No. 25,185.

Upon consideration of the report of Thomas Walker and George F. Collins, trustees, this day filed, it is, this 29th day of June, 1905, adjudged and ordered by the court that the sale thereby reported of part lot 26, in square 411, to Clement Dorsey for the sum of $1,595, be and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 31st day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Theophilus Bray, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN YARNOLD, 1222 C st. S. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,017. Administration. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

C. F. Carusi, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Mary C. Shafer et al., by their Next Friend, John L. Sassin, v. George D. Shafer. No. 3221.

George D. Shafer, trustee, having reported that he has received from Thomas W. Barker an offer of five hundred dollars, cash, for a part of a tract of land situate in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, known as "Fox," lying adjacent to the Georgetown College property, and beginning for the same in the south line of the said college property thirty-eight feet east of the intersection of the said college property and the Foxall estate, thence south 1½° west 120.65 feet, thence east at right angles to said line 20 feet, thence north parallel to said first line 120.65 feet to the line of the college property, and thence west in a straight line to the beginning, it is by the court, this 29th day of June, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said trustee be and he is hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon payment of the purchase money, unless cause to contrary be shown on or before the 29th day of July, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 26-3t

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Johnson v. Alice Johnson.
No. 24,976. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the ground of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alice Johnson, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Oscar Nauck, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Mary Cosgrove, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 17th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN NAUCK, by Oscar Nauck, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,179. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. H. Baden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Israel E. Kirk, Deceased.
No. 12,983. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by August Donath, one of the creditors of said decedent, it is ordered, this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William G. Kirk, Charles Mahon Kirk, Raymond Kirk, and Nell Kirk Taylor, sole heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 1st day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

R. B. Behrends, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. In Re Estate of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, Deceased. No. 8794.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper writing, dated the 13th day of April, 1898, purporting to be the last will and testament of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, has been returned as to Frederick W. Boucher, Edward Boucher, and Rosa Mitchell "not to be found," it is, this 27th day of June, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this case be, and they are hereby, set down for trial on the 10th day of October, 1905, and that this order and the substance of said issues heretofore framed shall be published once a week for four weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

ISSUES.

1. Was the said paper writing propounded as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, executed by her in due form of law? 2. Was the said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, of sound mind, and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? 3. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured through the undue influence, importunities, suggestions, and persuasions of any person or persons? 4. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured by the fraud, deceit, or misrepresentations practiced upon her by any person or persons? 26-4t

Wm. A. Donch, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martin Mangold, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MANGOLD, St. Elizabeth, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,874. Administration. 26-3t

Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James D. Sterling, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. THOMAS G. SMYTH, 2436 Pa. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,005. Administration. 26-3t

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary J. Cullen, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. CATHERINE C. CULLEN, 417 6th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,996. Administration. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

THIRD INSERTION.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Jane E. Williams et al., Complainants, v. Mary R. Ketner et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,309.

John L. Cassin, trustee, having reported sale at public auction of the real estate decreed to be sold in this cause, to wit: lots 4 and 5 in square 62, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to M. Frank Ruppert, for the sum of $1,709.70, it is, therefore, this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale will be ratified and confirmed on the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before said last mentioned day. Provided that a copy of this order be published in each of three successive issues of The Washington Law Reporter prior to the last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 25-3t

Henry S. Matthews, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Thomas B. Campbell, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 10th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. GEORGE J. EASTERDAY, executor, by Henry S. Matthews, attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 10,707. Adm. 25-3t

Chas. W. Darr and Alex. Wolf, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of John Curtis, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers on or before the 20th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 20th day of June, 1905. ALEXANDER WOLF, Jenifer Bldg.; CHARLES W. DARR, 707 G st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 11,974. Administration. 25-3t

E. F. Colladay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hugh Masterson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of May, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of June, 1905. ALICE E. MASTERSON, 1529 32d st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,808. Administration. 25-3t

A. B. Duvall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James S. Robinson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of June, 1905. ANDREW B. DUVALL, Columbian Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 10,978. Administration. 25-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Edward Shoemaker and Elizabeth Shoemaker, Complainants, v. John Curran and Hannah Curran, his Wife; George T. Shoemaker, Jesse Shoemaker, William F. Shoemaker, Isaac W. Shoemaker and Mary Shoemaker, his Wife; Eliza Davison and John F. Davison, her Husband; Ada V. Queen and Frank Queen, her Husband; Margaret E. Fowler and William S. Fowler, her Husband; Nancy R. Shoemaker, Elwood Shoemaker, Frank W. Shoemaker, and George T. Shoemaker, Defendants.

In Equity. No. 12,480.

Upon consideration of the report of John W. Bogley and Samuel H. Bogley, trustees, herein filed, showing that they have sold so much of that tract of land as lies in the District of Columbia, which was conveyed by deed of Clement Cox and others to Jesse Shoemaker, dated the 17th day of November, 1841, and recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia, in liber 1577, at folio 235, et seq., being the same land commonly known as "Friendship," or the "Jesse Shoemaker" tract, containing about twelve and one-half acres, to John T. Meany for five hundred and one dollars ($501) per acre, it is this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 10th day of July, A. D. 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once in each of three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 25-3t

---

F. Walter Brandenburg, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Walter Weston, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 3d day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 14th day of June, 1905. EDWARD L. WESTON, by F. Walter Brandenburg, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,148. Administration. 25-3t

---

Weston Flint, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of William B. Broun, Deceased.
No. 11,108. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration de bonis non on said estate, by Weston B. Flint, it is ordered this 22d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mrs. Nannie B. Sabine, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 25-3t

---

Alex. Muncaster, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary Schnappauf, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of June, 1905. ALEXANDER MUNCASTER, 482 La. ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,000. Administration. 25-3t

Legal Notices.

Geo. E. Fleming, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Albert T. Salter, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. SARAH G. B. SALTER, 1924 I st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,997. Administration. 25-3t

---

Bendheim & Rothschild, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Michael Dietz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of June, 1905. DAVID ROTHSCHILD, 472 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,962. Administration. 25-3t

---

Leckie, Fulton & Cox, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hannah Barnes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. CREED M. FULTON, Fendall Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,921. Administration. 25-3t

---

S. Herbert Giesy, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Mary W. Eveleth, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 17th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. GUSTAVUS B. MAYNADIER, Executor, by S. Herbert Giesy, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,130. Administration. 25-3t

---

Andrew Y. Bradley, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Bridget Werner, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of June, 1905. MARGARET RYAN, 103 Bank st., New York City. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,923. Administration. 25-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Lester & Price, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Agnes M. Beuchert, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 19th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 19th day of June, 1905. JOHN A. RUPPERT, 726 9th st. N. E.; LENA BEUCHERT, 722 H st. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,867. Administration. 25-3t

Hallam & Hallam, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Calvin Tibbs, Complainant, v. James Bennett's Unknown Heirs, Defendants.

Equity. No. 25,219. Doc. No. 56.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of complainant to lot two (2) in square five hundred and ninety-nine (599), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple by adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of James Bennett, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. j 2-9, j 7-14, a 4-11

FOURTH INSERTION.

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Jennie R. Willoughby et al., Complainants, v. Philip H. Mires et al., Defendants. No. 25,437. Equity Docket 56.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant to original lots 11 and 12 in square 61 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainants by adverse possession. On motion of the complainants, by Barnard & Johnson, their solicitors, it is by the court, this 14th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that Philip H. Mires, Philip Meyer, George Burnes, Christian Hines, Michael Myers, Matthew Hines, and William Robertson, or if they be dead, their unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days after the first publication of this order, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The court is satisfied by good cause shown by the affidavit filed herein that it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month during the period of not less than three (3) months. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks before said rule day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

Walter C. Clephane, Solicitor

In the Supeme Court of the District of Columbia. H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee, v. John W. Pilling, Alan O. Clephane, Eliza Andrews, and the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link.

No. 25,433, Equity Docket.

The object of this suit is to declare the title to the real estate hereinafter described to be good in fee simple in the complainant by adverse possession, subject to the deed of trust in the bill of complaint described, said real estate being described as follows, to wit: the north one (1) foot six (6) inches of sublot thirty (30), and all of sublots thirty-one (31), thirty-two (32), and thirty-four (34), and the north fifty-two (52) feet of sublots thirty-five (35), thirty-six (36), and thirty-seven (37), of Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots twenty (20) to twenty-four (24), inclusive, of F. T. Browning, trustee's, subdivision of original lots numbered nine (9), ten (10), and eleven (11), in square numbered eighty-four (84), in the city of Washington, D. C., as said Miller's subdivision appears of record in book numbered twenty (20), at page 48 of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by Walter C. Clephane, his solicitor, it is, this 12th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Andrew Link, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of the period of publication hereinafter described; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Good cause having been shown, it is not necessary that this order shall be published for a longer period than that herein required. This order shall be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for four successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 24-4t

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Thomas S. Evans, Complainant v. David Peter et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,299.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of complainant to part of lot nine, square number one hundred and forty-one, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot, and running thence north 23 feet 6 inches to the center of the dividing wall between two frame houses on said lot, thence east 115 feet 6 inches, thence south 23 feet 6 inches to the south line of said lot, thence west 115 feet 6 inches to place of beginning. On motion of the complainant, it is this 23d day of May ordered that the defendants, David Peter, Thomas Peter, Robert Peter, Jr., Trustees; John Brown, John Innis Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, George Gibbs, Walter Channing, Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, and Ramsey McHenry, if they be living, and the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them as are dead, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, if they be living; and that the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them who are dead cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said first return day, and twice a month for three successive months prior to the said latter return day (the last publication to include one of the former publications) in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. may 26; june 2-9; july 7-14; aug. 4-11

FIFTH INSERTION.

Filed May 10, 1905.—J. R. Young, Clerk.
John R. Shields, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Pauline Thornton v. Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of James H. Smith, the Sisters of the Visitation of Georgetown, George W. Walsh, and George W. Walsh, Trustee. Equity No. 25,212.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree to establish as complete and perfect in fee simple by adverse possession the title of complainant to part of original lot fourteen (14) in square six hundred twenty (620), in Washington City, District of Columbia, said part of lot being described as follows, viz: beginning at a point on the line of north "M" street, distant twenty (20) feet east of the northwest corner of said lot fourteen (14) and running thence west twenty (20) feet; thence south along the west line of said lot fourteen (14) one hundred and thirty-six (136) feet to the rear or south line of said lot; thence east twenty (20) feet and thence north one hundred thirty-six (136) feet to the place of beginning; and to enjoin the defendants from asserting any title or claim thereto. On motion of complainant, by John R. Shields, her solicitor, it is, this 10th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants above named cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day, occurring three months after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published twice a month for three months prior to said return day in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk. By R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. may 12, 19; june 9, 16; july 7, 14.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 28

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - - JULY 14, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 433
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Charles S. Bundy, appellant, v. The United States ex rel. Ehud N. Darling 434
James L. Karrick, appellant, v. Berton O. Westmore, admr., to the use of John F. McKay 435
Henry Held, trading as Brooklyn Vault Light Company, appellant, v. John T. Walker 440
Teodosia Michalowicz, appellant, v. Stanislaus Michalowicz et al 442
Legal Notices 442

Daniel W. Baker as United States Attorney.

Mr. Daniel W. Baker has been appointed by the President as United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, to succeed Mr. Morgan H. Beach, who retires from office on August 31. Mr. Baker is among the best known members of the District bar, and his appointment is received with very general satisfaction.

Mr. Baker is a native of Maryland, was born in 1867, and was educated at Mount St. Mary's College, in that State, in which institution his father was a professor. He was graduated from the Law School of the Georgetown University in 1893, and two years later become a member of its faculty, since which time his identification with the school has continued. His success at the bar was immediate, and he is numbered among our most active practitioners. For some years he has been a member of the firm of Lambert & Baker.

Mr. Baker served as assistant United States attorney for this District under Hon. Henry E. Davis for about two years, resigning to devote himself to private practice. The position to which he has been called is one of great responsibility, and demands that its occupant shall be a man of high character and a lawyer of fine ability. In both respects Mr. Baker is well equipped for its important duties, and that he will discharge them faithfully and efficiently may confidently be predicted.

False Representations to Commercial Agencies.

In Mills et al v. Brill, recently decided by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, suit was brought to recover possession of merchandise sold by the plaintiffs to defendant Brill, in reliance upon statements made by him as to his financial condition for the purpose of obtaining credit. The statements in question, which were shown to have been false and fraudulent, were made by defendant to the representatives of two commercial agencies, and were relied upon by the plaintiffs, who, on the strength of them, delivered to him a quantity of gloves. A few days afterwards the plaintiffs elected to rescind the sale, and demanded the return of the gloves, which was refused, and they thereupon brought this action. It was argued on behalf of the defendant, among other things, that the false representations were not made by him to the plaintiffs directly; but this objection was summarily disposed of by the appellate division, which said: "It is true the representations made by Brill were not made to the plaintiffs personally, but that is of no importance. They were made to the commercial agencies for the purpose of obtaining through them a credit, and were just as effective for that purpose, and, if false, subjected Brill to the same liability as though made to the plaintiffs personally." The decision of the trial term in favor of defendant was reversed.

Bad Dreams as an Element of Damages.

The decision of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in Louisville and Nashville R. Co. v. Smith, 84 S. W. 755, is interesting as dealing with a question seldom appearing in legal decisions. In that case it was held inadmissible to prove a dream alleged to have caused pain and suffering, even though the dream seems without question to have been the result of the injury and to have caused the injured person distress naturally incident to a disagreeable dream. The court also lays down the general rule that where the physical or mental suffering of a person, resulting from an injury, is the proper subject of inquiry, the usual expression of such suffering manifested or made at the time may be admitted as original evidence.

Brokers—Commissioners for Sale of Land.—An agreement by a real estate broker to share commissions with another who found a purchaser held not to preclude the broker from recovering the commissions. Bray v. Riggs (Mo.), 85 S. W. Rep. 116.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

CHARLES S. BUNDY, APPELLANT,
v.
THE UNITED STATES, EX REL. EHUD N. DARLING.

APPEALS, NOTICE OF; APPEAL BONDS; REFUSAL TO APPROVE; MANDAMUS; PRACTICE.

1. A notice of appeal from a justice of the peace gave the name of the proposed surety as "Title Guaranty and Trust Company," but omitted the words "of Scranton, Pa.," though the correct address of the proposed surety was given. The justice, on objection by the appellee, refused to approve the bond on the ground that the notice did not comply with Rule 20 of the Supreme Court, regulating notice in such cases. Held, that it was the duty of the justice to approve the bond, and on his refusal mandamus would lie to compel the approval of the bond.
2. Whether the Supreme Court of the District has power to make a rule which, if enforced literally, would shorten the time for giving an appeal bond, should the appellant be unable to procure the requisite surety before the commencement of the time required for notice of his intention to appeal, quære.
3. Probably, when a bond is tendered on the last day allowed by the Code, the rule as to notice would still operate, in which event, if satisfied with the surety, the justice could enter his approval as of the date of filing.
4. The relator in mandamus proceedings is, as matter of course, permitted to use the name of the United States, without resort to the intervention of the district attorney; and even that formality is not now essential to maintain the action, following Dancy v. Clark, 33 Wash. Law Rep. 18.

No. 1487. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by respondent from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 47,095, directing the issue of a writ of mandamus. Affirmed.

Mr. Wm. S. Abert and Mr. Conway Robinson for the appellant.

Mr. E. G. Niles and Mr. J. S. White for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from an order of the Supreme Court of the District awarding a writ of mandamus to compel the appellant, as a justice of the peace, to approve an appeal bond.

The following facts appear from the petition and return: In a case pending before the appellant, as justice of the peace, between Ehud N. Darling and William Stone Abert, the same being a trial of the right of property, the said justice, on July 28, 1904, rendered judgment in favor of Abert, from which Darling entered notice of appeal. On said day Darling served notice upon Abert that he had entered an appeal and would, on July 21, offer the Title Guaranty and Trust Company as surety upon his appeal bond. On said date Darling appeared in person before said justice, with the duly authorized agent of the Title Guaranty and Trust Company, of Scranton, Pa., and offered an appeal bond in the proper amount for his approval. Upon objection of Abert's counsel, the justice refused to approve said bond, as appears from his minutes, because of variance in notice and failure to comply with Rule 20 of the Supreme Court of the District, regulating notice in such cases. Rule 20 provides that two clear days of notice of the offering of an appeal bond from a judgment of a justice of the peace shall be given, and such notice shall contain the name and address of the proposed surety. The notice gave the name and correct address of the said surety company, but omitted the words "of Scranton, Pennsylvania." The Title Guaranty and Trust Company, of Scranton, Pa., appears of record as having been regularly admitted and approved as sufficient surety upon appeal bonds in the courts of the District, and there is no company of similar name upon the said record. It seems quite clear that before the objection was sustained, both the objecting party and the justice of the peace were well informed that the notice referred to the Title Guaranty and Trust Company, of Scranton, Pa., and to none other.

We are of the opinion that it was the plain duty of the justice of the peace, under the circumstances, to approve the bond that had been tendered. Beal v. Cox, 14 App. D. C. 368, 373: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 231. In that case it was said: "If the bond appear to be regular in form and execution and the surety sufficient, it is his duty to approve it without regard to captious objections that may be raised on behalf of an opposing party." This being the case, it was clearly within the power and became the duty of the Supreme Court of the District in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction in the premises to compel the approval of the bond. Church v. Fidelity and Deposit Co., 13 App. D. C. 264, 266: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 676.

The bond was tendered within the six days prescribed by section 31 of the Code, and it is not necessary, therefore, to consider whether, in cases of the trial of the right of property in a justice's court, this time is extended to six days after prayer for appeal entered, by the terms of section 35.

Nor, as the notice was given in the time prescribed by Rule 20, is it necessary to determine whether the Supreme Court of the District has the authority to make a rule which, if enforced literally, might shorten the time for giving an appeal bond should the appellant be unable to procure the requisite surety before the commencement of the time required for notice of his intention. Probably when a bond shall be tendered on the last day allowed by the Code, the rule as to notice might still operate; in which event, if satisfied with the surety, the justice could enter his approval as of the date of filing as indicated in Beal v. Cox, 14 App. D. C. 368, 374: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 231.

The question of the power of the court to make a rule that in its necessary operation might shorten the statutory period for tendering appeal bonds in the courts of justices of the peace will not be determined until a case shall come before us which renders it necessary.

The objection that the petition for mandamus could only be prosecuted by the United States attorney for the District has been presented, for the first time, on this hearing. Even if not too late to be now entertained, it is without merit. It has always been the practice to permit the relator in such proceedings to use the name of the United States, as a matter of course, without resort to the intervention of the district attorney; and even that formality is not now considered essential to the maintenance of the action. Dancy v. Clark, 33 W. L. R. 18.

There was no error in granting the writ of mandamus, and the order will be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered. Affirmed.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

JAMES L. KARRICK, APPELLANT,

v.

BERTON O. WETMORE, ADMR., TO THE USE OF JOHN F. McKAY.

JUDGMENTS; ORDER STRIKING OUT DISMISSAL OF CAUSE WITHOUT NOTICE TO DEFENDANT HELD VOID.

1. A judgment of dismissal, on its face apparently a final disposition of the cause in which rendered, can not, after the lapse of five terms of the court rendering it, be stricken out without notice to defendant, and a judgment rendered in place of it in favor of plaintiff and for the full amount of his claim.
2. A judgment of dismissal is as good as any other judgment as long as it stands, and parties are entitled to act upon the faith of it as a valid judgment, while, not being rendered on the merits, they are liable to be stricken out, yet they are final judgments, and may not, any more than a judgment upon the merits, be disturbed after the lapse of the term at which rendered.
3. To an action brought here on a Massachusetts judgment, the defendant pleaded the invalidity of the judgment. It appeared that the Massachusetts court had, on June 12, 1899, dismissed the cause on the ground that no action had been taken within one year, and the cause stood dismissed for more than five terms of the court, until October 18, 1900, when the order of dismissal was, without notice to defendant and without his knowledge, stricken out as based upon a mistake of fact, action having been taken within the year, and on November 20, 1900, likewise without notice to defendant, judgment was rendered for plaintiff for the full amount of his claim. In the meantime, on April 28, 1899, defendant filed his petition in bankruptcy in Colorado, and on June 28, 1899, received his discharge from all provable debts, including that due plaintiff. Subsequently to his discharge, and while the Massachusetts suit stood dismissed, he inquired of the clerk of that court as to the condition of the suit, and was informed it was no longer pending, for which reason he did not suggest his discharge in bankruptcy therein. Defendant's plea, in the action here on the judgment, setting up these facts, was demurred to, and the demurrer sustained. On appeal by defendant, held that the action of the Massachusetts court in striking out the judgment of dismissal and in rendering judgment for the plaintiff, without notice to defendant, was without jurisdiction, and was null and void; and the trial court erred in sustaining the demurrer to the plea.

No. 1528. Decided April 17, 1905.

APPEAL (specially allowed) by defendant from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 46,600, sustaining a demurrer to a plea. Reversed.

Mr. J. J. Darlington, Mr. W. W. Millan, and Mr. R. E. L. Smith for the appellant.

Mr. Wm. L. Ford for the appellee.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

A suit between the parties to the controversy now before us was here on a former appeal and seems to have involved the same subject-matter. It was held, in substance, that the suit, as it then stood, could not be maintained. 22 D. C. App. 487: 31 Wash. Law Rep. 714. That suit seems to have been thereupon abandoned, and the present proceedings were instituted wherein very different questions are raised.

The suit is one at common law, instituted in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, upon a judgment recovered by the appellee as plaintiff against the appellant as defendant in the Superior Court for the county of Suffolk, in the State of Massachusetts, on November 20, 1900, for the sum of $12,881.46, besides costs, which is alleged in the declaration to remain unsatisfied. With the declaration was filed a copy of the record of the court in Massachusetts, and as the validity of this record as a basis for the present suit is here in question, it is necessary that its condition should to some extent be stated.

The suit in Massachusetts, which seems to have grown out of some building contracts between the appellant and Charles H. Wetmore, deceased, the intestate of the plaintiff therein, was commenced in the year 1892 by attachment proceedings. The defendant, however, the present appellant, subsequently appeared by attorney and pleaded to the declaration. Among the pleas was one of set-off. There was then a trial by jury, who were directed to return a special verdict upon four special interrogatories framed for them. The answers of the jury to these interrogatories seem to have been unfavorable to the defendant in the cause. And yet the defendant came in and moved for judgment. The record fails to disclose what action, if any, was taken on this motion. But the next step seems to have been a motion by the defendant to set aside the special verdict, which was allowed. Thereupon the plaintiff appears to have amended his declaration by filing an additional count, and the parties went to trial again before a jury. There was another special verdict, and also a general verdict in favor of the plaintiff in the case for the sum of $9,169.39.

A motion for a new trial was made and overruled, and then the defendant, according to the record, filed "sundry exceptions to the ruling and opinion of the court in certain matters of law, which were reduced to writing." When these exceptions were filed does not appear; but presumably they were filed on or before March 5, 1894, which was the time assigned within which they were to be filed.

Nothing further seems to have been done for upwards of four years. Then, on June 8, 1897, "at a calling of the docket under the general order of court the action was dismissed." Two days afterwards, on June 10, 1897, the order of dismissal was stricken out and the cause restored to the calendar. A very short time after this, on June 28, 1897, the attorney for the defendant entered an order withdrawing his appearance. There would seem to have been a substitution of attorneys, for the next step that appears in the record is on June 13, 1898, when another attorney, whose name appears nowhere else in the record, also withdrew his appearance for the defendant. Immediately thereafter appears the following entry:

"Thence the case was continued to the July sitting, 1898, when said exceptions, having been presented to the court, were disallowed as not conformable to the truth, the bill not properly and correctly stating the evidence so as to fairly present the questions of law raised by the defendant's exceptions.

"Thence the case was continued from sitting to sitting into the April sitting, 1899, when on the 12th day of June, 1899, at a calling of the docket under the general order of court, said action was dismissed.

"And now at this present October sitting, 1900, to wit, on the 18th day of said October, 1900, said dismissal is stricken off and the case brought forward, the same having been dismissed improvidently, action having been taken within one year, but not discovered."

Digitized by Google

Then, on November 17, 1900, there was a motion by the plaintiff for the entry of judgment on the verdict of the jury; and judgment was accordingly entered on November 20, 1900, against the defendant for the sum of $12,881.46 and costs of suit, with award of execution.

It is upon this record that the present proceedings were instituted in this District.

The defendant filed two pleas: (1) The general issue of nul tiel record; and (2) a special plea, wherein he set forth that, on June 12, 1899, the cause against him in Massachusetts was dismissed; that, under the rules of the court, that dismissal became final on the first Monday of July, 1899; that the cause remained so dismissed for more than five terms of the court, until October 18, 1900; that in the meantime, on April 29, 1899, the defendant filed his petition in bankruptcy in the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado, in which in his schedule he enumerated the debt due to said Charles H. Wetmore, and was by the said district court, on June 23, 1899, discharged from all debts provable against him in bankruptcy, wherein was included the debt here sued on; that subsequently to his discharge in bankruptcy, and while the suit in Massachusetts stood dismissed as aforesaid, he made inquiry of the clerk of that court as to the condition of the suit and was informed that the same was no longer pending; that, relying upon this statement, he took no steps in that court to suggest his discharge in bankruptcy; that the action in Massachusetts was sought to be restored to the docket of the court in that State, "without summons, citation, or notice of any kind to the defendant, or to any one for him, and without his knowledge;" and that the court had no jurisdiction in the premises to render such judgment.

There was joinder of issue by the plaintiff on the defendant's first plea, and a demurrer to the second; and the demurrer was sustained by the court below. From the order sustaining the demurrer the defendant has been allowed a special appeal to this court; and the cause is now before us on this special appeal.

The question in this case is whether a judgment of dismissal, on its face apparently a final disposition of the cause in which it was rendered, can, after the lapse of five terms of the court by which it was rendered, be stricken out without notice to the defendant, and a judgment rendered in the place of it, equally without notice to the defendant, in favor of the plaintiff and for the full amount of the latter's claim. And this question, we think, on the plainest principles of justice, whatever may have been the merit of the plaintiff's claim, must be resolved in the negative.

The right to be heard is a fundamental right of every litigant under our system of jurisprudence, and under every system of jurisprudence worthy of the name; and usually it is not denied even in the lawless codes of the most lawless savages; and in the right to be heard the first element is that of notice. The service of process, in other words, notice, is the essential prerequisite to the exercise of jurisdiction by any court. Indeed, it may be said that, strictly speaking, not a single step from the beginning to the end of a legal controversy can be taken without notice to the opposing party; although, of necessity, the notice in many instances is constructive, rather than actual, and the absence of it is an irregularity rather than a defect that would operate to cause a failure of jurisdiction. These are fundamental principles of the law which can not reasonably be controverted; and yet, if we give effect to the contentions of the appellee in the case now before us, it can not be without serious derogation of those principles.

As appears from the record of the court of Massachusetts the appellant here was the defendant in a suit in that court. That suit, after many vicissitudes, resulted in a judgment of dismissal, upon the ground that there had been no prosecution of the cause for twelve months previously thereto, which was a good ground for dismissal under the rules and practice of the court. There would appear, however, to have been some mistake in the matter, and that there had been some action within the previous year. This was on June 12, 1899. Before this order of dismissal, and while the suit was in a state of abeyance, the appellant had instituted proceedings in bankruptcy in the District Court of the United States for the District of Colorado (on April 26, 1899), for the purpose of being discharged from his debts under the bankruptcy laws of the United States, and had in his schedule of indebtedness enumerated the claim for the enforcement of which the suit in Massachusetts had been prosecuted. On June 23, 1899, he received his discharge in bankruptcy. This was seventeen days after the dismissal of the suit in Massachusetts, of which he seems to have had no notice. But immediately after his discharge, with the view of pleading such discharge as a bar to further proceedings in the Massachusetts court, he applied to the clerk of that court to ascertain the condition of the suit there, and was informed, and very truly informed, that there was no suit then pending in that court against him, and that the suit which had been pending against him had been dismissed.

Now, whatever may have been the cause of the dismissal of that suit, whether it was due to a mistake of fact or to a mistake of law, or whatever was the reason for it, as long as it was not done by the fraud of the appellant, which is not pretended, the appellant, under the circumstances, had the right to rely upon it and to rest secure upon its validity. If the dismissal was improper it was not for him to take any steps to correct the impropriety. There was no obligation upon him to move to have the dismissal stricken out, even to give him an opportunity to plead his discharge in bankruptcy. He was entitled to rest upon the record as he found it and to assume that the cause was at an end. And even if he was chargeable with a knowledge of the infirmity of the judgment of dismissal as having been based upon a mistake of fact, he was entitled to assume that he would be duly notified of any attempt to correct the error. It would certainly be most unreasonable to hold that he was bound to incessant vigilance to see that no step was taken in the matter without his cognizance of the fact. And when it is remembered that, whatever may have been the merit of the original claim against him, and whatever may have been the demerit of his original defense, he had by his discharge in bankruptcy become entitled to a prima facie perfect defense which would or at least might have precluded the entry of any judgment against him, as would a plea of payment puis darein continuance, if supported by proof, it will be apparent what great injustice could be and was done in this cause by the failure of notice to him of an attempt to convert a judgment in his favor to a judgment against him.

Digitized by Google

It seems to be conceded that, under the circumstances, only in the suit in Massachusetts could the discharge in bankruptcy have been properly pleaded. It can not be pleaded in the proceedings in this District, for the reason that what purports to be the final judgment of the court in Massachusetts, upon which the present proceedings are based, was rendered after the discharge in bankruptcy. Dimock v. Revere Copper Company, 117 U. S. 559. But the appellant proposed to plead it, where it was properly pleadable, in the original suit in Massachusetts; and it may be assumed that he would have done so, if the opportunity to do so had been afforded to him by proper notice that the judgment of dismissal would be stricken out. It seems to be assumed by the appellee that the appellant had lost his right to plead his discharge in bankruptcy by his failure, upon the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, to ask for a stay of proceedings in the Massachusetts court. But this proposition is wholly untenable. It was his privilege to ask for a stay of proceedings, if he so desired; but if he assumed that no judgment would be rendered in that court before his discharge in bankruptcy, and that he would have ample time before the final judgment therein to introdnce into the suit the defense of his discharge, he was at perfect liberty to do so. In fact, the proceedings in the Massachusetts court seem to have been stayed during nearly the whole time of the proceedings in bankruptcy and for about two years previously thereto; for the record fails to show that anything whatever was done in the cause in the Massachusetts court between June 10, 1897, when a previous judgment of dismissal was stricken out, and June 12, 1899, when the second judgment of dismissal was entered, except the withdrawal of the defendant's attorneys and the disallowance of the defendant's exceptions at the July term of 1898. Moreover, the only action taken by the court in Massachusetts during the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings, that is, between April 26, 1899, and June 23, 1899, was the very dismissal complained of by the appellee, on June 12, 1899, which was a most effectual stay of proceedings.

It is plainly apparent, therefore, from the record before us that the appellant was entitled at any time after June 23, 1899, to go into the court in Massachusetts and there plead his discharge in bankruptcy as a bar to any recovery there against him, if any suit was then pending; that there was no suit then pending in that court; that, when it was sought to revive that suit by striking out the judgment of dismissal, it would have been competent for him then to plead his discharge, if he had the opportunity; that he was deprived of that opportunity by the failure to give him notice, and that thereby he lost a most valuable right. No case can well be supposed which more forcibly illustrates the propriety of giving notice or the gross injustice that may follow from failure to give it. Assuredly it can not be that the law will sanction such a proceeding.

We need not decide the question whether the court in Massachusetts had the authority, after the lapse of five terms of that court, to strike out a judgment of dismissal and to enter a final judgment in favor of the plaintiff. We will assume that it had full power and authority so to do under its rules of practice and under the laws of that State. The full force and credit required by our Federal Constitution and the comity that exists between the States to be given by the courts of one State to the judgments and decrees of the courts of other States, we are disposed to accord even to a greater extent than we might do to the courts of our own jurisdiction, for the reason that many concessions are to be made to difference of practice and difference of statutory law; but in no court of any jurisdiction can we recognize the authority to render judgment against individual citizens without due notice to them, and it is conceded that in the present instance there was no notice of any kind to the appellant or to any one for him of the intended action of the court. It is alleged in the appellant's plea, and it is admitted by the demurrer, that there was absolutely no notice of any kind to the appellant.

In order to maintain the validity of the judgment upon which he sues, the appellee is driven to the necessity of arguing that no notice was required, that the parties were in court, and that the court had jurisdiction over them and over the subject-matter. But the plain answer to this is that the defendant was not in court. He had been dismissed from court without day and was no longer required to take notice of its proceedings. It is absurd to argue that he must be regarded as cognizant of the mistake under which the judgment of dismissal was rendered; that he must be held to know that such judgment was liable to be stricken out; and that, therefore, he was constructively retained in court for an indefinite time, and until the plaintiff thought proper to move in the matter and have the judgment stricken out. This contention, if sustained, would render judgments of dismissal useless and of no value; and yet undoubtedly a judgment of dismissal is as good as any other judgment as long as it stands, and parties are entitled to act upon the faith of it as a valid judgment. It is true that judgments of dismissal, not being rendered upon the merits, are liable to be stricken out; and yet they are final judgments and may terminate the litigation as well as any other judgment. It may not be disturbed any more than a judgment upon the merits after the lapse of the term at which it was rendered. Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 410; Phillips v. Negley, 117 U. S. 665.

In these two cases it is shown that there are certain exceptions to the general rule, which may be reduced to three classes: (1) Cases of clerical misprision, as when the judgment rendered was not entered correctly by the clerk; (2) cases of mistakes of fact, such as that one of the parties to the judgment had died before its rendition, or was an infant, or a feme covert, or the like, which errors were formerly corrected at the common law by writ of error coram nobis; (3) cases in which a bill in equity will lie to prevent the execution of an erroneous or inequitable judgment.

Digitized by Google

Now here there was no clerical misprision. The judgment entered was the judgment actually rendered and which was intended to be rendered. It is true there was a mistake of fact, as we may assume, but that does not make the judgment a clerical error, but an erroneous judgment, such as might result from a mistaken understanding of testimony. It falls, if at all, within one of the other two classes. But this does not help the case of the appellee. For, while in modern practice, the writ of error coram nobis has fallen into disuse, and relief is afforded upon motion supported by affidavits, and while under statutory provisions, as in Massachusetts, relief by motion is also to a limited extent substituted for bill in equity, yet, as both the writ of error coram nobis and bill in equity can not be entertained without service of process, so a motion to serve the same purpose must likewise be based upon notice. Notice is as requisite to jurisdiction in the one case as in the other, and the fact that the method of relief is more summary does not in any manner diminish the necessity for its requirement.

Certain cases are cited on behalf of the appellee as tending to support his proposition that a court may, without notice to the party to be affected thereby, set aside a judgment after the term at which it was rendered and enter a new and radically different judgment. These are Walden v. Craig's Heirs, 14 Pet. 147; Odell v. Reynolds, 70 Fed. Rep. 656; Emery v. Whitwell, 6 Mich. 474; Nowe v. Todd, 83 Mo. 601; Mann v. Schroerr, 50 Mo. 306; Davis v. Wade, 58 Mo. App. 641; Emery v. Berry, 28 N. H. 473; Block on Judgments, sec. 134; Freeman on Judgments, sec. 142; 17 Amer. and English Encyclopædia of Law (2d ed.), 823. But upon careful examination of these authorities it will be found that in no one of them was the case presented which is now before us, and that the mistakes corrected were mistakes of a clerical nature, apparent on the record.

The case of Walden v. Craig's Heirs, 14 Pet. 147, merely held that parties were, under the law of the State of Kentucky, to be regarded as continuing in court for the purpose of carrying a judgment into effect. But this is a very different proposition from that of wholly invalidating a judgment and converting it into an adverse decision.

The case of Odell v. Reynolds is apparently more to the point, but only apparently so. A very brief statement of it will be amply sufficient, notwithstanding the somewhat broad language of the opinion, to show that it is no authority whatever for the proposition advanced on behalf of the appellee in the present case.

In that case a judgment by confession had been entered in the Superior Court of Cook County, in the State of Illinois, for the sum of $25,000, on account of several promissory notes held by the plaintiff and aggregating that amount. The entry of the judgment was on April 18, 1892, and the confession purported to be by a certain person named as "the attorney in fact" for the defendant, and to be an account of "the note filed in the case." There were two defects in the judgment. One was to the effect that the statute law of Illinois forbade the appearance of any one as an attorney in fact to confess judgment, unless he was an attorney at law. The person who had confessed the judgment was in fact an attorney at law; but that fact did not appear affirmatively upon the record, although it was ascertainable from the rolls of the court. Another defect was that the word "note" was used in the singular number, indicating that only one note for the sum of $25,000 had been filed, while in fact several notes had been filed of the aggregate amount of $25,000. On February 26, 1893, after the term had expired at which the judgment had been rendered, motion was made to correct it. Whether this motion was made upon notice or without it, the statement of the case does not show. From the opinion in the case of Odell v. Reynolds it may be conjectured that it was without notice. The motion was allowed, and the judgment was corrected. Subsequently suit was instituted upon it in the Federal District Court; and there were pleas filed by the defendant, one of them setting forth the insanity of the defendant at the time the judgment was rendered, another to the effect that the judgment had been altered without authority on the part of the court of Cook County so to do, after the lapse of the term. This suit found its way to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and that court sustained the authority of the Cook County court to correct its judgment.

Assuredly there is nothing in the facts of this case that would justify the contention of the appellee in the case now before us. In that case there was no substantial change whatever in the new judgment that was entered. Indeed, from our standpoint the changes might be regarded as wholly superfluous. The original judgment was against the defendant for $25,000; the corrected judgment was one against the defendant for $25,000. It was of no real consequence whether the claim was upon one note for $25,000 or upon several notes aggregating that sum, or whether it appeared upon the record that the attorney in fact was an attorney at law; and we fail to see how, upon the authority of such a case as this, the action can be vindicated which would convert, without notice to the party to be affected thereby, a judgment of dismissal in his favor to a judgment against him for upwards of $12,000.

It is upon the reasoning of the case, however, and not upon the facts of it, that the appellee seeks to justify himself; but no more upon the reasoning than upon the facts can he support his contention, for the opinion of the court distinctly and explicitly states the limitations upon the course of procedure which it sanctioned, and which no doubt is entirely correct within these limitations. As the case of Odell v. Reynolds is the only case that has been cited which treats this subject at any length from the apparent standpoint of the appellee, and the subject is a grave one in the administration of justice, we are at pains to transcribe so much of the opinion in that case as seems to be pertinent to the issue before us. The court there said:

Digitized by Google

"The first question to which we shall give attention arises upon the objection of the defendant to the entry made by the Superior Court of Cook County, on the 26th day of February, 1893, in correction and amendment of the judgment which it had entered on the 18th day of April, 1892. The grounds of that objection, as stated by counsel for defendant in error in argument, are: (1) That the court had no power to make the order, for the reason that the term at which the judgment was rendered had expired, and (2) that the order was made without any notice to the defendant of the proposed action and without his knowledge. . . . On the contrary, it is a power inherent in the authority of every court having general jurisdiction to correct errors in the making up of its records whereby they fail to express the truth in regard to its proceedings. And the power may be exercised by the court at any time when the error is brought to its attention, and no injury is likely to happen to the parties or other persons by its exercise. No doubt such power should be cautiously and discreetly used, but that it exists is well established by authority. It is the settled doctrine of the English courts, and in most of the courts of this country. . . . In the present case counsel for defendant submits as a vital objection to the action of the Illinois court in making the entry for correction of February 26, 1893, that 'to make that finding and to insert it in the judgment nunc pro tunc was to materially add to and substantially modify the judgment that was rendered at the prior term, for it involved the very character and scope of the agency to which alone Reynolds had committed the right to enter his appearance and confess judgment.' But the consequence of the correction is no test of the power of the court to make it. In Wight's case, just cited, the effect of the entry was to annihilate the whole foundation on which his petition rested. . . . Sometimes the propriety of such action exists in cases where the correction may be made upon that which appears in the record itself and is necessary to make it consistent and harmonious one part with another. In other cases it is necessary in the interest of justice to act upon matters not appearing from the record; for example, things resting in the recollection of the judge, or evidence adduced aliunde. In the former case notice to parties is not necessary. No new thing is brought upon the record. The court, for the clearer and more accurate expression of its final action, molds into form that which is fairly and reasonably deducible from the whole record, taken together. There is nothing to litigate. No right is substantially affected. Freeman on Judgments, sec. 72a; 1 Black on Judgments, sec. 164; Emery v. Whitwell, ubi supra; Mathesen's Adm. v. Grant, 2 How. 263. In the latter case the question of the necessity of notice may depend upon the source from which the evidence comes upon which the action is to be taken. If it is the recollection of the court, it is doubtful whether notice is required, for the reason that it is not open to contest. At all events, it would seem upon the authorities that corrections of the record made by the court upon its own recollection would not be collaterally assailable, though made without notice."

We have underlined certain phrases in this opinion which clearly show the limitation within which it was intended to be restricted. The opinion is plainly unexceptionable as applied to the facts of the case which was before the court; but it is equally plain that the ruling of the court was not intended to extend to cases, where any right was to be substantially affected, or where any of the parties were likely to be injured by the proposed correction. Now it is difficult to conceive of any case where a right was more substantially affected, or where one of the parties to the cause was more seriously injured, than the case now before us.

The case of Wight, 134 U. S. 136, is also cited by the appellee as sustaining his contention that he was entitled to proceed without notice. But we fail to see wherein that case supports him. There it appeared that one Wight, who petitioned to be released on habeas corpus, had been indicted and convicted in a district court of the United States for a criminal offense. He made a motion for a new trial and in arrest of judgment, and at that point the district court certified the cause to the circuit court. The circuit court overruled both motions, but failed to enter any order to remand the cause to the district court. It is not entirely clear from the record whether the failure to enter such an order was due to oversight on the part of the clerk to note on his record the verbal order that may have been actually rendered, or resulted from the failure of the court at the time to make any order. But on the same day on which the circuit court denied the motions of the defendant, the district court again took up the case, entered an order overruling the same motions, and putting upon record its opinion that the case had been improvidently and without authority certified to the circuit court, vacated the order of certification, and thereupon proceeded to pronounce sentence upon the defendant. The writ of habeas corpus was then sued out, and while that writ was pending it was discovered that, as already stated, no entry had been made remanding the cause from the circuit to the district court. Thereupon the circuit court corrected its record so as to provide for such an entry. The petitioner's whole case was based upon the absence of any such entry, and the consequent absence, as claimed, of jurisdiction on the part of the district court to proceed with the cause. The Supreme Court of the United States held that the correction of the record was lawful.

Now, it is quite apparent from the statement of this case, in which the district judge, who held the district court, also sat with the circuit judge in the circuit court, and both courts were held at the same time in the same court house, that there was an actual remanding of the cause by the circuit to the district court; and whether the failure to enter a formal order to that effect was due to misprision of the clerk, who no doubt was the same for both courts, or, as is more likely from the circumstances, was the result of oversight on the part of the judges, or of the view evidently entertained by them, although not entertained, it would seem, by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the order of certification from the district to the circuit court was without authority of law and void; the failure to enter an order for remanding the cause was not a jurisdictional, but a clerical matter. It was intended simply to make a record of that which was actually done by the court, and it did not at all materially alter the nature of the judgment that was rendered. The case of Wight, therefore, is no authority for the position of the appellee in the case now before us.

Digitized by Google

Various other cases that are of a similar character, in which there has been a relaxation of the rigid rules of the common law that judgments of a court of general jurisdiction may not be altered in any manner after the lapse of the term at which they were rendered. But it is unnecessary to consider them. The relaxation has been only to correct clerical errors, or to fill up a gap in the record when there was actually no gap in the action of the court, or in some way to make the record consistent with itself. In other words, the power of correction remaining in the court would seem to be rather of matters leading up to judgment itself. But assuming that a judgment itself might be altered in a substantial manner, by way of correction or amendment, after the lapse of the term at which it has been rendered, we find no adjudicated case, and we know of no rule of law or of reason that would justify a substantial alteration of such judgment without notice to the person to be affected thereby. Such notice is jurisdictional, and the failure to give it is not a mere irregularity to be corrected by action in the same court in the case itself, or by appeal to an appellate tribunal. Evidently in the case before us, when the defendant was advised of the action taken against him, it was too late for him to enforce his right by application to that court or by appeal, and it is absurd that he should be driven to such mode of enforcing his right. He had been dismissed from court, and he could not have been called back except by notice, which it is conceded was not given.

From what we have said it follows in our opinion that the action of the Superior Court of Suffolk County, in the State of Massachusetts, in striking out the judgment of June 12, 1899, dismissing the suit between the parties to these proceedings, and rendering on November 20, 1900, in its place and stead a new and radically different judgment for the plaintiff and against the defendant for the sum of $12,881.46, without notice to the defendant, was without jurisdiction and was null and void. Consequently we think that it was error in the trial court to sustain the demurrer of the plaintiff to the appellant's second plea, and that the demurrer should have been overruled.

The order appealed from will be reversed, with costs; and the cause will be remanded to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, with directions to vacate such order, and to enter an order overruling the plaintiff's demurrer, with leave to the plaintiff to plead over as he may be advised upon such terms as to the court may seem proper; and for such further proceedings therein, if any, as may be right and just and according to law, and not inconsistent with this opinion. And it is so ordered. Reversed.

HENRY HELD, TRADING AS BROOKLYN VAULT LIGHT COMPANY, APPELLANT, v. JOHN T. WALKER.

AGENCY; PAYMENT OF MONEY TO AGENT; EVIDENCE.

In this case the question was, whether defendant was justified in making payment to an agent who failed to turn over the money to his principal, the plaintiff. It appeared the plaintiff appointed the person collecting the money to the conduct of an apparently general office, supplied him with stationery upon which his name appeared as agent, and placed in his hands for presentation to defendant the bill of which he received the payment. Held not conclusive evidence of a general agency justifying the payment of money to the person holding such agency, but to raise a question for the jury; and the trial court erred in directing a verdict for defendant.

No. 1507. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 46,237, entered upon a verdict directed by the court in a case appealed from a justice of the peace. Reversed.

Mr. Andrew Wilson and Mr. Noel W. Barksdale for the appellant.

Mr. Arthur Peter for the appellee.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This cause originated before a justice of the peace, by whom judgment was rendered in favor of the appellant, who was the plaintiff before him. Upon appeal by the defendant to the Supreme Court of the District, and a new trial had therein before the court with a jury, the court directed a verdict in favor of the defendant, and judgment was entered thereon, from which the plaintiff has appealed to this court.

The question in the case is whether the defendant was justified in making payment to an agent, who, it seems, failed to turn over the money to his principal. For there is no question as to the actual payment of the money by the appellee. The only question is whether he paid it to the right person; and that is resolved into the inquiry whether a man, who was confessedly an agent for soliciting bids and making contracts, was also an agent for the receipt of money becoming due on those contracts.

The circumstances of the controversy between the parties are these. The plaintiff was a manufacturer of vault lights in Brooklyn, New York, doing business under the name of a company, the "Brooklyn Vault Light Company." He had an office also in Philadelphia, whose business, however, does not seem to have been confined to Philadelphia, and in which he placed one W. E. Taylor as his agent. To him he furnished stationery, with printed letter heads and bill heads, used by Taylor in all his transactions in this case, and the printing was in these words: "Philadelphia Office, 604 Witherspoon Building, W. E. Taylor, agent." And there was no restriction or qualification of the word "agent." Walker, a resident of Washington, had a building in this city in course of construction, for which he desired to procure some vault lights. Under date of August 26, 1902, Taylor, upon paper such as has been mentioned, addressed a letter to him (Walker), offering to furnish the lights to him for $150. The letter was in duplicate. Under date of September 3, 1902, Walker accepted the proposal, indorsed his acceptance on one of the duplicates, and returned it to Taylor. Taylor sent it to his principal, the plaintiff, in Brooklyn; and the latter, on October 2, 1902, shipped the material from Brooklyn directly to Walker, in Washington, together with the bill therefor. There was some freight to be paid and some slight amount of work to be done by the shipper, but this Walker was authorized to do, and the cost of it to deduct from the amount of the bill. In regard to these items of deduction there is no controversy between the parties.

Digitized by Google

On December 3, 1902, Taylor called in person upon Walker, with a bill, dated November 1, 1902, whose heading was in print purporting to be from the plaintiff's Brooklyn office, but which otherwise was in the plaintiff's handwriting, and requested payment of the amount ($150). Walker requested to have the credits or deductions, amounting to $12.31, entered on the account; and these Taylor entered; and Walker thereupon paid the balance ($137.69) to Taylor, and the latter receipted the bill, and returned it thus receipted to Walker.

It appears that Taylor made no report of his collection to his principal; and the latter, under date of January 1, 1903, sent Walker another bill. Upon this bill Walker wrote: "Paid Dec. 3, 1902, to your agent W. E. Taylor in person," and he returned the bill with the indorsement to the plaintiff. The result was the institution of the present suit.

The plaintiff and the defendant both testified in the case, the former by deposition taken in New York, and their testimony is the only testimony in the case, exclusive of the documentary evidence which has been indicated. The plaintiff swore, in substance, that Taylor had no authority to collect money for him, but only to solicit orders. The defendant testified that, at the time of his first interview with Taylor, when he saw the word "agent" on the letter head, he asked Taylor about the matter, and Taylor stated that he had authority to collect money for goods sold on account of the Brooklyn Vault Light Company; but that he had taken no other steps to ascertain whether Taylor had any such authority to receive payment of this account.

If this case had been tried by the court without a jury, as is often done in appeals from justices of the peace, we would have unhesitatingly affirmed the decision. For we think that there was enough testimony to justify a jury, or a court sitting to try an issue of fact without a jury, to find that the plaintiff had held out Taylor as his general agent, authorized to receive and collect money, as well as to solicit orders; and that the defendant paid such agent in good faith. But the question which is before us, and which was before the court below, is not whether the testimony preponderated in favor of the defendant rather than in favor of the plaintiff, or whether there was a sufficiency of testimony on which to found a verdict for the defendant, but whether there was any conflict of testimony, or whether the testimony was so overwhelmingly in favor of the defendant that the court would not allow an adverse verdict to stand. We find that there was conflict of testimony which should have been submitted to the jury.

Perhaps no great importance should be attached under the circumstances, either to the plaintiff's statement that no authority had been given by him to Taylor to collect money, or to the defendant's statement that Taylor had assured him that he was so authorized, although these several statements raise an issue of fact. But the unquestionable facts, upon which it is sought to base the claim of authority, the show of agency upon the stationery furnished by the plaintiff to Taylor, the placing of the bill of November 1, 1902, by the plaintiff in Taylor's hands for presentation to the defendant, and the appointment of Taylor to the conduct of an apparently general office, are all circumstances which should have been submitted to a jury. They are not conclusive evidence of a general agency which would justify the payment of money to the person holding such agency. They are merely circumstances from which a jury might justly infer the existence of an agency of that character. They raise a question of fact for a jury, and not merely a question of law for the court. Hishfield v. Waldron, 54 Mich. 649; Luckie v. Johnston, 89 Ga. 321; Story on Agency, sec. 249. While perhaps the majority of men might have done what Walker did in this case, yet it can not be said, as a conclusion of law, that prudent men would not have differed in the conclusions to be drawn from the circumstances stated.

We think the case should have been submitted to a jury, and that it was error to withdraw it from their consideration. For this error we are constrained to reverse the judgment, with costs, and, to remand the cause to the Supreme Court of the District, with directions to award a new trial. And it is so ordered.

Reversed.

Master and Servant—Defective Appliances.—Where an appliance erected for the work was not sufficiently strong, owing to defects in one of the main supports, and an employee was injured, the master was liable. Ingham v. John B. Honor Co. (La.), 37 So. Rep. 963.

Master and Servant—Minority of Injured Brakeman —Where a brakeman was employed on his sworn application that he was 21 years old, his minority is no factor in an action for personal injuries. Williams v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (La.), 37 So. Rep. 992.

Landlord and Tenant—Rent Not Due at Commencement of Action.—Plaintiff in forcibel entry and detainer held not entitled to recover rent not due when the complaint was filed. State v. Pittenger (Wash.), 79 Pac. Rec. 942.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

TEODOSIA MICHALOWICZ, APPELLANT,

v.

STANISLAUS MICHALOWICZ ET AL.

DIVORCE; CONFESSIONS; EVIDENCE.

1. To warrant a decree of divorce based on alleged confessions of defendant, the confessions must be well established, direct and certain, free from suspicion of collusion, and corroborated by independent facts and circumstances.
2. The evidence in this case held to fall short of these requirements.

No. 1516. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,298, dismissing a bill for divorce. Affirmed.

Mr. Julius I. Peyser for the appellant.

Mr. Jos. D. Sullivan for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

Appellant, a resident for three years past of the District, filed the bill in this case for a divorce from her husband on the ground of adultery. Defendant was alleged to be a resident of Chicago, and notice was given by publication. No appearance having been made by him, an attorney was assigned to defend the cause, as required by the statute.

Upon the hearing the bill was dismissed, and plaintiff has appealed.

Without reviewing the evidence, which is of a character that ought not to be spread of record, it is enough to say that the court was right in holding it insufficient to sustain the allegations of the bill. It consisted almost entirely of alleged confessions of the defendant.

The Code provides that no decree of divorce shall be rendered on default, without proof; "nor shall any admision contained in the answer of the defendant be taken as proof of the facts charged as the ground of the application, but the same shall in all cases be proved by other evidence." Sec. 964.

The Code declares what we apprehend was the general rule of practice in such cases and was not intended to prohibit all evidence of confessions that may have been made by a party. Baker v. Baker, 13 Cal. 88.

But to warrant a decree of divorce the confessions must be well established, direct and certain, free from suspicion of collusion, and corroborated by independent facts and circumstances. Robbins v. Robbins, 100 Mass. 150; Johns v. Johns, 29 Ga. 718; Kloman v. Kloman, 62 N. J. Eq. 153.

The evidence in this case falls short of these requirements. It lacks directness and certainty, and that by which it is sought to be corroborated is, to say the least, vague and unsatisfactory.

We are of the opinion that the court was right in refusing the divorce, and the decree will be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Carriers—Injury to Alighting Passenger.—A passenger, in alighting from a train without knowledge as to the existence of a platform, held not guilty of contributory negligence, because, the company having provided a suitable platform, it was his duty to use it to escape the imputation of negligence. Chesapeake & Ohio Ry. Co. v. Harris (Va.), 49 S. E. Rep. 997.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Sam'l Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Jesse Brown, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. H. ROZIER DULANY, 1320 F st. N. W., by Sam'l Maddox, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,304. Administration. 28-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Ira A. Stafford, Deceased. Adm. No. 11,854.

Upon consideration of the reports herein filed by Daniel H. Safford and Albert P. Baldwin, executors of said estate, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sales made and reported by said executors of lot 153 in B. F. Gilbert's subdivision of square 675, house being known as 43 Myrtle street N. E., to H. C. Hile for Theresa O'Brien for the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000); lots 154, 155, 156 in B. F. Gilbert's subdivision of square 675, houses being known as 45, 47, 49 Myrtle street, respectively, to James A. Cahill for the sum of one thousand nine hundred dollars ($1,900) each; lot 150 in D. L. Morrison's et al. subdivision of part of square 365, house being known as 1533 Columbia street N. W., to John White for the sum of two thousand eight hundred fifty dollars ($2,850); the south 9 feet 8 inches front on 8th street by full depth of lot 18 and the north 5 feet 4 inches front on 8th street by full depth of lot 19 in H. Crittenden's subdivision of square 398, house being known as 1430 8th street N. W., to John White for the sum of three thousand seven hundred twenty-five dollars ($3,725); the remainder interest in lot 164 subdivision of square 675, subject to certain alley rights, house being known as 65 Myrtle st. N. E., to Edith M. Cleland Carey for the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000); and the remainder interest in lot 50 in William T. Davidson's subdivision of part of block 11, Bloomingdale, subject to certain covenants, house being known as —— Quincy street N. W., to Edith M. Cleland Carey for the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000), be and every of said sales is hereby ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown to this court on or before the 12th day of August, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for two successive weeks occurring before said day in The Law Reporter and The Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 28-2t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John Ridout, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Minna Schafer v. the Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of Charles Wayman.

In Equity. No. 25,470.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple by adverse possession of the complainant to all of original lot eight, in square one hundred and ninety-six, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published twice a month for said period of three months in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. Jul 14, 21; aug 11, 18; sept 8, 15.

J. B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

John Welsh, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link, Deceased, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,428.

The object of this suit is to quiet the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-three (33) in Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots in square numbered eighty-four (84), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in liber 20 at folio 48. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Andrew Link, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of September, 1905, otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based on the bill filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-4t

John Selden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Edes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of July, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of July, 1905. HENRY H. FLATHER, Riggs Natl. Bank; J. HUBLEY ASHTON, Pacific Building; THOMAS HYDE, 1537 28th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,883. Administration. 28-3t

M. J. Keane and Leo P. Harlow, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Amelia Dorsey v. Julia Coffee.

No. 25,326. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to set aside deed from Amelia Dorsey to Julia Coffee of lot 15 in W. H. Gunnell's subdivision of square 333, Washington, District of Columbia, which deed is recorded in liber 2860, folio 301 et seq., of the records in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia, on the ground that said deed was obtained by false representations, without consideration, and through fraud. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter. On motion of the complainant, it is this 10th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Klinge, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of July, 1905. CATHERINE KLINGE, 257 N st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,031. Administration. 28-3t

F. Sprigg Perry, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Emily V. Sproston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. WILLIAM G. SPROSTON, Hotel Atlamont, Baltimore, Md. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,984. Administration. 28-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Martha J. Coston, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 4th day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Wood, Secretary, by Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,084. Administration. 28-3t

Chas. W. Clagett, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Patrick Mann, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. ROBERT E. MANN, 207 7th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,040. Admn. 28-3t

L. Cabell Williamson and John A. Butler, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Ethel Payne v. Herbert Payne, Ada Wood.

Equity No. 25,193.

The object of this suit is to secure a divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the petitioner by her solicitors, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the co-respondent, Ada Wood, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once in each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

F. Elwood Pratt and Jesse H. Wilson, Jr., Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding an Equity Court.
Patrick Fealy v. Anna Dore et al.
Equity. No. 25,509.

The object of this suit is the partition by sale of lot numbered thirty-three (33) in George Callaghan's subdivision of lots seventeen (17) and eighteen (18) in L. L. Chapman's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and thirty-five (335) as per plat in book 12, page 182, of the records of the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Timothy Fealy, Ellen Fealy, Johannah Fealy, Mary Columbus, Dennis Pierce Fealy, Thomas Pierce Fealy, Daniel Pierce Fealy, David Leahy, Mollie Jubain, Johannah Mc. Grath, Nellie Cahill, Thomas Feahy, Catherine Fealy, Mary O'Connor, James D. Leahy, Catherine Leahy, Ellen Collins, Johannah Hartnett, Edward O'Connell, and Patrick O'Connell, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

---

Leon Tobriner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Fanny Heidenheimer, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of July, 1905. ELIAS HEIDENHEIMER, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,264. Administration. 28-3t

---

John Ridout, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Phillip T. Hall v. The unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Charles A. Beatty, John M. Beatty, Mary F. Beatty, Randle H. C. Beatty, Thomas J. Beatty, Violetta Beatty, Sophia M. Beatty, Francis G. Beatty, Robert M. Beatty, Charles F. Beatty, George Gordon, Stephen West, John Davidson, Geo. F. Hawkins, Anne Campbell, Edward Crowley, John Threlkeld, William King, Sr.

In Equity. No. 25,442.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to all of lots numbered 311, 312, 313, and 314 of Phillip T. Hall's subdivision of parts of lots 306 and 270 in square numbered 1300 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, formerly square 130 in that part of the said city of Washington formerly known as Georgetown, as per plat recorded in book 28, page 14, in the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia; also part of lot 306, in Mary A. Weaver et al.'s subdivision of parts of lots 269, 270, and 271, in said square 1300, as per plat recorded in book Georgetown No. 2, page 14, in said surveyor's office, and parts of lots 269 and 270 in said square 1300, said parts of said lots 306, 269, and 270 being fully described in the bill in this cause; also all of lot 275 in said square. On motion of the complainant, it is this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, sufficient cause having been shown for dispensing with a longer period of publication. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test. J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

W. C. Prentiss, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Saunders et al. v. William Holmead et al.
Equity. No. 23,552. Doc. 58.

Upon consideration of the seventh report of William C. Prentiss and Charles S. Muir, receivers in the above entitled cause, filed this day, stating they have received from Anna E. Larigey an offer of three thousand five hundred dollars ($3,500.00) for the east twenty (20) feet front by depth thereof of lot numbered thirty-six (36), of Saunders and Galliher, trustees' subdivision, and all of lots numbered sixteen (16), twenty-nine (29), thirty (30), and the east twenty (20) feet front by the depth thereof of lot numbered twenty-eight (28), in the Washington Loan and Trust Company, trustees' subdivision of block numbered thirty-one (31), in "Petworth addition to the city of Washington," District of Columbia, all unimproved; and from the said Anna E. Larigey an offer of eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for all of lot numbered thirty-one (31), in the last-mentioned subdivision, unimproved, both of said amounts payable one-third (1/3) cash and the balance in one (1) and two (2) years with interest at six (6) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by deeds of trust on the property purchased, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, it is this 13th day of July, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said receivers be and they are hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon compliance with the terms of sale, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star once a week for three (3) successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

---

A. B. Duvall and A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a District Court.
In Re the Condemnation of Land Necessary for a Plaza, or Circle, and New Streets, in the District of Columbia. District Court. No. 667.

Upon consideration of the petition of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, filed in the above entitled cause, and upon motion of counsel for said Commissioners, it is, by the court, this 7th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the clerk issue a citation to Thomas F. O'Neill, C. Mattie O'Neill, Lucy G. Palmer, Dora E. Rogers, Samuel Ganss, Jacob Eisenmann, Reuben Harris, Samuel Hord, George E. Woods, Orron A. Hamblett; William H. Barnes, trustee; William E. Edmonston and John L. Weaver, trustees; Jacob Field and Crosby E. Stoddard, trustees; Richard E. White, trustee; Herman R. Howenstein and Samuel Bieber, trustees; George W. Stickney and J. Paul Smith, trustees; Henry H. Bergmann and George M. Emmerich, trustees, and John C. Weedon and William Buckingham, trustees, to appear in this court on the 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to answer said petition, and show cause why the prayers of said petition should not be granted, and why the following described land, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, in fee simple, should not be condemned for a plaza, or circle, and new streets, namely, lots numbered one hundred and forty-eight (148), one hundred and forty-nine (149), one hundred and fifty-five (155), one hundred and ninety-eight (198), two hundred (200), two hundred and one (201), two hundred and two (202), two hundred and three (203), and two hundred and four (204), in square numbered seven hundred and twenty-one (721). And it is further ordered that a copy of said citation be served by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia upon such of the persons mentioned as may be found by him within the District of Columbia. It is further ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be, and they are hereby, commanded and required to appear in this court on or before the 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, and to answer said petition, and to con tinue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the report and award of the Commissioners, to be appointed by the court to appraise the respective interests of all persons concerned in the aforesaid land and premises. It is further ordered that a copy of this order and notice be published once in The Washington Law Reporter and on six secular days in The Washington Post, The Evening Star, and The Washington Times, newspapers published in said District, before the said 24th day of July, A. D. 1905. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 28-1t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

SECOND INSERTION.

Malcolm Hufty, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary F. Young, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of July, 1905. MALCOLM HUFTY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,002. Administration. 27-3t

T. Percy Myers, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Isabella Ricks v. Edward L. Edmonston et al.
In Equity, No. 24,716.

Upon consideration of the report of T. Percy Myers and Campbell Carrington, trustees, filed herein, stating that they have sold at public auction the east half of lot 28 in square 282, to Julius A. P. Dowling, Jr., as the agent for Mary A. Smith, for the sum of twenty-two hundred ($2,200) dollars, it is, by the court, this 6th day of July, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Paul E. Johnson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John W. Post, otherwise known as John Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. NELLIE POST, 611 3d st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,989. Administration. 27-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Charles Ippolito, Deceased.
No. 12,968. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Benjamin F. Guy, it is ordered this 7th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Raphael Ippolito, Orto Essoline, Joe Otito, and mother of Charles Ippolito, whose name and address is unknown, but is supposed to live in Italy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 8th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 27-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Legal Notices.

Wm. D. Hoover, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of James H. Hopkins, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 24th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 3d day of July, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS, AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by William D. Hoover, 2d V.-President. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,285. Administration. 27-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Augustine Pavese, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. L. CABELL WILLIAMSON, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,029. Administration. 27-3t

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martha A. Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of June, 1905. SIDNEY A. TAYLOR, 1015 3d st. N. W.; PHEOBE MILES, 818 4th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,986. Administration. 27-3t

Chas. F. Carusi, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Annie E. Ward v. Henry C. Ward, Blanche Walker.
No. 25,355. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bond of marriage from the defendant, Henry C. Ward, on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant it is this 3d day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Blanche Walker, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Levi H. David, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna H. Stewart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. ANDREW STEWART, 1420 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,994. Administration. 27-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

E. Hilton Jackson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Julia M. Adams, Deceased.

No. 13,028. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Decatur Morgan, it is ordered this 30th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Charles H. Adams, Carrie M. Adams, and Frank M. Adams, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of August, 1905, at ten o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 27-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta P. Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. JOHN H. F. MEYER, 904 23d st. N.W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12 998. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. E. Ambrose, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Arshak Abramian, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM E. AMBROSE, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,021. Administration. 26-3t

W. A. McKenney, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

American Security and Trust Co., a Corporation, Complainant, v. Willard H. Myers et al., Defendants.

No. 25,432. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to procure a sale of the interest of the defendant, Willard H. Myers, in and to the real and personal property held by the defendant, the National Safe Deposit Savings and Trust Company of the District of Columbia as administrator de bonis non, cum testamento annexo, and as trustee, under the will of Martha P. Myers, deceased, to satisfy the judgment of the complainant against said Willard H. Myers. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order is published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

E. B. Hay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Anna L. Norville, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY, Bond Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,931. Administration. 26-3t

M. J. Keane and M. J. Colbert, Solicitors

[Filed June 22, 1905—J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding Equity Court.

Patrick J. Daly, Complainant, v. Douglass S. Mackall, the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Samuel L. Sterrett. Equity No. 24,224. Doc. 54.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to lots thirty-three (33) and thirty-four (34) in Patrick J. Daly's subdivision of part of square 539, as per plat recorded in liber 28, folio 13, of the records of the surveyor's office for the District of Columbia, located in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, by Michael J. Keane, his solicitor, it is by the court, this 22d day of June, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Samuel L. Sterrett, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court; otherwise this case will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Absalom Baird, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of June, 1905. WILLIAM BAIRD, State Home, Annapolis, Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,022. Administration. 26-3t

W. H. Marlow, Jr., Solicitor

[Filed June 21, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.]

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Thomas Tracy et al. v. James E. Mulligan et al.

Equity No. 24,670. Doc. 55.

Walter H. Marlow, Jr., the trustee herein, having reported sale at public auction of part of original lot one (1) in square seven hundred and forty-nine (749) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, more fully described by metes and bounds in these proceedings, and otherwise known as lot forty-two (42) in O'Donnoghue's subdivision of said square, as per plat in Book C. H. B., page 137, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia, improved by house No. 1004 Third street N. E., to Edward A. Scanlon, for the sum of ten hundred and forty-five dollars ($1045), all cash; it is therefore, this twenty-first (21st) day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the twenty-second (22d) day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by L. P. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. A. Donch, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martin Mangold, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MANGOLD, St. Elizabeth, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,874. Administration. 26-3t

Oscar Nauck, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Mary Cosgrove, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 17th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN NAUCK, by Oscar Nauck, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,179. Administration. 26-3t

Wm. H. Baden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Israel E. Kirk, Deceased.
No. 12,983. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by August Donath, one of the creditors of said decedent, it is ordered, this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William G. Kirk, Charles Mahon Kirk, Raymond Kirk, and Nell Kirk Taylor, sole heirs at law and next of kin of said decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 1st day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

C. F. Carusi, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Mary C. Shafer et al., by their Next Friend, John L. Cassin, v. George D. Shafer. No. 3221.

George D. Shafer, trustee, having reported that he has received from Thomas W. Barker an offer of five hundred dollars, cash, for a part of a tract of land situate in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, known as "Fox," lying adjacent to the Georgetown College property, and beginning for the same in the south line of the said college property thirty-eight feet east of the intersection of the said college property and the Foxall estate, thence south 1½° west 120.65 feet, thence east at right angles to said line 20 feet, thence north parallel to said first line 120.65 feet to the line of the college property, and thence west in a straight line to the beginning, it is by the court, this 29th day of June, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said trustee be and he is hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon payment of the purchase money, unless cause to contrary be shown on or before the 29th day of July, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 26-3t

Legal Notices.

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Johnson v. Alice Johnson.
No. 21,976. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the ground of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this 28th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alice Johnson, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

Wm. L. Elterich, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Heinrich Wilhelm Feador Dukehart, Deceased. No. 13,010. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by John Waldman and H. A. Schenerman, it is ordered this 23d day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs of the decedent, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 31st day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 26-3t

Fillmore Beall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Trueman D. Beckett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of June, 1905. CATHERINE E. BECKETT, 454 10th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,932. Administration. 26-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Charlotte Conrad et al. v. Minnie F. Briscoe.
Equity. No. 25,185.

Upon consideration of the report of Thomas Walker and George F. Collins, trustees, this day filed, it is, this 29th day of June, 1905, adjudged and ordered by the court that the sale thereby reported of part lot 26, in square 411, to Clement Dorsey for the sum of $1,595, be and the same is hereby ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 31st day of July, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 26-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Theophilus Bray, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of June, 1905. EDWIN YARNOLD, 1222 C st. S. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,017. Administration. 26-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

R. B. Behrends, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
In Re Estate of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, Deceased.
No. 8794.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper writing, dated the 18th day of April, 1898, purporting to be the last will and testament of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, has been returned as to Frederick W. Boucher, Edward Boucher, and Rosa Mitchell "not to be found," it is, this 27th day of June, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this case be, and they are hereby, set down for trial on the 10th day of October, 1905, and that this order and the substance of said issues heretofore framed shall be published once a week for four weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

ISSUES.

1. Was the said paper writing propounded as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, bearing date the 18th day of April, 1898, executed by her in due form of law? 2. Was the said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, bearing date the 18th day of April, 1898, of sound mind, and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? 3. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 18th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured through the undue influence, importunities, suggestions, and persuasions of any person or persons? 4. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 18th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured by the fraud, deceit, or misrepresentations practiced upon her by any person or persons? 26-4t

Daniel W. O'Donoghue, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James D. Sterling, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. THOMAS G. SMYTH, 2436 Pa. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,005. Administration. 26-3t

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary J. Cullen, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of June, 1905. CATHERINE C. CULLEN, 417 6th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,996. Administration. 26-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

Hallam & Hallam, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Calvin Tibbs, Complainant, v. James Bennett's Unknown Heirs, Defendants.
Equity. No. 25,219. Doc. No 56.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of complainant to lot two (2) in square five hundred and ninety-nine (599), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple by adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of James Bennett, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. j 2-9, j 7-14, a 4-11

Legal Notices.

FIFTH INSERTION.

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Thomas S. Evans, Complainant v. David Peter et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,299.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of complainant to part of lot nine, square number one hundred and forty-one, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot, and running thence north 23 feet 6 inches to the center of the dividing wall between two frame houses on said lot, thence east 115 feet 6 inches, thence south 23 feet 6 inches to the south line of said lot, thence west 115 feet 6 inches to place of beginning. On motion of the complainant, it is this 23d day of May ordered that the defendants, David Peter, Thomas Peter, Robert Peter, Jr., Trustees; John Brown, John Innis Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, George Gibbs, Walter Channing, Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, and Ramsey McHenry, if they be living, and the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them as are dead, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, if they be living; and that the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them who are dead cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said first return day, and twice a month for three successive months prior to the said latter return day (the last publication to include one of the former publications) in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. may 26; june 2-9; july 7-14; aug. 4-11

SIXTH INSERTION.

Filed May 10, 1905.—J. R. Young, Clerk.

John R. Shields, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Pauline Thornton v. Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of James H. Smith, the Sisters of the Visitation of Georgetown, George W. Walsh, and George W. Walsh, Trustee. Equity No. 25,212.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree to establish as complete and perfect in fee simple by adverse possession the title of complainant to part of original lot fourteen (14) in square six hundred twenty (620), in Washington City, District of Columbia, said part of lot being described as follows, viz: beginning at a point on the line of north "M" street, distant twenty (20) feet east of the northwest corner of said lot fourteen (14) and running thence west twenty (20) feet; thence south along the west line of said lot fourteen (14) one hundred and thirty-six (136) feet to the rear or south line of said lot; thence east twenty (20) feet and thence north one hundred thirty-six (136) feet to the place of beginning; and to enjoin the defendants from asserting any title or claim thereto. On motion of complainant, by John R. Shields, her solicitor, it is, this 10th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants above named cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day, occurring three months after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published twice a month for three months prior to said return day in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk. By R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. may 12, 19; june 9, 16; july 7, 14.

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 29

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - - JULY 21, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 449
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Agnes E. Marfield, appellant, v. Robert H. McMurdy 450
John C. Norwood et al., executors, appellants, v. John R. Francis and Anna M. Johnson 455
J. Harry Byram, Jr., appellant, v. The United States 458
Legal Notices 459

The American Bar Association.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the American Bar Association will be held at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, August 23-25, 1905. On the same dates the session of the Section of Legal Education and the Section of Patent, Trademark, and Copyright Law will be held. On Tuesday, August 22, at 8 p. m., there will be a meeting of the Association of American Law Schools. The second conference of the State Boards of Law Examiners will be held on Tuesday, August 22, at 8 p. m.

The fifteenth conference of the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws will begin its sessions on Friday, August 18, at 10 a. m., being the week previous to the meeting of the Association.

Service of Process on Agents of Foreign Corporations.

In Chicago Board of Trade v. Hammond Elevator Company et al., decided May, 1905, by the Supreme Court of the United States and reported in the advance sheets for July 1, it is held that local "correspondents" of a foreign corporation which furnishes them with quotations to enable them to take orders from their customers for trades in shares of stock, may properly be treated as its agents for the purpose of service of process, although their relations to the corporation, as between themselves, are fixed by formal contract, in which agency is expressly disclaimed, where the method of doing business shows that the corporation is the party really interested in the transactions, and the correspondents are compensated by a commission charged the customer for their services.

Accord and Satisfaction—Check as Payment in Full.

In Canton Coal Co. v. Parlin & Orendorff Co., decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois, a debtor sent to a creditor a check accompanied by a letter saying it was in full of account. The creditor's bookkeeper made out a statement of the account as shown by the books, and credited the check, leaving a balance due. He then took the statement to the debtor, saying it showed the amount due, and that the check had been credited, and requested payment of the balance. The debtor stated that he did not owe anything, and renewed that statement when the bookkeeper said the check had been merely credited on the account. The court held that the facts did not justify an inference that the condition on which the check was sent was waived by the debtor so as to prevent its retention from constituting an accord and satisfaction. The court said: "If the plaintiff was not willing to accept the check as sent in full of the account and acknowledge the receipt of it, as requested, it ought to have returned it. The rule that required it to do so is neither harsh nor unjust, but it secured to the defendant the right to have its check received as offered, if received at all, unless there was a subsequent waiver of the condition."

Children as Witnesses.

As illustrating the rule now prevailing with regard to allowing children to testify, provided they have sufficient intelligence to understand the nature of their act and sufficient sense of duty to comprehend the obligation to speak the truth, two recent decisions by courts of last resort may be noted. In Clark v. Finnegan, decided by the Supreme Court of Iowa (103 N. W. 970), it was held that under section 4601 of the Code of that State, which provides that a witness must have sufficient capacity to understand the obligation of an oath, but fixes no age limit, a child of 7 years of age, whose examination and testimony disclosed that he was of more than average intelligence and understood the difference between truth and falsehood, was competent to testify.

In Commonwealth v. Furman, decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania (60 Atl. 1089), the appeal was from a conviction for murder. It was held that where a witness 8 years old clearly comprehends the difference between truth and falsehood and his duty to tell the truth, he is substantially competent as a witness.

In the case of Clark v. Finnegan the court said:

Digitized by Google

"The single question for determination in this case is whether Joseph Clark, a boy 7 years of age, was a competent witness against the defendants. He was sworn, and stated to the court that he understood that he was to tell the truth, whereupon his testimony was received without objection. There is no particular age at which a child becomes competent as a witness. The statute fixes no age, and requires only that the witness have sufficient capacity to understand the obligation of an oath. Code, sec. 4601. A child of sufficient maturity and intelligence to receive correct impressions from its surroundings, and to remember and correctly narrate transactions, is a competent witness, if he also comprehend the meaning and obligation of an oath. State v. King, 117 Iowa, 484, 91 N. W. 768; State v. Todd, 110 Iowa, 632, 82 N. W. 322; People, &c., v. Bernal, 10 Cal. 66. If a child has the necessary intelligence and appreciates the moral duty to tell the truth, he need not fully understand the nature of an oath, or have any particular religious belief or training to qualify him as a witness. State v. King, supra; 2 Elliott on Evidence, 766. The testimony of children only 5 or 6 years of age has been held competent. State v. Juneau, 88 Wis. 180, 59 N. W. 580, 24 L. R. A. 857, 43 Am. St. Rep. 877; Wheeler v. United States, 159 U. S. 523, 16 Sup. Ct. 93, 40 L. ed. 244; Commonwealth v. Robinson, 165 Mass. 426, 43 N. E. 121; Williams v. United States: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 457; McGuire v. People, &c., 44 Mich. 286, 6 N. W. 669, 38 Am. Rep. 265; Johnson v. State, 61 Ga. 35.

"The examination and testimony of the witness in this case showed that he was of more than average intelligence, and that he understood the difference between truth and falsehood, and we think he was a competent witness. The judgment is therefore affirmed."

Malicious Prosecution—Probable Cause.—The want of probable cause does not mean the want of any cause, but the want of any reasonable cause, such as would persuade a man of ordinary care and prudence to believe in the truth of the charge.—Burt v. Smith (N. Y.), 73 N. E. Rep. 495.

Master and Servant—Defective Appliances.—A master owes his servant reasonable care, in view of the situation of the parties, the nature of the business, and the character of the appliances. Falton v. Crosby & Beckley Co. (W. Va.), 49 S. E. Rep. 1012.

Master and Servant—Safe Place to Work.—Where a servant has as good an opportunity as the master to know the dangers connected with his employment, and makes no complaint, he can not recover for injuries on the ground that the master did not furnish him a safe place to work. Roth v. Eccles (Utah), 79 Pac. Rep. 918

Landlord and Tenant—Liability for Injury to Third Person.—A landlord held not liable for injuries to a third person caused by a defective approach to a rented house, which approach was in the exclusive possession of the tenant. Ward v. Hinkleman (Wash.), 79 Pac. Rep. 956.

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

AGNES E. MARFIELD, APPELLANT,
v.
ROBERT H. McMURDY.

WILLS; EXECUTOR'S COMPENSATION; DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE.

1. Testator, by his will, provided that a son, named as one of the executors, should receive out of the income of the estate the sum of $600 annually during the time he acted as executor as full compensation for his services as such. It was evident from the entire scheme of the will that testator contemplated the executorship would continue until the death or remarriage of his wife, upon the happening of either of which events final distribution of the estate was to be had. Held, that the son was entitled to the stipulated annual compensation until the final distribution of the estate; and if in any year the income was insufficient, after payment of fixed charges, to pay such compensation, the deficiency may be made up from the excess of income in succeeding years.
2. Testator, by his will, authorized his executors to sell certain property and reinvest the proceeds, and directed that the net income should be distributed among his widow and two children in the proportions of one-third to each, until the death or remarriage of the widow, when the estate should be distributed between the two children. Held that the court below properly refused to decree a distribution of the principal estate before the period of distribution fixed by the will arrived.

No. 1508. Decided April 4, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 22,259, in suit for an accounting by an executor, and for other purposes. Affirmed.

Mr. Smith Thompson, Jr., and Mr. Charles T. Hendler for the appellant.

Mr. Clarence R. Wilson and Mr. W. E. Church for the appellee.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

One Robert McMurdy, a resident of the District, died herein on March 17, 1892, leaving a will, which was duly admitted to probate, whereby he devised property, both real and personal. Subsequently to the execution of the will, he made a codicil to it, which purported to change one clause or item of the will, and to substitute another disposition in the place of it. He left a widow surviving him, who was his wife by a second marriage, Helen Becker McMurdy; and two children by a former marriage, the appellant, Agnes E. Marfeld, a widow, and the appellee, Robert H. McMurdy. The son Robert H. McMurdy and the widow Helen Becker McMurdy were constituted executors of the will; but the widow afterwards renounced the executorship and Robert H. McMurdy alone qualified as executor, and yet remains in the execution of the trust.

In the will, after some provision for two grandchildren, who were the children of a deceased son, and after the bequest of a legacy of $6,000 to his daughter, the appellant; the testator, makes this provision, which comes up for construction in the present case:

"Item 5. I give to my son, Robert H. McMurdy, of Chicago, Illinois, out of the income of my estate, the sum of $600 annually during the time that he acts as executor of this will in full compensation for his services as such executor."

Digitized by Google

Item 6 of the will contained a devise of his residence near Takoma, in this District, together with some adjacent lots, to his wife for her natural life or until remarriage, with some provision for its management and a certain disposition of it after the termination of the estate so limited to the wife. It is this clause of the will that was revoked by the codicil, which substituted in the place of it the following:

"Item 6. I devise & bequeath to my wife, Helen Becker McMurdy, the undisturbed use of my present residence in Takoma, D. C. to maintain, together with the lot on which said residence now stands, at her own expence, including taxes & assessments on said real estate, so long as she shall remain unmarried and during her natural life, unless she remarries before the end thereof. This devise does not include any part of the adjoining lot, of which the southern seven feet was reserved in the former will. Said property may be sold by my executors at the request of my said wife and the proceeds thereof, (less three thousand dollars) invested & the income therefrom paid to her annually during her natural life unless she remarries; in which case her interest in said property shall cease

"As the mortgage of three thousand has been cancelled by funds from the general estate I direct when the property is sold that three thousand dollars of the purchase money shall be invested for the benefit of the heirs of my estate

"In case my property on 14 St. in the city, is not sold before my death & in the opinion of my executors it is desirable; after using the interest on my Dayton property to pay all taxes, the balance, except fifteen hundred dollars, shall be distributed equally between my wife & my two children & the other fifteen hundred dollars shall be invested as a part of the principal of my estate This is to apply to all the Dayton notes as they fall due."

Item 8 of the will was as follows:

"Item 8. After the payment of the necessary expenses of administration, care and expenses of property, taxes, executor's salary, and other expenses connected with the execution of this will and its several provisions, the income of my estate, real and personal, I devise and bequeath to said Agnes Marfield and Robert H. McMurdy, my children aforesaid, their heirs and assigns, and to said Helen Becker McMurdy, my said wife, in equal parts, one-third part thereof to each, to be paid annually."

Item 9 devised the remainder of the estate, after the death or remarriage of his wife, to his two children, Agnes Marfield and Robert H. McMurdy. Item 10 provided that the devise and bequest to his wife should be in lieu of dower; and item 11 provided that his executors should have full power to convey and exchange his estate and reinvest the proceeds; and it named his son, Robert H. McMurdy, and his wife, Helen Becker McMurdy, as the executors of the will, without bond or liability to account in any manner. In the event of the death of Robert H. McMurdy before the testator, the daughter was appointed coexecutor with the wife.

These are all the parts of the will and codicil that are deemed pertinent to the issues in the present case. It should be added, perhaps, that it would appear that the testator had legal assistance in drawing the will, but that the codicil was his own unaided effort. It should also be added, as appears in the proceedings in the present case, that the testator owned some unimproved lots, known as the Columbian University lots, and mentioned in the codicil as the "property on Fourteenth street, in this city," and which, it seems, was valued at one time about $30,000 or $40,000; and that he had also owned some unimproved lots in Dayton, Ohio, which he had sold and upon which he had taken a mortgage and mortgage notes amounting to about $15,000. These are the "Dayton property" and "Dayton notes" referred to in the codicil. It appears that it was impossible for a long time to sell the Fourteenth street lots, and that they were finally sold for about $28,000, of which part was reserved on mortgage; and also that, on account of the insolvency of the purchaser of the Dayton lots, the executor found himself constrained to take back that property and to surrender the purchasers' notes to him.

On May 6, 1901, the present proceedings were commenced by the appellant Agnes E. Marfield, as complainant in the Supreme Court of the District by filing her bill in equity against Robert H. McMurdy, the widow Helen Becker McMurdy, and John H. McMurdy, a legatee under the will, but who is not concerned with the proceedings as they now stand. In this bill there were some charges of misfeasance and malfeasance on the part of the executor Robert H. McMurdy, which met with an emphatic denial from the latter, and all of which have been withdrawn or abandoned; and the prayer of the bill was for an accounting by the executor, for his removal as executor and trustee, for the removal of Helen Becker McMurdy from the trust, and for the appointment of the Washington Loan and Trust Company in their place and stead, to sell all the property of the estate in the District of Columbia and to divide the proceeds between the appellant and the appellee "upon their giving to the said Helen Becker McMurdy or to this court (the Supreme Court of the District) satisfactory assurances of the payment annually to said Helen Becker McMurdy during her natural life or until she remarry, of a sum equal to one-third of the annual interest at a reasonable rate accruing upon the amount so paid to said complainant and defendant Robert H. McMurdy from the proceeds of sale of said property."

There was no request for any construction of the will or codicil, and no suggestion that either of them needed construction.

Helen Becker McMurdy did not answer the bill, and permitted it to go by default; and she subsequently renounced the trust both of executrix and of trustee. She is not a party to this appeal.

Robert H. McMurdy answered vigorously, denied all malfeasance and misfeasance, and gave a full and elaborate account of his trust.

Thereupon, on January 25, 1902, a consent decree was rendered, wherein it was adjudged and decreed that all objections and exceptions to the action of Robert H. McMurdy as trustee be overruled; that the Washington Loan and

Digitized by Google

Trust Company be appointed co-trustee with him in the place of Helen Becker McMurdy; that, as soon as it could well be done without sacrifice, the trustees should sell the so-called Columbian University lots, on Fourteenth street, and all the other property of the testator in the District of Columbia, under the approval of the court; and that they should hold the proceeds subject to the further order of the court. And there was this further order included in the decree:

"It is further ordered that the question of compensation to the said Robert H. McMurdy under the provisions of said will, and the rights of the legatees under the said will to the proceeds of said real estate are hereby reserved by the court to be passed upon when there shall be funds arising from the sales aforesaid in the hands of the trustees."

There was then an accounting before the auditor by Robert H. McMurdy, and his account was accepted and approved by all parties and ratified by the court. It covered the period down to January 25, 1902, and showed a balance in his hands at that date of $607.74, which he turned over to himself and his associate as the existing trustees. The order of ratification reserved to the complainant the right to contest his claim to compensation as executor and trustee.

The next proceeding that appears in the present record is the stipulation entered into on May 12, 1904, and filed in the cause on October 27, 1904, which was executed by Robert H. McMurdy in person, and by the solicitor for the complainant and the solicitor for the Washington Loan and Trust Company, and wherein it was agreed that the questions reserved by the decree of January 25, 1902, should now be submitted to the court for its determination upon the record and certain conceded facts. These facts were the following:

1. That the Columbian University lots had been sold for $28,710, out of which, after payment of sundry expenses, there remained in the hands of the trustees between $1,000 and $1,500 in cash, and promissory notes amounting to $19,647.47, drawing 5 per cent interest payable semi-annually.

2. That the annual charges upon the estate in the hands of the trustees, without reference to the compensation claimed by Robert H. McMurdy, are less than the amount of the income of the estate.

3. That no compensation had been received by Robert H. McMurdy beyond the sum of $694.15 found by the auditor's report.

And in the stipulation the questions reserved for determination by the court are specifically formulated in these terms:

(1) Whether, under the provisions of said will, said Robert H. McMurdy is entitled to any, and if any, what compensation over and above the sum of $694.15 already received by him as shown by said auditor's report, and from what fund or funds the same shall be payable.

(2) Whether it is the duty of the trustees or within their power to divide the proceeds now in their hands of the sale of the University Park property in the District of Columbia, between the said Robert H. McMurdy and Agnes E. Marfield.

Thereupon the court rendered the following decree:

"Said questions having now been presented to the court upon said stipulation and the papers therein referred to, and counsel for the respective parties having been heard, and said second question having been treated in argument as if it embraced Helen Becker McMurdy as one of the proposed distributees, which counsel for complainant insist was the intention of the stipulation, and the court having duly considered the matter, it is this 8th day of November, 1904, adjudged, ordered, and decreed:

"1. That the said Robert H. McMurdy is entitled to compensation under the provisions of the will of said Robert H. McMurdy, deceased, at the rate of $600 per annum payable out of the income of said estate until the final distribution of the said estate, or until breach or determination of the trust reposed in him.

"2. That there be paid to said Robert H. McMurdy out of any excess of income now or hereafter arising or existing over the annual charges upon said estate other than said compensation and arrearages, so much as may be necessary and so far as the same will extend to pay:

"(a) All arrearages of said compensation now existing or hereafter arising.

"(b) Said compensation at the rate of $600 per annum until the final distribution of the said estate, or until the breach or determination of his trust.

"3. That, after the payment of such arrearages and annual compensation, the balance of the income, if any, from time to time arising, be disposed of according to the provisions of the will of said Robert McMurdy, deceased.

"4. It is further adjudged, ordered, and decreed that it is not the duty of the executors or trustees of the will of Robert H. McMurdy, deceased, under any of the provisions of said will or of the codicil thereto, nor have the said executors or trustees any power or authority thereunder to divide the proceeds now in their hands of the sale of the University Park property in the District of Columbia between Robert H. McMurdy and Agnes E. Marfield, or to make any distribution whatever of the proceeds of said sale or of any other part of the corpus of said estate now being or hereafter coming into their hands among the beneficiaries named in said will and codicil, until the death or remarriage of Helen Becker McMurdy, widow of said testator.

"This decree is made without any prejudice to any questions which may hereafter arise touching the commissions of the Washington Loan and Trust Company as executor or trustee under said will."

From this decree the complainant has appealed to this court.

There are no assignments of error by the appellant, and, therefore, under a strict construction of the rules of this court the appeal should be dismissed. But in the appellant's brief, at the beginning of what is called the argument, there is a statement that "the questions to be determined are: (1) Is the trustee Robert H. McMurdy entitled to the sum of $600 per annum out of the income of the estate until the final distribution thereof? (2) Should the said trustee Robert H. McMurdy be paid all arrearages of said compensation now existing or hereafter arising out of any excess of income now or hereafter arising or existing over the annual charges upon said estate? (3) Should the proceeds of the sale of lots 12 and 13, in block 43, now in the hands of the trustees, be distributed equally to the widow and children of the testator?" And inasmuch as the decree appealed from itself enumerates the questions that were decided by the court below, and there is no doubt upon the record as to what questions were actually involved and what questions were decided, we think that, under the circumstances of this case, the questions so formulated may be taken as the equivalent of formal assignments of error.

Digitized by Google

1. The first question is whether the executor, Robert H. McMurdy, is entitled to the sum of $600 per annum out of the income of the estate until the final distribution thereof.

The answer to this question is not difficult. The will expressly provides for such compensation. The provision is that out of the income of the estate Robert H. McMurdy, the son of the testator, should receive the sum of $600 annually; that is, the sum of $600 for each and every year during the time that he acts as executor of the will, in full compensation for his services as such executor; and it is evident from the whole scheme of the will that the testator contemplated that the executorship should last for several years, certainly until the death or remarriage of his widow. The argument of the appellant in opposition to this is, that the executorship, properly so called, ceased at the termination of the period of administration, that is, in about twelve or thirteen months after the issue of letters testamentary and the settlement of account or the lapse of the time for such settlement in the probate court; and that thereafter the appellee held the estate as trustee, with compensation, if any, dependent upon a court of equity. But this is an argument based upon words, not upon substantial things. The executor does not cease to be executor because the period of administration, so called, may be passed. He is still executor as long as he has anything under the will to execute. He is just as much a trustee during the period of administration as after it. Every executor, administrator, guardian, receiver, assignee, and other person or persons acting in a fiduciary capacity, is a trustee; and the only difference, at all events, the principal difference, between an executor during the period of administration and an executor after the lapse of the period of administration, is that the former is responsible to the probate court for the faithful execution of his trust, the latter to a court of equity. He is equally a trustee at both times, and equally an executor; and it is very clear from the testator's will, that, by whatever title he should be designated, the executor should have a compensation of $600 a year for each and every year during which he should continue to be engaged in the execution of the will.

It is not to the point that the construction would offer a premium to executors to strive for the indefinite prolongation of their executorship. To meet any such effort a court of equity affords abundant remedy.

If authorities are needed to sustain a proposition which seems to us to be very plain, several will be found cited in the brief for the appellee, and there are none to the contrary. See Colt v. Colt, 111 U. S. 579; McBurney v. Carson, 99 U. S. 572; Dorr v. Wainwright, 13 Pick. 328; Saunderson v. Stearns, 6 Mass. 37.

In the case of Colt v. Colt the Supreme Court of the United States said:

"The five hundred shares of stock came into their hands as executors. They remained there for the general trust of the administration of the estate until they were fully served. The possession of them thereafter the law imputed to them still as executors, but in trust for the special purposes to which by the will they were appropriated. There was no change of possession; there was no change of the legal title; there was but a succession of uses according to the terms of the will. They continued to hold this stock as executors, although in trust, until its actual payment to the legatees. . . . As long as personal property is held by executors, as part of the estate of the deceased, for the payment of debts or legacies or as a residuum to be distributed, they hold it by virtue of their office and are accountable for it as executors; their liability only ceases when it has been taken out of the estate of the testator and appropriated to and made the property of the cestui que trust."

It will be found upon examination of them, although some incautious expressions are used, that the cases cited on behalf of the appellant do not at all contravene this doctrine. Take, for illustration, the case of Connor v. Ogle, 4 Md. Chan. 425, where it is said that "where the same person is both trustee and executor under a will, and settles up the personal estate in the Orphans' Court, the balance, after such settlement, remains in his hands as trustee, and not as executor." The context plainly shows that the meaning is that the executor no longer holds the property for administration in the Orphans' Court, but as a trustee responsible to a court of equity. And a like explanation holds of the other cases cited. State v. Cheston, 51 Md. 377; Hanson v. Worthington, 12 Md. 418; Seegar v. State, 6 H. & J. 139, and Drury v. Natick, 10 Allen (Mass.), 174.

2. The appellant has divided the first question determined in the court below into two, and makes this the second of her questions: "Should the trustee be paid all the arrearages of said compensation now existing or hereafter arising out of any excess of income now or hereafter arising or existing over the annual charges upon said estate?" But the solution of this question naturally follows the first. The same provision of the will governs both. Had the will limited the payment of executor's annual compensation to the annual income of the estate, a different question might have been presented. But the provision is that out of the income generally without any limitation the executor should receive compensation at the rate of $600 a year. Necessarily, if the income is less in one year and greater in another, the deficiency of compensation in one year may be made up by the excess in the other year. Wilson v. Tyson, 61 Md. 575; Stewart v. Chambers, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 382; In re Chauncey, 119 N. Y. 85; Addison v. Smith, 83 Me. 551; Smith v. Fellows, 131 Mass. 20; Booth v. Coulton, L. R. 5 Chan.

Digitized by Google

App. 684; Pitt v. Lord Daere, L. R. 3 Ch. Div. 295.

To the contrary, on behalf of the appellant are cited the cases of Sitwell v. Bernard, 6 Ves. 520, and Casamajor v. Pearson, 8 Clark & Finnelly's Rep. 69. We do not regard either of these as adverse to the proposition above stated, and we think that a careful examination of them will so show. Without going at length into such examination here, it must suffice to say that what was held in the case of Sitwell v. Bernard was that when trustees had been ordered by the will of a testator to expend certain money in the purchase of real estate and unexpected obstacles arose which postponed such purchase for a long time, the beneficiaries of the proposed purchase were entitled to interest on the money from the time at which it should have been invested; and that in the case of Casamajor v. Pearson it was held that where certain property was directed to be sold and the proceeds invested, and certain annuities to be paid out of the income to be derived from such investment and sale of the property, and investment of the proceeds of sale were prevented for a long time by unexpected occurrences, and afterwards such sale and investment were effected, the annuities should be paid only out of the income of the years during which there was income realized, inasmuch as there were other interests also to be provided for equally with those of the annuitants, which must have failed if the annuitants had been allowed for all the years from the beginning. This last case is a peculiar one, and depends upon its own peculiar circumstances, but it is not believed to offer any criterion for the determination of the case now before us. Here there are no provisions of the will that would fail in the event that the trustee received all the compensation that was intended for him. There may be less of income to be distributed, but that does not operate as a failure of any provision of the will.

3. The appellant's third question is not the question that was decided by the court below. The question, as now phrased by the appellant, is whether the proceeds of sale now in the hands of the trustees should be distributed equally to the widow and children of the testator. The question formulated in the stipulation between the parties, and which the court below decided, is whether these proceeds are distributable between the two children of the testator, without any reference to the interest of the widow, which is a very different proposition. It is, perhaps, unimportant in our present consideration of the case how the question is formulated, for the answer in either event must be in the negative.

It would be a plain and palpable violation of the will to divide these proceeds of sale between the appellant and the appellee without reference to the widow's rights. The widow is entitled to one-third part of the net income of the estate during her life or until her remarriage; and for the purpose of receiving such part she is entitled to have the estate kept intact, as indeed are each of the other parties; and she is not required to have "satisfactory assurances," whatever they may be, forced upon her, instead of the provision made by the testator, as suggested by the bill of complaint. Nor should the appellee against his will be required to give such "satisfactory assurances." It is too plain for argument that this question was decided rightly by the court below that further consideration of it is deemed unnecessary.

Assuming, however, that the question as now formulated by the appellant is before us for determination, we think that this question also must be answered in the negative. The appellant's argument assumes that the codicil to the will provided for the sale of the Fourteenth street or University Park lots and for the distribution of the proceeds of sale equally between the widow and the two children of the testator, with the reservation of two sums of fifteen hundred dollars each. We do not find that it does so provide or that it repeals any portion of the will, except the item 6, for which it expressly purports to be a substitute.

The codicil is very inartificially drawn and is somewhat obscure in its terms. It is understood to have been the work of the testator himself without legal assistance, and therefore very naturally falls short of the precision which legal advice might have given him. But we find in it no provision for the sale of the Fourteenth street lots. Such provision was unnecessary. The authority had already been given by item 11 of the original will in the most ample manner. The evident purpose of the last clause of the codicil, which is supposed without warrant to give this power of sale and direction for distribution, is to provide for the application of the so-called Dayton notes, in the event that the Fourteenth street lots should not be sold before the testator's death. It can not reasonably be construed into a provision for the sale of these lots and a distribution of the proceeds of sale, and it was evidently not the intention of the testator anywhere, either in the will or the codicil, to direct a distribution of his estate, except to a very limited extent, before the death or remarriage of his widow.

From what we have said it follows in our opinion that the decree appealed from is right and just, and that it should be affirmed with costs. And it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Landlord and Tenant—Rights of Lessee.—A lessor is bound to protect his lessee as against persons setting up claim to property, and the possession of the lessee is the possession of the lessor, and the disturbance of one is the disturbance of the other. Bright v. Bell (La.), 37 So. Rep. 976.

Carriers—Injury to Passenger.—Where a street car company stops its cars for passengers, it is charged with the highest degree of care to see that all passengers get to a place of safety before starting its cars. Normile v. Wheeling Traction Co. (W. Va.), 49 S. E. Rep. 1030.

Limitation of Actions—New Promise.—Where a new promise is relied on to remove the bar of limitations, there must be an express promise, or an unconditional acknowledgment of the debt from which an implied promise will arise.—Bank of Union v. Nickell (W. Va.), 49 S. E. Rep. 1003.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

JOHN C. NORWOOD ET AL., EXECUTORS, APPELLANTS,
v.
JOHN R. FRANCIS AND ANNA M. JOHNSON.

UNINCORPORATED JOINT STOCK COMPANIES; LIABILITY OF MEMBERS AS PARTNERS; WITHDRAWING MEMBER; HUSBAND AND WIFE AS PARTNERS.

1. An unincorporated joint stock company, organized and doing business as a savings bank in this District under written articles of agreement, is in law a partnership, and its members each liable for all its debts.
2. Where such articles of agreement provide that members may withdraw by giving notice and that settlement shall thereupon be made in a manner prescribed, a member giving such notice ceases, so far as other stockholders are concerned, to be a partner, and on failure of the company to pay the amount due for his shares, may sell them to a third party.
3. A person who, subsequent to the withdrawal of such member and without knowledge that he was or at any time had been connected with the company, deposits money with the bank, can not, on failure of the bank, hold him liable for the amount of the deposit.
4. Under the act of June 1, 1896, relating to married women, a married woman owning shares of stock in an unincorporated joint stock company organized and doing business in this District, may be held liable as a partner equally with other stockholders.
5. A married woman is, however, incompetent to become a member with her husband in a partnership such as the one in question, in the absence of a statutory enactment clearly conferring upon her the power so to do; and no such power is conferred by the act of June 1, 1896.
6. Held, therefore, that a married woman, whose husband was also the holder of shares of stock in such company, could not be held liable, on failure of the bank, to a person depositing money with it.

No. 1466. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 45,967, entered upon a verdict directed by the court in an action against alleged stockholders of an unincorporated joint stock company. Affirmed.

Mr. Mason N. Richardson, Mr. A. A. Birney, and Mr. W. H. Richards for the appellants.

Mr. J. J. Darlington, Mr. Arthur Peter, and Mr. John B. Larner for the appellees.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal by the appellants, who were the plaintiffs below, from a judgment in favor of the appellees entered in pursuance of a verdict found under the instructions of the court. Charles F. Murray, in November, 1901, deposited $2,880 in the Capital Savings Bank. This bank, organized in the District of Columbia in 1888, was an unincorporated joint stock company, carrying on its business under written articles of agreement signed by its stockholders. It failed in November, 1902, and receivers of its assets were appointed January, 1903. The suit was brought originally against several of its alleged stockholders, and included among the number were these appellees. As the defenses interposed on behalf of the appellees are different, they will be separately considered.

1. In October, 1892, the appellee, John A. Francis, purchased five shares of the bank stock. On November 1, 1898, he sent to the company the following notice of withdrawal:

"Nov. 1st, 1898.

To the Directors and Stockholders Capital Savings Bank.

Gentlemen: Permit me to hereby notify you of my withdrawal as a stockholder from the Capital Savings Bank.

You will please forward to me, at your earliest convenience, the amount which my five shares of stock are worth at this date.

Regretting the circumstances that compel me to withdraw, I am,

Respectfully yours, JOHN R. FRANCIS."

Article 12, of the Articles of Association providing for withdrawals, is as follows:

"Any member of the company may withdraw therefrom, by giving thirty (30) days' notice, and settlement shall be made with him in the manner hereinafter provided for. But the company reserves the right to postpone the payment of what may be due him from the company for ninety days after the date of filing of such notice of withdrawal."

Receiving no reply to his letter in April or May, 1899, he sold his stock to one Tyson and demanded that the board of directors transfer the shares to Tyson. Obtaining no satisfaction, on October 9, 1899, he sent the following letter:

"Washington, D. C., Oct. 9, 1899.

To the Board of Directors and Stockholders of the Capital Savings Bank.

Gentlemen: Some months have passed since I made an application for the transfer of my stock to Mr. Henry C. Tyson, to whom it was sold. Up to the present time I have received neither anything definite as to your action in the matter or the return of certificates to Mr. Tyson or myself.

I again apply, hereby, for a properly certified transfer of stock and a return of certificates.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN R. FRANCIS."

A few days later he addressed a communication to the directors and stockholders of the bank, stating that he declined the appointment to a directorship in the bank, as he was not a stockholder, and requested that his name be cancelled from the list of officers. At the same time he again called attention to his desire for a proper transfer of his stock, and stated that it was the third time that he had made such application. He never was an officer or director of the bank, nor in any way took part in its management, nor ever attended any of the meetings of the stockholders or directors, and received no dividends on his stock after November 1, 1898, and had no deposit account with it.

There is no evidence to show that Murray, when he made the deposit to recover which this suit is brought, had any knowledge that Francis was or ever had been connected in any way with the bank, although the record shows that an offer was made to show that at a trial of a case in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in 1895, the articles of agreement of the bank, and the names of the signers, including that of Francis, were read in evidence. This evidence, as stated, was for the purpose of showing that it was generally known in the city of Washington at that time that Francis was a member of the company. The testimony was ruled out by the presiding judge, and properly so, we think. The trial occurred six years before Murray made his deposit, and three years before Francis withdrew as a member of the association.

Digitized by Google

Upon the above state of facts Francis' liability for the debts of the bank turns upon the question whether he was a stockholder and member of the partnership at the time of its failure, for there can be no question but that this joint stock company, organized and carrying on its business within the District of Columbia, was in law a partnership and its members each liable for all of its debts. It is equally true, we think, that Francis, so far as the other stockholders were concerned, ceased to be a partner in the fall of 1898. Nothing he did after that date reinvested him with the duties or obligations of a partner. He complied with the articles of agreement in withdrawing from the company, and from the mere fact of being unable to obtain from the company the amount due him for his shares, he was justified in selling them to a third party. If the partnership refused to recognize the purchaser as a member of the company, as undoubtedly they had a right to do, the purchaser might have looked to Francis for any injury caused him; but the fact that the company refused, if it did, to accept Tyson as a member would not result in continuing Francis as a member against his will and in face of the notice of November 1, 1898. We think that Francis did all that was necessary for him to do to sever his relations with the company. We do not think that he owed any further duty to his fellow members or to future depositors. It does not appear that the articles of agreement, or the names of the members of the company were published in any newspaper or filed in any public office, as required by the laws of many States relative to ordinary or special partnerships. Had it been shown that Murray made the deposit with knowledge that Francis had once been a stockholder, then a different question might be presented than the one we are called upon to decide.

We have examined the authorities cited by counsel for both parties, and there seems to be the usual conflict ordinarily found in the decisions of the various State courts. It is, in our opinion, unnecessary to consider them and decide which line of cases give the best reasons for the conclusions arrived at. We consider the decision of the Supreme Court, in Thompson v. First National Bank of Toledo, 111 U. S. 529, to be controlling. In the opinion in that case the authorities, both English and State, are exhaustively reviewed. In that case the court below had refused to instruct the jury that if Thompson was not, in fact, a member of the partnership, the plaintiff could not recover unless it was shown by the testimony that he had knowingly allowed himself to be held out as a partner and knowledge of this plaintiff had during its transaction with the partnership. The court said:

"A person who is not in fact a partner, who has no interest in the business of the partnership and does not share in its profits and is sought to be charged for its debts because of having held himself out, or permitting himself to be held out, as a partner, can not be made liable upon contracts of the partnership except with those who have contracted with the partnership upon the faith of such holding out. In such a case, the only ground of charging him as a partner is that, by his conduct in holding himself out as a partner, he has induced persons dealing with the partnership to believe him to be a partner, and, by reason of such belief, to give credit to the partnership. As his liability rests solely upon the ground that he can not be permitted to deny a participation which, though not existing in fact, he has asserted or permitted to appear to exist, there is no reason why a creditor of the partnership, who has neither known of nor acted upon the assertion or permission, should hold as a partner one who never was in fact, and whom he never understood or supposed to be, a partner, at the time of dealing with and giving credit to the partnership."

We think the court below was right in instructing the jury that upon the whole testimony their verdict must be in favor of the defendant Francis.

2. As to the appellee, Anna M. Johnson, the record discloses that she was a married woman at the time of the trial, and had been for more than twenty-five years the wife of one of the codefendants, Jerome A. Johnson, and that as early as July, 1892, her husband gave her two shares of stock of the Capital Savings Bank. An account had been kept in her name in the bank, which showed that certain dividends had been applied to her account, the last one on July 16, 1896. She testified that she did not know how the account stood when the bank closed, as all of the business was transacted through her husband, and that she had nothing to do with it; that she never had a pass book of the bank, and that when dividends were declared upon the shares of bank stock her husband would speak to her about it; that some years before giving her testimony, which was in July, 1904, she had signed checks at her husband's request so that he could draw the dividends; that she never gave any authority to her husband to take the stock for her; that she had nothing to do with the bank; that her husband would give her checks to sign, and that she did not know what became of the money. In July, 1902, she transferred the stock back to her husband, with all the things he had given her, as she was then a sick woman, and that if anything happened to her she wanted it to go back to his people. The articles of agreement which were read in evidence disclose the name of Annie M. Johnson as one of those signing the articles. There is no question raised as to this being the name of the appellee. Upon this state of facts the court below instructed the jury to return a verdict in her favor.

Three questions are presented for our consideration. The first raises the question whether the ownership by a married woman of one or more shares of stock in a joint stock company is the carrying on of a trade, business, or occupation by her within the terms and meaning of the act of June 1, 1896, commonly called "The Married Woman's Act." The second question is, whether a wife can be a member with her husband in such a partnership, and, third, whether the evidence is sufficient to connect her with the association or its business subsequent to June 1, 1896, or to charge her with liability for its obligation.

Digitized by Google

Section 3 of the act of June 1, 1896, under which it is claimed that Mrs. Johnson is chargeable, is as follows:

"That any married woman may carry on any trade or business, occupation, or profession by herself, or jointly with others, and perform any labor or services on her sole and separate account, and the earnings of any married woman from her trade, business, profession, occupation, labor, or services shall be her sole and separate property, and may be used and invested by her in her own name."

As we have heretofore stated, it is our opinion that a joint stock association, organized and carrying on business within the District of Columbia, is a partnership and being a partnership we see no good reason why a married woman, if she can enter into a partnership under the act of 1896, can not hold shares of stock in a joint stock company and make herself liable to the extent that other shareholders are. The section above quoted is broad and a fair construction of its terms permits a married woman to become a member of a partnership. It states that she "may carry on any trade or business, occupation, or profession by herself, or jointly with others." We do not think the act is to be so limited that a married woman, in order to carry on a trade, business, or occupation in conjunction with others, need necessarily perform labor or render services in order to render her liable, as to third parties, as a partner. It must be borne in mind that there is no statute in the District of Columbia providing for the formation of joint stock companies, as in many of the States, which results to their being very analogous to corporations. A stockholder in an unincorporated joint stock company is a partner and the liability and duties of one so interested differs very materially from that of a holder of stock in any incorporated company.

The second question is one not free from doubt. The conflict of decisions is very marked. The statutes adopted in England and the various States of this country differ materially in terms, and, as the decisions are based upon such statutes, we would naturally look for decisions apparently conflicting, although most of them can be reconciled when considered in the light of the special statute which is the foundation of the proceeding. In Massachusetts a husband and wife can not enter into a partnership contract, although they may do so with others. Bowker v. Bradford, 140 Mass. 521. In Michigan the same is true. Artman v. Ferguson, 73 Mich. 146. In New York there was a conflict of decisions between the Court of Appeals and what was known as the Second Division, the latter being a court composed of judges of the Supreme Court, delegated to assist the Court of Appeals in disposing of a large arrearage of business. In Hendricks v. Isaacs, 117 N. Y. 411, the Court of Appeals, by unanimous decision of its seven judges, held that a married woman at that time was not permitted to make a binding contract with her husband, while the Second Division, by a vote of four to three, in Suau v. Caffe, 122 N. Y. 308, held that a married woman could not be a copartner with her husband. Following these conflicting decisions, the statute relating to married women was amended in 1892 so as to provide that a married woman might contract with her husband or any other person as though she were unmarried, except that the husband and wife were prohibited from contracting that the married relations should be altered or dissolved, or to relieve the husband from his liability to support his wife. Chap. 594, N. Y. Statutes, 1892. In several of the States married women are allowed to enter into partnerships with their husbands and to make contracts with them. Hoagland v. Henderson, 119 Iowa, 720; Lane v. Bishop, 65 Vt. 575. The text writers, however, agree that the weight of authority goes to show that husband and wife may not be members of the one partnership. One writer thus states the reasons for the rule:

"The incapacity is not one that concerns the wife only, and hence it remains notwithstanding such laws, unless, indeed, they expressly declare that the husband and wife may contract with each other generally. The disability is one entirely outside of the common law doctrine of the feme covert not being sui juris, and therefore is not removed by statutes intended to merely change the common law in that respect. The point upon which the disability rests is the legal status of husband and wife, who, in contemplation of law, are one person, no individual being able to contract with himself." George on Partnership, p. 14.

While the tendency of legislation has been to remove the disabilities of married women, we think, in view of all the authorities, that such statutes removing such disabilities should not be construed so broadly as to permit a partnership between husband and wife, unless the statute expressly gives the husband and wife power to contract with each other generally, we therefore conclude that the appellee, Anna M. Johnson, could not become a member with her husband of a partnership such as the one in question. Any doubt we might have on the subject we would feel constrained to resolve in her favor in view of the facts disclosed by the record. Her husband signed her name to the articles of association without, so far as appears, her knowledge or authority; any benefits resulting from the ownership of the two shares of stock were received by him, and she is not shown to have in any way participated in the business of the bank. While these facts, standing by themselves, would not be sufficient to give her immunity in view of the fact that she knew that her husband had transferred the shares to her, and, at his direction, she signed checks, which facts were sufficient to apprise her that, at least, her husband was using her name, yet it must be remembered that the shares were transferred to her prior to the passage of the act of 1896, and at a time while she was admittedly disqualified from becoming a member of such partnership. While it is true that the account shows that on July 16, 1896, a dividend of $10 was placed to her credit, it is not shown that she had any knowledge of this fact, and, therefore, it can not be considered a ratification; neither, under the circumstances, can there be held to be a ratification by reason of her permitting the shares to stand in her name, she not being shown to have had possession of them. All the circumstances tend to intensify the correctness of our conclusion that a married woman should be held to be incompetent to become a member with her husband in such a partnership as the one in question in the absence of a statutory enactment clearly and positively conferring upon her the power so to do.

Digitized by Google

On the whole, we conclude that none of the assignment of errors set forth any error which would warrant us in reversing the judgment of the lower court, either as to the appellee, John R. Francis, or his coappellee, Anna M. Johnson. It follows that the verdict for the appellees was properly directed, and that the judgment in favor of the appellees should be affirmed, with costs.

Affirmed.

J. HARRY BYRAM, JR., APPELLANT,

v.

THE UNITED STATES.

UNITED STATES MAILS; DECOY LETTER; EMBEZZLEMENT BY MAIL CARRIER.

1. It makes no difference with respect to the duty of a mail carrier, when a letter comes into his possession in the course of his official employment, whether it be genuine, or a decoy, or have a fictitious address. The opening, detention, destruction, or embezzlement of the contents of either kind of letter is equally punishable under sections 5467 and 5468 R. S.
2. And the fact that in addition to being a decoy letter prepared in the same office, it bore the pretended post-mark of a fictitious office, does not affect the question of the guilt of the defendant.

No. 1528. Decided May 23, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Criminal Court, Crim., No. 23,558, entered upon a verdict finding him guilty as charged in the indictment. Affirmed.

Mr. A. A. Lipscomb and Mr. G. C. Meigs for the appellant.

Mr. Morgan H. Beach and Mr. J. S. Easby-Smith for the United States.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellant, J. Harry Byram, jr., was a mail carrier employed in the postoffice of the city of Washington on or before November 19, 1902. He appeals from a conviction and sentence under an indictment which charged him, in three counts, with: (1) On that date unlawfully detaining and opening a letter that came into his possession for carriage and delivery; (2) with secreting, embezzling, and destroying the same letter; (3) with stealing a certain one dollar bill enclosed therein.

The bill of exceptions reserved on the trial reads as follows:

"Be it remembered that on the trial of this cause, the United States to maintain the issue joined on the plea of not guilty of the defendant, offered evidence tending to prove that the defendant was a letter carrier of the United States delivering mail in the District of Columbia, and that the letter described in the indictment was written by an employee of the Postoffice Department, in the Postoffice Department building in Washington, in the presence of a fellow employee, and was addressed to Col. O. C. Sabin, in Washington, D. C., and was signed with a fictitious name, and that the letter was dated at Hutchinson, Kentucky, and placed with a marked dollar in an envelope stamped and addressed to Col. O. C. Sabin, in Washington, D. C., and that said letter was then postmarked Hutchinson, Kentucky, and was by the said employee, who had prepared it, delivered to the superintendent of delivery in the city postoffice at Washington, D. C., and by the latter given to the foreman of carriers employed in the postoffice at Washington, D. C., and by the latter placed in one of the distributing boxes regularly used by carriers in the ordinary course of the delivery of United States mail, and so used by the defendant for the distribution of mail to be delivered by him, from which box the defendant was seen to take the letter as if to deliver the same; that said letter was not written by the person purporting to have signed the same, nor written in Hutchinson, Kentucky, nor sent by mail from there, and was postmarked as received in Washington, D. C., November 19, 1902, though it was not so received from Hutchinson, Kentucky; that said letter was not received by Colonel Sabin, to whom it was addressed, but was destroyed by the defendant and the marked dollar placed therein by said agent was, in the city of Washington, taken by the defendant from said letter while in his custody; that said letter was not deposited in Kentucky in the usual way for delivery in said city of Washington, and thereupon the Government rested its case.

"Whereupon the defendant asked the court to instruct the jury that under these circumstances the said paper purporting to be a letter was not such a letter contemplated under sections 5467 and 5468 of the Revised Statutes of the United States—intended to be conveyed by mail, and that the jury should acquit; which request was denied and the defendant then and there excepted."

The court did not err in refusing the requested instructions to the jury to acquit the defendant. It is settled law that it makes no difference with respect to the duty of the carrier, when a letter comes into his possession in the course of his official employment, whether it be genuine or a decoy, or have a fictitious address. The opening, detention, destruction, or the embezzlement of the contents of either kind of letter is equally punishable. Goode v. U. S., 159 U. S. 663, 671; 168 U. S. 632, 637; Scott v. U. S., 172 U. S. 343, 347.

Conceding this general rule in respect of decoy letters with or without fictitious addresses, that have been deposited in the mail for the sole purpose of attempting the detection of suspected criminality, it is contended, on behalf of the appellant, that the letter in this case constitutes an exception, because it bears the pretended post-mark of a fictitious postoffice.

It does not appear from the facts recited that there was no such postoffice as "Hutchinson, Kentucky." But assuming that such is the case in fact, and that we may take judicial notice of it, we fail to see any merit in the contention. The letter came into appellant's possession in the course of his official employment, and it was none the less his duty to deliver it, because, in addition to being a decoy letter prepared in the same office, it bore the pretended postmark of a fictitious postoffice.

Digitized by Google

The judgment must be affirmed; and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Attachment—Ground of Attachment.—Where the ground of attachment is fraudulently contracting debts, if the material facts are stated in an uncertain manner, the attachment should be quashed. Elkins Nat. Bank v. Simmons (W Va.), 49 S. E. Rep. 893.

Master and Servant—Transitory Perils.—The fact that a place is rendered unsafe in the execution of details of the service does not of itself make it the duty of the master to be present in person or by representative to protect the servant.—Dill v. Marmon (Ind.), 73 N. E. Rep. 67.

Death—Limitations on Action for.—The provision in Lord Campbell's act of North Carolina (Code N. C. sec. 1498) that a failure to commence an action of wrongful death in one year should extinguish the right conferred by the statute applies to an action under the act brought in South Carolina.—Dennis v. Atlantic Coast Line R. R. (S. Car.), 49 S. E. Rep. 869.

Death—Master's Liability for Negligence of Driver.—In an action for the death of plaintiff's decedent by being run over by a team driven by defendant's servant, evidence held insufficient to support a verdict for the plaintiff.—Brennan v. Standard Oil Co. (Mass.), 73 N. E. Rep. 472.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Sarah E. Frankland et al. v. Richard Frankland.
Equity, No. 25,045.

George C. Aukam, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of real estate known as part of lot 11 in square 403 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, with the improvements thereon, being premises number 916 8th street northwest, in said city, and being the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, to Robert V. White for the sum of five thousand and thirty dollars ($5,030.00), it is by the court, this 14th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown in this court on or before the 20th day of August, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

Legal Notices.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold lots one hundred and fourteen (114) to one hundred and twenty (120), both inclusive, in square five hundred and fifty-one (551), being Nos. 105 to 107 Reaves Court, to Cynthia E. Dowell for fifty-six hundred dollars ($5,600), cash, it is by the court this 18th day of July, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

---

Fountain Peyton, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ida Larkins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. MARY THOMAS, 1107 ½ st. Court N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,044. Administration. 29-3t

---

Nelson Wilson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Massachusetts, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Otis B. Bullard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. HENRY M. CUTLER, Holliston, Mass. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,965. Administration. 29-3t

---

Victor H. Wallace, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Inez L. Rosenbaum v. Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman. Equity. No. 25,131.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman, cause their appearances to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This notice is to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

C. Clinton James, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John H. Richardson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. C. CLINTON JAMES, 416 5th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,061. Administration. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Luella H. Bush, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. CLARA R. BUSH, 1537 I st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,046. Administration. 29-3t

---

Edward S. Moores, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ebenezer W. Patton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of May, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. JOHN R. BERG, 319 F st. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,912. Administration. 29-3t

---

R. R. Horner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of David Lee, Deceased.

No. 13,080. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia I. Davis, it is ordered this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to all the heirs at law, unknown, and next of kin, and all others claiming interest in his estate, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Harry M. Packard, Complainant, v. William Brown et al., Defendants. No. 24,604. In Equity. Doc. 55.

Ralph P. Barnard, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate involved in the above entitled cause, and being, to wit, lot one (1) in block twenty-five (25) of John Sherman, trustee's, subdivision of part of "Mount Pleasant" and "Pleasant Plains," now known as Columbia Heights (with the exception of the east 26.84 feet front by the full depth thereof of the said lot taken by the District of Columbia in the extension of Eleventh street), as per plat of said subdivision as the same appears of record in the office of the surveyor for said District, in book Governor Shepherd's, at page 137, said lot being unimproved, to Ernest L. Schmidt for the sum of eleven hundred dollars ($1,100.00), and the purchaser having tendered himself ready to comply with the terms of sale. It is by the court, this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that upon compliance with the terms of sale, the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 17th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Legal Notices.

H. Anton Heitmuller, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charlotte Hasselbusch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. WM. HASSELBUSCH, 20 P st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,048. Administration. 29-3t

---

Stuart McNamara, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Benjamin T. Rhodes, Deceased.

No. 12,979. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Sarah Josephine Rhodes, it is ordered this 18th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alice I. Williams, of Deruyter, Madison Co., New York, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

J. Clarence Price, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

In Re the Estate of Agnes M. Beuchert, Deceased.

No. 12,867.

Upon consideration of the report of John A. Ruppert and Lena Beuchert, executor and executrix, respectively, of said estate, stating that they sold at public auction sublot one hundred and twenty-six (126), in square eight hundred and sixty-one (861), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Zula H. and Richard W. Burkhart for the sum of three thousand six hundred and twenty-five ($3,625.00) dollars, and also that they sold sublot numbered five (5), in square numbered nine hundred (900), in said city, to Mary Buhler for the sum of three thousand four hundred and fifty ($3,450.00) dollars, it is, by the court, this 18th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sales, and each of them, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 25th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

---

Malcolm Hufty, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Lawrence Hufty, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, or Alienees of John Law, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,506.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to original lot one (1), in square seven hundred and sixty-eight (768), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of complainant, by Malcolm Hufty, his solicitor, it is, by the court, this 19th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, or alienees of John Law, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty days from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

A. B. Duvall and A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a District Court.

In re the Opening of an Alley through part of Block 12, Meridian Hill, and part of Block 8, Washington Heights, in the District of Columbia. District Court. No. 668.

Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved February 23, 1905, entitled "An act to amend chapter fifty-five of an act entitled 'An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia,'" have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the opening of an alley through part of block numbered 12, Meridian Hill, and part of block numbered 8, Washington Heights, in the District of Columbia, as shown on a plat or map prepared by the surveyor of the District of Columbia and filed with said petition, as part thereof, and praying, also, that a jury of five judicious, disinterested men, not related to any person interested in these proceedings and not in the service or employment of the District of Columbia or of the United States, be summoned by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the opening of the aforesaid alley and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purposes thereof, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, including the expenses of these proceedings, as provided in the aforesaid act of Congress. It is by the court, this 18th day of July, A. D, 1905, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this court on or before the 31st day of July, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be impaneled and sworn herein. And it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published once in The Washington Law Reporter and once in The Evening Star, The Washington Post, and The Washington Times, newspapers published in said District, before the said 31st day of July, A. D. 1905. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States marshal for said District, or his deputies, upon such owners of the fee of the land to be condemned as may be found by said marshal, or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, before the said 31st day of July, A. D. 1905. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 29-1t

---

Sidney F. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna J. King, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. A. VIRGINIA CHESSMAN, 1829 N. Gratz st., Phila., Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,926. Administration. 29-3t

---

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

John Shrughrue et al., Complainants, v. Rudolph Pfeil et al., Defendants. Equity. No. 25,894.

On motion of complainants, by Lester & Price, their attorneys, it is, this 14th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Rudolph Pfeil, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to have appointed trustees in the place and stead of Henry Jordan and John W. Schaefer, both deceased, to execute the powers created and vested in said deceased trustees by a certain deed of trust, recorded in liber 1581, folio 410, of the land records of the District of Columbia. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Legal Notices.

F. L. Siddons, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term for Equity Business.

Elizabeth B. Hallman v. Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, Alias Emma Harvey. Equity Number 25,465. Docket 56.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The object of this suit is to procure a dissolution of the bonds of marriage existing between the complainant and defendant Ellwood L. Hallman on the ground of alleged adultery by said defendant. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, alias Emma Harvey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, a newspaper published in the city of Washington, before said fortieth day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

SECOND INSERTION.

Sam'l Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Jesse Brown, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. H. ROZIER DULANY, 1320 F st. N. W., by Sam'l Maddox, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,304 Administration. 28-3

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Ira A. Stafford, Deceased. Adm. No. 11,854.

Upon consideration of the reports herein filed by Daniel H. Safford and Albert P. Baldwin, executors of said estate, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sales made and reported by said executors of lot 153 in B. F. Gilbert's subdivision of square 675, house being known as 43 Myrtle street N. E., to H. C. Hile for Theresa O'Brien for the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000); lots 154, 155, 156 in B. F. Gilbert's subdivision of square 675, houses being known as 45, 47, 49 Myrtle street, respectively, to James A. Cahill for the sum of one thousand nine hundred dollars ($1,900) each; lot 150 in D. L. Morrison's et al. subdivision of part of square 365, house being known as 1533 Columbia street N. W., to John White for the sum of two thousand eight hundred fifty dollars ($2,850); the south 9 feet 8 inches front on 8th street by full depth of lot 18 and the north 5 feet 4 inches front on 8th street by full depth of lot 19 in H. Crittenden's subdivision of square 398, house being known as 1430 8th street N. W., to John White for the sum of three thousand seven hundred twenty-five dollars ($3,725); the remainder interest in lot 164 subdivision of square 675, subject to certain alley rights, house being known as 65 Myrtle st. N. E., to Edith M. Cleland Carey for the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000); and the remainder interest in lot 50 in William T. Davidson's subdivision of part of block 11, Bloomingdale, subject to certain covenants, house being known as — Quincy street N. W., to Edith M. Cleland Carey for the sum of two thousand dollars ($2,000), be and every of said sales is hereby ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown to this court on or before the 12th day of August, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for two successive weeks occurring before said day in The Law Reporter and The Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 28-2t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

F. Elwood Pratt and Jesse H. Wilson, Jr., Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Patrick Fealy v. Anna Dore et al.

Equity. No. 25,509.

The object of this suit is the partition by sale of lot numbered thirty-three (33) in George Callaghan's subdivision of lots seventeen (17) and eighteen (18) in L. L. Chapman's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and thirty-five (335) as per plat in book 12, page 182, of the records of the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Timothy Fealy, Ellen Fealy, Johannah Fealy, Mary Columbus, Dennis Pierce Fealy, Thomas Pierce Fealy, Daniel Pierce Fealy, David Leahy, Mollie Jubain, Johannah Mc. Grath, Nellie Cahill, Thomas Fealy, Catherine Fealy, Mary O'Connor, James D. Leahy, Catherine Leahy, Ellen Collins, Johannah Hartnett, Edward O'Connell, and Patrick O'Connell, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

---

F. Sprigg Perry, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Emily V. Sproston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. WILLIAM G. SPROSTON, Hotel Atlamont, Baltimore, Md. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,984. Administration. 28-3t

---

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Martha J. Coston, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 4th day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Wood, Secretary, by Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,084. Administration. 28-3t

---

John Selden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Edes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of July, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of July, 1905. HENRY H. FLATHER, Riggs Natl. Bank; J. HUBLEY ASHTON, Pacific Building; THOMAS HYDE, 1537 28th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,883. Administration. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Klinge, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of July, 1905. CATHERINE KLINGE, 257 N st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,031. Administration. 28-3t

---

Chas. W. Clagett, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Patrick Mann, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. ROBERT E. MANN, 207 7th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,040. Admn. 28-3t

---

J. B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

John Welsh, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link, Deceased, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,428.

The object of this suit is to quiet the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-three (33) in Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots in square numbered eighty-four (84), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in liber 20 at folio 48. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Andrew Link, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of September, 1905, otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based on the bill filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-4t

---

John Ridout, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Minna Schafer v. the Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of Charles Wayman.

In Equity. No. 25,470.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple by adverse possession of the complainant to all of original lot eight, in square one hundred and ninety-six, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published twice a month for said period of three months in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. jul 14, 21; aug 11, 18; sept 8, 15.

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

W. C. Prentiss, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Saunders et al. v. William Holmead et al.
Equity. No. 23,552. Doc. 53.

Upon consideration of the seventh report of William C. Prentiss and Charles S. Muir, receivers in the above entitled cause, filed this day, stating they have received from Anna E. Larigey an offer of three thousand five hundred dollars ($3,500.00) for the east twenty (20) feet front by depth thereof of lot numbered thirty-six (36), of Saunders and Galliher, trustees' subdivision, and all of lots numbered sixteen (16), twenty-nine (29), thirty (30), and the east twenty (20) feet front by the depth thereof of lot numbered twenty-eight (28), in the Washington Loan and Trust Company, trustees' subdivision of block numbered thirty-one (31), in "Petworth addition to the city of Washington," District of Columbia, all unimproved; and from the said Anna E. Larigey an offer of eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for all of lot numbered thirty-one (31), in the last-mentioned subdivision, unimproved, both of said amounts payable one-third (⅓) cash and the balance in one (1) and two (2) years with interest at six (6) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by deeds of trust on the property purchased, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, it is this 13th day of July, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said receivers be and they are hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon compliance with the terms of sale, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star once a week for three (3) successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

John Ridout, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Phillip T. Hall v. The unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Charles A. Beatty, John M. Beatty, Mary F. Beatty, Randle H. C. Beatty, Thomas J. Beatty, Violetta Beatty, Sophia M. Beatty, Francis G. Beatty, Robert M. Beatty, Charles F. Beatty, George Gordon, Stephen West, John Davidson, Geo. F. Hawkins, Anne Campbell, Edward Crowley, John Threlkeld, William King, Sr.
In Equity. No. 25,442.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to all of lots numbered 311, 312, 313, and 314 of Phillip T. Hall's subdivision of parts of lots 306 and 270 in square numbered 1300 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, formerly square 130 in that part of the said city of Washington formerly known as Georgetown, as per plat recorded in book 28, page 14, in the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia; also part of lot 306, in Mary A. Weaver et al.'s subdivision of parts of lots 269, 270, and 271, in said square 1300, as per plat recorded in book Georgetown No. 2, page 14, in said surveyor's office, and parts of lots 269 and 270 in said square 1300, said parts of said lots 306, 269, and 270 being fully described in the bill in this cause; also all of lot 275 in said square. On motion of the complainant, it is this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, sufficient cause having been shown for dispensing with a longer period of publication. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test. J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. 28-3t

L. Cabell Williamson and John A. Butler, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ethel Payne v. Herbert Payne, Ada Wood.
Equity No. 25,193.

The object of this suit is to secure a divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the petitioner by her solicitors, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the co-respondent, Ada Wood, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once in each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Fanny Heidenheimer, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of July, 1905. ELIAS HEIDENHEIMER, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,264. Administration. 28-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Malcolm Hufty, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary F. Young, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of July, 1905. MALCOLM HUFTY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,002. Administration. 27-3t

Paul E. Johnson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John W. Post, otherwise known as John Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. NELLIE POST, 611 3d st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,989. Administration. 27-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Charles Ippolito, Deceased.
No. 12,968. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Benjamin F. Guy, it is ordered this 7th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Raphael Ippolito, Orto Essoline, Joe Otito, and mother of Charles Ippolito, whose name and address is unknown, but is supposed to live in Italy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 8th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 27-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Augustine Pavese, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. L. CABELL WILLIAMSON, 458 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,029. Administration. 27-3t

Wm. L. Pollard, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Martha A. Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of June, 1905. SIDNEY A. TAYLOR, 1015 3d st. N. W.; PHEOBE MILES, 818 4th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,986. Administration. 27-3t

Chas. F. Carusi, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Annie E. Ward v. Henry C. Ward, Blanche Walker.
No. 25,355. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bond of marriage from the defendant, Henry C. Ward, on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant it is this 3d day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Blanche Walker, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Levi H. David, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna H. Stewart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of June, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of June, 1905. ANDREW STEWART, 1420 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,994. Administration. 27-3t

T. Percy Myers, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Isabella Ricks v. Edward L. Edmonston et al.
In Equity, No. 24,716.

Upon consideration of the report of T. Percy Myers and Campbell Carrington, trustees, filed herein, stating that they have sold at public auction the east half of lot 23 in square 282, to Julius A. P. Dowling, Jr., as the agent for Mary A. Smith, for the sum of twenty-two hundred ($2,200) dollars, it is, by the court, this 6th day of July, A. D. 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 27-3t

Legal Notices.

Wm. D. Hoover, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of James H. Hopkins, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 24th day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 3d day of July, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS, AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by William D. Hoover, 2d V.-President. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,285. Administration. 27-3t

E. Hilton Jackson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Julia M. Adams, Deceased.
No. 13,028. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Decatur Morgan, it is ordered this 30th day of June, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Charles H. Adams, Carrie M. Adams, and Frank M. Adams, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 10th day of August, 1905, at ten o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 27-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

R. B. Behrends, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
In Re Estate of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, Deceased.
No. 8794.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper writing, dated the 13th day of April, 1898, purporting to be the last will and testament of J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, has been returned as to Frederick W. Boucher, Edward Boucher, and Rosa Mitchell "not to be found," it is, this 27th day of June, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this case be, and they are hereby, set down for trial on the 10th day of October, 1905, and that this order and the substance of said issues heretofore framed shall be published once a week for four weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

ISSUES.

1. Was the said paper writing propounded as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, executed by her in due form of law? 2. Was the said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, of sound mind, and capable of executing a valid deed or contract? 3. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured through the undue influence, importunities, suggestions, and persuasions of any person or persons? 4. Was the said paper writing, bearing date the 13th day of April, 1898, and offered for probate and record as the last will and testament of said J. K. Wilhelmina Kirchner, deceased, procured by the fraud, deceit, or misrepresentations practiced upon her by any person or persons? 26-4t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 30

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - - JULY 28, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 465
The American Bar Association 466
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Winfield Scott Montgomery, appellant, v. Richard S. Brown et al 468
Sigmund A. Czarra, appellant, v. Board of Medical Supervisors of the District of Columbia 470
Christian J. Ubhoff, appellant, v. Clarence A. Brandenburg et al 473
Legal Notices 475

Judgments—Jurisdiction Over Garnishee Temporarily Within State—Notice to Principal Debtor.

In Harris v. Balk, decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, and reported in the Advance Sheets for June 15, 1905, the facts were as follows: Harris was a resident of North Carolina at the time of the commencement of the action in 1896, and prior to that time was indebted to Balk, also a resident of that State, in the sum of $180, which he had verbally promised to pay, but there was no written evidence of the obligation. In the same year one Epstein, a resident of Baltimore, asserted that Balk was indebted to him in more than $300. While Harris was temporarily in Baltimore, in August, 1896, Epstein caused to be issued out of a proper court in Baltimore a non-resident writ of attachment against Balk, attaching the debt due Balk from Harris, which writ was served on Harris by the sheriff, with a summons to appear in court on a day named. With that attachment a summons and declaration against Balk (as provided by the Maryland statute) were delivered to the sheriff and by him set up at the court house door. Harris left Baltimore and returned to North Carolina before the return day of the writ. He did not contest the garnishee process, but after his return made an affidavit on August 11, 1896, that he owed Balk $180, and stating that the amount had been attached by Epstein, and by his counsel consented to an order of condemnation against him as such garnishee for $180. Judgment was thereafter entered against the garnishee and in favor of Epstein for that amount, and thereafter Harris paid the amount to one Warren, an attorney of Epstein, in North Carolina. On August 11, 1896, Balk sued Harris before a justice of the peace in North Carolina to recover the $180. To this action, Harris pleaded in bar the recovery of the Maryland judgment and his payment thereof, contending that that judgment was valid in Maryland and therefore entitled to full faith and credit in the courts of North Carolina, and was conclusive against Balk in this action. The justice denied this contention and rendered judgment against Harris for the amount of his indebtedness to Balk and that judgment was affirmed by the Supreme Court of North Carolina. The ground of this judgment was that the Maryland court was without jurisdiction to attach or garnish the debt, because Harris was but temporarily in that State, and the situs of the debt was in North Carolina.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Peckham (Justices Harlan and Day dissenting), reversed the judgment of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. In the course of the opinion the following points are decided:

1. The judgment of a State court, if that court had jurisdiction to render it, is entitled to the same full faith and credit in the courts of another State that it has in the State where rendered, as a valid domestic judgment.

2. The temporary presence of the garnishee within the State gives a court of that State jurisdiction to render judgment against him in the garnishment proceedings upon personal service of process within the State, if, during such temporary presence in the State, the principal debtor could have sued him there to recover the debt, and the laws of the State permit the garnishment of a debtor of the principal debtor.

3. The consent of a garnishee to a judgment impounding his debt to the principal debtor does not make the payment under the judgment voluntary, where he was absolutely without defense, so as to prevent him from pleading such payment in bar to an action on the debt.

4. The duty of the garnishee to give notice of the garnishment proceedings to the principal debtor is discharged by pleading the judgment therein in bar to an action on the debt while there then remained nearly a year in which the principal debtor might litigate the question of his liability in the court which rendered the judgment.

Deeds—Delivery.—Delivery of a deed by the grantor to a third person, not made with intent to part with the right to recall the deed, was insufficient to pass title. Spacy v. Ritter (Ill.), 73 N. E. Rep. 447.

Digitized by Google

The American Bar Association.

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the association will be held at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, August 23, 24, and 25, 1905. The sessions of the association will be at 10 o'clock a. m. and 8 o'clock p. m. on Wednesday and Thursday, and at 10 o'clock a. m. on Friday.

The sessions of the section of legal education will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, August 22, 23, and 25, at 3 o'clock p. m.

The sessions of the section of patent, trademark, and copyright law will be held on Wednesday and Friday at 3 o'clock p. m.

On Tuesday, August 22, at 8 o'clock p. m., there will be a meeting of the Association of American Law Schools.

On Tuesday, August 22, at 8 o'clock p. m. also, the second conference of the State Boards of Law Examiners will be held.

The fifteenth conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws will begin its sessions on Friday, August 18, at 10 o'clock a. m., being the week previous to the meeting of the American Bar Association.

All the meetings will be held at the New Mathewson Hotel.

PROGRAMME OF THE ASSOCIATION.

Wednesday Morning, 10 o'clock.

The president's address, by Henry St. George Tucker, of Lexington, Va., communicating the most noteworthy changes in statute law on points of general interest, made in the several States and by Congress during the preceding year.

Nomination and election of members. Election of the general council. Report of the secretary. Report of the treasurer. Report of the Executive Committee.

Wednesday Evening, 8 o'clock.

A paper by Thomas J. Kernan, of New Orleans, La. Discussion upon the subject of the paper read.

Thursday Morning, 10 o'clock.

The annual address, by Alfred Hemenway, of Boston, Mass.

Reports of standing committees (see report of 1904, page 939, giving a memorandum of subjects referred): On jurisprudence and law reform; on judicial administration and remedial procedure; on legal education and admissions to the bar; on commercial law; on international law; on grievances; on obituaries; on law reporting and digesting; on patent, trade-mark and copyright law; on uniform State laws; on insurance law.

Thursday Evening, 8 o'clock.

A paper by Richard L. Hand, of Elizabethtown, N. Y. Discussion upon the subject of the paper read.

Reports of special committees (see report of 1904, pages 939 and 940): On classification of the law; on Indian legislation; on penal laws and prison discipline; on Federal courts; on industrial property and international negotiation; on title to real estate; on Louisiana purchase exposition.

Friday Morning, 10 o'clock.

Nomination of officers. Unfinished business. Miscellaneous business. Election of officers.

The annual dinner will be given by the association to its members and delegates at the New Mathewson Hotel at 8 o'clock on Friday evening.

A parlor in the hotel will be open as a reception room for the use of members of the association and delegates during the meeting.

Members and delegates are particularly requested to register their names, as soon as convenient after their arrival, in the register of the association, which will be kept in this room in order that the list of those present may be complete.

The members of the general council will meet in the reception room at the hotel on Tuesday evening, August 22, at 9.30 o'clock.

The attention of the various standing committees is called to the provision of the by-laws by which such committees are required to meet every year, at such hour as their respective chairmen may appoint, on the day preceding the annual meeting, at the place where the same is to be held. All such committees will also meet at the reception room at the hotel at 9.30 o'clock on Tuesday evening, August 22, for further consultation.

The attention of committees is called to the following provisions of the by-laws:

"All committees may have their reports printed by the secretary before the annual meeting of the association; and any such report, containing any recommendation for action on the part of the association, shall be printed, together with a draft of bill embodying the views of the committee, whenever legislation shall be proposed. Such report shall be distributed by mail by the secretary to all the members of the association at least fifteen days before the annual meeting at which such report is proposed to be submitted. No legislation shall be recommended or approved except upon the report of a committee."

It is desirable that all nominations of new members, as far as possible, should be submitted to the general council at its first session on Tuesday evening. The mode of nomination will be found below, and forms will be furnished by the secretary, if desired. Any nomination put in proper form and sent to the secretary before the meeting will be submitted to the general council at its first session.

The executive committee will act on any nominations for elections made under the last clause of Article IV, if sent to the secretary prior to August 1. Forms will be furnished on application.

HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS.

The principal hotels are the New Mathewson, the Atlantic, the Atwood, and the Imperial. The first three are situated within a few rods of, and facing, the beach. The Imperial Hotel is situated just in the rear of the other three hotels mentioned. It is expected that all members who attend the meeting will be able to secure accommodations at the New Mathewson, the Atlantic, the Atwood, or the Imperial. These hotels are very near one another.

The New Mathewson is a new hotel and is provided with all the modern improvements. The rooms, over three hundred in number, are of various sizes, and many of them with private bath.

Digitized by Google

The Massasoit and Mattatoxit, the Revere and the Gladstone are smaller and less expensive summer hotels.

RAILROAD FACILITIES.

Narragansett Pier is on a branch railroad connecting with the New York, New Haven, and Hartford Railroad at Kingston, R. I. The distance from Boston to Narragansett Pier is about 75 miles, and there are seven available trains daily, taking about two and one-half hours. The distance from New York to Narragansett Pier is about 170 miles, and it may be reached conveniently by train leaving Grand Central Station, New York, at 10.02 a. m., arriving at 3.15 p. m., or at 1.01 p. m., arriving at 5.37 p. m. It may also be reached from New York by the Norwich line of steamers to New London, Conn., leaving New York at 6 p. m., reaching Narragansett Pier at 8.30 a. m.

No special railroad rates will be given to members of the American Bar Association, it having been heretofore found that the necessary number of members who would desire to arrive immediately before the meeting and return home immediately afterwards by the same route would not be sufficient to warrant the required guarantee for any particular territory.

The dues are $5 a year for members. Delegates who are not members pay no dues. There is no initiation fee. There are no additional dues for membership of a section.

In preparing for debate members are requested to bear in mind the by-law which provides that no person shall speak more than ten minutes at a time nor more than twice on one subject.

By order of the Executive Committee.

JOHN HINKLEY, Secretary,
215 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

PROGRAMME OF THE SECTION OF LEGAL EDUCATION.

The sessions will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, August 22, 23, and 25, 1905, at the New Mathewson Hotel.

Tuesday Afternoon, 3 o'clock.

Address of the president of the Association of American Law Schools, Nathan Abbott, Dean of the Law School of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University.

A paper by James P. Hall, Dean of the University of Chicago Law School, on "Practice Work and Elective Studies in Law Schools."

Discussion of the papers presented.

Wednesday Afternoon, 3 o'clock.

Address of the chairman of the section of legal education, Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

One or more additional papers will be read.

Discussion of the papers presented.

Friday Afternoon, 3 o'clock.

Unfinished business.

CHARLES M. HEPBURN, Secretary,
307 Carlisle Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PROGRAMME OF THE SECTION OF PATENT, TRADEMARK, AND COPYRIGHT LAW.

The sessions will be held on Wednesday and Friday afternoons, at 3 o'clock, at the New Mathewson Hotel.

Address of the chairman, Robert S. Taylor, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

A paper by Joseph B. Church, of the District of Columbia, on "Needed Reforms in Interference Procedure."

A paper by Hon. Charles H. Duell, Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, entitled, "Are any Changes Desirable in Our Patent System?"

One or more additional papers will be read.

A discussion of the papers will follow.

MELVILLE CHURCH, Secretary,
McGill Building, Washington, D. C.

PROGRAMME OF THE ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN LAW SCHOOLS.

Sessions will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, August 22, 23, and 25, in connection with the section of legal education.

(See programme of Section of Legal Education).

On Tuesday, August 22, at 8 o'clock p. m., there will be a separate meeting of the Association of American Law Schools.

W. P. ROGERS, Secretary-Treasurer,
21 West Ninth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

PROGRAMME OF THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF LAW EXAMINERS.

Sessions will be held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, August 22, 23, and 25, in connection with the Section of Legal Education.

(See programme of Section of Legal Education.)

On Tuesday, August 22, at 8 o'clock p. m., there will be a separate meeting of the Conference.

LUCIUS H. PERKINS, Secretary,
Lawrence, Kan.

CONFERENCE OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS.

The fifteenth conference will be held at the New Mathewson Hotel, beginning Friday, August 18, 1905, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The members of the American Bar Association Committee on Uniform State Laws, and all other members of the American Bar Association, are invited to participate in the discussion, examination, and preparation of uniform laws relating to sales, partnership, and warehouse receipts.

AMASA M. EATON, President,
Providence, R. I.
ALBERT E. HENSCHEL, Secretary,
11 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

Negligence—Defective Streets.—In order to show contributory negligence, both the commission of a negligent act and a connection of that act with the injury as a proximate cause thereof must concur.—Brewster v. Elizabeth City (N. Car.), 49 S. E. Rep. 885.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

WINFIELD SCOTT MONTGOMERY, APPELLANT,

v.

RICHARD H. BROWN ET AL.

WILLS, CONSTRUCTION OF; INTENT OF TESTATOR; PROVISION FOR WIDOW; ABSOLUTE BEQUEST OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

1. The first and great rule in the exposition of wills, to which all others must bend, is that the intention of the testator, expressed therein, shall prevail, if consistent with the rules of law; and the whole will is to be taken together, and so construed as, if possible, to give effect to the whole.
2. A provision for the benefit of the wife of the testator should be construed liberally in her favor.
3. When an interest is given or an estate conveyed by one clause of an instrument it can not be cut down or taken away by raising a doubt from other clauses, but only by express words or by clear and undoubted implication.
4. Testator, by his will, gave to his wife his real estate during life, with power to mortgage it should her circumstances require. By a separate paragraph he bequeathed to her, without any limitation or qualifying clause, his life insurance and all other property not disposed of by the will. He then made specific bequests to two other persons, and in the concluding clause provided that on death of his wife all his property, real, personal, and mixed, should revert to his brother and his heirs. Held, construing the will, that the bequest to the wife of the life insurance gave her the absolute interest therein and not merely a life estate, and any portion of such insurance money remaining at the death of the wife passed to her personal representative and not to the brother of testator.

No. 1509. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,060, in suit to construe a will. Affirmed.

Mr. C. C. Cole, Mr. R. G. Donaldson, and Mr. S. R. Bond for the appellant.

Mr. Henry E. Davis and Mr. J. H. Smith for the appellees.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal taken from a decree, entered in the court below, in favor of the appellees, who were the defendants below. The question involved in the suit was as to the proper construction and interpretation of a will executed by Henry P. Montgomery, deceased, a brother of the complainant. Should the will be construed according to the contention of the complainant, specific relief is asked relative to certain notes and securities.

The record discloses that Henry P. Montgomery, a resident of the District of Columbia, died April 26, 1899, leaving a will dated December 1, 1898. The will devised to Emma V. Montgomery, his wife, all his real estate during her life, with power to mortgage, should her circumstances become such as to justify it. Certain specific bequests were made, one of which was revoked by a codicil, which codicil also contained a bequest of certain other personal property. In addition thereto, the will contained two clauses which are the ones to be construed. They are as follows:

"I also bequeath to my wife, Emma V. Montgomery, my life insurance and all other property, not otherwise disposed of by this will." . . .

"At the death of my wife, Emma V. Montgomery, all my property, real, personal, and mixed, shall revert to my brother, Winfield Scott Montgomery, and his heirs forever."

Emma V. Montgomery and Winfield Scott Montgomery were appointed executors. The will was probated June, 1899, and the executors qualified. They collected the life insurance money, amounting to $5,000, which was taken by Emma V. Montgomery, who deposited $4,800 of the amount in her name, in certain Washington trust companies. Emma V. Montgomery died October 26, 1902, intestate, leaving as her heirs at law and next of kin the defendants, her brother and sister. Richard H. Brown, one of the appellees, was appointed administrator of the estate of Emma V. Montgomery, in December, 1902. The inventory and appraisal of her personal estate, as filed, disclosed that such estate amounted to about $7,000. Among the items were three notes amounting in the aggregate to $4,500, secured by deeds of trust, which are the notes asserted to have been bought with the life insurance money. It appears that the appellant, while Richard H. Brown's petition for appointment as administrator of the estate of Mrs. Montgomery was pending, filed an intervening petition asserting that these notes were purchased with the life insurance money, and that they, as well as all other personal property which Mrs. Montgomery received under the will of her husband, passed at her death to this appellant.

This state of facts presents for consideration two questions:

The first is as to whether the insurance money was invested in the notes referred to; and, while we agree with the court below in the finding that the notes were purchased with the money received from the life insurance, it is, in our opinion, of little consequence, for the reason that if Mrs. Montgomery only took a life interest in the insurance money, her estate would, in any event, be answerable for the full amount.

The second question is the important one, and that is as to whether Emma V. Montgomery's interest in the insurance money was absolute or only a life interest therein.

The general rule as to the construction of wills is, at this day, well established and is not open to question. It is the rule laid down in Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. 68, where it is stated:

"The first and great rule in the exposition of wills, to which all others must bend, is that the intention of the testator, expressed in his will, shall prevail, provided it be consistent with the rules of law; and the whole will is to be taken together, and is to be construed so as to give effect, if it be possible, to the whole."

Turning now to the consideration of the will, we find that Henry P. Montgomery gave to his wife the real estate during her life, with power to mortgage should her circumstances become such as to justify it. The next paragraph, without any limitation or qualifying clause, bequeaths to her his life insurance and all other property not otherwise disposed of by his will. Standing by itself, this bequest is clear, and expresses in apt terms and without the slightest ambiguity, an absolute bequest of the life insurance money to the widow. Then the will sets forth two specific bequests, followed by the clause which has led to this controversy. This clause provides that at the death of Emma V. Montgomery, the widow, all of the decedent's property, real, personal, and mixed, shall revert to his brother, Winfield Scott Montgomery, and his heirs forever. A reading of the will clearly shows that it was the intention of the testator to provide for his wife a home and, according to the measure of his means, an ample maintenance. To that end he gave not only a life interest in all of his real estate during her life, but gave her the power to mortgage the same should circumstances justify it. He also gave her his life insurance without any words of limitation. Had he intended to give her only a life interest in it, or only so much of it as might be necessary for her maintenance, it would have been natural for him to so state, and to have qualified the bequest as he had limited her interest in his real estate in the preceding clause of the will. As we have stated, the will disclosing that the intent of the testator was to make ample provision for his wife, the rule laid down by the Court of Appeals of New York, in Moffett v. Elmendorf, 152 N. Y. 475, that provisions for the benefit of the wife should be construed liberally in her favor, may be well invoked in the case at bar.

Digitized by Google

But it is insisted on behalf of the appellant that the clause providing for the reversion of all of the testator's property to him at the death of Emma V. Montgomery is clear, should be construed as it reads, and not in such a way as to deprive the testator's brother of the interest given him by the clause. There can be no question but that, notwithstanding the terms in one clause of the will denote an absolute estate, by a subsequent clause such an interest may be qualified by a limitation over, in a certain event, or that it may be cut down; but as the New York Court of Appeals, in Freeman v. Coit, 96 New York, 63, in recognizing such rule, said: "There is another rule of construction of equal force and not inconsistent with the one just stated, and that is that when an interest is given or an estate conveyed in one clause of an instrument it can not be cut down or taken away by raising a doubt from other clauses, but only by express words or by clear and undoubted implication," citing Thornhill v. Hall, 2 C. L and Fin. 22, and Roseboom v. Roseboom, 81 N. Y. 356. The reversion clause, in our opinion, is not so clear but that it requires construction and limitation. If the expression, "all of my property, real, personal, and mixed," is to be construed sufficiently broad to sweep within its terms all of the property held by the testator at his death, then it would apply with just as much force to the two specific bequests to Richard B. Peters and Musette Brooks as to the specific bequest of the life insurance to Emma V. Montgomery.

A construction as broad as that would, we think, be unwarranted, and yet it would be doing violence to the rule requiring a liberal construction of a provision for the benefit of the widow to hold that the reversion clause related to her specific bequest, and not to other specific bequests contained in the will. It is true that the bequest to Peters was revoked by the codicil, but that does not alter the principle. We think it a fair construction to say that the reversion clause was set forth broadly so as to embrace the testator's property, which was not specifically bequeathed, in whatsoever form that property might be at the time of the death of Mrs. Montgomery. For illustration, she was given power to mortgage the real estate, and if that power had been exercised only a short time before her death there undoubtedly would have been a considerable part of the amount of the mortgage money in her hands at the time of her death, which money would revert to Winfield Scott Montgomery under the reversion clause, as it would not had that clause only provided for the reversion of his real estate.

The learned justice in the court below, in reviewing the facts of the case and the law applicable thereto, said:

"In the case of Howard v. Carusi, 109 U. S. 725, involving a devise of real estate and bequest of personal property to the brother of the testator to be held, used, and enjoyed by him, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, forever, with the hope and trust, however, that he would not diminish the same to a greater extent than may be necessary for his comfortable support and maintenance, and that, at his death, the same, or so much thereof as he should not have disposed of by devise or sale, should descend to the testator's three nieces, it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States that, inasmuch as the absolute power of disposal was given in express and unequivocal terms, or clearly and unmistakably implied, to the first taker, the remainder over was void. See, also, the cases of Holcomb v. Wright, 5 App. Cas. (D. C.) 76: 23 Law Rep. 24; Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 68; Brant v. Virginia Coal & Iron Co., 93 U. S. 326; Potter v. Couch, 141 U. S. 316, and Roberts v. Lewis, 153 U. S. 367.

"In the case at bar, the testator evidently intended that his widow should not be limited or embarassed in any way in respect of this insurance money which he wished her to have. It would be most unusual, indeed, for a testator in disposing of his life insurance policy, which he doubtless, and quite naturally, procured in order to insure support for his wife in the event of his own prior death, to say to his wife that he did not mean that she should use the insurance money, but only that she should invest it and use the income; and, in the absence of an express declaration by the testator that he intended such an unusual disposition, the court would hardly be justified in holding such to have been his intention.

"The clause of the will upon which the complainant relies, namely: 'At the death of my wife, Emma V. Montgomery, all of my property, real, personal, and mixed, shall revert to my brother, Winfield Scott Montgomery, and his heirs forever,' is in the nature, simply, of a residuary disposition. The clause was necessary in order to dispose of the fee to the real estate in which he had simply vested the widow with a life estate, but beyond this it is only to be treated as a general clause. The testator's first wish was to see to it that his wife should be properly cared for—and after that he looked directly to his brother. After his wife, whatever was to be disposed of he wanted to go to his brother; and, in order to ensure this, he made use of the broad, generic, and comprehensive expression "all of my property, real, personal, and mixed," as best adapted to provide for all possible contingencies—and it is not improbable that he found this stereotyped expression in some printed form or draft of will, and regarded it as an approved residuary one with no special meaning to him, but simply adapted to carry out his general idea that, after his wife had thus been provided for, whatever of his estate remained undisposed of he wanted to go to his brother. And, under this clause, it would seem quite clear that not only would his brother take the fee to the real estate, but also that, had the testator's wife not survived the testator, all of the property, real, personal, and mixed, would have gone to the brother."

Digitized by Google

We agree with his views thus expressed and believe that the proper construction was placed upon the will by the trial court. No reversible error has been shown. It follows that the decree should be affirmed, with costs, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

SIGMUND A. CZARRA, APPELLANT,

v.

BOARD OF MEDICAL SUPERVISORS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

PHYSICIANS; REVOCATION OF LICENSE FOR UNPROFESSIONAL CONDUCT; STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

1. When the legislature declares an offense in words of no determinate signification, or its language is so general and indefinite as that it may embrace within its comprehension not only acts commonly recognized as reprehensible, but others also which it is unreasonable to presume were intended to be made criminal, the courts, possessing no arbitrary discretion to discriminate between those which were and those which were not intended to be made unlawful, can do nothing else than declare the statute void for uncertainty.
2. The provision of the act of Congress of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. 198), regulating the practice of medicine, etc., in the District of Columbia, authorizing the revocation by the board of medical supervisors, thereby created, of the license of a physician for "unprofessional or dishonorable conduct," but not defining the acts that will constitute such conduct, is too indefinite and uncertain to warrant a conviction upon a complaint charging the respondent with "unprofessional and dishonorable conduct."
3. An order of the board of medical supervisors revoking the license of a physician who had been found guilty under a complaint charging him with unprofessional and dishonorable conduct in distributing a pamphlet containing obscene, lewd, and lascivious matter, reversed.

No. 1512. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL from an order of the Board of Medical Supervisors revoking the license of a physician for alleged unprofessional conduct. Reversed.

Mr. Mason N. Richardson for the appellant.

Mr. A. B. Duvall for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from an order of the board of medical supervisors of the District of Columbia, made January 24, 1905, revoking the license of Sigmund A. Czarra to practice medicine and surgery in said District because of his unprofessional and dishonorable conduct.

The act of Congress, approved June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. 198), is a general one regulating the practice of medicine and surgery, and the licensing of practitioners thereof in the District of Columbia. It creates three separate boards, each consisting of five members. One of these boards shall "be composed of five physicians in good standing adherents to the regular system of medical practice;" another of "adherents to the homeopathic system of medical practice," and the third of "adherents to the eclectic system of medical practice." Provision is made for the careful and impartial selection of the members of these several boards.

The board of medical supervisors consists of the presidents of the respective boards of examiners above mentioned, and of two other persons selected by the District Commissioners, one of whom shall be learned in the law.

Applications for license must be made to this board, which shall certify applicants for examination by the respective boards who are adherents to the system of medicine which the applicant desires to practice. But no applicant shall be so certified until satisfactory proof is furnished that he or she is of good moral character, over 21 years of age, and the possessor of a diploma, issued by some medical college duly authorized, conferring the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Passing by other sections of the act, we come to section 10, which provides: That the board of medical supervisors "may, by a vote of four members, refuse to grant, or may revoke a license, and may cause the name of any person to be removed from the record of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and from the register of the health office for any of the following causes, to wit: The employment of fraud or deception in passing the examination provided for in this act, chronic inebriety, the practice of criminal abortion, conviction of crime involving moral turpitude, or of unprofessional or dishonorable conduct." Appeals from such orders of removal lie to the Court of Appeals of the District, whose decision is made final.

Section 13 provides that any one practising medicine or surgery, or publicly professing to do so, without license, or after his license or registration has been cancelled by order of said board of supervisors, "shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor" and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by fine or imprisonment or both.

The appellant was first brought before the board of medical supervisors in January, 1904, and his license ordered revoked upon a complaint made of unprofessional and dishonorable conduct in the distribution of obscene literature.

The obscene literature consisted of a pamphlet purporting to relate to the cause, prevention, and cure, among other things, of venereal and secret diseases, and of certain filthy and indecent habits and practices.

Upon appeal to this court the order was reversed because of the insufficiency of the complaint. Czarra v. Board of Medical Supervisors, 32 W. L. R. 744.

On January 11, 1905, another complaint was made against said Czarra, charging him with unprofessional and dishonorable conduct, in that he "did distribute, deposit, or place, or cause to be distributed, deposited, or placed, in the vestibules and on the door steps of various residences in the city of Washington and in the District of Columbia aforesaid, a certain circular, book, or pamphlet, containing certain obscene, lewd, and lascivious words, language, statements, and matter, a copy of which is hereto attached as part hereof," etc.

Digitized by Google

The attached pamphlet is identical with that referred to in the former complaint.

Due notice was given to the party, and he appeared by counsel before the board at the time designated. Czarra entered a plea to the jurisdiction to proceed against him on the following grounds, briefly stated: 1. The act of Congress in so far as it purports to convey authority to revoke his license for alleged unprofessional or dishonorable conduct is void for uncertainty; 2, because said board had not prior to the commission of the alleged offense established any rules defining unprofessional or dishonorable conduct, and any such made since are ex post facto; 3, because the accused has been once tried and convicted of the same offense, and can not be again put in jeopardy.

The plea was overruled, and the appellant was duly tried and found guilty, whereupon the order appealed from was regularly adopted and entered. The proceedings on appeal are in regular form and proper time.

1. The last two grounds of the plea to the jurisdiction are without merit. No question of an ex post facto law can arise because the conviction was had upon the law previously enacted by Congress and not upon any regulations of the board of medical supervisors made thereunder.

Nor is there any case of former jeopardy. Without regard to the question whether the proceeding is criminal, it is sufficient to say that there has been no final judgment of conviction or acquittal. The former decision was reversed because of the insufficiency of the complaint, and a new trial was the necessary consequence. The defect in the complaint being fatal, there was nothing to prevent the filing of a new and effective one.

That Congress had the power to regulate the practice of medicine and surgery in the District of Columbia, and to prescribe the reasonable qualifications required by this act, as well as to create a special tribunal and invest it with the power to revoke the licenses of practitioners for sufficient cause, there can be no doubt. Nor can there be any reasonable doubt that sufficient cause exists in the employment of fraud or deception in passing the examinations required, in chronic inebriety, the practice of criminal abortion, or in case of conviction of crime involving moral turpitude, as declared in the act. Fraudulent conduct in passing the examination and the practice of criminal abortion might well be made separate criminal offenses, if not already so, and punished as such; and probably chronic inebriety also.

3. The single question to be determined is whether, independently of the causes mentioned, "unprofessional or dishonorable conduct," as declared in the act, are sufficiently specific and certain to warrant a conviction thereof, and the exercise of the power of revocation by the board of medical supervisors.

This question was fully argued on the former appeal, but not decided. Speaking for this court at the time, Mr. Justice Anderson, of the Supreme Court of the District, who had been regularly designated to sit during the temporary absence of Chief Justice Alvey, said: "Without expressing any opinion on this point in a case so radically defective as the present, and in which the expression of an opinion by us might possibly be characterized as obiter dictum, we desire to call the attention of the authorities to the fact that grave doubt is entertained as to the power of Congress to delegate to the board of medical supervisors or to any other similar body the authority to determine what shall constitute 'unprofessional or dishonorable conduct' in a medical practitioner so far as to render such a practitioner guilty of a criminal offense if he attempts to continue in the practice of his profession after having been adjudged guilty of such conduct by a board of medical supervisors. Certainly it would seem more appropriate that Congress itself should specifically define what shall constitute 'unprofessional or dishonorable conduct' for the purpose of this legislation than leave so vital a subject to the possible caprice of any board of supervisors." 32 W. L. R. 744, p. 748.

Congress has not amended the act, and instead of indicting and obtaining the conviction of the appellant of the public distribution of printed matter, obscene and indecent, and thus furnishing an undoubted ground for the revocation of his license, the original complaint has been renewed in a form which now compels the decision of the question concerning which grave doubt has been intimated.

In all criminal prosecutions the right of the accused to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him is preserved by the Sixth Amendment.

In order that he may be so informed by the indictment or information presented against him, the first and fundamental requisite is that the crime or offense with which he stands charged shall be defined with reasonable precision. He must be informed by the law as well as by the complaint what acts or conduct are prohibited and made punishable.

In the exercise of its power to regulate the conduct of the citizen, within the constitutional limitations, and to declare what shall constitute a crime or punishable offense, the legislature must inform him with reasonable precision what acts are intended to be prohibited. "Every man should be able to know with certainty when he is committing a crime." U. S. v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 220.

This obvious duty must be performed by the legislature itself, and can not be delegated to the judiciary. It may, doubtless, be accomplished by the use of words or terms of settled meaning, or which indicate offenses well known to and defined by the common law. Reasonable certainty, in view of the conditions, is all that is required, and liberal effect is always to be given to the legislative intent when possible. But when the legislature declares an offense in words of no determinate signification, or its language is so general and indefinite as that it may embrace within its comprehension not only acts commonly recognized as reprehensible, but others also which it is unreasonable to presume were intended to be made criminal, the courts, possessing no arbitrary discretion to discriminate between those which were and those which were not intended to be made unlawful, can do nothing else than declare the statute void for its uncertainty. U. S. v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 221. As was said in that case: "It would certainly be dangerous if the legislature could set a net large enough to catch all possible offenders, and leave it to the courts to step inside and say who could rightfully be detained, and who should be set at large. This would, to some extent, substitute the judicial for the legislative department of the Government." The general principle was applied in the following cases: Stoutenburgh v. Frazier, 16 App. D. C. 229, 234: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 256. In that case a party convicted in the Police Court under an act of Congress authorizing the punishment of "all suspicious persons," was discharged on a writ of habeas corpus.

Digitized by Google

State v. Gaster, 44 La. Ann. 636, 638. The statute declared void in that case provided: "If any judge, justice of the peace, sheriff, or any other civil officer shall be guilty of any misdemeanor in the execution of either of their respective offices, he shall on conviction suffer fine," etc.

Ex parte Jackson, 45 Ark. 158, 164. The statute annulled in that case made it a misdemeanor "to commit any act injurious to the public health, or public morals, or in the perversion or obstruction of public justice or the due administration of the law."

In Augustine v. State, 41 Tex. Cr. App. 59, 76, "mob violence" was held to be uncertain and to leave too much to the discretion of the court. See, also, Jones v. State, 100 Ala. 32, 34; State v. Partlow, 91 N. C. 550, 553; State v. Mann, 2 Or. 238; L. & N. R. R. v. Commonwealth, 99 Ky. 132.

"Unprofessional or dishonorable conduct," for which the statute authorizes the revocation of a license that has been regularly obtained, is not defined by the common law, and the words have no common or generally accepted signification. What conduct may be of either kind remains, as before, a mere matter of opinion. In the absence of some specification of acts by the law-making power, which is alone authorized to establish the standard of honor to be observed by persons who are permitted to practice the profession of medicine, it must, in respect of some acts at least, remain a varying one, shifting with the opinions that may prevail from time to time in the several tribunals that may be called upon to interpret and enforce the law.

As has been said by the Supreme Court of the United States in a case involving the same principle, the question must be reduced to one of fact as contradistinguished from mere opinion. School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty, 187 U. S. 94, 106. In that case an injunction was granted restraining a postmaster from refusing to deliver mail to the appellant, under an order of the Postmaster-General authorizing him so to do, founded on section 3929 R. S., which authorizes the Postmaster-General to withhold from the addressee and return to the senders all letters induced by any scheme or device for obtaining money through the mails by means of false and fraudulent pretenses, etc. The appellant was a chartered institution, engaged, as it alleged, not only in treating people afflicted with ills, but also in the business of teaching and educating others in the practical science of healing. Its system was alleged to be "founded largely and almost exclusively on the physical and practical proposition that the mind of the human race is largely responsible for its ills, and is a perceptible factor in the treating, curing, benefiting, and remedying thereof. And that the human race does possess the innate power, through proper exercise of the brain and mind, to largely control and remedy the ills that humanity is heir to, and complainants discard and eliminate from their treatment what is commonly known as Divine healing and Christian Science, and are confined to practical scientific treatment emanating from the source aforesaid."

After discussing the prevalent differences of opinion with respect to opposing systems of ordinary medical treatment, Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for the majority of the court, said: "Other instances might be adduced to illustrate the proposition that these statutes were not intended to cover any case of what the Postmaster-General might think to be false opinions, but only cases of actual fraud in fact, in regard to which opinion formed no basis. It may, perhaps, be urged that the instances above cited do not fairly represent the case now before us, but the difference is one of degree only. It is a question of opinion in all the cases, and, although we may think the opinions may be better founded and based upon a more intelligent and a larger experience in some cases than in others, yet after all it is in each case opinion only and not existing facts with which these cases deal. There are, as the bill herein shows, many believers in the truth of the claims set forth by complainants, and it is not possible to determine as a fact that those claims are so far unfounded as to justify a determination that those who maintain them and practice upon that basis obtain their money by false pretenses within the meaning of these statutes. The opinions entertained can not, like allegations of fact, be proved to be false, and therefore it can not be proved as matter of fact that those who maintain them obtain their money by false pretenses or promises, as that phrase is generally understood and as, in our opinion, it is used in these statutes."

If a licensed practitioner of the District of Columbia were to engage in a similar practice and advertise a similar treatment, there can be little doubt of the opinion in respect of his conduct that would be entertained by the adherents of the several reputable systems of medical practice recognized by the act of Congress; and it is quite probable that the board of medical supervisors would agree with the Postmaster-General that it amounted to a case of false pretenses, and would therefore regard the act as constituting both unprofessional and dishonorable conduct within the meaning of the act under consideration.

Doubless all intelligent and fair-minded persons would agree in the opinion of the board of medical supervisors that the act charged against the appellant, in the case at bar, amounted to conduct both unprofessional and dishonorable. But this is not the test of the validity of the particular clause of the statute. The underlying question involved in all cases that may arise is whether the courts can uphold and enforce a statute whose broad and indefinite language may apply not only to a particular act about which there would be little or no difference of opinion, but equally to others about which there might be radical differences, thereby devolving upon the tribunals charged with the enforcement of the law the exercise of an arbitrary power of discriminating between the several classes of acts.

Digitized by Google

As this is not strictly a case of prosecution for crime, it is contended that the doctrine above announced has no application, but that the appellant's case must be governed by the more liberal rule which applies in the enforcement of statutes generally regulating admission to practice under license. We concur in the view that statutes requiring proof of general qualifications, such as good moral character and the like, before one can be granted a license to practice medicine, stand upon a different ground from those creating offenses and providing penalties therefor upon conviction. Such statutes in general are undoubtedly valid and enforcible. The police power of every State warrants the requirement of the possession of all reasonable qualifications by those who seek to engage in the public practice of medicine, and, incidentally, the extension of a wide discretion to those agencies charged with the duty of inquiry and determination. But we do not agree that the exercise of the same wide discretion can be extended to a case where, when one has been regularly admitted, the deprivation or forfeiture of his license is sought under another or an independent provision of the same statute. The right to practice the profession, once regularly obtained by compliance with the law, becomes a valuable privilege or right in the nature of property, and is safeguarded by the principles that apply in the protection of property lawfully acquired. And these are of the same general nature, though not in all particulars, as those which safeguard him when prosecuted for the commission of a minor offense. This conclusion has the support of the following well-considered cases: Ex parte McNulty, 77 Cal. 164, 170; Matthews v. Murphy, 63 S. W. Rep. 785 (Ky. 1901). And in the American School of Medicine v. McAnnulty, supra, the Supreme Court made no distinction between a civil proceeding relating to the forfeiture of a privilege in the nature of property and a criminal prosecution founded on the same acts.

Moreover, while not itself a criminal prosecution, the proceeding to revoke the license is, nevertheless, a preliminary step thereto. The statute provides a penalty for practicing medicine after the revocation of a license, and in a prosecution therefor the order of revocation must necessarily be held to be conclusive evidence of the fact.

In several cases relied on by the appellee, State statutes have been upheld which authorize the revocation of licenses for "gross immorality," "unprofessional, dishonorable, or immoral conduct," and the like. Meffert v. State Board of Med. Registration, 72 Pac. Rep. 247 (Kansas, 1903); State v. Board, etc., 34 Minn. 387; State Board, etc. v. Ray, 22 R. I. 538; People v. McCoy, 125 Ill. 289; State v. Kellogg, 14 Mont. 426. In no one of these cases, however, was the question under consideration here raised, discussed, or decided. The question discussed in each, and upon which the decisions apparently turned, was the power of the State to enact regulations of the kind as the conditions of admission to practice medicine. Of this, as heretofore observed, there can be no doubt.

The case of State v. Kellogg, supra, is peculiar, and, in our opinion, well illustrates the soundness of the view that the statute itself should indicate the facts which constitute unprofessional or dishonorable conduct, and not leave them to be ascertained and settled by either medical boards or the courts. The license had been revoked in that case by the board of medical supervisors, upon proof that the appellant had been seen to deposit in a furnace and destroy a headless foetus, and when questioned had refused to make any statement, or to explain his conduct. Two of the District courts, in succession, held, with the trial board, that his conduct was unprofessional and dishonorable. On final appeal one member of the court concurred with the inferior tribunals, but the majority, being of a contrary opinion in respect of the necessary conclusion to be deduced from the facts, reversed the order revoking the license.

For the reasons heretofore given we are of the opinion that the order appealed from must be reversed with costs, and the cause remanded with directions to dismiss the complaint. It is so ordered

Reversed.

CHRISTIAN J. UBHOFF, APPELLANT,
v.
CLARENCE A. BRANDENBURG ET AL.

TRUSTEES; AGREEMENT BY ONE OF TWO TRUSTEES; RATIFICATION.

1. On default in payment of a note secured by deed of trust, the property was sold by the trustees, who themselves became the purchasers but took title in the names of third persons, for less than the amount of the debt. The debtor took steps looking to proceedings to avoid the sale, but before instituting such proceedings saw one of the trustees, who had active charge of the matter, and who agreed that if the debtor would find a purchaser for the property at a price sufficient to pay the debt, interest, and expenses, the note would be surrendered to him. He found a purchaser at such a price, to whom the trustees caused the title to be conveyed. His demand for a surrender of the note was refused and suit brought by the trustees to recover the balance remaining due upon the sale of the property under the deed of trust. The foregoing facts were disclosed, but the trial court directed a verdict for plaintiffs. Held, that this was error for which the judgment must be reversed.
2. One of several trustees may act as agent of all, especially in cases of emergency, and there may be ratification of the act of one trustee by his associates in the trust.
3. In the present case, while the agreement of the debtor was with one only of the two trustees, he purported to act for his co-trustee, and the subsequent transfer of the property by direction of the trustees to the purchaser found by the debtor was a ratification by the joint act of both trustees of the previously existing agreement between one of them and the debtor.

No. 1501. Decided May 23, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 46,172, entered upon a verdict directed by the court in an action for balance due on a promissory note. Reversed.

Mr. Hayden Johnson for the appellant.

Mr. E. C. Brandenburg, Mr. F. W. Brandenburg, and Mr. W. Mosby Williams for the appellees.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a suit instituted in the Supreme Court of the District upon a promissory note, in which, at the trial, the court directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, and the defendant has appealed.

The note was for $9,000. It was executed by one Charles P. Rees and indorsed before delivery by the appellant. It was given for a loan of the same amount from a trust fund in the hands of the appellees and was secured by a deed of trust upon certain real estate owned by Rees and regarded as ample security for the loan. Upon default in the payment of an installment of interest on the note, the property was sold under the deed of trust and was purchased by the appellees themselves, although the title was taken in the first instance in the name of two other persons, who subsequently conveyed the same on the order of the appellees. The amount for which the property was bid in, after the payment of costs and expenses, was insufficient to pay the amount then due on the note. There remained a balance of $728, for which this suit was instituted.

Ubhoff was not present at the sale, and knew nothing of the result of it until the next morning. Then he took some steps towards the institution of proceedings to vacate it. Before doing anything, however, in this direction, he called upon the appellee Williams, who seems to have had the immediate charge of the matter; and at the trial of the case in the court below, he testified that, in the interview then had with Williams, "he was told by the said Williams that if said property could be sold so as to let plaintiffs (the appellees here) out whole—that is, for sufficient to pay the principal of said note, together with interest and expenses—the said trustee would surrender to said Ubhoff his notes, both principal and interest, and release him from further liability on account thereof." Relying, as he says, upon this promise, Ubhoff did not institute any proceedings to vacate the sale, and with the aid of another person, a real estate broker like himself, procured a purchaser for the property for the sum of $10,000, and the purchaser was accepted and a deed of conveyance was executed to him, with again a loan of $9,000 on the property from the appellees, so that the purchaser was required to pay only $1,000 in cash, and this in small sums from time to time within thirty days. Of this sum of $1,000 a portion of $200 was used in the payment of commissions to the broker who had been procured by the appellant to effect the sale, and the sum of $50, likewise as commissions, to Virgil G. Williams, brother of the appellee, W. Mosby Williams, who claimed to have had the right from his brother to sell the property. The residue was applied to the discharge of the costs of sale and the indebtedness.

The sum of $10,000 realized from the sale was amply sufficient to pay all the costs and expenses, as well as the principal and interest due on the notes on which the appellant was liable; and thereupon he demanded of the appellee Williams the surrender of the note. To this demand Williams declined to accede, and he and his co-trustee instituted the present suit to recover the balance claimed to be due. At the trial he denied that he had made any such agreement with Ubhoff as the latter claimed. It appeared also that in the negotiations between Ubhoff and W. Mosby Williams, the latter assumed to act not only for himself but for his co-trustee also, according to the testimony of Ubhoff.

Upon this condition of the testimony, the court, as already stated, directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs; and the defendant has appealed.

At the present hearing, of course the testimony on behalf of the defendant below, with all fair and reasonable inferences to be deduced from it, must be taken as true; for such is the necessary result of the motion made on behalf of the plaintiffs at the conclusion of the trial to direct a verdict in their favor. That motion was in the nature of a demurrer to evidence. Assuming, therefore, as we must assume, that there was an agreement or understanding between the appellant Ubhoff and the appellee W. Mosby Williams, that, if the former would procure a purchaser for the property in question for the sum of $10,000, the latter would surrender the note for $9,000 to him and release him from further liability thereon, we find that it is sought to avoid the result of the obligation therefrom resulting on two grounds: (1) Because another and a different contract than that testified to by Ubhoff, namely, one between W. Mosby Williams and Eiker, the new purchaser, appears in the record; and (2) because one of two joint trustees can not bind his co-trustee, and Brandenburg, the joint trustee with W. Mosby Williams, had no part in the negotiations with Ubhoff and had no knowledge of them. But we think that neither one of these grounds is well taken.

1. We fail wholly to see wherein there is any relevancy in the written contract between W. Mosby Williams and Eiker to this case. The contract or agreement between Ubhoff and W. Mosby Williams was that if Ubhoff would procure a purchaser of the property for a sum sufficient to pay the principal and interest of the note and costs, Williams would surrender the note. Ubhoff procured a purchaser for $10,000, which is conceded by both sides to be sufficient for the purpose specified, and had him brought to Williams, whether by himself or another is of no consequence here. Then, when Williams and the proposed purchaser had come together, these two entered into a contract in writing between themselves as to how the sale is to be consummated and the sum of $10,000 paid. Plainly this contract had nothing whatever to do with Ubhoff's contract to procure a purchaser. Ubhoff had performed his contract when he produced a purchaser who was willing and able to purchase, and who actually consummated such purchase to the satisfaction of the appellees.

Digitized by Google

2. The second ground relied upon by the appellees is that Williams could not bind his co-trustee by any such agreement as he made with Ubhoff. And it is undoubtedly true, as the general law, that, when the administration of a trust is vested in several trustees, they must all cooperate in the exercise of the powers of their office and can not act separately or independently of each other. This is held by all the authorities on the subject. But this rule is not without its exceptions and qualifications. One trustee may in many things act as agent for all the trustees, especially in cases of emergency, and there may be ratification of the act of one trustee by his associates in the trust. Mr. Williams in express terms purported to act for him as well as for himself. Then, if appellant's statement that he procured a purchaser of the property in pursuance of his agreement with Williams be correct, and we must here assume the truth of the claim, and the contract was consummated by the two trustees, we do not see why there was not ratification by the joint trustees of the act of the one. The contract may be assumed to have been beneficial to the trust estate as well as to the appellant. It avoided litigation to vacate the sale, and it realized for the estate the full amount of its claim and probably more than the full amount. It was a proper and a meritorious contract in itself and one not to be discouraged by easy repudiation.

The estate, as represented by the trustees, can not be permitted to have the benefit of it, and at the same time to repudiate its obligations, any more than individuals could be so permitted under similar circumstances, for it must be remembered that it is conceded here by the motion of the plaintiffs in the case for a verdict that the appellant brought the purchaser to Williams in pursuance of the agreement between himself and the latter, and that in pursuance of such production of a proper purchaser a sale to him was effected and consummated. This sale being concurred in by both trustees operated as a ratification by both of the previously existing agreement between Williams and the appellant.

We are of opinion that it was error to take this case from the jury, and for this error the judgment must be reversed, with costs, and the cause will be remanded for a new trial. And it is so ordered.

Reversed.

Release, Construction of—General and Particular Words.

General words in a release are to be limited and restrained to the particular words in the recital. Such is the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the recent case of Texas and Pacific Rwy. Co. v. Dasheill, reported in the Advance Sheets for July 1, 1905. In that case it appeared that the release, after enumerating the injuries sustained as "bruising my body, right leg, right arm, and giving me a scalp wound," recited that "to maintain amicable and pleasant relations and avoid all controversy in respect to said matter," and for a monetary consideration, the employer (the plaintiff) released the railway company from all claims of every kind and character whatsoever arising from "the injuries and damages sustained by me in the manner or upon the occasion aforesaid, and arising or occurring or hereafter arising or occurring any way therefrom." The court construes the release as referring only to the specific or enumerated injuries sustained "in the manner or upon the occasion aforesaid," and the results of those injuries, and did not extend to impaired mental powers and partial loss of sight resulting from injuries received at the same time. The court, in giving this construction to the release, applies the rule above stated, that general words in a release are to be limited and restrained to the particular words in the recital, and cites the cases of Union Pacific R. Co. v. Artist, 60 Fed. 365; Lumley v. Wabash R. Co., 76 Fed. 66, and Union Pacific R. Co. v. Harris, 158 U. S. 326.

Negligence—Duty to Muffle Sound of Gasoline Engine.—One operating a gasoline engine near a highway need not adopt any particular method of muffling the sound of the exhaust. Wolf v. Des Moines Elevator Co. (Iowa), 102 N. W. Rep. 517.

Negligence—Res Ipsa Loquitur.—The mere fact that lumber which defendant was unloading from a car fell and injured plaintiff's intestate held not to raise a presumption of negligence on defendant's part. Laforrest v. O'Driscoll (R. I.), 59 Atl. Rep. 923.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Wolf & Rosenberg, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
T. Edward Clark, Complainant, v. Herman M. Schriener and Luella Schriener, Defendants.
Equity No. 25,336.

Alexander Wolf and Percy Metzger, trustees, having reported to the court that they have sold the real estate beginning at a point on the south line of North S street at a distance of sixty-three and thirty-three hundredths (63.33) feet from Vermont avenue; thence running with the south line of north S street west forty-nine and ninety-one hundredths (49.91) feet; thence south sixteen and sixty-nine hundredths (16.69) feet; thence southeasterly and perpendicularly to the line of Vermont avenue fifty-four and eighty-three hundredths (54.83) feet; thence north thirty-nine and forty hundredths (39.40) feet to the beginning, containing thirteen hundred and ninety-nine and seventy-three hundredths (1399.73) square feet of land with improvements thereon, for the sum of seventeen hundred dollars ($1,700), subject to an incumbrance of three thousand dollars ($3,000), it is, this 27th day of July, A. D. 1905, by the court ordered, that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 21st day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. By the Court: WRIGT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 30-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Bates Warren and Wm. L. Browning, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph Thomas Bender, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of July, 1905. HARRY FRANKLIN BENDER, 19 Barclay st., New York City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,064. Administration. 30-3t

---

A. B. Duvall and A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a District Court.

In Re the Opening of an Alley in Block 41, North Grounds, Columbian University, and in Block 42 of University Park, in the District of Columbia.
District Court, No. 659.

Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved February 23, 1905, entitled "An act to amend chapter fifty-five of an act entitled 'An act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia,'" have filed an amended and supplemental petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the opening of an alley in block numbered 41, North Grounds, Columbian University, and in block 42 of University Park, in the District of Columbia, as shown on an amended plat or map filed with said petition as part thereof, and praying, also, that a jury of five judicious, disinterested men, not related to any person interested in these proceedings and not in the service or employment of the District of Columbia or of the United States, be summoned by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia to assess the damages each owner of land to be taken may sustain by reason of the opening of the aforesaid alley and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purposes thereof, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, including the expenses of these proceedings, as provided in the aforesaid act of Congress. It is, by the court, this 20th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be and they are hereby warned and commanded to appear in this court on or before the 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be empaneled and sworn herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published once in The Washington Law Reporter and once in The Washington Evening Star, The Washington Post, and The Washington Times, newspapers published in said District, before the said 10th day of August, A. D. 1905. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the United States marshal for said District, or his deputies, upon such owners of the fee of the land to be condemned as may be found by said marshal or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, before the said 10th day of August, A. D. 1905. By the Court: WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk. 30-1t

---

Irwin B. Linton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Sarah Guffin, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 26th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 26th day of July, 1905. SUSAN A. GUFFIN, HARRIET C. GUFFIN, 1938 First st. N.W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,938. Administration. 30-3t

---

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Legal Notices.

M. J. Colbert and R. S. Hume, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Bankruptcy Court.

In re George J. Stinxing, Bankrupt.
Bankruptcy, No. 369.

It is by the court this 26th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale reported by John R. Lang, Jr., trustee, of sublot 42, in square 462, Washington, D. C., to Frank Hume, for the sum of $5,000, be, and the same is, ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown to the court on or before Wednesday, August 2, next, at 10 o'clock A. M. A copy of this order shall be published in The Washington Law Reporter once before said last named day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by R. J. Meigs, Jr., Asst. Clerk. 1t

---

Robt. E. L. White, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Engelbert Endres, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th daiy of July, 1905. JANE ENDRES, Tennallytown, D.C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,056. Administration. 30-3t

---

Irving Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth Behrens Kenny, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 27th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of July, 1905. JOHN W. PILLING, 1416 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,832. Administration. 30-3t

---

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia and the State of Maryland, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Wiggins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 26th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 26th day of July, 1905. J. HARRY WATERS, Laurel, Md.; JOHN W. FARRAR, 1303 3d st. N. W., City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,036. Adm. 30-3t

---

F. H. Stephens, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
John H. von Dohlen et al. v. Dora Hannemann et al.
Equity, No. 23,367.

Upon hearing the report of Luther L. Apple, trustee, stating that he has sold lots seventy-three (73) and seventy-four (74) in Eugene McC. Wardwell et al.'s subdivision of part of Pleasant Plains, as described in the original bill filed in this cause, to John B. Daish for the sum of twenty-nine hundred dollars ($2,900.00), it is, this 27th day of July, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 28th day of August, 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 30-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

L. C. Williamson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Wilson Gregory, deceased. Administration. No. 12,948.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration, with the will annexed, on said estate, by Frances G. Gregory, it is ordered this 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to Anna Gregory Carl, Margaret Gregory Taylor, William H. Gregory, Mary Gordon, Phoebe Oliver, Edward F. Brooks, Mary Brooks, Lula Brooks, Katie Brooks, Webster Stauffer, Mary Myrtle Ranck, Walter Stauffer, Drew Stauffer, Mabel Brooks, and all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 28th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times once in each week for three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 30-3t

---

Alfred B. Lind, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Samuel E. Loving, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of July, 1905. LUCY D. LOVING, 13 L st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,959. Administration. 30-3t

---

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frank L. Hanvey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of July, 1905. WALTER H. ACKER, 1420 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,063. Administration. 30-3t

---

SECOND INSERTION.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Sarah E. Frankland et al. v. Richard Frankland.

Equity, No. 25,045.

George C. Aukam, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of real estate known as part of lot 11 in square 406 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, with the improvements thereon, being premises number 916 8th street northwest, in said city, and being the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, to Robert V. White for the sum of five thousand and thirty dollars ($5,030.00), it is by the court, this 14th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown in this court on or before the 20th day of August, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Legal Notices.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.

Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold lots one hundred and fourteen (114) to one hundred and twenty (120), both inclusive, in square five hundred and fifty-one (551), being Nos. 105 to 107 Reaves Court, to Cynthia E. Dowell for fifty-six hundred dollars ($5,600), cash, it is by the court this 18th day of July, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

---

Fountain Peyton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ida Larkins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. MARY THOMAS, 1107 ½ st. Court N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,044. Administration. 29-3t

---

Nelson Wilson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Massachusetts, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Otis B. Bullard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. HENRY M. CUTLER, Holliston, Mass. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,965. Administration. 29-3t

---

Victor H. Wallace, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Inez L. Rosenbaum v. Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman. Equity. No. 25,131.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman, cause their appearances to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This notice is to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

C. Clinton James, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John H. Richardson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. C. CLINTON JAMES, 416 5th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,061. Administration. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Luella H. Bush, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers there of legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. CLARA R. BUSH, 1537 I st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,046. Administration. 29-3t

---

Edward S. Moores, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ebenezer W. Patton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of May, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. JOHN R. BERG, 319 F st. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,912. Administration. 29-3t

---

R. R. Horner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of David Lee, Deceased.

No. 13,030. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia I. Davis, it is ordered this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to all the heirs at law, unknown, and next of kin, and all others claiming interest in his estate, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Harry M. Packard, Complainant, v. William Brown et al., Defendants. No. 24,604. In Equity. Doc. 55.

Ralph P. Barnard, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate involved in the above entitled cause, and being, to wit, lot one (1) in block twenty-five (25) of John Sherman, trustee's, subdivision of part of "Mount Pleasant" and "Pleasant Plains," now known as Columbia Heights (with the exception of the east 26.84 feet front by the full depth thereof of the said lot taken by the District of Columbia in the extension of Eleventh street), as per plat of said subdivision as the same appears of record in the office of the surveyor for said District, in book Governor Shepherd's, at page 137, said lot being unimproved, to Ernest L. Schmidt for the sum of eleven hundred dollars ($1,100.00), and the purchaser having tendered himself ready to comply with the terms of sale. It is by the court, this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that upon compliance with the terms of sale, the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 17th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Legal Notices.

H. Anton Heitmuller, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charlotte Hasselbusch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. WM. HASSELBUSCH, 20 P st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,048. Administration. 29-3t

---

Stuart McNamara, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Benjamin T. Rhodes, Deceased.

No. 12,979. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Sarah Josephine Rhodes, it is ordered this 18th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alice I. Williams, of Deruyter, Madison Co., New York, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

J. Clarence Price, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

In Re the Estate of Agnes M. Beuchert, Deceased.

No. 12,867.

Upon consideration of the report of John A. Ruppert and Lena Beuchert, executor and executrix, respectively, of said estate, stating that they sold at public auction sublot one hundred and twenty-six (126), in square eight hundred and sixty-one (861), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Zula H. and Richard W. Burkhart for the sum of three thousand six hundred and twenty-five ($3,625.00) dollars, and also that they sold sublot numbered five (5), in square numbered nine hundred (900), in said city, to Mary Buhler for the sum of three thousand four hundred and fifty ($3,450.00) dollars, it is, by the court, this 18th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sales, and each of them, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 25th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

---

Malcolm Hufty, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Lawrence Hufty, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, or Alienees of John Law, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,506.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to original lot one (1), in square seven hundred and sixty-eight (768), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of complainant, by Malcolm Hufty, his solicitor, it is, by the court, this 19th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, or alienees of John Law, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty days from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Sidney F. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna J. King, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. A. VIRGINIA CHESSMAN, 1829 N. Gratz st., Phila., Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,926. Administration. 29-3t

---

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

John Shrughrue et al., Complainants, v. Rudolph Pfeil et al., Defendants. Equity. No. 25,394.

On motion of complainants, by Lester & Price, their attorneys, it is, this 14th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Rudolph Pfeil, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to have appointed trustees in the place and stead of Henry Jordan and John W. Schaefer, both deceased, to execute the powers created and vested in said deceased trustees by a certain deed of trust, recorded in liber 1581, folio 410, of the land records of the District of Columbia. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

F. L. Siddons, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Special Term for Equity Business.

Elizabeth B. Hallman v. Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, Alias Emma Harvey. Equity Number 25,465. Docket 56.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The object of this suit is to procure a dissolution of the bonds of marriage existing between the complainant and defendant Ellwood L. Hallman on the ground of alleged adultery by said defendant. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, alias Emma Harvey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, a newspaper published in the city of Washington, before said fortieth day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

THIRD INSERTION.

Sam'l Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Jesse Brown, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. H. ROZIER DULANY, 1320 F st. N. W., by Sam'l Maddox, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,304. Administration. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Klinge, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of July, 1905. CATHERINE KLINGE, 257 N st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,031. Administration. 28-3t

---

F. Elwood Pratt and Jesse H. Wilson, Jr., Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Patrick Fealy v. Anna Dore et al.

Equity. No. 25,509.

The object of this suit is the partition by sale of lot numbered thirty-three (33) in George Callaghan's subdivision of lots seventeen (17) and eighteen (18) in L. L. Chapman's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and thirty-five (335) as per plat in book 12, page 182, of the records of the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of June, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Timothy Fealy, Ellen Fealy, Johannah Fealy, Mary Columbus, Dennis Pierce Fealy, Thomas Pierce Fealy, Daniel Pierce Fealy, David Leahy, Mollie Jubain, Johannah Mc. Grath, Nellie Cahill, Thomas Feahy, Catherine Fealy, Mary O'Connor, James D. Leahy, Catherine Leahy, Ellen Collins, Johannah Hartnett, Edward O'Connell, and Patrick O'Connell, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

---

F. Sprigg Perry, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Emily V. Sproston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. WILLIAM G. SPROSTON, Hotel Atlamont, Baltimore, Md. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,984. Administration. 28-3t

---

John Selden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Edes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of July, A. D. 1906, otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of July, 1905. HENRY H. FLATHER, Riggs Natl. Bank; J. HUBLEY ASHTON, Pacific Building; THOMAS HYDE, 1537 28th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,883. Administration. 28-3t

---

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

W. C. Prentiss, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Saunders et al. v. William Holmead et al.
Equity. No. 23,552. Doc. 53.

Upon consideration of the seventh report of William C. Prentiss and Charles S. Muir, receivers in the above entitled cause, filed this day, stating they have received from Anna E. Larigey an offer of three thousand five hundred dollars ($3,500.00) for the east twenty (20) feet front by depth thereof of lot numbered thirty-six (36), of Saunders and Galliher, trustees' subdivision, and all of lots numbered sixteen (16), twenty-nine (29), thirty (30), and the east twenty (20) feet front by the depth thereof of lot numbered twenty-eight (28), in the Washington Loan and Trust Company, trustees' subdivision of block numbered thirty-one (31), in "Petworth addition to the city of Washington," District of Columbia, all unimproved; and from the said Anna E. Larigey an offer of eight hundred dollars ($800.00) for all of lot numbered thirty-one (31), in the last-mentioned subdivision, unimproved, both of said amounts payable one-third (⅓) cash and the balance in one (1) and two (2) years with interest at six (6) per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, secured by deeds of trust on the property purchased, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, it is this 13th day of July, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that said receivers be and they are hereby authorized to accept said offer and convey said real estate to said purchaser upon compliance with the terms of sale, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star once a week for three (3) successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

John Ridout, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Phillip T. Hall v. The unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Charles A. Beatty, John M. Beatty, Mary F. Beatty, Randle H. C. Beatty, Thomas J. Beatty, Violetta Beatty, Sophia M. Beatty, Francis G. Beatty, Robert M. Beatty, Charles F. Beatty, George Gordon, Stephen West, John Davidson, Geo. F. Hawkins, Anne Campbell, Edward Crowley, John Threlkeld, William King, Sr.
In Equity. No. 25,442.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to all of lots numbered 311, 312, 313, and 314 of Phillip T. Hall's subdivision of parts of lots 306 and 270 in square numbered 1300 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, formerly square 130 in that part of the said city of Washington formerly known as Georgetown, as per plat recorded in book 28, page 14, in the surveyor's office in the District of Columbia; also part of lot 306, in Mary A. Weaver et al.'s subdivision of parts of lots 269, 270, and 271, in said square 1300, as per plat recorded in book Georgetown No. 2, page 14, in said surveyor's office, and parts of lots 269 and 270 in said square 1300, said parts of said lots 306, 269, and 270 being fully described in the bill in this cause; also all of lot 275 in said square. On motion of the complainant, it is this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, sufficient cause having been shown for dispensing with a longer period of publication. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test. J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. 28-3t

L. Cabell Williamson and John A. Butler, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ethel Payne v. Herbert Payne, Ada Wood.
Equity No. 25,193.

The object of this suit is to secure a divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the petitioner by her solicitors, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the co-respondent, Ada Wood, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once in each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 28-3t

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice, That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Fanny Heidenheimer, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 31st day of July, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of July, 1905. ELIAS HEIDENHEIMER, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,264. Administration. 28-3t

Chas. W. Clagett, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Patrick Mann, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of July, 1905. ROBERT E. MANN, 207 7th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,040. Admn. 28-3t

J. B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

John Welsh, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link, Deceased, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,428.

The object of this suit is to quiet the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-three (33) in Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots in square numbered eighty-four (84), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in liber 20 at folio 48. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Andrew Link, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of September, 1905, otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based on the bill filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-4t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Martha J. Coston, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 4th day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 12th day of July, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Wood, Secretary, by Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,084. Administration. 28-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 31

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - AUGUST 4, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 481
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Thomas O. Probey, plaintiff in error, v. The District of Columbia 482
Jerome Hubbard, appellant, v. Rebecca R. Perlie 482
John Cherry et al., appellants, v. Elizabeth Ann Whalen 485
Simon P. Drew et al., appellants, v. Anderson Hogan et al 488
Legal Notices 491

Administration of Estates of Absentees.

In the case of Cummins v. Reading School District, decided May, 1905, by the Supreme Court of the United States (25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721), it is held that provisional administration upon the estate of an absentee, on the theory that he is probably dead, but making provision for the protection of his rights in the event he shall subsequently appear, is not repugnant to the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal Constitution. The substance of the decision is stated in the syllabus as follows:

"The due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States does not wholly deprive a State of the power to confer jurisdiction on its courts to administer the estates of absentees, irrespective of the fact of death, by a special and appropriate proceeding distinct from the general law for the settlement of the estates of decedents.

"Fixing the period of a person's absence from his last domicile within the State which will be sufficient, under Pa. Laws 1885, p. 155, to authorize the administration of his property by the special proceeding provided by that statute at seven or more years, is not so unreasonable as to render the statute repugnant to the due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Notice by publication of the special proceeding provided by Pa. Laws 1885, p. 155, for the administration of the estates of absentees, satisfies the requirement of the due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"The safeguards for the protection of the property of an absentee in case of his return, afforded by Pa. Laws 1885, p. 155, providing a special proceeding for the administration of the estates of absentees, satisfy the requirement of the due process of law clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, as that statute authorizes the revocation of the administration at any time on proof that the absentee is in fact alive, and in such event permits him to recover the shares of his estate received by the distributees, and provides that until the latter shall give security for refunding their shares with interest in case the supposed decedent shall be alive, no distribution shall be made, and that in case of inability to give such security the money shall be invested under the control of the court, and the interest only paid to the distributees."

The court distinguishes the case at bar from its previous decision in the case of Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, in which it was held that administration upon the estate of a living person, which had been granted upon the theory that he was actually dead, was void.

In the opinion in the Cummins case, the following language is used:

"The error underlying the argument of the plaintiff in error consists in treating as one two distinct things—the want of power in a State to administer the property of a person who is alive, under its general authority to provide for the settlement of the estate of deceased persons, and the power of the State to provide for the administration of the estates of persons who are absent for an unreasonable time, and to enact reasonable regulations on that subject. The distinction between the two is well illustrated in Pennsylvania, for in that State, prior to the enactment of the statute in question, it had been expressly decided that a court of probate, as such, was absolutely wanting in jurisdiction to administer the estate of a person who was alive, simply because there existed a presumption which was rebuttable as to the fact of death. This is also aptly illustrated by the law of Louisiana. In that State, as we have seen, provisions have existed from the beginning for the administration of the estates of absentees as distinct from the power conferred upon the courts of probate to administer the estates of deceased persons. In this condition of the law, under an averment of death, an estate was opened in a probate court of Louisiana, and administered upon. A question as to the validity of that administration subsequently arose in Burns v. Van Loan, 29 La. Ann. 560, 563. As the proceedings were probate proceedings not taken under the statute providing for the administration of the estates of absentees, the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana declared them to be absolutely void. As it can not be denied that, in substance, the Pennsylvania statute is a special proceeding for the administration of the estates of absentees, distinct from the general law of that State, providing for the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, and as, by the express terms of the statute, jurisdiction was conferred upon the proper court to grant the administration, it follows that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania did not deprive the plaintiff in error of due process of law within the intendment of the Fourteenth Amendment."

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

THOMAS O. PROBEY, PLAINTIFF IN ERROR,
v.
THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

POLICE REGULATIONS; OBSTRUCTING STREETS.

Evidence that the proprietor of a carriage repository allowed a carriage owned by him to stand in the street in front of the premises for upwards of three hours, and that his brother refused to comply with a demand made by a policeman for its removal, held insufficient to support a conviction under an information charging him with unnecessarily obstructing the street.

No. 1537. Decided May 23, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Reversed.

Mr. Charles F. Diggs for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. B. Duvall and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the defendant in error.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

The plaintiff in error was found guilty by the Police Court of the District of Columbia upon an information charging him with unnecessarily obstructing the free passageway of one of the streets of the District of Columbia. The regulation under which the information was filed is known as section 14 of article 10 of the Police Regulations. It reads: "No vehicle shall unnecessarily obstruct the free passageway of any street, or avenue, nor hinder or delay the passage of any other vehicle."

Exceptions were taken to the rulings of the court on matters of law, and notice duly given by the defendant in open court that a writ of error would be applied for, which having been granted, brings the judgment before us for review.

The information specifically charged that the plaintiff in error, being the owner of a carriage, did on the 18th day of March, 1905, unnecessarily obstruct the free passageway of a street in the District, known as Thirty-second street northwest. The proofs consisted of the evidence of a police officer that on March 18, 1905, he passed a carriage repository, bearing the name Probey, and saw a carriage, without a horse attached, standing in the street in front of the repository; that he told the brother of the defendant to have it moved, who replied that he would not; that the carriage stayed there for three hours, and that it was owned by the defendant.

In our opinion this testimony was insufficient and no conviction should have been had.

Ten days before the committal of the offense complained of, and fifteen days before the trial of this case in the Police Court, we handed down a decision which should have controlled that court in its disposition of this case. Gassenheimer v. District of Columbia, 33 W. L. R. 197. We there recognized the established rights of owners and occupiers of lands abutting on a public highway to encroach upon the primary right of the public to a limited extent and for a temporary purpose. We said: "We are of the opinion that proof that an automobile stood in front of a hotel for two hours is not sufficient to sustain a conviction that the free passageway of a street has been unnecessarily obstructed and traffic thereon hindered and delayed. . . . The information can not be sustained upon any inference. It requires sufficient legal proof in order that such a charge be sustained." We are unable to follow counsel for the District in their argument that there is a material distinction between that case and the one at bar. Both prosecutions were under the same section and article of the police regulations. The facts here adduced are, if possible, more meagre than in the other case. The instruction asked for by the plaintiff in error, with the reason therefor, which is based upon the claim that the record failed to show any unnecessary obstruction of the street, or any hindrance or delay to vehicles thereon, was well founded, and should have been granted.

No violation of the police regulation, upon which the information was based, having been proven, it follows that the decision of the Police Court was erroneous, and its judgment must be reversed, with costs, and the case remanded with direction to discharge the defendant. It is so ordered.

Reversed.

JEROME HUBBARD, APPELLANT,
v.
REBECCA R. PERLIE.

PERSONAL INJURIES; SCOPE OF RECOVERY; PRACTICE.

1. Under the rule now prevailing, in actions for personal injuries, where the declaration is sufficient, damages occurring as the result of the injuries received down to the time of trial may usually be recovered.
2. The pleadings should give some notice to the defendant of the claims against which he is called to defend, but liberal effect is given thereto; and an allegation in the declaration that the pain and suffering still continue to exist and cause expense, held sufficient to extend the scope of the recovery, so as to permit of the introduction of testimony as to medical treatment received after the institution of the suit.
3. Exceptions taken to the charge of the court in an action for assault and battery held untenable.
4. Exceptions to certain paragraphs of the charge of the court indicated by letters on the margin, and thereafter printing the same in capital letters, will not be considered by this court.

No. 1469. Decided May 2, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 45,699, entered upon the verdict of a jury in an action of trespass. Affirmed.

Mr. Leo Simmons for the appellant.

Mr. E. B. Hay and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The declaration in this case was filed by the appellee as plaintiff, on October 13, 1902, to recover damages for injuries received from an assault and battery committed by the defendant on October 1, 1902.

After a statement of the facts constituting the assault, the declaration alleged that by reason of the wounds and injuries so received, plaintiff "became and was sick, disordered, and shocked as to her nervous system, and so remained and continued for a long space of time, to wit, for the space of the number of days intervening between the inflicting of said blows and committing of the said assault until the filing of this declaration, during all of which time the said plaintiff suffered and underwent great pain, which still continues to exist, and which caused said plaintiff to pay and expend money in and about endeavoring to be cured of the wounds, bruises, sickness, soreness, lameness, and disorder and nervous affection aforesaid, occasioned by the assault aforesaid, to the great damage and injury of the said plaintiff. Wherefore the said plaintiff claims that she is injured and has sustained damages to the amount of $10,000, which she claims besides costs."

Digitized by Google

The evidence on behalf of the plaintiff tended to show that she had occupied the house of defendant, as a tenant, for one year, ending September 1, 1902; that her niece lived with her, and defendant remained in the house, occupying a room reserved for that purpose in the lease; that prior to September the defendant married the said niece, and thereafter notified plaintiff to vacate the house; that she did so, leaving part of her furniture to be called for when wanted; that on October 1 she went to the house with a wagon to remove said furniture; that she was admitted to the house, and defendant's wife met her in the parlor; that the latter telephoned to defendant to come home; that she undertook to take a table from a room upstairs, when defendant's wife seized it to prevent its removal; that defendant came in unobserved by plaintiff and seized her and "slammed her against the sharp edge of the door;" that she became unconscious, but did not fall, and said to defendant, "You have taken the law in your own hands;" that defendant replied: "Damn the law; I will break your neck downstairs;" that he then slammed her against the other side of the door; that she remembered nothing thereafter until she went into the street; that she re-entered the house and fell in a rocking chair, and defendant brought her a glass of water; that defendant said, "Let this blow over." To which she replied: "This is the biggest mistake of your life;" that she returned home, suffered intensely, and was confined to her bed for thirteen days; that she had suffered constantly since and had had surgical treatment; that she had her back cauterized for the ailment resulting from the injury. Defendant objected to this as an expression of opinion, and excepted when overruled.

Dr. Morgan testified for plaintiff that he had been called within twenty-four hours, and saw bruises on plaintiff's right and left arms and on her right leg above the knee. She complained of feeling sore and of pains down the back and through the whole body. She was in a highly nervous, excitable state. The fee for his treatment and trouble would be about $250. In cross-examination, he said the bruises had every appearance of having been made within twenty-four hours. That plaintiff had subsequently called upon him and telephoned him often, and made herself a nuisance. That his estimate of fee would be chiefly for the annoyance given him and not for actual treatment. That he had once treated plaintiff for bruises some five years before, but these had no connection with those treated in October, 1902. Objection was made to the evidence of charge for services on the ground that it included those rendered after the declaration had been filed. This was overruled and exceptions noted.

Dr. Ruffin testified to having been consulted by plaintiff some four or five months before the trial. Found nothing the matter with her chest. There was a place on her collar bone, and there may have been a fracture there ten or twenty years before. She had a rapid pulse and was more or less nervous. Had been so ever since he had known her. He made no statement of any charge for services. Objection was also made to his testimony.

Dr. Ford Thompson, called by the plaintiff, testified that he had known her for years; that some years ago, prior to the assault, he had operated upon her for a tumor just below the knee joint; that she had consulted him some two months since for a painful spine; that he cauterized her, producing some ulcers; that her general condition did not appear to be bad; that in his opinion injury to the spine might have followed if she had been seized by a powerful man and thrown against the door-jam, but that such a condition would not always follow; that she had been under the treatment of a young physician who occupied the house; that he supposed his bill would be about $100 "if she is able to pay it." A like objection to this evidence was also made and overruled, with exceptions reserved.

Defendant's testimony tended to show that there had been considerable trouble with plaintiff, and defendant had requested her to stay away from his house. That he had told her when she got ready to move her furniture he would help her, but did not want her to come when he was not there. That defendant was telephoned for, went to the house and found plaintiff there. That plaintiff was abusing his wife. That he told plaintiff to leave or he would call a policeman. That he said, "You must go out of the house; you can not have this business around here." That in saying so he put his hand on her arm. That she said: "You have put your hands on me; you have taken the law in your hands." That he said, "I will call an officer," when she said: "I guess it is not necessary; I guess I will go." That she then went downstairs. That defendant went down and saw some chairs being loaded in a wagon. That he said: "Those chairs do not belong to you;" and took one and started to put it in the hall, when she took hold of it and said he could not have it. That she went away, but returned in a short time, and said she wanted to talk the matter over, and was excited and nervous and wanted some whiskey. That there was no whiskey, but defendant gave her some stomach bitters with a little water, which she drank. That she remained a while talking, asked defendant's wife to forgive her, and then went away. That he did not use any violence; did not push her against the door. That he told her this thing could not go on and took hold of her arm without violence; was provoked and excited but did not grip her arm. That he took her by the arm because she was trying to pull the table away from his wife at the time.

Digitized by Google

Defendant's wife testified to the abusive language of plaintiff, and to her message to her husband to come to the house because of it. She corroborated defendant's testimony as to the occurrences after his arrival.

Several witnesses were called who corroborated defendant in some substantial particulars, and several others impeached plaintiff's reputation for veracity.

Defendant asked fourteen special instructions to the jury, all of which were denied. The court then charged the jury generally and they returned a verdict for plaintiff for $600. From the judgment thereon defendant has appealed.

1. We are of the opinion that there was no error in permitting the introduction of the testimony tending to show medical treatment after the institution of the suit under the declaration.

Where the declaration is sufficient, damages occurring as the result of the injuries received down to the time of trial may be recovered now usually. The strictness of earlier rules in that regard does not now generally prevail. Unquestionably the pleadings should give the defendant some notice of the claims against which he is called to defend; but liberal effect is given thereto. The declaration in this case is inartificial, and at first glance would seem to warrant the inference that the damages are confined to the period between the commission of the assault and the date of filing; but we think that the subsequent allegation that the pain and expense still continue to exist and cause expense are sufficient to extend the scope of the recovery. R. R. Co. v. Patterson, 9 App. D. C. 423, 434: 25 Wash. Law Rep. 36; Ergott v. May, etc., 96 N. Y. 264, 277; West Chicago R. R. v. McCallum, 169 Ill., 240, 243. An amendment of the declaration, when the objection was made, could have removed all possible ground of objection.

2. The statement of the plaintiff that the ailment of the spine was the result of her injuries was not in the nature of an opinion, but rather an incidental statement of fact, and we are not prepared to say that it was error to admit it, under all the circumstances.

3. Several exceptions were taken to the charge of the court, none of which appear to us to be tenable.

With a correct definition of assault and battery, the question whether one had in fact been committed by the defendant was left to the determination of the jury, together with the ascertainment of its results. There was no evidence tending to show that the plaintiff had committed an assault upon the defendant or his wife that would justify the laying of violent hands upon her, and there was no error in so instructing the jury as matter of law. There was no error in charging the jury that the plaintiff had the right, under the defendant's own evidence, to remove her furniture in a quiet and peaceable manner. She was admitted to the house without objection, on the ground that the defendant was absent. It appears that defendant was readily reached by telephone. Part of the furniture had been taken out in a quiet and peaceable manner, and there is no evidence that the table she was about to remove when he entered, and at the time of the alleged assault, was not her property which she had the right to take away. There was no doubt unfriendly feeling between the parties existed.

Grant that plaintiff's conduct and remarks to defendant's wife may not have been altogether what they should have been, for he says that she was abusing, that is to say, not talking civilly to his wife, yet there was nothing to jusifty the violence with which he is charged. And whether or not he used such violence was left to the determination of the jury. In laying down the measure of damages the jury were limited to the consideration of the pain and suffering of the plaintiff and such expense as was necessarily caused thereby between the time of the alleged assault and the time of trial. No recovery for future damages was permitted. A part of the charge recites: "There is no testimony going to show that she was requested not to come there unless he was present, but upon that there is a conflict of testimony, and that question is for you to determine, to find if he made the request." It is apparent that the insertion of the word "no" in this paragraph is a clerical error, probably of the stenographer, from what follows; and it is clear that the jury could not have been misled by it. The practice pursued in this case of noting exceptions to certain paragraphs of the charge indicated by letters, A, B, etc., on the margin, and thereafter printing the same in capital letters is one not to be commended. Had not the exceptions also contained a reasonably sufficient statement of the grounds thereof without resort to marginal notes and capital type, they would not have been considered.

4. Fourteen special instructions were prayed on behalf of the defendant, and errors have been assigned on their refusal.

Of these it is sufficient to say that some were clearly erroneous conceptions of the law; others had no application to the evidence, and such as had are embodied in the general charge.

Finding no reversible error in the proceedings on the trial, the judgment will be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered.

Affirmed.

To excuse a person for assaulting another under the belief that he is a third person, upon whom an assault would be justified, it is held, in Crabtree v. Dawson (Ky.), 67 L. R. A. 565, that he must exercise the highest degree of care practicable under the circumstances to ascertain whether or not the person whom he is about to strike is in fact the one whom he believes him to be. The question of mistaken identity as justification for assault is the subject of a note to this case.

Taxation—Notice to Owner of Tax Sale.—After sale for delinquent taxes, a notice to the owner of the fee by the purchaser sufficiently complied with the statute, though addressed to him as "mortgagee." Bradley v. Williams (Mich.), 102 N. W. Rep. 625.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

JOHN CHERRY ET AL., APPELLANTS,
v.
ELIZABETH ANN WHALEN.

EQUITY; PAROL AGREEMENT; PART PERFORMANCE; SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT OF AGREEMENT.

1. Where a parol agreement was entered into between a father and daughter that if the latter would undertake the care of her mother (the wife of the former) for the remainder of her life, the father would purchase certain real estate, taking title in his own name but would enjoy only a life estate therein, and would convey the fee, by will or otherwise, to the daughter, and pursuant to such agreement the property was purchased, the daughter placed in exclusive possession thereof, paying rent to the father, and the daughter fully performed the obligation on her part to care for her mother, such acts constitute sufficient part performance of the parol contract to take it out of the operation of the Statute of Frauds.
2. Where, subsequent to the death of his wife, the father married again, and in violation of the agreement with his daughter conveyed the real estate in question to his second wife, held that equity would compel specific performance of the parol agreement.
3. A decree holding the deed to the second wife void and declaring her to be a trustee of the legal title to the premises during the life of her husband, with remainder in fee to complainant, and directing a conveyance of the property, etc., affirmed.

No. 1499. Decided May 28, 1905.

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 23,408, in suit for specific performance of a parol contract relating to land. Affirmed.

Mr. J. B. Archer, Jr., and Mr. C. H. Merrillat for the appellants.

Mr. Chas. A. Douglass, Mr. E. S. Douglass, and Mr. L. H. David for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from a degree of the Supreme Court of the District enforcing specific performance of a parol contract relating to land.

The bill was filed on July 12, 1902, by Elizabeth Ann Whalen against John Cherry, Mary Frances Cherry, his wife, and James B. Archer, Jr., trustee. Complainant is the daughter of defendant, John Cherry, and the wife of Mark T. Whalen.

The bill alleges in substance: That until June 1, 1897, complainant and her husband lived in a house known as No. 511 M street southwest, in the city of Washington; that in 1897 Mary Cherry, the wife of John Cherry and mother of complainant, was about seventy years of age, and was enfeebled by age and illness; that she suffered from vertigo and had sustained several attacks of paralysis; that in May, 1897, defendant John Cherry was serving as a night watchman, his employment keeping him from home at night; that he then came to complainant's house and told her that he would be compelled to engage some one to nurse his said wife and see to her care and comfort; that to induce complainant to undertake said care for the remainder of his wife's life, he proposed to purchase certain land and premises, known as sublot 138 in square 546, the house upon which (No. 1322 Four-and-a-half street southwest) adjoined the house then owned and occupied by him, to wit, No. 1324 Four-and-a-half street southwest; that he would take the title in his own name, but would enjoy only a life estate therein, and would convey the remainder thereof, either by will or otherwise, to complainant in fee simple, freed and discharged of incumbrances of every kind and character.

That complainant agreed to said proposition and the contract was then and there mutually agreed to, it being further agreed that complainant should occupy said house during the life of said Cherry, paying a monthly rental of $11 and the water rental in connection therewith. That in pursuance of said agreement the said Cherry purchased the said premises, taking a deed therefor to himself. That in pursuance of said agreement complainant removed from the house on M street to said No. 1322 Four-and-a-half street southwest, and entered upon possession with her family. That complainant then and there undertook and performed each and every part of the agreement on her part. That complainant, from said date until the death of her mother, on April 19, 1900, was constant in her attention to her, caring for her during the said period according to the true intent and meaning of her said agreement. That complainant's said mother required her care and attention during the hours of day and night, and that she rendered the same constantly. That in pursuance of said agreement, defendant Chery, about the — day of September, 1897, executed a will devising said land and premises to complainant, as he had agreed to do, in fee simple, but complainant is advised that he afterwards destroyed said will.

That in March, 1901, defendant Cherry married his co-defendant, then Mary Frances Hilton, and notwithstanding the fulfillment by complainant of her obligations under said agreement with him, on, to wit, July 7, 1902, executed and delivered to James B. Archer, trustee, a deed conveying said land and premises to him in trust, for a nominal consideration of $1, to convey the same in fee simple to his said wife, Mary Frances Cherry. That on the same day the said James B. Archer, Jr., conveyed the said land and premises in fee simple to said Mary Frances Cherry in pursuance of his said trust, and for a nominal consideration of $1. That both of said deeds were duly recorded. That by the execution and delivery of said deeds the defendant Cherry has disabled himself from performing his said agreement with complainant, and she will be injured in her rights and privileges in the future enjoyment of said land and premises through said conveyances, unless an injunction issue restraining the defendants from alienating or incumbering the same. That by the execution of the said deeds defendant Cherry has been guilty of fraud, and complainant is entitled to a decree declaring said Mary Frances Cherry a trustee holding the legal title in trust during the life of said Cherry, with remainder in fee to complainant.

The prayers for relief are in accordance with the allegations of the bill.

The defendants joined in demurrer to said bill on three grounds: First. That it does not appear that the alleged contract was in writing as required by the Statute of Frauds. Second. That the bill shows no performance of the alleged contract authorizing relief in contravention of the Statute of Frauds. Third. That the allegations of the bill show that the complainant has a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law.

Digitized by Google

This demurrer having been overruled, defendant Cherry answered under oath, admitting the general facts alleged in the bill, but expressly denying the agreement set out therein, the performance of services as alleged, and the commission of the fraud charged. In respect of the paragraph of the bill charging the execution and destruction of the will made by him in performance of his alleged agreement, he answered as follows: "This defendant is advised that it is not material or necessary to answer whether in September, 1897, or at any other time, he devised the property described in this cause to the complainant, or whether he afterwards destroyed any such will, but he denies that he ever devised said property to the complainant in pursuance of any contract whatever."

The answers of the other defendants were formal.

Testimony having been taken, the court entered a decree declaring the conveyances void in so far as inconsistent with, and in violation of the agreement between complainant and defendant Cherry, which was found to have been entered into as alleged; declaring Mary Frances Cherry to be a trustee of the legal title to the premises during the period of the life of John Cherry, with remainder over in absolute fee simple to complainant, her heirs and assigns forever, freed and discharged of all liens and incumbrances of every kind and character; directing the said Mary Frances Cherry to execute and deliver to the complainant a deed in due form conveying to her the fee simple title to said premises, freed of all encumbrances and subject to a life estate for the life of said John Cherry; and enjoining the defendants from conveying or incumbering said premises in any manner inconsistent with the said agreement between complainant and the said John Cherry. It was further decreed that defendants deliver the immediate possession of said premises to complainant subject to her obligation to pay the said rental of $11 per month, and the water tax thereon, during the lifetime of said John Cherry, and that they pay all the costs of suit.

From this decree the defendants have all appealed.

The demurrer was correctly overruled. The bill describes the premises with precision, and alleges a contract relating thereto that is certain in its terms and founded upon a valuable consideration. The purchase of the premises by the defendant for the occupation of the complainant, her admission into full and exclusive possession in accordance with the terms of the alleged contract, her performance of the entire obligation on her part, constitute sufficient part performance of the parol contract to take it out of the operation of the Statute of Frauds; that is to say, to prevent the statute from being converted into an instrument of fraud.

Peaceable possession alone, entered into under a parol contract to convey land, is generally regarded as sufficient ground for equitable relief, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, because, ordinarily, it works a material change in one's plans for the future.

Repudiation of the contract thereafter, followed by eviction as a trespasser or mere occupant at will, would produce conditions of loss and damage the computation of which, by a pecuniary standard, would be largely matter of conjecture. It is this element of uncertainty which justifies resort to the jurisdiction of equity for adequate and complete relief through its power to decree specific performance. In addition to this induction into possession with its ordinary consequences, the obligation of the complainant, which she fully performed, required the rendition of peculiar and delicate services without intermission for a period of nearly three years. Caring for an aged and practically helpless mother required constant acts of help and attention, sometimes of a disagreeable character, performed, too, with the affectionate consideration reasonably to be expected of a child that money is ordinarily powerless to purchase. The law furnishes no certain standard for the compensation of such services by the award of pecuniary damages.

The facts alleged in the bill make a case clearly within the rule governing in this jurisdiction. Whitney v. Hay, 15 App. D. C. 164: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 430; S. C. 181, U. S. 77. The citation of other authority is unnecessary.

The allegations of the bill having been held sufficient, it remains to consider whether they have been sustained by the evidence.

The following facts have been established beyond question: That plaintiff, with her husband and child, occupied a rented house a few blocks distant from the home of defendant Cherry; that this house was suitable as a residence, and was rented for $8 per month; that Mrs. Cherry was about 70 years of age and was subject to attacks of vertigo. Whether she suffered from paralysis is doubtful, but she was infirm, subject to fainting attacks, frequently confined to her bed, and in need of frequent close attention. That she had fallen during one of her attacks and dislocated or seriously injured her hip, and was compelled thereafter to use a crutch. That this condition, beginning before July, 1897, grew worse until her death in April, 1900.

That John Cherry was employed as a night watchman in one of the parks, and was compelled to be absent from his house generally from late in the afternoon until a late hour at night, and necessarily had to have some rest during a part of the day; that the only other occupant of his house was a granddaughter—the daughter of complainant—who was then about twelve years old and a daily attendant at one of the public schools; that the only other daughter of defendant was a married woman with several children, whose husband was in a bad state of health; that complainant for several years between the death of her first husband and her marriage with her present one had lived with her parents, assisting in the household work and doing other things; that prior to July, 1897, a kind-hearted neighbor, Mrs. Nolan, had been a frequent visitor of Mrs. Cherry, nursing and caring for her during her sudden attacks; that Mrs. Nolan removed in the summer of 1897 and was unable to continue her friendly services; that complainant and her husband were poor people, living upon the returns of their labor; that the husband was a street car conductor and had to walk to the car barns daily to take out the earliest or one of the earliest trains, and the removal to the new and more expensive place of residence took him further away therefrom; that complainant expended a little money and some labor in repairing and improving the premises. Without regard to the alleged contract, it clearly appears that John Cherry's chief motive at least for purchasing the house was to have complainant near her mother.

Digitized by Google

Complainant and her husband testified positively to the contract as alleged, and that they removed to and took possession of the new house in accordance with it. They also testified that complainant was constant and kind in nursing her mother and doing most of her house work from the time of entering into possession until the latter's death.

John Cherry positively denied entering into any agreement with complainant beyond that of leasing her the house at a reduced rate. He also denied the performance of any services for his wife beyond some occasional visits and attentions.

Complainant introduced several witnesses, who testified to declarations and admissions of her father tending to prove the existence of the agreement as alleged. Two of these, Mrs. Mary Connelly and Rosella Reeves, testified to statements made by defendant Cherry, to the effect that he had purchased the house for complainant so that she could care for and nurse her mother while he was away from home; that the latter was to care for her mother and to pay $11 per month as rent, which was the amount of monthly dues to the building association; and that the house was to be hers at his death.

These witnesses were neighbors and acquaintances of all the parties, and had no interest whatever in the subject-matter. Several other disinterested and unimpeached witnesses testified to declarations made by defendant Cherry in regard to the transaction. These did not testify to a full statement of the particular contract as did the two before mentioned, and the declarations which some of them recited might well be referred to a general intention to devise the property to his daughter without any actual contract so to do. At the same time they contradict the evidence of defendant, and tend, also, to establish the existence of some agreement or contract obligation to make such a disposition.

Evidence of declarations made by a party is often unreliable and unsatisfactory, and is to be scrutinized with care, but in the very nature of cases of this kind the contract or agreement sought to be established is generally to be inferred from the situation, circumstances, and relations of the parties, supported by evidence of verbal statements. Brown v. Sutton, 129 U. S. 238, 242; Whitney v. Hay, 15 App. D. C. 164, 186: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 430.

We agree with the learned trial justice that the testimony given of the specific agreement is strongly corroborated by the relations and conditions of the parties, by the circumstances surrounding the transaction between them, and by the evidence of the defendant's declarations. Moreover, the defendant's answer admits the execution of a will which would have carried out the agreement to the letter if unrevoked before his death; and notwithstanding his averment that it was not made in compliance with an agreement to that effect, no other satisfactory explanation of its execution at the time alleged is given.

It is contended, on behalf of the appellant, that the induction into the possession of the premises is referable to a contract of lease equally with that alleged in the bill. In this we can not concur. Had the complainant been in possession of the premises under a lease at the time of making the agreement, her possession would undoubtedly be referable thereto, and would not, therefore, constitute an act of part performance of a subsequent parol agreement to make title, that would prevent the operation of the Statute of Frauds. But there is no pretense that such was the fact. The payment of the special monthly rent charge was one of the stipulations of the general agreement, and consistent with it. It was part of the consideration which the complainant was induced to promise. It was considerably more than she was then paying for a suitable house, yet in the condition in which her mother was it was not probable that her special care and attention would be long required; and the defendant's advanced age made it appear probable that the duration of the rent-paying period could not be long. The house cost $2,400, and the fact that complainant, considering her limited means, was willing to give up a suitable and cheaper home and assume the burden of the greater rent charge, as well as the onerous duty of taking care of her mother, is one of the circumstances surrounding the transaction which tends to raise the inference that she acted upon an agreement that she should have a complete title upon the defendant's death. There is some conflict in the evidence as regards the amount and character of the care and attention which the complainant gave to her mother in the performance of her obligation. That she rendered considerable service is clear, and there is nothing tending to show that the mother was not satisfied with it to the last moment of her life. Upon the whole, we agree with the learned justice who rendered the decree that the weight of the evidence establishes the fact that complainant substantially and fairly complied with her undertaking.

Concurring in the conclusions both of law and fact we must affirm the decree entered, with costs. It is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Street Railroads—Rights of Pedestrians at Crossing.—A pedestrian, about to cross a street car track, who sees a car approaching, has no right to assume, of course, that the car will be controlled and the speed slackened. Toohey v. Interurban St. Ry. Co., 92 N. Y. Supp. 427.

Telegraphs and Telephones—Delay in Delivery.—Failure to deliver a telegram within a reasonable time raises the presumption of negligence—Arial v. Western Union Tel. Co. (S. Car.), 50 S. E. Rep. 6.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

SIMON P. W. DREW ET AL., APPELLANTS, v. ANDERSON HOGAN ET AL.

INJUNCTION; FAILURE TO GIVE UNDERTAKING; WAIVER; CONTEMPT.

1. By the terms of Equity Rule 42 of the Supreme Court of this District, which has the force of a statute, it is a condition precedent to the issuance of an injunction or restraining order, in a suit to enjoin the defendants from interfering in any way with the affairs of a local church, that an undertaking be executed and filed.
2. The requirement of the filing of an undertaking is not waived by the defendants merely by their appearing and pleading to the merits, unless, possibly, where it is shown affirmatively that they had knowledge that no undertaking had been executed and filed.
3. A restraining order issued without the requirement of the filing of an undertaking being complied with is inoperative and void; and an order adjudging the defendants in contempt because of their alleged violation of such order and imposing punishment therefor is likewise void.

No. 1513. Decided June 13, 1905.

APPEAL from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,572, adjudging the appellants guilty of a contempt in the violation of an injunction. Reversed.

Mr. Edwin Forrest, Mr. Hugh T. Taggart, and Mr. A. B. Webb for the appellants.

Mr. Jackson H. Ralston and Mr. Thomas L. Jones for the appellees.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal taken from an order adjudging the appellants guilty of a contempt, which consisted of a violation of certain preliminary restraining orders issued by the court below.

The suit is one originally brought by eight complainants, one of whom was a trustee and six were deacons of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, of Washington, D. C., against one Drew, who had been acting as the temporary pastor of said church, and four others, two of whom were trustees of said church. The original bill states that the complainants as officers are to manage the affairs of the church and have care and control of its property. Most of its averments consist of charges that Drew is unfit to be pastor of the church. That he has joined with others in an attempt to disrupt the church. The bill further alleges that the church has a membership of over one thousand, and asserts that the complainants are entitled to the exclusive charge of the affairs of the church, in the absence of the regular pastor, under the rules and regulations of the Baptist denomination, and that they represent three-fourths of the members of the church. It is alleged that Drew is not a fit person to be pastor of the church. The relief demanded is that the defendants be restrained from in any wise interfering with the affairs of the church and molesting or disturbing the good order and peace thereof, and that the defendant Drew be restrained from entering the church in the capacity of a minister of the gospel, or for any other purpose, and from interfering with the worship of the members of said church.

Upon this bill of complaint the defendant Drew was restrained, as prayed in the bill, until further order, if any, made by the court after hearing, which was fixed for the 1st day of April, 1904.

A few days thereafter leave was given to complainants to file an amended and supplemental bill without discharging or affecting the restraining order. Thereupon an amended and supplemental bill was filed, making the Metropolitan Baptist Church a party complainant, and alleging that Hogan, one of the original complainants, sued in his capacity as trustee of the church. The amended bill then charges that after the issue of the restraining order the defendants were guilty of unseemly conduct, and had invaded the church edifice, using more or less violence; that they undertook to hold a meeting on the evening of the 24th of March; that on the following evening, when a regular church meeting was to be held, the defendants, usurping the functions of the deacons, in an irregular and unlawful manner proceeded to elect Drew pastor for a term of six months. Further unlawful acts are alleged to have been committed by the defendants on the 26th and 29th of March. The relief prayed was that the defendants, their agents and associates, should be perpetually restrained and enjoined from interfering with the affairs of the church or disturbing the good order and peace thereof, and that the defendant Drew be restrained from acting as pastor, save with the permission of the board of deacons.

The answer of the defendants was filed the following day and contains, among other allegations, one setting forth that the complainants had been suspended from office at a meeting of the church held March 25, 1904. It denied that under the usages and customs of the church the deacons had control of the church property and affairs, and alleges that such management was in the body of the church, certain duties being delegated to the board of deacons and board of trustees, which duties were revocable at the will of the church; that the trustees and their successors held the title to the church property for the church, and that the deacons had duties which lay in the direction of church discipline and the spiritual welfare of the members; that both these boards had only power to investigate and report, the final decision being with the body of the church. The answer further gives the defendants' version of the trouble of the church and what occurred on the evening of the 24th of March, and alleges that the complainants represent only a small minority of the members of the church.

It is unnecessary at this time to set forth the averments of the affidavits submitted for the consideration of the court at the hearing of the order to show cause on April 4. It appears, however, that an affidavit presented on behalf of the defendants purports to have been executed by some four hundred members of the church. At the conclusion of the hearing the court continued the restraining order against Drew and restrained the defendants, Howard, Robinson, and Chapman, from in any wise interfering with the affairs of the church so as to molest the good order and peace thereof. A further order was made directing the board of deacons to call a meeting of the church for the purpose of extending a call to some person as pastor, and directed that all the members of the church should proceed to vote upon the names presented by the board of deacons, and providing that either party might apply for the appointment of three disinterested Baptist ministers of the District of Columbia, under whose direction the meeting was to be held.

Digitized by Google

We are not called upon at this time to consider any matter but that of the order adjudging the defendants in contempt, and have made reference to the general prior proceedings in the suit in order to consider more intelligently the question before us. It seems to us, however, that the controversy is one of those unfortunate and unseemly church quarrels, which too often arise and which the courts should have as little to do with as possible. It appears to us that there is a serious question whether the complainants are in a position to maintain their bill. So far as appears no authority was given them to bring the suit or to join the church as a party complainant, and the deacons do not appear, under the form of government applicable to Baptist churches, to be clothed with any power over the temporal affairs of such a church, and that if there be any authority in either the deacons or the trustees to control the church building, it seems to be with the trustees, only one of whom appears as a party complainant. There is much to show that the complainants do not represent a majority of the church members. Both parties recognize Hiscox and his work on church government as an authority as to the forms of government practiced among the various christian denominations. Hiscox classes the Baptists under the head of the "Independent" in which the governing power rests entirely with the people, i. e., the body of the members of each local church, each being entirely separate from and independent of all others so far as authority and control are concerned. He further says: "Baptists assert that each individual church is self-governing and independent of all other churches or bodies whatever as to the administration of its own affairs." He states that the deacons have charge of the sick and needy members and act as counselors and assistants to the pastor and, in the absence of the pastor, conduct the devotional meetings, etc. He states that they have no authoritative or dictatorial control over church affairs. Of the trustees, he says, that they should hold themselves bound by every consideration of morality to carry out the wishes of the church and to act under their instructions. As stated, it appears that the church had a membership of over one thousand, and it does not appear that any meeting of the church was ever held authorizing the commencement of the suit, and without such order the authority of the complainants to maintain this suit would be extremely questionable. In the leading case of Watson v. Jones, 80 U. S. 679, the court, in referring to the questions coming before the civil courts concerning the right to property held by ecclesiastical bodies, enumerates three classes of questions which came before the civil courts for consideration. One class embraces churches which are, as the court says, of "a strictly congregational or independent organization, governed solely within itself, either by a majority of its members or by such other organism as it may have instituted for the purpose of ecclesiastical government. . . . If the principle of government in such cases is that the majority rules, then a numerical majority of members must control the right to the use of the property."

It would seem that in the consideration of the question of where the power of control over the use of the church proper is lodged it rests with the congregation and not with the deacons. If any church board has control over the church property, it would be the trustees.

After the restraining order was continued against Drew and extended to the defendants, Howard, Robinson, and Chapman, an order was issued by the court, on May 21, 1904, directing the defendants and others to show cause why they should not be adjudged guilty of contempt of the orders of the court theretofore passed. The order was made returnable May 25, but there was no hearing until October 19, when the matter was heard upon the motion and supporting affidavits, the answers thereto, and affidavits in support thereof, and upon certain testimony given in open court. After such hearing the court adjudged the defendants Drew, Robinson, and Howard guilty, and sentenced Drew to imprisonment for a period of sixty days, and Robinson and Howard for the term of thirty days each. An appeal having been duly taken, the case came on for argument before us. It was heard upon the oral argument and brief filed on behalf of the appellants. No argument was made or brief filed for the appellees. In view of the conclusion at which we have arrived, it is unnecessary to determine whether the court arrived at a correct conclusion in determining upon the facts that the defendants were guilty of a violation of the injunction. We have, however read the testimony and find that it is very conflicting, but we are not as favorably placed as was the trial court to determine the facts, for the reason that some of the parties were examined in open court. We should be inclined to follow the court below on all questions of fact relating to the alleged violation of the restraining orders, were it necessary to consider them.

It is well settled that the United States courts have no power to punish a party for contempt for disobeying an order made without jurisdiction. Ex parte Fiske, 113 U. S. 113. In re Ayres, 123 U. S. 443, 485. Both of these cases have been cited many times with approval.

Objection to the jurisdiction of the court to pass the judgment and sentence was presented to the court below and forcibly urged before us. It is only necessary to refer to the objection, which we consider to be controlling. Equity 42 of the Supreme Court of the District declares that:

"Except when an injunction is to stay proceedings in an ordinary suit at law, or is against a judgment debtor who is made a defendant to a creditor's bill, no injunction or restraining order shall be issued except upon the precedent condition that the complainant execute and file in the case (with surety or sureties, if deemed necessary by the justice, and to be approved by him) an undertaking to make good to the defendant all damages by him suffered or sustained by reason of wrongfully and inequitably suing out the injunction, and stipulating that the damages may be ascertained in such manner as the justice shall direct, and that, on dissolving the injunction, he may give judgment thereon against the principal and sureties for said damages in the decree itself dissolving the injunction."

Digitized by Google

It appears that the court issued the restraining order of March 26, and continued it under the order of April 4, without requiring the filing of an undertaking, and it is therefore urged that these orders were inoperative and void by reason of the failure to require that an undertaking be filed. We think this point is well taken. By the terms of the rule it is made a condition precedent to the issuance of an injunction or restraining order, in a suit of this character, that an undertaking be executed and filed. This rule is binding upon the judge granting the injunction or restraining order and he has no right to waive the requirement. It is true that this protection is for the defendant and is for his benefit, and doubtless a party defendant may waive the requirement. We do not think, however, that this requirement is one that is waived merely by appearing and pleading to the merits, unless, possibly, where it is affirmatively shown that the defendant had knowledge that no undertaking had been executed and filed. The original order in this case was granted ex parte and the defendant had the right to presume that the court had obeyed its own rules. Parties to suits and their attorneys are justified in presuming that a court will not violate its own rules. Encyclopædia of Pleadings and Practice, vol. 18, p. 1265. In Wall v. Wall, Har. & G. (Maryland) 79, it was held that courts have no dispensing power over their rules and long established practice, and that a party to whose prejudice an innovation upon a rule of a court is made has a right to seek redress in the appellate court. This doctrine was recognized and affirmed in Abercrombie v. Riddle, 3 Maryland Chancery, 320, 325.

The statutes of nearly all of the States provide that no injunction or restraining order shall be granted until an undertaking has been executed and filed in the cause. The courts have uniformly, though perhaps not universally, held that this requirement is a condition precedent and can not be waived by the court, and that there is no presumption of a waiver by a party defendant; that any waiver must be proved and not presumed.

Rule 42, in our opinion, has the force of a statute. A duly authorized rule undoubtedy has the force of law, and is binding upon the court as well as upon parties to an action, and can not be dispensed with to suit the circumstances of any particular case. "The courts may rescind or repeal their rules without doubt, or, in establishing them, may reserve the exercise of discretion for particular cases, but the rule once made without any such qualification must be applied to all cases which come within it until it is repealed by the authority which made it." Thompson v. Hatch, 3 Pick. 512. This rule was quoted with approval in Rio Grande, &c., Co. v. Gildersleeve, 174 U. S. 603, where it was held that a rule of the Supreme Court of New Mexico, fixing the time in which motions could be made to set aside judgments, had the force of law, and could not be disregarded by a trial judge to whom no discretion was left.

We do not think the rule in question is analogous to a rule of a court requiring a nonresident plaintiff to give security for costs. Such a rule is not generally recognized as a condition precedent to bringing a suit and in most jurisdictions little or no attention is paid to it unless the defendant notifies the plaintiff to file the security, or files a motion for an order requiring such security to be given. In the former case it is made the duty of the court, as we read the rule, to see that the necessary undertaking is executed and filed, and it has been held that a defendant is not in contempt in refusing to obey an injunction until the undertaking has been given in any case in which it is required. Lamon v. McKee, 18 D. C. 446. As we understand the facts in the present case, the court itself in granting the restraining order nullified the rule by expressly providing that no undertaking be given. It would seem to us to be the plain duty of the court, in granting an injunction, to see that the rule requiring that an undertaking be executed be complied with so that in case of violation of the injunction the defendant could be punished. It is important to the due administration of justice that all proceedings over which the court has special control be regular so that no opportunity be given a party to successfully evade the orders made by the court.

We do not think the defendants by appearing and answering waived their right to raise the objection that the court was without jurisdiction to grant the injunction, having released the complainants from the express requirement of the rule that they execute and file a bond. Whenever it came to their knowledge that the requirement of Rule 42 had not been obeyed, they could avail themselves of the objection. There is no proof that they had any knowledge that the bond had not been executed and filed until the time when the question was first raised. Putting aside the question whether these complainants have any standing in court, we are of the opinion that the defendants were not in contempt in refusing to obey the injunction for the reason that the undertaking required by Rule 42 had not been executed and filed at the time when required, or at any later date.

It follows that the order of October 20, 1904, adjudging Simon P. W. Drew, George Robinson, and William Howard in contempt and imposing punishment therefor is void, and should be reversed with costs, and the case remanded with directions to proceed in conformity with this opinion.

Seduction—Artifices.—A combination of flattery, love making, and hypnotism held a sufficient predicate for a prosecution for seduction.—State v. Donovan (Iowa), 102 N. W. Rep. 791.

Digitized by Google

Marriage—Payment of Debt.

In Weld v. Weld, recently decided by the Supreme Court of Kansas (81 Pac. 182), it appeared that Judith R. Kidder executed and delivered to Augustus Weld her note for a sum of money, and secured its payment by a mortgage upon her real estate. Subsequently she married him in consideration of his parol agreement that the marriage should operate as a satisfaction of the note. After the marriage, however, he brought an action against her to recover on the note and to foreclose the mortgage. She pleaded payment, and the jury having found that the marriage had been performed in consideration of the agreement referred to, judgment was rendered for the defendant. On behalf of the plaintiff it was urged that the contract, being oral, was within the Statute of Frauds, and that marriage was not a sufficient consideration to remove the bar. In disposing of this objection, and in affirming the judgment for defendant, the Supreme Court said:

"It is true the Statute of Frauds provides that no action shall be brought to charge any person upon any agreement made upon consideration of marriage, unless the agreement upon which the action is brought, or some memorandum or note thereof, shall be in writing, and signed by the party to be charged therewith, or some other person by him or her lawfully authorized. Gen. St. 1901, sec. 3174.

"It is likewise true that authorities may be found to the effect that generally marriage is not a sufficient part performance to avoid the effect of the statute. But there is no question of part performance in this case. The contract was fully executed when the defendant married the plaintiff. Nothing further was to be done by either party to satisfy her obligation. The agreement was not that the plaintiff would, after marriage, deliver money or property or securities to the defendant in consideration of the marriage, or that he would after marriage execute and deliver to her legal documents affecting her property rights. It simply was that the debt should be paid when they were married. . . . The Statute of Frauds does not render void the verbal contracts to which it refers. They are valid for all purposes except that of suit. Stout v. Ennis, 28 Can. 713. The parties may, if they desire, perform them, and, when performed, the statute has no application to them. 29 A. and. E. Encycl. of L., 829, 941."

Bankruptcy—Mortgage Lien on After Acquired Property.—Trustee in bankruptcy held to have no greater rights against bankrupt's chattel mortgagee, taking possession of after-acquired property under the mortgage, because of an attachment and second chattel mortgage, both dissolved by the bankruptcy proceedings. Thompson v. Fairbanks, U. S. S. C., 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

Trial—Reopening Case After Granting Nonsuit.—After plaintiff has closed, and the court has announced that a motion for nonsuit will be sustained, it is discretionary with the court to allow plaintiff to reopen the case to introduce additional testimony.—Brooke v. Lowe (Ga.), 50 S. E. Rep. 146.

Specific Performance—Defect of Title.—Specific performance will not be denied a vendor on the ground that there are apparent defects in his title, where the evidence shows such defects to be dormant and of no validity against the property—Gibson v. Brown (Ill.), 73 N. E. Rep. 578.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Geo. S. Rees, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Bernard Landwer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 3d day of August, 1905. MARIA GERTRUDE LANDWER, 1582 Kingman Place, N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,041. Administration. 31-3t

Bendheim & Rothschild, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of William L. Elterich, Deceased.
No. 13,090. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Augusta Elterich, it is ordered this 3d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William O. Elterich, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 6th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. JOB BARNARD, Justice. Attest: M. J Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 31-3t

J. J. Waters, Attorney for Applicants
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In Re Estate of Stanley Pearce, Deceased. No. 13,062.
Administration Docket 34.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by George Pimper and Henry F. Kunkel, otherwise Henry Conkle, it is ordered this 3d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ellen Harris and Lottie Pendle, otherwise Lottie Penhale, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 5th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 31-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

G. X. McLanahan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, ancillary letters testamentary on the estate of George C. Anderson, late of the State of New York, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of August, 1905. JOSEPH R. LOTT, No. 115 N. Y. ave. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,080. Administration. 31-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Maria W. Richards, Deceased.
No. 13,089. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Charles H. Richards, as executor, it is ordered this 3d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Edmund C. Parker, of Guide Rock, Nebraska; Edmund C. Parker, of Stoughton, Massachusetts; Fred Parker, Helen M. Parker, Lucy P. Greene, John A. Parker, Mrs. Nathaniel B. Sherman, Gustavus Parker, George Parker, I. Frank Parker, John K. Parker, and Lizzie Lyman Parker, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 5th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. JOB BARNARD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 31-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Mary Knox Linn, Deceased.
No. 13,001. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by William S. Knox and The American Security and Trust Co., executors, it is ordered this 28th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William Linn, Philadelphia, Pa., and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 12th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice is published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 31-3t

H. Prescott Gatley, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of James Wallace Green, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 21st day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 28th day of July, 1905. MAGGIE GREEN, by H. Prescott Gatley, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,214. Administration. 31-3t

Legal Notices.

Harry G. Kimball, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of William H. Kaiser, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of August, 1905. HARRY G. KIMBALL, 416 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,075. Administration. 31-3t

Grahame H. Powell, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John Linguist, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of August, 1905. GRAHAME H. POWELL, 1744 G st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,085. Administration. 31-3t

E. H. Jackson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Seratus Heist, Deceased.
No. 13,052.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Virgil B. Jackson, it is ordered this 2d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Lizzie J. Schoot, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 31-3t

Wm. H. Baden, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Israel E. Kirk, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of August, 1905. AUGUST DONATH, Bureau of Pensions. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,963. Administration. 31-3t

Pennebaker & Jones, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John C. Barnet, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of August, 1905. JOHN PAUL JONES, 1331 F st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,081. Administration. 31-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wm. L. Ford, Attorney

Notice is Hereby Given That on the 29th day of July, 1905, a petition was filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, by the Bond Investment Company, a corporation created and existing under the laws of the United States applicable to the District of Columbia, stating that said company has abandoned the plan or business of having its stock guaranteed by the bonds of a certain insurance company and is now engaged exclusively in the purchase and sale of grain, that its present name is inapplicable to the business now conducted by the petitioner, and that the stockholders of the company at a special meeting in June, 1905, and the board of trustees in July, 1905, resolved to change the company's name to "The Lakes Grain Company;" and the prayer of the petition is for such change. BOND INVESTMENT COMPANY, by George F. Cram, President. 31-3t

Perri W. Frisby, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary L. Reddick, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of July, 1905. PHILIP STEWART, 117 D st. S. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,855. Administration. 31-3t

Jno. R. Shield, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a on the estate of Bridget Reardon, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or be ore the 31st day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 31st day of July, 1905. JAMES A. TOOMEY, 452 D st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,611. Administration. 31-3t

Alex. R. Mullowny, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Frank W. Godden, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of May, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 31st day of July, 1905. RUDOLPH KAUFFMANN, Evening Star Office. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,741. Administration. 31-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Bates Warren and Wm. L. Browning, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph Thomas Bender, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of July, 1905. HARRY FRANKLIN BENDER, 19 Barclay st., New York City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,064. Administration. 30-3t

Legal Notices.

Robt. E. L. White, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Engelbert Endres, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th daiy of July, 1905. JANE ENDRES, Tennallytown, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,056. Administration. 30-3t

Irving Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth Behrens Kenny, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 27th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of July, 1905. JOHN W. PILLING, 1416 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,832. Administration. 30-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia and the State of Maryland, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Wiggins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 26th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 26th day of July, 1905. J. HARRY WATERS, Laurel, Md.; JOHN W. FARRAR, 1303 3d st. N. W., City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,036. Adm. 30-3t

F. H. Stephens, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
John H. von Dohlen et al. v. Dora Hannemann et al.
Equity, No. 23,367.

Upon hearing the report of Luther L. Apple, trustee, stating that he has sold lots seventy-three (73) and seventy-four (74) in Eugene McC. Wardwell et al.'s subdivision of part of Pleasant Plains, as described in the original bill filed in this cause, to John B. Daish for the sum of twenty-nine hundred dollars ($2,900.00), it is, this 27th day of July, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 28th day of August, 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 30-3t

Irwin B. Linton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Sarah Guffin, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 26th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 26th day of July, 1905. SUSAN A. GUFFIN, HARRIET C. GUFFIN, 1938 First st. N.W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,988. Administration. 30-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

L. C. Williamson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Wilson Gregory, deceased. Administration. No. 12,948.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration, with the will annexed, on said estate, by Frances G. Gregory, it is ordered this 24th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to Anna Gregory Carl, Margaret Gregory Taylor, William H. Gregory, Mary Gordon, Phoebe Oliver, Edward F. Brooks, Mary Brooks, Lula Brooks, Katie Brooks, Webster Stauffer, Mary Myrtle Ranck, Walter Stauffer, Drew Stauffer, Mabel Brooks, and all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 28th day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Times once in each week for three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills 30-3t

Alfred B. Lind, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Samuel E. Loving, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of July, 1905. LUCY D. LOVING, 13 L st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,959. Administration. 30-3t

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frank L. Hanvey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of July, 1905. WALTER H. ACKER, 1420 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,061. Administration. 30-3t

Wolf & Rosenberg, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
T. Edward Clark, Complainant, v. Herman M. Schriener and Lucila Schriener, Defendants.
Equity No. 25,386.

Alexander Wolf and Percy Metzger, trustees, having reported to the court that they have sold the real estate beginning at a point on the south line of North S street at a distance of sixty-three and thirty-three hundredths (63.33) feet from Vermont avenue; thence running with the south line of north S street west forty-nine and ninety-one hundredths (49.91) feet; thence south sixteen and sixty-nine hundredths (16.69) feet; thence southeasterly and perpendicularly to the line of Vermont avenue fifty-four and eighty-three hundredths (54.83) feet; thence north thirty-nine and forty hundredths (39.40) feet to the beginning, containing thirteen hundred and ninety-nine and seventy-three hundredths (1399.73) square feet of land with improvements thereon, for the sum of seventeen hundred dollars ($1,700), subject to an incumbrance of three thousand dollars ($3,000), it is, this 27th day of July, A. D. 1905, by the court ordered, that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 21st day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. By the Court: WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 30-3t

Legal Notices.

THIRD INSERTION.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold lots one hundred and fourteen (114) to one hundred and twenty (120), both inclusive, in square five hundred and fifty-one (551), being Nos. 105 to 107 Reaves Court, to Cynthia E. Dowell for fifty-six hundred dollars ($5,600), cash, it is by the court this 18th day of July, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

Fountain Peyton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ida Larkins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. MARY THOMAS, 1107 ½ st. Court N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,044. Administration. 29-3t

Nelson Wilson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Massachusetts, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Otis B. Bullard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. HENRY M. CUTLER, Holliston, Mass. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,965. Administration. 29-3t

Victor H. Wallace, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Inez L. Rosenbaum v. Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman. Equity. No. 25,131.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the ground of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Richard W. Rosenbaum and Rose Illman, cause their appearances to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This notice is to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

C. Clinton James, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John H. Richardson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of July, 1905. C. CLINTON JAMES, 416 5th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,061. Administration. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Luella H. Bush, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers there of legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. CLARA R. BUSH, 1537 I st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,046. Administration. 29-3t

---

Edward S. Moores, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ebenezer W. Patton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of May, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. JOHN R. BERG, 319 F st. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,912. Administration. 29-3t

---

R. R. Horner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of David Lee, Deceased.

No. 13,060. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia I. Davis, it is ordered this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to all the heirs at law, unknown, and next of kin, and all others claiming interest in his estate, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Harry M. Packard, Complainant, v. William Brown et al., Defendants. No. 24,604. In Equity. Doc. 55.

Ralph P. Barnard, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate involved in the above entitled cause, and being, to wit, lot one (1) in block twenty-five (25) of John Sherman, trustee's, subdivision of part of "Mount Pleasant" and "Pleasant Plains," now known as Columbia Heights (with the exception of the east 26.84 feet front by the full depth thereof of the said lot taken by the District of Columbia in the extension of Eleventh street), as per plat of said subdivision as the same appears of record in the office of the surveyor for said District, in book Governor Shepherd's, at page 137, said lot being unimproved, to Ernest L. Schmidt for the sum of eleven hundred dollars ($1,100.00), and the purchaser having tendered himself ready to comply with the terms of sale. It is by the court, this 17th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that upon compliance with the terms of sale, the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 17th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Legal Notices.

H. Anton Heitmuller, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charlotte Hasselbusch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of July, 1905. WM. HASSELBUSCH, 20 P st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,048. Administration. 29-3t

---

Stuart McNamara, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Benjamin T. Rhodes, Deceased.

No. 12,979. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Sarah Josephine Rhodes, it is ordered this 18th day of July, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alice I. Williams, of Deruyter, Madison Co., New York, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 22d day of August, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WRIGHT, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 29-3t

---

J. Clarence Price, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

In Re the Estate of Agnes M. Beuchert, Deceased.

No. 12,867.

Upon consideration of the report of John A. Ruppert and Lena Beuchert, executor and executrix, respectively, of said estate, stating that they sold at public auction sublot one hundred and twenty-six (126), in square eight hundred and sixty-one (861), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Zula H. and Richard W. Burkhart for the sum of three thousand six hundred and twenty-five ($3 625.00) dollars, and also that they sold sublot numbered five (5), in square numbered nine hundred (900), in said city, to Mary Buhler for the sum of three thousand four hundred and fifty ($3,450.00) dollars, it is, by the court, this 18th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sales, and each of them, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 25th day of August, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 29-3t

---

Malcolm Hufty, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Lawrence Hufty, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, or Alienees of John Law, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,506.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of the complainant to original lot one (1), in square seven hundred and sixty-eight (768), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple in the complainant by reason of adverse possession. On motion of complainant, by Malcolm Hufty, his solicitor, it is, by the court, this 19th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, or alienees of John Law, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty days from the first publication of this order, good cause therefor having been shown to the satisfaction of the court, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said return ay. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Sarah E. Frankland et al. v. Richard Frankland.

Equity, No. 25,045.

George C. Aukam, trustee, having reported to the court the sale of real estate known as part of lot 11 in square 403 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, with the improvements thereon, being premises number 916 8th street northwest, in said city, and being the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, to Robert V. White for the sum of five thousand and thirty dollars ($5,030.00), it is by the court, this 14th day of July, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown in this court on or before the 20th day of August, 1905: provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

Sidney F. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Anna J. King, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of July, 1905. A. VIRGINIA CHESSMAN, 1829 N. Gratz st., Phila., Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,926. Administration. 29-3t

---

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

John Shrughrue et al., Complainants, v. Rudolph Pfeil et al., Defendants. Equity. No. 25,894.

On motion of complainants, by Lester & Price, their attorneys, it is, this 14th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Rudolph Pfeil, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to have appointed trustees in the place and stead of Henry Jordan and John W. Schaefer, both deceased, to execute the powers created and vested in said deceased trustees by a certain deed of trust, recorded in liber 1581, folio 410, of the land records of the District of Columbia. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Fred. C. O'Connell, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

F. L. Siddons, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term for Equity Business.

Elizabeth B. Hallman, v. Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, Alias Emma Harvey. Equity Number 25,465. Docket 56.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The object of this suit is to procure a dissolution of the bonds of marriage existing between the complainant and defendant Ellwood L. Hallman on the ground of alleged adultery by said defendant. On motion of the complainant, it is this 19th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ellwood L. Hallman and Emma La Rue, alias Emma Harvey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, a newspaper published in the city of Washington, before said fortieth day. WRIGHT, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 29-3t

---

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Legal Notices.

FOURTH INSERTION.

J. B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

John Welsh, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Andrew Link, Deceased, Defendants. Equity. No. 25,428.

The object of this suit is to quiet the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-three (33) in Andrew J. Miller's subdivision of lots in square numbered eighty-four (84), as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in liber 20 at folio 48. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is this 12th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Andrew Link, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of September, 1905, otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based on the bill filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 28-4t

---

FIFTH INSERTION.

Hallam & Hallam, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Calvin Tibbs, Complainant, v. James Bennett's Unknown Heirs, Defendants.

Equity. No. 25,219. Doc. No 56.

The object of this suit is to declare the title of complainant to lot two (2) in square five hundred and ninety-nine (599), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to be good in fee simple by adverse possession. On motion of the complainant, it is this 29th day of May, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of James Bennett, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. J 2-9, J 7-14, a 4-11

SIXTH INSERTION.

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Thomas S. Evans, Complainant v. David Peter et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,299.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of complainant to part of lot nine, square number one hundred and forty-one, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, beginning for the same at the southwest corner of said lot, and running thence north 28 feet 6 inches to the center of the dividing wall between two frame houses on said lot, thence east 115 feet 6 inches, thence south 28 feet 6 inches to the south line of said lot, thence west 115 feet 6 inches to place of beginning. On motion of the complainant, it is this 23d day of May ordered that the defendants, David Peter, Thomas Peter, Robert Peter, Jr., Trustees; John Brown, John Innis Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, George Gibbs, Walter Channing, Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, and Ramsey McHenry, if they be living, and the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them as are dead, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, if they be living; and that the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of such of them who are dead cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said first return day, and twice a month for three successive months prior to the said latter return day (the last publication to include one of the former publications) in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. may 26; June 2-9; July 7-14; aug. 4-11

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 32

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - - AUGUST 11, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 497
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
William L. Jones, appellant, v. Delia J. Rutherford, executrix, etc. 498
Albert Fields, plaintiff in error, v. The District of Columbia 501
Harry G. Wilson, plaintiff in error, v. The District of Columbia 502
Charles W. Critchfield et al., appellants, v. George J. Easterday, executor, etc., et al. 504
Legal Notices 507

Death of Judge Andrew Wylie.

Judge Andrew Wylie, who, prior to his retirement in 1885, served for twenty-three years on the bench of the Supreme Court of this District, died at his residence in this city on Tuesday, August 1, 1905, at the advanced age of 91 years. Judge Wylie was born in Washington County, Pa., in February, 1814. After his admission to the bar, in 1837, he practiced law in Pittsburg until his removal in 1848 to Alexandria, Va., when he opened an office in this city. He was appointed by President Lincoln as a member of the Supreme Court of this District in 1863, and during the twenty-three years of his service on its bench achieved a remarkable reputation as a judge and came to be recognized as one of the leading jurists of his day. He presided at the trial of the "star route" cases, and in many other of the most important cases decided by the courts of this District. He was utterly fearless in the discharge of his duty as a judge, and it is related of him that in the "star route" cases he imposed a fine of $1,000 on Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, the leading counsel for the defense, for contempt of court in asking and securing an answer to a question that had previously been ruled out by the court. His knowledge of the law was profound, and it is stated that no decision of his was ever reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States. Judge Wylie was held in the highest esteem by all who were privileged to know him, as well as by those familiar with the service rendered by him on the District bench.

Ecclesiastical Controversies.

It is not often that ecclesiastical controversies get into the courts, and it is perhaps well that this is so. In the case of Drew et al. v. Hogan et al., reported in our last issue, an interesting question relating to the government of local Baptist churches was raised, though its decision was not necessary to the determination of the question presented by the appeal. It was contended on behalf of the complainants that the affairs of the church were vested in the hands of the deacons' and trustees' boards, there being no regular pastor in charge, to the practical exclusion of the rest of the congregation, but this contention was denied by the defendants. The brief on behalf of the appellants (defendants below), which was in large measure prepared by Mr. Hugh T. Taggart, the leading counsel, contains an elaborate discussion of the question, and while, as stated, the determination of this question was not necessary to the decision of the case, the opinion of the Court of Appeals intimates a conclusion favorable to the contention of the appellants. Those interested in church controversies, especially among denominations of the democratic polity of the Baptists, will find the brief an able contribution upon a subject which has been a vexatious one for the courts.

The Court of Appeals of New York, in the case of Viemeister v. White, 72 Northeastern Reporter 97, rules that courts will take judicial notice of the fact that it is a common belief of the people of the State that vaccination is a preventive of smallpox, and that, this being the case, the public health law, excluding children not vaccinated from the public schools, is enacted within the reasonable exercise of the police power of the State, and that it is not a violation of that provision of the State constitution which provides for free common schools wherein all children of the State may be educated, nor is it a violation of that provision of the State constitution which guarantees to every citizen the protection of his rights, privileges, and liberty.

A park regulation to the effect that no person shall ride or drive at a rate of speed exceeding eight miles an hour is held by the Massachusetts court in Commonwealth v. Crowninshield, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 963, to be sufficiently definite to support a criminal prosecution for operating an automobile at an excessive rate of speed on the ground that the person who is controlling the motive power of the machine must be said to be "driving" it.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

WILLIAM L. JONES, APPELLANT,

v.

DELIA J. RUTHERFORD, EXECUTRIX, ETC.

SERVICE BY PUBLICATION; EQUITABLE LIEN; TREASURY DRAFT.

An agreement between a party having a claim against the United States and an attorney provided for prosecution thereof by the latter, giving the attorney a compensation of one-third the amount allowed, payment of which was expressly made a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, etc., drawn in payment thereof. Held, that a draft drawn in favor of the claimant in payment of the claim is personal property within the District of Columbia, within the meaning of section 105 Code, D. C., so as to authorize service by publication upon the non-resident claimant in a proceeding by the personal representative of the attorney for an injunction to restrain the claimant from receiving and the Treasurer of the United States from delivering any draft or warrant on account of the claim, for a receiver to receive such draft, and to have an equitable lien declared upon such draft and its proceeds in favor of complainant.

No. 1558. Decided June 13, 1905.

APPEAL (specially allowed) from a decree pro confesso of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,666, entered upon service by publication. Affirmed.

Mr. A. A. Birney for the appellant.

Mr. Chas. C. Tucker for the appellee.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a special appeal allowed from a decree pro confesso rendered by the Supreme Court of the District, based upon service of process by publication.

The suit is one in equity for an injunction and receiver, and to enforce a specific equitable lien, and it arises from the following facts: The steamboats Champion and Robert Campbell were destroyed at Memphis, on the Mississippi River, in the year 1863 during our civil war, while in the service of the Government of the United States, into which they had been forcibly impressed. The Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburgh, in the State of Pennsylvania, had an insurance upon them, for which, in 1883, it made claim against the United States. That company then, however, had only a theoretical existence. It had practically passed away before that time, having previously made an assignment of all its property rights and effects to the appellant, William L. Jones, who was designated as its receiver, although he seems to have received his appointment, not from the action of any court, but from the voluntary act of the shareholders of the company, who, indeed, would appear to have abandoned the affairs of the company to him. In 1883 Jones, as receiver of the company, contracted with Gen. Allan Rutherford, formerly third auditor of the Treasury, and then a practicing lawyer in this city, to prosecute his claim, as receiver of the company, against the United States for the loss of the two steamboats, and agreed to give him as compensation for his professional services in such prosecution a sum equal to one-third of the amount that might be allowed upon the claim, the payment of which was in express terms made a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness that might be paid or issued therefor, and it was stipulated that this agreement for compensation was not to be affected by any services performed by the claimant himself, or by any other attorneys employed by him.

By the efforts of Rutherford an allowance of $5,000 on account of the steamboat Champion was made by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department on December 20, 1884, of which Jones was duly notified, and for which he wrote his acknowledgment to Rutherford; but an appropriation by Congress for its payment was needed. This the Congress refused to make. Subsequently the claim, with other similar claims, was referred back to the accounting officers of the Treasury for reexamination, and it was by them disallowed. Nothing seems to have been done thereafter in the matter for several years, and there is some indication that Rutherford abandoned the claim as hopeless. But it appears to have been revived in 1903. In that year Jones contracted with another attorney to collect the amount for him for a compensation of 50 per centum of the claim; and thereafter Congress was induced to appropriate $5,000 in payment of the amount of the claim. This was by an act of April 27, 1904.

In the mean time Allan Rutherford had died and the appellee had qualified as executrix under his will. The appellant, as she alleges, having ignored her and the rights of Rutherford's estate, she instituted the present proceedings by filing her bill in equity in the Supreme Court of the District against William L. Jones, as receiver of the Eureka Insurance Company, and the Treasurer of the United States, with whom the company itself was afterwards joined by an amendment, for an injunction to prevent Jones from receiving and the Treasurer from delivering any draft or warrant on account of the claim, for a receiver to receive such draft or warrant from the United States, and to have an equitable lien declared upon such draft or warrant and its proceeds in favor of the complainant.

There was a preliminary restraining order issued in accordance with the prayer of the bill, and two receivers were appointed forthwith by the court to demand and receive the draft from the United States. There was personal service of process upon the United States Treasurer, and he appeared and demurred to the bill. What became of the demurrer does not appear from the record before us, but it is understood that it yet remains undisposed of. Seven days after the filing of the bill a general appearance was entered for Jones by his later attorney who had prosecuted the claim, and this attorney asked also to be allowed to intervene for his own interest; and some proceedings were had in pursuance of this general appearance. But subsequently upon allegations that Jones had not authorized any such appearance for him, it was stricken out at the cost of the attorney. Whereupon the complainant was compelled, if she would maintain her suit, inasmuch as Jones and the insurance company were non-residents of the District, to resort to an order of publication against them.

An order of publication was accordingly

Digitized by Google

issued. Jones and the Eureka Insurance Company failed to respond to it, and in due time a decree pro confesso was entered against both of them. Thereupon, however, but before the entry of the decree pro confesso, the appellant Jones, appearing specially for the purpose, moved the court to vacate the order of publication on the ground, as alleged, that the court was without jurisdiction to make such order under the bill of complaint, but the motion was overruled, and five days afterwards the decree pro confesso was entered. Then he sought and was allowed the present special appeal, which, while in the printed record it purports to have been from the decree pro confesso, must be assumed to have been intended to be taken from the order refusing to vacate the notice of publication.

As already stated, the appellant William L. Jones and the Eureka Insurance Company are non-residents of the District of Columbia and residents of the State of Pennsylvania; and the question sought to be raised on the present appeal is whether they have any rights of property in the District of Columbia, or within the jurisdiction of the courts of this District, so as to subject them under our code to be cited to appear here by notice of publication.

Section 105 of the Code of Law of this District, which in the main is the same as section 787 of the previously existing Revised Statutes of the United States for the District of Columbia, itself taken from the act of Congress of February 22, 1867 (14 Stat. 403), provides as follows:

"Publication may be substituted for personal service of process upon any defendant who can not be found and who is shown by affidavit to be a non-resident, or to have been absent from the District for at least six months, or against the unknown heirs or devisees of deceased persons, in suits for partition, divorce by attachment, foreclosure of mortgage and deeds of trust, the establishment of title to real estate by possession, the enforcement of mechanics' liens and all other liens against real or personal property within the District, and in all actions at law and in equity which have for their immediate object the enforcement or establishment of any lawful right, claim, or demand to or against any real or personal property within the jurisdiction of the court."

Under the contract between the appellant William L. Jones and the deceased Allan Rutherford, the compensation to be paid to the latter for his professional services was in express terms made a lien upon the claim and upon any draft, money, or evidence of indebtedness which might be issued therefor; and the purpose of the present suit is to enforce this lien and the lawful claim of Rutherford, if the same can be established, against such draft or evidence of indebtedness. It is very clear, therefore, that this suit falls within the class of suits wherein notice by way of publication is authorized, provided that the draft drawn in favor of the appellant can be regarded as personal property within the District of Columbia, or within the jurisdiction of the courts of the District. Now, why should it not be regarded as such personal property? It is drawn here by the Treasurer of the United States; it is physically present here; it is deliverable here; it has no other situs. It is true it may be made payable elsewhere, in New York, or New Orleans, or San Francisco, or at any other place where it may suit the claimant and the officers of the Government, but it is not apparent how any such circumstance as that can affect the character of the paper as personal property in this District, while it is physically present here. It could become the subject of larceny in this District by being stolen here. It could become the subject of forgery by being fraudulently altered within the limits of the District. If it were improperly withheld by the Treasurer the courts of this District would constitute the proper forum wherein its delivery could be enforced. Mandamus would lie to compel its delivery to the person entitled to receive it; injunction would lie to prevent its delivery to a person not entitled to receive it.

Let us assume the conditions to be changed in the present instance, and that the Treasurer had announced to the appellant his intention to deliver the draft to the appellee. Wherein would lie the remedy of the appellant, upon the assumption that he regarded such proposed action of the Treasurer as unjust and without warrant of law? Undoubtedly the remedy would be by just such a suit as the present in the courts of the District of Columbia—not merely because the Treasurer is here where he may be personally served with process, but because the draft, the subject-matter of controversy, is also here and is capable of being delivered here to the person lawfully entitled to receive it. Why should not the same remedy lie in favor of the appellee, or of any person similarly situated?

The case before us, reduced to its ultimate analysis, is this: Two persons are claiming the same draft in the hands of the Treasurer, in which the United States have no longer any interest. The Treasurer, we may presume, is ready and willing to deliver it to the proper person. One of the two demands it because it is drawn in his favor, and he is the person ultimately entitled to receive the money. The other person demands it because, by reason of the convention between him and the other party, he is entitled to a lien upon it—which means that he is entitled to receive and to hold it until a specified claim of his for compensation has been paid and satisfied. Both have the right of possession, but the right of the lien holder is for the time being the paramount right.

The right of the appellee to her lien, it may be remarked, is not contested at this stage of the proceedings, if the draft is property subject to a lien. Such right is not affected by section 3477 of the Revised Statutes of the United States forbidding the assignment of claims against the United States, or of any interest therein, for here there has been no such assignment. The agreement between the parties was that while the draft, as usual in all such cases, should be drawn in favor of the claimant, it should be delivered to the attorney for its prosecution and held by him until his fee or charge thereon should be paid. There is nothing in the statute to forbid such an arrangement as this.

But the contention of the appellant is that "a claim against the United States has no locality, and the debt, if it exists, is not property of the creditor within the District of Columbia, and in support of this contention he relies upon various decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, which are supposed to establish it. We are of opinion that the proposition put forward by the appellant has no application to the present case, and that the decisions in question have no reference to such a condition as exists here. There is no question here of any claim against the United States by any one, or of any indebtedness due by the United States to any one. The claim and the indebtedness have been fully settled. The United States have drawn their draft for the payment of the indebtedness, which is the usual mode of payment, and they are ready to deliver that draft. It is not a question whether a claim against the United States, or an indebtedness by the United States is property here or elsewhere. The question is as to the right to the manual possession of a draft drawn by the United States, and ready to be delivered to the person lawfully entitled to its possession. The question is whether that draft is property within the District of Columbia as between two rival claimants for the possession of it. The possession of this draft is the matter in controversy between the parties, and we are of opinion that it is property in this District. It certainly has no other situs, and if it is property at all it is property in the District of Columbia.

Digitized by Google

The cases of Vaughn v. Northup, 15 Pet. 1; Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, and Wyman v. Halstead, 109 U. S. 654, cited on behalf of the appellant, are readily distinguishable from the present case. In the case of Vaughn v. Northup suit was sought to be maintained in the District of Columbia by local creditors of a deceased person, an inhabitant of Kentucky during his lifetime, against an administrator duly appointed in that State, who had received from the United States a sum of money to the deceased for military services. The contention on behalf of the local creditors was that the money due to the deceased from the United States was local assets at the seat of Government. This contention was repudiated; and it was held that the local creditors could not maintain suit against the foreign administrator outside of the jurisdiction of the court which appointed him.

In the case of Mackey v. Coxe, 18 How. 100, the suit was against the surety on an administration bond by persons entitled to distributive shares of the estate of a deceased person. Administrator had been duly granted in the Cherokee nation. The deceased had a claim against the United States. An agent of the administration came to Washington to collect the claim. It was suggested to him by the officials of the Treasury Department to take out letters of administration in this District. He did so; and the amount of this claim was paid to him. As administrator in the District he immediately turned over the fund to himself as agent for the administrator in the Cherokee country. The fund was lost in some way; and suit was instituted upon the administration bond given in this District. It was held that the suit could not be maintained.

In the case of Wyman v. Halstead, 109 U. S. 654, it was sought by proceedings in mandamus in the District of Columbia to compel the Treasurer of the United States to pay an administrator appointed in the District of Columbia the amount of some drafts drawn to the orders of certain persons, deceased at the time of the suit, who were at the time of their death residents of the State of Tennessee, wherein administration was also had on their estates at the same time. The Treasurer refused to pay the drafts without the indorsement of the administrators in Tennessee, and he was sustained in his action by the Supreme Court of the United States.

These are all plainly cases of rival administrations, wherein it was held that administration at the place of death of the deceased person was the proper and paramount administration which the Treasury officials should recognize and that, in antagonism to such administration, there was no room at the seat of Government for a rival or a different administration by reason of any supposed situs of assets in this District. Plainly there is no case of this kind before us here.

It was said by Mr. Justice Story in the case of Vaughn v. Northup and reported by Mr. Justice McLean in the case of Mackey v. Coxe, each delivering the judgment of the court:

"The debts due from the Government of the United States have no locality at the seat of government. The United States in their sovereign capacity have no particular place of domicil but possess in contemplation of law an ubiquity throughout the Union, and the debts due by them are not to be treated like the debts of a private debtor, which constitute local assets in his own domicil. On the contrary, the administrator of a creditor of the Government, duly appointed in the State where he was domciled at the time of his death, has full authority to receive payment and give a full discharge of the debt due to his intestate in any place where the Government may see fit to pay it.

"If any other doctrine were to be recognized, the consequence would be that before the personal representative of any deceased creditor, belonging to any State of the Union, would be entitled to receive payment of any debt due by the Government, he would be compellable to take out letters of administration in this District for the due administration of such assets. Such a doctrine has never yet been sanctioned by any practice of the Government, and would be full of public as well as private inconvenience. It has not, in our judgment, any just foundation in the principles of law."

A careful consideration of this enuciation of the Supreme Cout will show that it holds merely that an indebtedness by the United States to a deceased person does not create such a status of assets at the seat of the Federal Government as to require the issue of letters of administration here to procure its collection, and that payment of such indebtedness is properly made to the administrator at the place of domicil of the deceased. In our opinion it does not at all affect the question now before us. Here there is no question of different administrations, or of principals and ancillary administration, or of any administration whatever. There is question simply of the right to the present possession of a draft, and of the right to hold it as security until a certain obligation or liability is discharged. The adverse claimants are both sui juris, and may sue and be sued anywhere wherever they are found, and the present custodian of the draft, the Treasurer of the United States, can properly be made amenable for the disposition of it only to the courts of the District of Columbia.

Digitized by Google

The appellant by giving a lien upon the draft authorized Rutherford to receive it and to hold it and to take all the necessary and proper steps, by suit or otherwise, to reduce it into his possession. He thereby gave to the instrument, even if it did not otherwise have it, a situs and a situs in the District of Columbia, which it is proper to enforce by suit. He can not be permitted to nullify that lien by requiring the present delivery of the draft to himself.

We are of opinion that the court below was right in issuing the notice of publication in this case, and that its order to that effect should be affirmed with costs. And it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

ALBERT FIELDS, PLAINTIFF IN ERROR, v. THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

VAGRANCY; PERSONS OF EVIL LIFE; EVIDENCE.

Proof that a defendant made his living in part by playing the piano at night in houses of ill fame, held not sufficient to support a conviction upon an information charging him with being "a person of evil life and fame," in alleged violation of the act of Congress of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. 723).

No. 1545. Decided June 13, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Reversed.

Mr. Thos. L. Jones, Mr. A. W. Scott, and Mr. M. T. Clinkscales for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. B. Duvall and Mr. A. L. Sinclair for the defendant in error.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellant was arraigned in the Police Court of the District upon an information against him wherein he was charged with being "a vagrant, an idle and disorderly person, a person of evil life and fame, a person without visible means of support, a person repeatedly in and about the streets, avenues, alleys, roads, and highways, to wit, O street northwest," in alleged violation of the act of Congress of July 8, 1898 (30 Stat. 723), entitled "An act to amend an act for the preservation of the public peace and the protection of property in the District of Columbia, approved July 29, 1892" (27 Stat. 322). The portion of the act alleged to have been violated is in the following terms:

"That all vagrants, all idle and disorderly persons, persons of evil life or evil fame, persons who have no visible means of support, persons repeatedly drunk in or about any of the streets, avenues, alleys, roads, highways, or other public places within the District of Columbia, persons repeatedly loitering in or around tippling houses, all suspicious persons, all public prostitutes, and all persons who lead a lewd or lascivious course of life, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not to exceed forty dollars, or shall be required to enter into security for their good behavior for a period of six months. Said security shall be in the nature of a recognizance to the District of Columbia, to be approved by the court, in a penalty not exceeding five hundred dollars, conditioned that the offender shall not, for the space of six months, repeat the offense with which he or she is charged, and shall in other respects conduct themselves properly."

The defendant first demurred to the information and the demurrer was overruled. He then moved to quash the information and this motion also was overruled. The purpose of these two proceedings was to raise the question of the vagueness and therefore invalidity of the enactment. Next, the defendant pleaded that he was not guilty and demanded a trial by jury, but the demand was refused. To all these rulings of the trial court exceptions were duly reserved.

Trial was then had. The testimony adduced on behalf of the prosecution was that of two policemen, who testified in substance that the defendant was known as a "professor;" that he made his living by playing the piano in houses of ill-fame in that malodorous part of the city of Washington commonly known as the "Division;" that he played there only at night, and charged for his services $1.50 a night in addition to what he received by collections; that the prostitutes would sing and dance while he played, and that he and other piano players in that section were hired to play for the entertainment of the guests.

During the cross-examination of one of these witnesses the counsel for the defendant inquired upon which of the charges contained in the information the defendant was being tried, and the counsel for the prosecution replied, "that which charged him with being a man of evil life," and that he abandoned all of the others.

At the close of this testimony motion was made on behalf of the defendant for his discharge on the ground that the testimony failed to disclose that he was guilty of any of the offenses charged against him. The motion was overruled and exception reserved.

Thereupon the father and brother of the defendant were called to testify on his behalf. Their testimony was in substance that the defendant was a married man and lived with his wife in a house on Madison street; that he worked every day for a living as the driver of a grocery wagon and supported his family, and that he was a piano player.

This seems to have been all the testimony that was introduced. Thereupon the motion for verdict and judgment on behalf of the defendant was renewed, and was again overruled, and the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of $40, and in default of payment to stand committed to the workhouse for six months.

Upon writ of error allowed to him he has brought his cause here for review.

We deem this a proper occasion in which to call attention to a certain absurdity of language which is becoming more frequent in the construction of bills of exceptions in the Police Court, and which appears in the case now before us. It is in the formula that the court is asked to instruct itself as matter of law, etc., in cases tried without jury. This is nonsense. The proper form is that the court is requested to rule, etc.

Digitized by Google

There are seven assignments of error here, but there are only three questions of law raised by them: First, whether the statute is valid or void for uncertainty; second, whether the defendant was entitled to a trial by jury; third, whether there was testimony in the case sufficient in law to support the information. But we do not deem it necessary to consider either the first or the second question, for we are very clearly of opinion that there was no sufficient testimony in the case to charge the defendant with criminality or delinquency of any kind under the law.

By the concession of the counsel for the prosecution the information was restricted to the charge that the defendant was a man of evil life. It may perhaps be regarded as of no consequence here that the information charges both an evil life and evil fame, as though the combination of both things were necessary to constitute the offense in question, while the statute is in the alternative and seeks to reach either evil life or evil fame. That which is important is that there is no testimony whatever to sustain the charge either of one or of the other. It does not appear that the learned "professor," who seems to have combined the pursuit of the heavenly art of music with the more mundane and prosaic occupation of delivering provisions from a grocery wagon, ever acquired fame of any kind, neither good or evil, by his performances, such as Nero did, who is said to have fiddled while Rome burned. And if he is designated as "a man of evil life" because nightly for a consideration he dispensed the harmony of sweet sounds to admiring bands of the gentle and refined nymphs of "The Division," as it is called, and the fastidious guests whom they were pleased to admit to a view of their Terpsichorean performances, it might well be argued that he deserves praise rather than blame for seeking to lead his auditors from Cyprus to Parnassus, from the lascivious groves of Daphne to the purer fountains of Helicon. It is true that excessive playing of the piano has sometimes excited homicidal mania throughout a whole neighborhood; but we have no complaint that our learned "professor" here gave cause for any such feeling among the placid denizens of the Division, or in any way disturbed the peace and quiet of the place.

Seriously, we do not understand how the proof of playing the piano at night in a house of ill fame in the Division can convict one, especially a person of the class to which the appellant belongs, of being a man of evil life, any more than if he played that instrument in the homes of aristocracy. The act would be the same in both cases; and the locality of the performance does not in any manner qualify its character. We do not understand that the art of music is a crime in the Division and an accomplishment in Belgravia. Why may we not hold the man who furnishes groceries to these dens of Cyprianism to be a man of evil life, if we are to hold as such the man who furnishes music to them? If the charge against this appellant had been that he frequented houses of ill-fame, it is possible that a case of misdemeanor could have been made out against him. But the charge is not of that kind; it is that of being a man of evil life, whatever that means; and this charge may reach Belgravia as well as the "Division." It can not in reason be supported by proof of playing the piano at night in the last mentioned quarter of the city.

We think the judgment appealed from should de reversed. The cause will be remanded to the Police Court, with directions to vacate the judgment, and to discharge the defendant. And it is so ordered.

Reversed.

HARRY G. WILSON, PLAINTIFF IN ERROR,

v.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

License Taxes; Building and Other Contractors; Contracting Bricklayers.

1. A contracting bricklayer doing his work in person, with the help of other bricklayers hired for the purpose, and who carries on his trade by contracting with building and general contractors to lay a part or all of the bricks required in their work of construction either at a stated sum per thousand or at a fixed price for the job undertaken, is not a "building contractor," within the meaning of the provision of paragraph 46 of the act of Congress of July 1, 1902, imposing an annual license tax of $25 upon "building and other contractors."
2. The words "and other contractors" in said provision are too indefinite to be enforced.

No. 1553. Decided June 13, 1905.

In error to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Reversed.

Mr. W. H. Sholes for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. B. Duvall and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Shepard delivered the opinion of the Court:

An information presented in the Police Court charged the plaintiff in error with engaging in the business of a contractor in the District of Columbia, "to wit, the business of a contracting bricklayer in constructing buildings and other structures," without first having obtained a license so to do, and paying the license tax therefor, etc.

The case was submitted to the court upon the following agreed statement of facts:

"The defendant Harry G. Wilson is a bricklayer by trade; that his business is to make contracts with builders and general contractors to lay part or all of the bricks required in any work undertaken by a builder or general contractor, either at a stated amount per thousand or for a stated price as to the entire number of bricks to be laid; that the defendant makes no contracts with the owner of the work, but always contracts with the builder or general contractor of the owner; that the defendant maintains no regular force of bricklayers, but employs one or more bricklayers to help him as the number of the bricks to be laid may require; that in the prosecution of the work of laying the bricks the defendant and those employed by him are at all times subject to the direction and under the control of the builder or general contractor."

Digitized by Google

A judgment of conviction was rendered, followed by fine, and a writ of error has been regularly allowed.

The question involved is, whether the plaintiff in error is a building contractor within the comprehension of paragraph 46 of the act of Congress, approved July 1, 1902, imposing an annual license tax of $25 upon "building and other contractors."

It is a well established principle that statutes imposing restrictions or burdens upon the ordinary business or common occupations of the people are to be strictly construed. Transportation Co. v. D. C., 19 App. D. C. 462, 470. Taxes, by way of license for the pursuit of such occupations, must be imposed by clear and unambiguous language. The citizen must be informed with reasonable certainty, by the words of the statute itself, of his obligation to pay a license tax for the pursuit of his business; especially when his refusal to pay the same is made a criminal offense. Transportation Co., v. D. C. supra; Lockwood v. D. C., 33 W. L. R. 131; D. C. v. Chapman, 33 Wash. Law Rep. 232.

In accordance with this principle, it is held in those cases that the statute imposing the license taxes claimed therein could not be enforced for want of certainty in the terms employed; it having neither defined the particular occupation sought to be subjected to the tax nor used words of established, or reasonably popular signification clearly embracing the same.

In Lockwood's case the occupation designated in paragraph 46 was that of "claim-agent." In Chapman's case the party was a wholesale and retail dealer in wood and coal, who had entered into a contract with the District of Columbia to supply it with wood and coal during a certain period. The contention was that he was liable to the license tax under the clause now under consideration, namely, "Building and other contractors." Confessedly he was not a building contractor, and it was held that the terms "other contractors" was too uncertain, and left too much to the discretion of the taxing officers.

A builder has been defined to be "one who builds, or whose occupation is that of building; specifically, one who controls or directs the work of construction in any capacity." 6 Cyc. L. and P., p. 6. "He comes between the architect who designs the work and the artizans who execute it." Eng. Encyc. See, also, Little Rock, etc., R. R. v. Spencer, 65 Ark. 183, 193.

If the word "building contractor" has a fixed, popular meaning, it is that of one who contracts with the owner to become his builder, to erect his structure according to certain plans and for a certain compensation. The agreed statement of facts shows that the trade of the plaintiff in error is that of a bricklayer. He does his work in person, with the help of other bricklayers hired for the purpose. He carries on his trade by contracting with builders and general contractors to lay a part or all of the bricks required in their work of construction, either at a stated sum per thousand or at a fixed price for the particular job undertaken. It does not appear, even, that he ever furnishes the brick to be laid, and he never contracts with the owners for any part of the building to be erected. The extreme inference that can be deduced from these facts is that the plaintiff in error is nothing more than is commonly known as a sub-contractor—one who, having no contract relation with the owner, contracts with his builder to perform a part of the work undertaken by the latter. He is no more a builder, or building contractor, than the plumber, the painter, or the plasterer, who may, by like subcontracts, undertake their particular parts of the general structure.

It was conceded on the argument by the corporation counsel that in the opinion of the taxing officers, with which they agree, these last-named persons are not subject to the license tax imposed upon building contractors. It is contended, however, that there is a materal difference between them and the contracting bricklayer, because he builds the necessary walls of the house while they only assist in its perfection. We do not concur in this view. His work is merely first in due order. The house is not built when the brick walls are erected. The bricklayer, working under the contractor for the building, is not himself a building contractor, but rather an artisan, whether he works by the day, by the completed piece, or by special contract for the entire brick work included in the builder's contract with the owner.

The Congress may have contemplated the inclusion of sub-contracting bricklayers, carpenters, plasterers, plumbers, and the like, by the use of the words "and other contractors" in the clause under consideration, which, as we have seen, are inoperative by reason of their want of certainty. But whether this assumption is or is not well founded we think it clear that they are not to be regarded as building contractors within the meaning of this provision of the statute.

For these reasons the judgment will be reversed with costs and the cause remanded with direction to acquit the defendant. It is so ordered.

Street Railroads—Contributory Negligence.—In an action for injuries caused by plaintiff's wagon being struck by a street car, evidence held to justify submission of the issues of defendant's negligence and plaintiff's contributory negligence. Freymark v. St. Louis Transit Co. (Mo.), 85 S. W. Rep. 606.

Homicide—Persons Engaged in an Affray.—Where persons are engaged in an affray, and one of the parties is killed, a defendant can not escape on the ground that he did not kill him, if he brought on the difficulty. State v. Gaylord (S. Car.), 50 S. E. Rep. 20.

Mechanics' Liens—Change of Ownership of Property.—A change of ownership of real estate while improvements therson are in progress does not defeat the right to a mechanics' lien. D. L. Billings Co. v. Brand (Mass.), 73 N. E. Rep. 637.

Homicide—Degrees of Offense.—A killing in a combat which engenders hot blood is not murder in the first degree, in the absence of premeditation. Osburn v. State (Ind.), 73 N. E. Rep. 601.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

CHARLES W. CRITCHFIELD ET AL., APPELLANTS, v. GEORGE J. EASTERDAY, EXECUTOR, ETC., ET AL.

DEEDS; SUIT TO VACATE FOR MENTAL INCAPACITY OF GRANTOR; EVIDENCE.

In a proceeding in equity to vacate two deeds on the ground of the alleged mental incapacity of the grantor, the testimony held insufficient to show that at the time of their execution the grantor was without the mental capacity required for their due execution.

No. 1589. Decided June 13, 1905.

APPEAL by complainants from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 23,472, in suit to vacate certain deeds for alleged incapacity of the grantor. Affirmed.

Mr. Milton Strasburger and Mr. O. W. Aldrich for the appellants.

Messrs. Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Mr. H. S. Matthews, and Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon for the appellees.

Mr. Justice MORRIS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a proceeding in equity to vacate two deeds, one a deed of trust by way of mortgage, and the other a deed of conveyance in fee simple, on the ground of alleged mental incapacity on the part of the principal grantor in the two deeds.

Doctor Thomas B. Campbell and his wife, Ellen J. Campbell, who seem to have come from the State of Ohio, were residents of the city of Washington for several years, and had reached an advanced age at the time when the transactions were had which constitute the subject-matter of this litigation. They had no children born of their marriage, but Doctor Campbell had a grandson, the appellee, Vernon L. Lawlor, a youth of the age of about seventeen years, when the bill of complaint in this case was filed on August 18, 1902, and who was the son of a daughter by a previous marriage and resided in the State of Illinois. An inmate also of the family to some extent was the appellee, William Benton Campbell, who was the son of a first cousin of Dr. Campbell, and apparently his nearest relative after young Vernon Lawlor. Mrs. Ellen J. Campbell had two brothers, who are the appellants, Charles W. Critchfield and Wilson Critchfield, and this proceeding is a controversy over certain real estate in the District of Columbia between the relatives of Dr. Campbell and the relatives of Mrs. Campbell, both Dr. Campbell and Mrs. Campbell being now dead.

On November 1, 1901, two parcels of land in Le Droit Park, a suburb and now practically an annex of the city of Washington, one designated as lot No. 5, which was improved by a dwelling house and was the place of residence of Dr. and Mrs. Campbell, and the other designated as lots Nos. 43 to 48, both included, which was unimproved, stood in the name of Ellen J. Campbell. The first parcel was of the value of about $8,000, but was incumbered by a mortgage for $4,500. The second parcel was unincumbered, except by some special assessments levied against it by the District of Columbia, and was of the value of about $9,000. For the purpose, it appears, of paying these special assessments, and also, as it would seem, to procure means for the support of the family, Dr. and Mrs. Campbell on the day last mentioned procured a loan of $3,000 from the appellee, Mrs. Sarah E. R. Queen, and to secure its repayment with interest at the rate of five per centum per annum, executed a deed of trust by way of mortgage on the second parcel of land which has been mentioned to the appellees, George J. Easterday and George Y. Worthington, as trustees, and this deed was duly recorded. The loan was for three years and is now overdue.

Subsequently, on February 21, 1902, for the purpose of having the title to both pieces of property in the name of Dr. Thomas B. Campbell, the husband and wife united in a deed of conveyance of both to the appellee, William Benton Campbell, subject to the two deeds of trust thereon, and immediately on the same day William Benton Campbell conveyed them to Dr. Thomas B. Campbell. The consideration for both deeds was only nominal, but the testimony indicates that the money for the original purchase of both pieces came from Dr. Campbell.

Three days afterwards, on February 24, 1902, Dr. Campbell executed his will, and devised his entire estate to the appellee, George J. Easterday, in trust for his wife, Ellen J. Campbell, for life, with discretion to the trustee to sell or mortgage for her benefit at any time as might be expedient; and upon her death to divide the estate equally, or whatever should then remain of it, between the appellees, Vernon Lawlor and William Benton Campbell, subject to a legacy of $1,000 to an old and faithful servitor. He died a week afterwards, on March 3, 1902, and in due time the will was admitted to probate in the probate branch of the Supreme Court of the District; and the appellee, George J. Easterday, entered upon his duties as executor and trustee thereunder.

Very soon after Dr. Campbell's death Mrs. Campbell returned to Ohio, or rather was taken there, and resided with her relatives in the city of Columbus, where she died on May 19, 1902, having survived her husband only two months and a half. She left a will executed on June 11, 1900, whereby she devised the first parcel of land hereinbefore mentioned and one undivided half of the second parcel to her husband, Dr. Thomas B. Campbell, and the other undivided half of the second parcel to be equally divided between her two brothers, the appellants; and she named the appellant, Charles W. Critchfield, as her executor. This will implies some degree of hostility to her husband at the time, for it provides that if he should make and enforce any claim to any other property of hers, the amount of such claim realized by him should be a charge upon the property devised. This will, also, was duly admitted to probate in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and the executor became duly qualified.

In a short time thereafter, on August 18, 1902, the present proceedings were commenced by the parties interested under the will of Mrs. Campbell by the filing of a bill in equity against the persons interested under the will of Dr. Campbell. The substantial allegation of this bill is that, at the time of the execution by Dr. and Mrs. Campbell of the various deeds that have been mentioned, Mrs. Campbell was not of sound mind and was incapable of making a valid deed or contract, and that the deeds in question were procured by undue influence on the part of Dr. Campbell. And the prayer of the bill is for their cancellation. The answers in positive terms denied both the mental incapacity of Mrs. Campbell and the alleged undue influence of Dr. Campbell. Considerable testimony was taken. Twenty-three witnesses were examined on the part of the complainants, and testified to acts of mental unsoundness. Nine witnesses on behalf of the defendants controverted this testimony. At the hearing the court held that the complainants had failed to establish their case, and dismissed the bill; and from the decree of dismissal the complainants appealed.

Digitized by Google

1. The appellants have abandoned in this court their contention against Sarah E. R. Queen and against Easterday and Worthington, the trustees in the deed made to secure the indebtedness due to her. There is absolutely no case whatever made out against her right; and as to her and her two trustees, beyond all question the bill was properly dismissed. The appellants are without the shadow of right to disturb her security.

2. As between the appellants and the other appellees there is no question of law involved. The parties are agreed upon the law. In their brief the appellants say as follows: The only controverted question of law involved in the case is based upon the alternative prayer in the bill, which asks that if the court should find that the deed of trust can not be set aside, that it shall be paid from the part of the property devised to Dr. Thomas B. Campbell. We claim that under the general principles of equity, if it appears from the evidence that Mrs. Campbell was not competent to do business when the deed was made, and that this fact was known to her husband when he caused her to execute the instrument, that upon him shall fall the burden, and that as he died before the death of his wife, it shall fall upon those who represent him as heirs at law.

While we think that this contention as to the law applicable to this case is not sound, even in the contingency that Mrs. Campbell was not competent to execute the deed of trust at the time at which she did execute it, since the money was borrowed, at least in part, for her benefit and for the release of her property from the lien of assessment, yet even if it were admitted to be a correct exposition of the law, we regard it as of no consequence in this case. For we are of opinion that it is not shown by the testimony that at the time of the execution of these deeds Mrs. Campbell was without the mental capacity required for their due execution.

The question is merely one of fact, and concurring as we fully do in the conclusion deduced from the testimony by the learned justice who heard the cause in the court below, we do not see that any good purpose whatever would be subserved by any new analysis of that testimony by us. We will content ourselves with quoting and adopting as our own two paragraphs from the opinion of that justice to be found in the record, wherein he admirably sums up his conclusion. He says:

"But I am not satisfied of her [Mrs. Campbell] mental incapacity to execute either the deed of trust or the subsequent deed in fee. It is true a larger number of witnesses have testified generally to her defective memory during the period covering these instruments than have testified that she was mentally sound. But in my mind this mass of general testimony, not showing, as frankly admitted by counsel for plaintiffs, actual insanity, is not conclusive as to her incapacity to execute valid deeds at the identical times when unimpeached witnesses who were personally present say she did execute such deeds knowingly and with a complete understanding of their purpose and effect. Even an insane person may have lucid intervals, and his contracts then made are valid and binding. Much more may one who is affected by a progressive disease such as softening of the brain have periods of complete comprehension and understanding of transactions, especially when not more complicated than those involved in this case.

"It is contended, however, that although not insane, Mrs. Campbell was in such an infirm mental condition as to be dependent upon her husband, and subject to his superior will. This would appeal to me so far as the transaction of February 21 is concerned, were the circumstances surrounding it inequitable, or did they show any undue advantage taken of her by her husband. But I am not so impressed. Here were two old, infirm, childless persons, on the verge of the grave, attempting to arrange their meagre property so that each should have support and maintenance during the short remaining space of their allotted days. By the testimony, the property had been bought by the husband and the titles placed in the wife. She makes a deed conveying all to him and he makes a will giving her, through a trustee, the absolute right to use it all for her support and maintenance during her life. I can not see in this transaction any undue advantage taken of her."

We do not think that we need add anything to this. We think that it states the case fully and accurately.

The decree appealed from must be affirmed with costs. And it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

An old darkey was under indictment for some trivial offense and was without counsel. The judge appointed a lawyer to defend him who had never tried a case in court.

As he walked forward to consult with his client the prisoner turned to the judge and said:

"Yo' Honah, am dis de lawyer what am depointed to offend me?"

"Yes."

"Well," continued the old darkey, "take hit away, jedge; I pleads guilty."

Digitized by Google

Bills and Notes—Checks—Stoppage of Payment—Disregard by Bank—Waiver.

In Pease & Dwyer Co. v. State National Bank, decided by the Supreme Court of Tennessee in June, 1905 (88 S. W. 172), it was held that under Negotiable Instrument Law, section 189 (acts 1899, p. 172, ch. 94), providing that a check is not an assignment of any part of the drawer's funds, and the bank is not liable to the holder unless and until it accepts or certifies the check, the drawer of an ordinary check may, before it is accepted, revoke it and forbid its payment, and any subsequent payment by the bank is made at its peril.

It was further held that in order to place a check beyond the control of the drawer and preclude him from stopping payment thereon, it must be clearly shown that it was the intention of the parties to assign all or a part of the specific fund on deposit.

It was decided that the bringing of suit by the drawer of a check against the payee to recover the sum for which it was drawn was not a ratification by him of the act of the bank in paying the check after he had stopped payment thereon. The court said in part:

The drawer of a check in the usual form, upon his general account with a bank, firm, or person, before it is accepted, expressly or by implication, may revoke it and forbid its payment, after which payment, if made, is at the peril of the bank. A check of this kind is not an appropriation of any part of the funds to the credit of the drawer with the bank, and does not constitute any claim or right of action against the bank until it is accepted or certified by it. The remedy of the holder, if payment is refused, is against the drawer. Negotiable Instrument Law, acts, 1899, p. 172, c. 94, sec. 189; Imboden v. Perrie, 81 Tenn. 505; Pickle v. Muse, 88 Tenn. 385, 12 S. W. 919, 7 L. R. A. 93, 17 Am. St. Rep. 900; Akin v. Jones, 93 Tenn. 356, 27 S. W. 669, 25 L. R. A. 523, 42 Am. St. Rep. 921.

In Imboden v. Perrie, 81 Tenn. 505, supra, the contest was between a creditor whose attachment was levied by garnishment upon the balance of a depositor in a bank, and the payee in a check drawn upon the bank before the levy of the attachment, and presented afterwards. This court quotes approvingly from Attorney-General v. Continental Life Insurance Co., 71 N. Y. 325, 27 Am. Rep. 55, this statement of the law concerning the relations of banks, their depositors, and the holders of unaccepted checks: "Church, C. J., said: 'Lunt v. Bank of North America, 49 Barb. 221, declares the rule accurately, that checks drawn in the ordinary form, not describing any particular fund, or using any words of transfer of the whole or any part of any amount standing to the credit of the drawer, but containing only the usual requests, are of the same legal effect as are inland bills of exchange, and do not amount to an assignment of the funds of the drawer in the bank.

"'This doctrine accords with the relations between the parties. Banks are debtors to their customers for the amount of their deposits. A check is a request of the customer to pay the whole or a portion of such indebtedness to the bearer, or to the order of the payee. Until presented and accepted it is inchoate. It vests no title or interest, legal or equitable, in the payee, to the fund. Before acceptance the drawer may withdraw his deposit. The bank owes no duty to the holder of a check until it is presented for payment.'"

The facts of the case of German Nat. Bank v. Farmers' Dep. Nat. Bank, 118 Pa. 313; 12 Atl. 305, were similar to those in the case of Imboden v. Perrie. It is there said:

"I presume no one at this day questions the right of the drawer of a check to stop the payment thereof. This is usually done by notice to the bank on which the check is drawn. If the bank pay after such notice it does so at its peril. The holder of a check has no remedy against the bank upon which a check is drawn for its refusal to pay it. He must look to the drawer."

In the case of Kahn v. Walton, 46 Ohio St. 205, 20 N. E. 203, involving this direct question, it is said:

"A check, being simply a written order of a depositor to his banker to make a certain payment out of his funds, is executory, and, of course, revocable at any time before the bank has paid it or committed itself to its payment. . . . The bank is the agent of the drawer. Its duty is to pay his money as he directs. It owes no duty to the holder except under the drawer's directions, until, by virtue of those directions, it assumes some obligation to the holder; up to that time the latest order from the drawer governs."

In the case of Florence Mining Co. v. Brown, rec'r, &c., 124 U. S. 391, 8 Sup. Ct. 534, 31 L. Ed. 424, Mr. Justice Field says:

"A general deposit in a bank in so much money to the depositor's credit; it is a debt to him by the bank, payable on demand to his order, not properly capable of identification and specific appropriation. A check upon the bank in the usual form, not accepted or certified by its cashier to be good, does not constitute a transfer of any money to the credit of the holder; it is simply an order which may be countermanded and payment forbidden by the drawer at any time before it is actually cashed. It creates no lien on the money which the holder can enforce against the bank. It does not of itself operate as an equitable assignment."

Further cases in accord with these are: St. Louis & San Francisco Ry. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 574; 10 Sup. Ct. 390, 33 L. Ed. 683; Fourth St. Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 17 Sup. Ct. 439, 41 L. Ed. 855; Schneider v. Bank, 1 Daly, N. Y. 501; O'Connor v. Mechanics' Nat. Bank, 124 N. Y. 332, 26 N. E. 816; Randolph v. Allen, 73 Fed. 42, 19 C. C. A. 353; State v. Bank of Commerce, 49 La. Ann. 1078, 22 South. 207; House v. Kountze, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 406, 43 S. W. 561; Sunderlin v. Mescosta County Saving Bank, 116 Mich. 284, 74 N. W. 478.

Officers of a corporation who secure subscriptions to its stock by fraud are held, in Mack v. Latta (N. Y.), 67 L. R. A. 126, to be properly joined in an equitable suit against the corporation to enjoin collection of the amount unpaid, and to secure the return of what has been paid upon the subscription.

Digitized by Google

Consequential Damages.

A very curious claim is advanced by plaintiff in the case of Coppola v. Kraushaar, 92 New York Supplement, 436. Plaintiff alleged that on a certain date he ordered of defendant two gowns for his betrothed, stating to defendant at the time that he was to wed on a certain date, was incurring great expense in arranging a suitable celebration for that occasion, and that the gowns must be finished on the day preceding the wedding. It was asserted that plaintiff and his betrothed demanded the gowns on this date, and that they were not finished, in consequence of which the wedding was "broken off." Plaintiff sought to recover for the money expended by him in buying presents, wines, clothes, etc., in anticipation of his wedding. The court suggests that in view of the damages one might be tempted to conjecture that the pleader had lost sight of the distinction between breach of contract and breach of promise of marriage, and holds that the damages are too remote; saying that, while such a disappointment would naturally be keen to any prospective bride, it could hardly be contemplated, in the absence of specific warning, that she would refuse ever to wed if the two dresses were not forthcoming before the day set for the ceremony.

Marriage by Estoppel.

That one may be estopped to question the validity of a marriage which, when celebrated, was entirely void, is maintained in Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 59 Atlantic Reporter, 813. The suit was for divorce, and it appeared that complainant (who was the wife) and defendant were formally married and entered into matrimonial relations thinking that complainant's then husband was dead. Later, in order to place the legality of their relation beyond question, complainant procured a divorce from her lawful husband, who was in fact alive, but in parts unknown, after which defendant, in the presence of witnesses, assured complainant that she was his lawful wife, and that no other ceremony was necessary, and thereby induced complainant, by reliance on such representations, to remain with him as his wife for over twenty years. Under these circumstances it was held that defendant was estopped from denying the legality of the marriage with complainant.

Bloodhounds.

In Denham v. Commonwealth, 84 Southwestern Reporter, 538, the Kentucky Court of Appeals takes issue with the holding of the Nebraska Supeme Court that in a prosecution for crime evidence of the fact that bloodhounds went from the scene of the crime to defendant's home is not admissible in evidence. In the case mentioned it is held that in a prosecution for assault with intent to kill, evidence of the trailing of defendant by bloodhounds, which were shown to have been of good breeding and to have been carefully trained in tracking men, and which had tracked and aided in the capture of many criminals, was admissible, although the pedigrees of the dogs were not asked about or stated with particularity.

Eminent Domain—Damages.

The defendant's contention that in assessing damages for the condemnation of a railroad right of way the plans and prospects of the owner of the land should be considered in enhancement of the damages gives rise to the case of Dowie v. Chicago, W. & N. S. R. Co., 73 Northeastern Reporter, 354. The railway company condemned a strip of land within the limits of Zion City, and defendant Dowie (who, by the way, is the only person who owns any land in Zion City) contended that the facts that he had formed a great plan for the salvation and upbuilding of humanity, had formed a city of 10,000 population in some two years, and intended to gather there all of the 100,000 members of his church, should be considered in determining the value of the land. Other land in the immediate vicinity was worth only $200 an acre, while defendant claimed that owing to the facts mentioned his property was worth $13,000 an acre. It is, however, decided that while every one has a right to entertain any religious belief he may see fit, this right does not carry with it any increased or additional property rights, and that the value of his property when taken for public use must be measured in the same manner as other property owned by other people in the same vicinity and similarly situated.

Shipping—Carrier's Liability for Jewelry Taken from State Room.—Where Jewelry was taken from the cabin of a passenger on a steamship, the carrier's liability was that of an insurer, in the absence of negligence on the part of the passenger.—Hart v. North German S. S. Co., 92 N. Y. Supp. 338.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of William Thompson Harris, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 29th day of August, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time and said court room as the place for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 10th day of August, 1905. CORCORAN THOM. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,306. Administration. 32-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Lambert & Baker, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Special Term for Equity Business.
Elizabeth Ray, Complainant, v. Mary A. Troxall and Charles H. Upperman, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,562.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to all of the following property: Part of lot numbered fifty-three (53), fronting on Beall street in Thomas Beall of George's addition to Georgetown, beginning at the southwest corner of the lot of Robert Craig's heirs, it being also a part of said lot fifty-three (53) and running west with Beall street twenty-one (21) feet, then north one hundred twenty (120) feet, then east twenty-one (21) feet parallel with Beall street, then south one hundred twenty feet to the beginning. And all those parts of lots numbered one hundred twenty-nine (129) and one hundred thirty (130) in Beatty and Hawkins' addition to Georgetown, comprised within the following metes and bounds, viz, beginning for the same at a point in the north line of Second street fifty-seven (57) feet four (4) inches west from the west wall of Poon house, formerly Green's, the same standing on part of lot numbered one hundred twenty eight (128), the said point of beginning being also distant one hundred ninety-two (192) feet westerly from the northwest corner formed by the intersection of Second and High streets, and now thence west on the north line of Second street eighty-five (85) feet two (2) inches to the center of the eastern wall of the upper or western brick house of the old brewery property, the same being a two-story brick house now owned and possessed by William Dougherty, then north by and with said east wall and parallel with Market street to the north boundary line of the said lots numbered one hundred twenty-nine and thirty, then east by and with the said north boundary line eighty-five (85) feet two (2) inches to a point which will be intersected by a line drawn north and parallel with Market street, from the place of beginning on Second street, and then south by and with the said line reversed to the beginning; and to secure a release of conveyance in connection with two deeds in trust recorded, respectively, in liber J A B, No. 19, at folio 418 et seq., and in liber J A B, No. 19, at folio 423 et seq., of the land records of the county of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant it is this 8th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant Charles H. Upperman cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, sufficient cause having been shown for dispensing with a longer period of publication. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 32-3t

---

L. O. Posey, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Robert J. Daniels, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 8th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 8th day of August, 1905. LOGAN JOHNSON, 2009 Vermont ave. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,068. Administration. 32-3t

---

James B. Archer, Jr., Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Morris O'Rourke, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 8th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 8th day of August, 1905. BRIDGET O'ROURKE, 340 B st. S. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,091. Administration. 32-3t

Legal Notices.

William Henry Dennis, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Amelia Egan, Deceased.
No. 13,055. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Rudolph Eichhorn, it is ordered this 8th day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to William E. Egan and the unknown next of kin and the unknown heirs at law of said Amelia Egan, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 22d day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. JOB BARNARD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 32-3t

---

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Joseph Patch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 9th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 9th day of August, 1905. ELIZABETH M. PATCH, 942 R. I. ave. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,084. Administration. 32-3t

---

J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Gilbert J. Osterman et al. v. Robert E. Poole et al.
No. 25,518. Equity.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to sublots 108 to 114, inclusive, square 104, Washington, D. C. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Robert E. Poole, Susan Erwin, and Ann Council, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Martin Casner, of Martin Kershner, of Margaret Freeman, of Charles W. Goldsborough, and of Charles Henry Goldsborough, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month for the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clk.
au 11,18,25; sept. 8,22; oct. 13,27

Joseph Salomon, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Abraham Herman, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 5th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 5th day of August, 1905. MONNIE HERMAN, BERNARD HERMAN, 788 7th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,087. Administration. 32-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 35

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - SEPTEMBER 1, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 545
Judge Charles C. Cole—Memorial Exercises 546
SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Margaret A. Hill et al., complainants, v. Amanda Moore et al 549
Notes of Decisions 550
Legal Notices 557

Changes in the Office of U. S. Attorney for the District of Columbia.

Mr. Morgan H. Beach, for the past two years United States attorney for this District, retired from that position on Thursday, August 31, 1905, and is succeeded by Mr. Daniel W. Baker, whose commission was signed by the President during the present week. The oath of office was administered to Mr. Baker by Justice Ashley M. Gould, of the Supreme Court of the District, on Friday morning.

Mr. Beach retires after a most satisfactory administration of the duties of the position. During the two years of his incumbency the office has had to deal with a number of cases of exceptional interest and importance, including the charges of conspiracy against certain officials of the Postoffice Department and others. For some time past he has been giving much attention to the collection and presentation to the grand jury of evidence in connection with the cotton report scandal in the Department of Agriculture, resulting in the indictment of a former assistant statistician and others for conspiracy. In view of his thorough understanding of the case, it has been suggested that he will be appointed a special attorney for the United States in the prosecution of these cases. Prior to his appointment Mr. Beach was highly esteemed by his brethren at the bar, and his discharge of its important duties has added to the regard entertained for him.

In connection with the retirement of Mr. Beach several pleasant incidents occurred. The grand jury presented him with a handsome silk umbrella, the spokesman for the jury being Mr. Thomas Marshall. At 1 o'clock on Thursday the entire office staff went to the room of Mr. Beach and presented him with a tribute of their esteem in the form of a handsome loving cup. In making the presentation Mr. Alex. R. Mullowney, one of the assistant attorneys, spoke briefly, expressing the warm admiration entertained for their retiring chief. Mr. Beach replied, expressing his appreciation of the gift and of the great help he had received from them in the discharge of the duties of the office.

Mr. Baker, who succeeds him, is one of the most popular members of the local bar. He has practiced law in this District for nearly twelve years with signal success, and is recognized as a lawyer of fine abilities and a man of high character. His friends, and included among them is practically the entire bar, confidently predict for him a most successful career in the important position to which he has been appointed.

Right of Life Tenant of Private Cemetery to Grant Burial Permits.

A somewhat novel question is decided by the Supreme Court of this District in the case of Hill v. Moore, reported in this issue. It appeared that one Jacob Moore, now deceased, owned a tract of land on which he conducted a private cemetery. He deeded the tract to trustees for the use of his wife for life, she to have all rents and profits, with remainder over at her death. The trustees were directed to sell and convey any or the whole of the land upon her direction, the proceeds to be held so that she would receive the income. After his death, the life tenant (the widow) continued the business in his name, granting permits to bury and receiving the consideration therefor. The question was as to whether, in so doing, she exceeded her rights in the property. The remaindermen, contending that in granting such permits and receiving the consideration, she was acting in excess of her rights, brought suit for an injunction and receiver. Mr. Justice Stafford, on the hearing of a rule to show cause, held, however, that the right of the widow as life tenant was analogous to that of a life tenant to continue the operation of mines and quarries, even though the corpus of the estate is thereby diminished or exhausted, without being liable to impeachment for waste.

The sale of the good will of a partnership at the instance of the personal representative of the deceased partner, as part of the firm's assets, is held, in Hutchinson v. Nay (Mass.), 68 L. R. A. 186, not to preclude the surviving partner from entering into a competing business and soliciting trade from the customers of the old firm.

Digitized by Google

In Memoriam.

HON. CHARLES C. COLE.

Proceedings at the Meeting of the Bar of the District Held March 24, 1905.

The meeting was called to order at 3 o'clock p. m. by the president of the association, Hugh T. Taggart, Esq., who spoke as follows:

Remarks of Mr. Hugh T. Taggart.

"The bar of the District of Columbia is again called upon to mourn the loss of one of its distinguished and valued members, of whom it is bereaved by the death of the Hon. Charles C. Cole, which took place about a week ago, under circumstances so unexpected as to shock us all.

"The deceased was appointed from this bar as a member of the bench of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and after serving there for several years retired to resume the practice of his profession.

"It is common knowledge of us all that while on the bench he developed and manifested in such a high degree the qualities of an able, learned, and impartial judge that his retirement from the bench was the cause of general regret.

"After resuming his practice he addressed himself to it with the untiring zeal and energy that we all know was one of his principal characteristics, and it may well be said that he fell a victim to his unwearied devotion to professional duty.

"A death of this kind is one that deserves more than passing notice. The Bar Association has, therefore, called this meeting of the bar generally of the District in order that a last tribute of respect may be paid to the memory of this man who stood so high at the bar and in the community. As president of that association it becomes my duty to call the meeting to order, and to call for nominations for a permanent chairman and secretary."

Remarks of Mr. Chief Justice Clabaugh.

On motion of Mr. William F. Mattingly, Mr. Chief Justice Clabaugh was elected chairman of the meeting and Mr. Wharton E. Lester secretary. On taking the chair, the Chief Justice said:

"Gentlemen, as your president has said, it has become the sad duty of the members of the bar of the District to meet and pass proper resolutions in respect of the memory of our friend and brother, the late Judge Cole.

"Without anticipating any remarks that may be made, I am sure you will permit me to say a word at least in respect to him.

"Associated as I was for several years with Judge Cole upon the bench, in the law school, and socially, as I met him after he left the bench, I am impressed with the thought that he was an exceedingly rare man. Like all of us he had his frailties, but they were so slight in comparison with his virtues that they are forgotten today.

"His life was one of absolute rectitude, and a rectitude that seemed to be so interwoven with gentleness of nature that one almost thought he never knew an unkindness toward a human being.

"Judge Cole was a man of wonderful powers for work. He never, so far as I knew him, in any way spared himself. He was always willing and anxious to bear the burdens of others, and I have never known the time when he was called upon to take up and fulfill the duties imposed upon some one else that it was not done gladly and without stint.

"As I have had occasion to say once before, he had what is to my mind one of the rarest virtues. In all the time that I knew him, in the close association we had, I never heard him say an unkind word about any human creature. If he had any feeling toward any man that was not kindly, he kept it to himself; and to my mind that is one of the rarest virtues.

"So far as his family relations are concerned, that is a matter that must be to us largely a closed book. We have no right to enter into them. But this much I may be permitted to say, that the devotion of Judge Cole, as a father and as a husband, was most beautiful, and his is an example which should be emulated by all.

"It seems to me it is the right and duty of this bar to lament the death of one whom we all loved.

"The chair is now ready to hear any remarks that may be made."

The following named gentlemen were appointed as a committee on resolutions: Mr. William F. Mattingly, Mr. Nathaniel Wilson, Mr. A. S. Worthington, Mr. R. Ross Perry, Mr. J. J. Darlington, Mr. George E. Hamilton, and Mr. R. Golden Donaldson.

In behalf of the committee, Mr. William F. Mattingly submitted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That the death of Hon. Charles Cleaves Cole, for the past twenty-seven years an eminent member of this bar, and during eight years of that period an honored associate justice of the Supreme Court of this District, is an event deeply to be lamented as a loss which will be gravely felt by the bench and bar of the District of Columbia, its business and general interest, and the community at large.

"Resolved, That as a member of the bar, as United States district attorney, as a judge, as a law professor in one of the leading institutions of learning at the National Capital, and in every professional and private relation, the life of our now departed associate and friend was characterized by an indefatigable industry, a tireless capacity and willingness for labor, a clearness of comprehension and vigor of statement, a sense of fairness and right and a constancy of effort toward their accomplishment, a sincerity of character, a personal unselfishness, a genuineness and a warmth of heart which commanded our respect and admiration while he was with us, and which entitle his name and character to an abiding place in our memory and affection.

"Resolved, That our sympathy and regard, with a copy of these resolutions, be tendered his widow and children, and that the court of general term be requested to cause a copy of these resolutions to be entered upon its records."

Digitized by Google

In presenting the resolutions, Mr. Mattingly spoke as follows:

Remarks of Mr. William F. Mattingly.

These resolutions, Mr. Chairman, forcibly remind us that we are again brought face to face with the ever-recurring mystery of death. While it is as certain an incident of life as birth itself, yet it is always a shock. But when one of our own brotherhood, who has won our esteem, is taken from our midst we mourn his loss, and our hearts are filled with a desire to pay some tribute to his memory, to do something to testify the regard and affection we had for him.

This assemblage, these resolutions, are the evidences of that feeling. For the dead we can do nothing. Personally, I feel that when a man in the ripened maturity of all his powers, in the full possession of all his faculties of mind and body, in the enjoyment of the good will, the respect, the kindly regard, the esteem, the affection of those among whom his life was cast, who has been spared a long, lingering, and painful illness, the mortifying and friend-losing decay of his mental faculties, and the slow weakening of his physical organism is suddenly taken from us, he is not to be pitied. I feel that he is not to be regarded as unfortunate, but that on the contrary we ought to rejoice that so far as he is concerned life's strifes, worries, afflictions, and troubles are ended, and that he has entered upon that eternal life of blissful peace and rest.

But while we can do nothing for the dead we can do much for the living—for ourselves, for the grief-stricken family. We can profit ourselves by thinking of this beautiful example of an honorable life long spent in an honorable profession. We can derive consolation by giving public expression to our sorrow. But for the bereaved family there is no consolation. There is some alleviation of sorrow, some satisfaction, in their knowing that the memory of their beloved dead is appreciated by those who toiled by his side in the daily tussle of life, who knew him, who measured up his every trait, who honored him, who respected him, and who mourn his death as their loss.

Judge Cole's life for the past quarter of a century has been, to a gradually lessening number of us, an open book. Its purity no one can dispute. His ability was recognized by all. We recall his pleasant smile, his genial manner, his hearty handshake. We recall him in civil life as the loyal lawyer, devoted to the demands of his profession. We recall him in official life as the able and efficient district attorney and judge. Loyalty to duty was ever his characteristic. This loyalty impelled him as a young man to recognize his duty to his country and to unite with its defenders in the civil war, in which he acquitted himself with credit and distinction, earning and receiving promotion. It impelled his activity in various charitable works, in doing what he could as a loyal citizen to promote the prosperity and welfare of this Federal city. In performing that noble duty he became a teacher of youth in the line of his profession.

Moreover, he recognized his duty to God. He was a loyal Christian, and his Christian faith induced his conviction that—

> "There is no death!
> What seems so is transition;
> This life of mortal breath
> Is but a suburb of the life Elysian,
> Whose portal we call death."

I move the adoption of the resolutions.

Remarks of Mr. George E. Hamilton.

There are times when words, however sincerely spoken, are altogether inadequate to properly convey our thoughts and feelings, and, Mr. Chairman, the occasions when the District bar comes together from time to time to fittingly commemorate the death of some one of its members, emphasize with peculiar force the poverty of language to appropriately express our sorrow and regret, or to voice the tribute we would pay our dead. But after all, there is today little need of any expression by word of sorrow or of praise. The sense of loss weighs heavily upon us all. The memory of our departed brother lives, and will live long in the hearts of his fellows. His achievements are indelibly impressed upon the records of our courts, and these are his all-sufficient praise, his best and most lasting monument.

Charles C. Cole for more than a quarter of a century as a lawyer in active practice, as United States district attorney, and as one of the associate judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, was an important factor in the administration of justice in all of the Federal courts at Washington; and, whether viewed as lawyer, as prosecuting attorney, or as judge, his career is marked by successful effort, by signal ability, and always by duty well and faithfully performed. His measure of success in the profession of the law was filled even to the brim, nor was this success of accidental or easy accomplishment. It was created and built up by unremitting toil, by force of intellect well directed, and by a character and an integrity strong enough to rise above adverse conditions, and to overcome circumstances that would have shackled and forever held down a man of weaker mold.

His life was a life of effort and struggle, animated always by honorable ambition, and crowned by merited success.

Mr. Chairman, when we who knew him have passed away, the records of our courts, many of whose pages are illuminated by his professional and judicial acts and triumphs, will remain, and from these those who come after us will know that Charles C. Cole was an able lawyer, a strong and fearless advocate, an impartial and learned judge. And what more could a lawyer ask or wish for?

Again I say that when such a man has passed over the bar, there should be no sound of mourning, there need be no song of praise.

Mr. Chairman, I second the motion that the resolutions, as read, be adopted.

Remarks of Mr. Walter C. Clephane.

Mr. Chairman, after what has been said, and so beautifully said, about the character of Judge Cole, I hesitate to perform, or to attempt to perform, the duty which I feel is cast upon me, and which it has been suggested I should endeavor to carry out—of saying a few words indicative of the feeling which the juniors at the bar entertained toward Justice Cole.

Digitized by Google

I feel honored in that I know he was a friend to me. I feel that nearly every other man, aye, every other man, at this bar could say the same, that Judge Cole was a friend to him, individually.

The personal element which entered into our relations with Judge Cole is too sacred a bar for me to endeavor to raise. But I do want to refer to three traits in his judicial character which are well known to us all, but upon which I think we should for a moment dwell.

The first is that of his eminent fairness. We have seen him ascend the bench, and in a few moments indicate by some remark what he thought of the question before him for discussion, and yet that never deterred anyone from proceeding to expound the views which he desired to bring to the attention of the court, because every member of the bar knew that notwithstanding any preconceived opinions which Judge Cole might have formed, he would listen as attentively and earnestly to an argument as if there had been no opinion on his part whatever, and the final result was never influenced in the slightest degree by any impression which he might have entertained upon ascending the bench.

Not only was this so, but we frequently found that after he had delivered his opinion, upon motion for a new trial he would gladly reverse that opinion when he found he was in error in his own judgment.

The next trait to which I refer is one which we might expect to be found in a man of such stamp as this—that is, his courtesy on the bench. It made no difference what the experience or lack of experience on the part of the man who addressed. him might be, he always received the same courtesy and kindly treatment that the closest friend and leader of the bar would receive. So that in standing before his honor, the youngest junior at the bar felt that he was laboring under no other disadvantage than that of immaturity and inexperience; certainly that he was under no disadvantage so far as the reception of his argument by the court was concerned.

The third trait to which I refer is—if I may call it so—his approachableness. The experience of the judicial career must render it extremely difficult for a judge, who rightly receives all the deference due from the bar and from the bench while on the bench—to cast all this aside, and when off the bench to treat the members of the bar as his friends, and, may I say it, equals. Certainly in the case of Judge Cole we found that we could approach him anywhere and everywhere, and receive the same cordial, kindly greeting we would receive from one who had not ornamented the bench, as did Judge Cole.

These are three of the reasons, Mr. Chairman, why I personally mourn, and why I am sure my fellow members of the profession feel the keenest regret at Judge Cole's death.

Remarks of Mr. R. Golden Donaldson.

Mr. Chairman, the committee thought it might be proper and appropriate for me to say a word, but I assure you, sir, that my heart is so filled with sorrow that even if what has been said had not been so well said I could say nothing. As I stand here his kindly, genial face appears before me, and his life, as I knew it, is open; and I can do nothing more than say now that all that I have been able to do here I have been able to accomplish because that good man helped me on.

I went into the office of Judge Cole and his brother about fourteen years ago, a little boy in knee trousers, poor, and I stayed with them until Mr. Wyman Cole died. My relations with the family had then grown to be such that it was thought desirable that I should undertake to succeed him in the practice of our profession. Then, there being no sons, it was thought that perhaps the Judge might help me on, and so when he resigned from the bench we took offices together and afterwards formed the partnership.

I can not add a word to what has been said about his beautiful character. We all knew him as a friend; we knew what a beautiful Christian he was; we all know of his devotion to his family; we all know of the untiring energy which he at all times displayed, and I fear me, sir, that it was because of his zeal in the performance of his duty that he departed, perhaps, as early as he did.

We were sitting in the office on Saturday afternoon, and the marshal telephoned over and wanted to know if the judge would not go to lunch, as was his custom on some occasions when he could find the time. At that time we were conferring about this will case which is now on trial. He looked up and said, "Ought I to go?" and I said, "Judge, you have been laboring so hard recently, I think you should. We will take this up tonight." He said, "Very well," and he went. Afterwards he went home and ate his dinner, and I went down to his house that evening—it was only Saturday a week ago—and we began to talk about this case. We had talked about two hours, and then he stopped and said, "Let us have a little rest," and we did. He had a couple of bottles of ginger ale brought up, and we sat there for a few moments and talked about matters not connected with the case. He laughed, and his laugh was just as hearty and just as natural, and suddenly he said, "I am ill; I want to go to bed;" and he did. The next morning he was an exceedingly ill man, and he never arose.

But I agree with Mr. Mattingly that it is a blessing that he has been spared a lingering illness. It is a blessing that he can meet his Creator and God, as I know he has done, in the full possession of his faculties; and I know it will be said of him, "Thou good and faithful servant." I can say no more, sir.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote, and the meeting thereupon adjourned.

Sales—Mortgage of Property Conditionally Sold.—Consent by the seller in a conditional sale that the property be mortgaged to a certain corporation does not authorize its mortgage to another corporation.—Lorain Steel Co. v. Norfolk & B. St. Ry. Co. (Mass.), 73 N. E. Rep. 646.

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

MARGARET A. HILL ET AL., COMPLAINANTS,

v.

AMANDA MOORE ET AL.

PRIVATE CEMETERY; RIGHT OF LIFE TENANT TO GRANT BURIAL PERMITS.

The owner of a tract of land on which he had conducted a private cemetery conveyed the same to trustees for the sole and separate use of his wife for life, she to have the rents, issues, and profits, and at her death it was disposed of to others. The trustees were to sell and convey any or the whole of the land upon her direction, the proceeds in such case to be held so that she should have the income. After his death the widow continued the business in his name, granting permits to bury and receiving the consideration therefor. The remaindermen, contending that this was in excess of her rights, brought suit for an injunction and receiver. Held, that the wife had the right to grant such permits, her rights with respect to the property being analogous to that of a life tenant to continue the operation of mines or quarries, even though the corpus of the estate is thereby diminished or even exhausted, and not being liable to impeachment of waste therefor.

In Equity. No. 24,912. Decided April 25, 1905.

HEARING on bill and answer of a rule to show cause why an injunction should not be granted, etc. Rule discharged.

Mr. W. Mosby Williams for the complainants.

Mr. Irving Williamson for the defendants.

Mr. Justice STAFFORD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is a rule to show cause why a restraining order should not be granted and a receiver appointed, and has been heard upon bill and answer.

The facts are these: Jacob Moore, now deceased, owned a tract of about 7½ acres on which he resided and where he had a private cemetery which he had conducted for some twenty years. He deeded the tract to trustees for the sole and separate use of his wife during her life, she to have all the rents, issues, and profits thereof, and at her death it was disposed of to others. The trustees were to sell and convey any or the whole of it upon her direction during her life and the proceeds were in such case to be held so that she should have the income thereof. He had made his livelihood out of the business of keeping the cemetery. After his death his widow continued to carry it on in his name, granting permits to bury and receiving the consideration therefor; and such permits were treated by the defendant herself, in argument, as conferring a permanent right to the use of the soil for the purposes of graves. Now, the question is, whether the life tenant is exceeding her right in granting such permits? The defendant contends that the deed, construed and interpreted in the light of the circumstances, must be held to grant such a right. The complainants contend that such a power would be equivalent to a power to convey the whole tract, piecemeal, and is inconsistent with the character of a life tenancy and with the express provisions of the deed.

Since the case was argued counsel have submitted memoranda of authorities, among which we find this statement:

"A person making an interment in a cemetery in the absence of a deed properly executed does so under a mere license, and his exclusive right to make such interments in a particular lot would be limited to the time during which the ground continued to be used for burial purposes." 3 Am. & Eng. Ency. L., 1st ed., 50.

It might be said that those receiving and relying upon the permits issued by the defendant take them at their own risk, and if she has no authority to grant them beyond her own tenancy, that the complainants will not be prejudiced thereby, as they may require the removal of the bodies at the expiration of the life term, and so have no need of an injunction.

But it is maintained on the part of the complainants that the permits, although not formally executed deeds, do confer a permanent right so far as the same is possessed by the defendant, and that as they reside in the neighborhood and are informed of her course of action, they may be estopped if they do not take active measures to prevent the continuance of the practice.

For the purposes of this opinion we shall adopt the complainant's view upon this question because it seems to us that the defendant is right upon her main contention.

It is apparent from the bill and answer that the intention of Jacob Moore was to provide for the support of his widow during her life, and that this result could not be accomplished by merely setting apart the sums received from the sale of graves and paying her the income upon the fund derived from such sales.

The amounts received for graves run from $1.50 to $6, and the answer shows that during the period since the death of Jacob Moore the net proceeds of all sales amount to a fund so small that the income to be derived therefrom could be only characterized as insignificant. The grantor in the trust deed evidently expected that she would continue to carry on the cemetery as he had done, and that was the use which he expected her to make of the property. The whole tract contained nearly eight acres, and only a small fraction of it has been actually used for burial purposes, although the whole has been platted. He wished to provide for the sale of a considerable portion of the tract if his widow should find that necessary, and so inserted a provision to that effect, but we can not regard the provision for a sale of the whole or a portion of the tract as referring to the sales of graves or the permits to bury, because we do not think that the grantor in the trust had any such idea in mind.

In our view of the case it stands like those involving the right of a life tenant to continue the operation of mines or quarries. In such case, according to all the authorities, the life tenant has the right to continue the operation, although the corpus of the estate is thereby diminished or even exhausted, and is not liable to impeachment for waste therefor.

In Billings v. Taylor, 10 Pick. 460, a husband died seized of a tract of land of 4 acres in extent, consisting of a slate quarry, mostly below the surface, but partially above. One-quarter of an acre had been dug over, and the practice was to take a section of 10 or 12 feet square on the surface and to go down to a certain depth and then begin on the surface again. It was held that not only that portion of the quarry which had been actually dug, but the whole extent owned by the husband, must be considered as opened, and so the widow was entitled to dower in the same.

Digitized by Google

In New York the right of a dower has been held to attach to a bed of iron ore, and that such a bed of considerable extent must be regarded as opened, although the openings which had been wrought by the husband had been partially filled up and abandoned. Coates v. Cheever, 1 Cow. 460.

In Reed v. Reed, 16 N. J. Eq. 248, it was held that a tenant for life is entitled to work any mine, quarry, claypit, or sandpit which has been opened and used by the former owner, that being the mode of enjoyment of the land to which he is entitled.

The same rule is recognized in Gaines v. Green Pointed Iron Mining Company, 32 N. J. Eq. 86, 101. The law gives to the life tenant the right to pursue by mining the same means of deriving profit from the lands which were taken by the former owner, though it be destructive of the substance of the estate. Rockwell v. Morgan, 2 Beav. 384. He may sink new shafts better to reach the contents of the vein and to reach the lower strata.

Ward v. Carp River Iron Company, 47 Mich. 65, was an action of trover by the purchaser of an iron mine at an execution sale after the time for redemption had expired and he had received his deed against a purchaser from the judgment debtor, for iron ore which had been taken from the mine after the sale. It was held that the action could not be maintained, there being no presumption of law that the taking of ore from an open mine is waste on the part of one having rightful possession. In this case the judgment debtor had a right to continue to use the lands until the expiration of fifteen (15) months, doing no injury to the freehold.

In Russell v. Merchants' Bank of Lake City, 47 Minn. 286, it was held that where works for the manufacture of brick had been constructed and clay beds opened and worked by joint owners upon a common property a cotenant could not enjoin his cotenant in possession from continuing the business in the customary way.

Great stress was laid in the argument upon the use of the words in the trust deed "rents, issues, and profits," which it was said could not be held to include such a use as the land is being put to in this case; but we think the use in this case can hardly be distinguished in principle from the use in the cases already cited.

The result is that the rule to show cause why an injunction should not be issued or a receiver be appointed must be discharged.

Marriage—Impotency.—Where a wife brings suit for the annulment of the marriage on the ground of the impotency of the husband, the court has, as an incident of its jurisdiction of such actions, the power to require the husband to pay her counsel fees pendente lite—Gore v. Gore, 92 N. Y. Supp. 634.

Elevator Accident—Negligence.

In the case of Green, Admx., v. Urban Contracting and Heating Company, recently decided by the Supreme Court of New York (Appellate Division, First Department), and reported in the New York Law Journal, the action was to recover damages for the death of the plaintiff's intestate, alleged to have been caused by the negligence of the defendants in the operation of a passenger elevator. In the trial court there was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff; but the Appellate Division reverses this judgment, holding that plaintiff's intestate was guilty of contributory negligence and also that there was no evidence showing that defendants were negligent. The opinion of the court, by Ingraham, J., is as follows:

The defendant Oppenheimer was the owner of a building at the corner of Seventeenth street and Fifth avenue, in the city of New York, having purchased the building in January, 1904. In this building there was a passenger elevator on the Fifth avenue front and a freight elevator on a passageway opening in Seventeenth street, in the rear of the building. The firm of Peller Brothers occupied two of the lofts in the building, and their employees were in the habit of using the freight elevator for access to the Peller lofts. This elevator was operated by electricity, and when the defendant Oppenheimer purchased the premises he found in existence a contract made by the former owner and the defendant Urban Contracting and Heating Company by which the contracting company agreed "to furnish and pay a competent engineer, who will operate the freight elevator during the summer months, take proper care of the electric elevators, pumps, etc., in the building known as 91 Fifth avenue, in the said city of New York," and "to furnish and pay one competent elevator attendant, in uniform, for the passenger elevator, and one elevator attendant for the freight elevator, during the heating season, the hours for elevator service and heat to be in accordance with tenants' leases," and, further, to furnish all the coal and wood and other supplies required for the proper operation and care of the boiler, elevators, and pumps, and to keep them all in thorough order and repair at its own cost and expense, and to attend to all minor repairs of the building. In consideration of such services the owner of the building was to pay to the Urban Company $1,600 per annum.

The defendant Oppenheimer, finding this contract in existence, continued it by a verbal agreement by which the Urban Company undertook to manage the machinery and elevators and to employ the elevator boy and engineer in control thereof. During the night the electricity was shut off so that the elevator could not be moved, but in the morning the engineer employed by the Urban Company was in the habit of coming into the building about 6 o'clock, looking over the machinery and turning on the current so that the elevators could be moved. It was the duty of the elevator boy who was employed by the Urban Company under its contract with the defendant Oppenheimer to run the elevator. The elevator was moved by a rope passing through the elevator and down the elevator shaft into the cellar, so that when the electricity was turned on by pulling this rope the elevator could be made to ascend or descend, as required.

Digitized by Google

On the morning of the 16th of April, 1904, several employees of Peller Brothers arrived at the building to go to work. There was evidence that one of the two doors closing the entrance to the elevator on the ground floor was open, but that the elevator boy was not there; that several of the employees of Peller Brothers went into the elevator and stood there, waiting to be taken up to their work; that the plaintiff's intestate, who was also an employee of Peller Brothers, came and stood at the opening into the elevator, one foot upon the floor of the elevator and the other on the floor of the building, and that the elevator for some unexplained reason started up, carrying the plaintiff's intestate up between the elevator and the wall, causing him an injury which resulted in his death.

The plaintiff has brought this action against both the owner of the building and the Urban Contracting and Heating Company, claiming that they were both guilty of negligence. The evidence is undisputed that the elevater itself was in good order, and it is not claimed that the accident was caused because of defective machinery or of any other defect in the elevator or the building. After the power had been turned on, any one of those upon the elevator, by pulling this rope, could have caused the elevator to move, but the evidence is undisputed that without a movement of the rope the elevator could not move, as the machinery was so arranged that if the rope had been in a position to allow the elevator to move when the power was turned on, the sudden current of electricity would have caused a fuse to burn out, which would have prevented the elevator from moving at all. I think that, upon the whole evidence, a finding that the motion of this elevator was caused in any other way than by a movement of the rope in the elevator would be against the weight of evidence.

When these employees of Peller Brothers arrived in the morning the elevator boy was not present, and instead of waiting outside of the elevator, where they would have been safe, they took their places in the elevator, waiting there for the boy to come, and the plaintiff's intestate then placed himself partly in the elevator and partly on the floor of the building, in a position of danger in case the elevator should move, and stood there talking to his associates. The elevator did move and the injury resulted because the plaintiff's intestate had placed himself in this position of danger. There was certainly no invitation to the plaintiff's intestate, either by Oppenheimer, who was the owner of the building, or by the Urban Contracting and Heating Company, who was operating the elevator, to place himself in this position. In the absence of the elevator boy these men had no business in the elevator. It stood there empty, without anyone in control of it, and was not in a condition for use. Neither of the defendants could have anticipated that persons wishing to use the elevator would stand upon it and wait there for the boy employed to operate the elevator to come.

But whatever may be said about these men who stood in the elevator, certainly one placing himself at the entrance of the elevator in such a position that the slightest movement of it would be certain to cause an injury, was not in a position to which he was invited by either of the defendants. If the car had suddenly started as he was walking into the elevator a different question would be presented. The evidence of the plaintiff's witnesses is clear that the plaintiff's intestate stood in this position talking to the other men for some appreciable time before the elevator started. If he had been outside of the elevator he would have been safe, but placing himself in this position—a position obviously dangerous—was not the act of a prudent person, and an injury that resulted from his thus placing himself in such a position is not one for which the defendants are liable.

As before stated, the machinery was in perfect order. There is no evidence that the elevotor was caused to move by the act of any agent or employee of either of the defendants, and there is, therefore, nothing to justify a verdict of negligence against either of the defendants. The elevator boy at the time had gone down into the cellar and was preparing for his day's work. The elevator had not been used on this morning. No one had been invited on this morning to use it, and until the boy whose duty it was to operate the elevator had arrived and taken charge of it it was not in a condition to be used.

Assuming that the maxim res ipsa loquitur would apply, and that in the absence of some explanation the sudden starting of the elevator would justify a submission of this case to the jury as to whether there was any negligence on the part of those responsible for its management, from uncontradicted evidence it appears that the elevator was in perfect order, and that the accident was not caused by any act of negligence of the defendants. Any presumption, therefore, that would have justified a finding of negligence because of the accident is rebutted, and there is no ground upon which a finding of negligence can be sustained.

In Griffin v. Manice (166 N. Y. 188), the duty of the owner of a building to those using an elevator operated and maintained by the owner was discussed, and the conclusion was that the owner of the building owed those using the elevator the duty of using at least reasonable care in seeing that the premises were safe, and that if a person thus using the elevator was injured by an accident which could not ordinarily have occurred had the elevator machinery been in proper condition and properly operated, the court was justified in permitting the jury to infer negligence from an accident. The judgment in that case having been reversed there was a new trial, when the defendant's evidence was taken, and it again came before this court on appeal (74 App. Div. 371), and the question presented was whether or not the evidence as a whole justified a finding that the defendant was remiss in his duty in exercising the degree of care which the law imposed upon him, namely, ordinary care for the protection of the plaintiff's intestate, and after discussing the evidence, we held that a finding of negligence on the part of the defendant was not sustained where it appeared that there was no defect in the machinery or any indication to the defendant or his employees that there was any danger in the operation of the elevator, and that the direction of a verdict for the defendant was proper, and this judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeals (174 N. Y. 505). This, I think, is a decisive authority against sustaining a verdict for the plaintiff in this case.

Digitized by Google

Here the undisputed evidence is that the machinery was all in perfect order; that the defendant's employees were engaged in getting ready to start the elevator in the morning; that before it was ready for use, and before an employee of the defendants was actually in charge of it, a tenant in the building walked into the elevator, standing in a position which was dangerous if there was a movement of it, without any invitation of the defendants or their employees, express or implied; and that an unexplained movement of the elevator resulted in an accident. For this the defendants were not liable.

The case of Ingrafia v. Samuels (71 App. Div. 14), is not at all in point, for there the accident was caused by the negligence of the elevator man, who deliberately left the car before the others, who were passengers upon it, leaving them there unprotected, and it was this act of the elevator man that was the basis of the finding of negligence. In sustaining a verdict in that case the court said: "His negligence, therefore, in thus leaving the car and its occupants before they had opportunity to safely alight, in view of his knowledge or means of knowing that such an accident could occur, and was to be guarded against, was a failure to observe that reasonable care which, as stated in the recent case of Griffen v. Manice (166 N. Y. 188), is required in the maintenance and operation of an elevator."

In this case there is no evidence that the operation of the car had commenced, that the plaintiff's intestate or his associates had been invited to enter the car, or that the agents of the defendants could have anticipated that the defendant's employees would get upon the elevator and wait there rather than to remain in a place of safety outside of the car. The mere fact that the door of the elevator was open was not an invitation for any one to get into the elevator when no one was in charge of it.

If this view of the case is correct, the plaintiff's intestate was guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law in placing himself in this position, with one foot upon the elevator and the other on the floor of the building, when there was no one in charge of the elevator, and it was his negligence that caused the injury, and there is no evidence to show that the defendants or either of them were negligent.

The judgment and order must, therefore, be reversed and a new trial ordered, with costs to the appellants to abide the event.

McLaughlin and McLaughlin, JJ., concur.
Patterson and O'Brien, JJ., dissent.

Headquarters for legal blanks of all kinds.

Master and Servant—Injuries to Servant—Electric Light Trimmer—Defective Poles—Safe Place to Work—Negligence—Assumed Risk.

In Dawson v. Lawrence Gas Light Co., decided by the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, Essex, in June, 1905 (74 N. E. 912), it appeared that plaintiff, an electric light trimmer, was injured by the fall of an electric light pole which he had climbed and which, after the accident, was found to be decayed below the ground. Plaintiff had no experience with reference to such poles, and it was no part of his duty to examine them. Defendant's superintendent testified that he did not know what the life of such a pole was, but did know that it ought to be inspected, but did not know how often the poles were inspected at the time of the accident, and that there was no special time for examinations. It was held that plaintiff did not assume the risk of such injury.

It was further held that defendant being bound to furnish plaintiff with a safe place to work, such facts established negligence on its part. The court said:

This is an action of tort for personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff from the fall of a pole erected by the defendant for the support of wires and an electric arc lamp.

The declaration contains two counts under Rev. Laws, chap. 106, sec. 71, and one at common law. While the pleadings are referred to in the bill of exceptions, no question is made in regard to them. It appeared in evidence that the pole was of hard pine, squared, about 28 feet high, and in the spring before the accident it had been painted by the employees of the defendant from the surface of the ground to the top. It was provided with iron spikes or bolts inserted upon alternate sides of the pole for climbing. It had one arm extending into the street, but the electric light was placed on the top. Two electric wires ran from it to poles on the other side of the street. The accident happened on July 9, 1903. At this time the plaintiff was 41 years of age and weighed about 175 pounds. The plaintiff entered the employ of the defendant in September, 1902. Before this he had had no experience in this kind of work. He was employed as a lamp trimmer, and his work was each day to clean the electric lamps, remove the old carbons, and insert new ones. He was shown his work and what he had to do. About one month before the accident his route was increased, so that twenty-nine more poles, one of which was the pole that fell, were added to his route. The plaintiff had in all something over fifty poles to look after, but out of these there were only eighteen that he had to climb. On the rest of the poles the lamp could be lowered by means of a rope.

Upon the day of the accident he ascended the pole in question by placing a ladder against it and then climbing up upon the iron bolts or spikes until he got to the top. Then there was a crash, and the pole fell, and the plaintiff was thrown to the sidewalk and sustained the injuries complained of. The plaintiff had ascended the pole in the same way every day for about a month before the accident, had never seen anything the matter with the pole, or anything to call his attention to it, and never had been instructed to report any defect or trouble with the pole. The plaintiff testified that at the time of the accident there were five or six linemen in the employ of the defendant; that the linemen erected and took down the poles and strung the wires; that he had nothing to do with their erection or care; that he never had worked as a lineman or painted any poles, and that his duties were as previously stated. It appeared that the pole was not guyed. Several witnesses were called as to the condition of the pole immediately after the accident. They all agreed that it was rotten below the surface of the ground. Some placed the rotten spot at two or three inches below the surface, and some at five or six inches.

Digitized by Google

One Sargent, the superintendent of the defendant, called as a witness by the plaintiff, testified on direct examination that there were six or seven linemen in the employ of the defendant, whose duty it was to erect and take down poles, to string the wires and paint the poles; that the poles were not painted at any set time, but when they needed it; that they were painted from the surface of the ground to the top, the intention being to cover all that was exposed to the weather; that the linemen were provided with small poles with steel points at one end, which could be and were used for the purpose of determining whether the electric light poles were in good condition; that it was the duty of the linemen to examine the poles and see their condition; that this can be done by prodding at the bottom of the poles, and that their condition can be detected by prodding down into the ground, if it is not too far down, and that he did not think that five or six inches below the surface of the sidewalk was too far down. On cross-examination the witness testified that the pole was a square hard pine pole; that he did not know what its life was, but knew that it had a life, and ought to be inspected once in a while; that he did not know how often the poles of the defendant were inspected at the time of the accident; that there was no special time for the examination of poles, and no special interval between examinations.

The defendant introduced no evidence, and at the close of the plaintiff's testimony asked the judge to rule that there was no evidence which would authorize the jury to find for the plaintiff, and also asked that the judge direct a verdict for the defendant. The judge refused both of these rulings. The case was submitted to the jury under instructions, which were not otherwise excepted to, and the jury found for the plaintiff.

The contention of the defendant is that the danger of the pole falling was an obvious one; that the plaintiff assumed the risk, and that there was no evidence which would warrant the jury in finding that the defendant was negligent. The defendant relies upon the case of McIsaac v. Northampton Elec. Lighting Co., 172 Mass. 89, 51 N. E. 524, 70 Am. St. Rep. 244, and Tanner v. N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., 180 Mass. 572, 62 N. E. 993. These were cases of experienced linemen, as has been already pointed out in Lord v. Wakefield, 185 Mass. 214, 216, 217, 70 N. E. 123.

In the present case the plaintiff was not a lineman, but a cleaner of lamps. It was no part of his duty to inspect the poles. This duty the defendant had delegated to its linemen, as appears from the testimony of the superintendent of the defendant company. It was the duty of the defendant to furnish a safe place for the plaintiff to work, and the duty of inspection which the defendant recognized could not by being delegated, relieve the defendant from liability. There was no obvious risk which the plaintiff assumed. The danger was underground. There was no evidence that the plaintiff knew that the life of a pole was limited. The superintendent knew this fact, but testified that he did not know what the life of this pole was, "but knew that it had a life and ought to be inspected once in a while." We are of opinion, therefore, that the defendant's requests for instructions were rightly refused, and the case was properly submitted to the jury. Chisholm v. New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., 185 Mass. 82, 69 N. E. 1042.

Automobiles—Duty of Driver to Slow Down When Turning Corners.

In Buscher, administrator, v. New York Transportation Company, decided by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, the action was to recover damages for the killing of a child occasioned by the alleged negligence of the defendant. It is held that it is the duty of the operator of an automobile to slow down and operate the machine with care in turning street corners so as to avoid injury to pedestrians. It is further held that in the case at bar the question of the contributory negligence of the decedent was for the jury. The opinion of the court is as follows:

The action is brought to recover damages for the death of plaintiff's intestate, which, it is averred, was occasioned by the negligence of the defendant. It was admitted upon the trial that the decedent, a child 8 years and 3 months of age, was killed by being run over by an automobile operated and controlled by an employee of the defendant; that the accident happened at the corner of Fortieth street and Tenth avenue, in the city of New York, on the 14th day of April, 1902; that the automobile was the property of the defendant, and that at the time the employee operating it was engaged in the defendant's business. At the close of the plaintiff's case the court dismissed the complaint upon the ground that there was no evidence tending to show the absence of negligence contributing to the injury upon the part of the deceased.

The evidence would have authorized the jury to find that the deceased was a bright, active boy, capable in some degree of caring for himself while on the street. The proof upon the part of the plaintiff tended to establish that the automobile was running at a very rapid rate of speed westward on Fortieth street; that as it reached the corner of the street it turned northward into Tenth avenue without slackening its speed and without giving any signal of its approach. Two witnesses crossed the street ahead of the automobile before the accident happened, and were obliged to hurry to get out of its way. At that time the boy was about 15 feet north of the corner of Tenth avenue, standing on the sidewalk. As the witnesses crossed the street their backs were toward the automobile, and almost immediately they heard a scream, turned and saw the hind wheel of the automobile passing over the boy's body, about 2 feet distant from the curb.

Digitized by Google

We think the evidence was sufficient to justify a finding that the defendant was guilty of negligence in the operation of the automobile, and we are also of the opinion that the question was for the jury as to the contributory negligence of the deceased. A person, whether adult or infant, had the right to assume that the defendant, in the operation of the automobile, would exercise care and respect the rights of pedestrians when it had occasion to turn the corner of the street. Due care in its operation required, under such circumstances, that the vehicle should be slowed down and operated with care. At such place the operator was bound to take notice that people might be at the crossing or entering thereon, and this obligation upon the part of the operator of the machine was one which a pedestrian would have a right to assume would be observed. Upon the proof the jury were authorized to find that the operator of this machine exercised no care whatever in turning the corner of the street where the accident happened. Under such circumstances, whether the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence, or whether his act constituted the proximate cause of the accident, was a question of fact for the jury. Costello v. Third Ave. R. R., 161 N. Y. 317.

In McDonald v. Met. St. Ry. (80 App. Div. 233), it was held by a unanimous court that "in the case of infants under the age of twelve years the burden of proof is upon the defendant to show the possession by such infant of sufficient mental capacity to understand, appreciate, and guard against the situation in which it is placed, and that plaintiff may rest in respect of such question upon the legal presumption which protects the infant from the imputation of negligence, unless it be a case where the negligence of the infant is imputable to the parent." There is no question in this case of negligence imputable to the parent. While it is true that an infant, even of tender years, must be held to the exercise of some care (Adams v. Nassau Elec. R. R., 41 App. Div. 334), yet in the case of an infant under 12 years of age, whether he be guilty of contributory negligence or not, where it does not appear that he was entirely lacking in care, becomes a question of fact for the jury, and it is error for the court to determine such question as matter of law.

It follows, therefore, that the judgment and order should be reversed and a new trial granted, with costs to the appellant to abide the event.

All concur.

Arrest by chief of police, who had a warrant in conjunction with deputy sheriff, held lawful. —Lee v. State (Tex.), 86 S. W. Rep. 804.

Accident Insurance—Risks Insured—Total Disability.

In James v. U. S. Casualty Co., decided by the Court of Appeals at Kansas City, Mo., in June, 1905 (88 S. W. 125), it was held that where an accident policy described the duties of insured, who was a queensware merchant, as consisting of "office duties and traveling," and insured against loss of time from injuries, but the parties, on trial of an action on the policy, introduced evidence as to whether plaintiff was disabled from performing any of his duties, the policy should be regarded as insuring against inability to substantially perform the general occupation of queensware merchant and not merely against inability to perform office duties and traveling.

It was further held that a provision in an accident policy that it insured against "total" inability to perform "any part of the duties" of insured, who was a merchant, can not be construed literally, but means inability to perform any substantial part of the business. The court said in part:

The evidence disclosed that plaintiff fell from a moving street car and was severely injured on and about the knee; that he was confined to his bed a small part of the time and went upon crutches all of the time for which he claims indemnity; that, excepting a time he was absent from the city, he came to his place of business almost daily, where he signed checks, approved orders for goods, and dictated letters. His absence was while he was on a business trip to New York for the purpose of buying goods. But he could not do many of the principal matters pertaining to the business of a queensware merchant. He could not get about the store and was compelled to sit in his office in a crippled condition. His wholesale house was a building of five or six stories, and his presence was required in all parts of it. His retail place was several blocks away, and his duties required him at each place every day when at home. When in health he looked after customers, sold goods, saw that they were packed and shipped. He supervised the force of employees, including traveling men who sold goods for the house in several States and Territories, and with these he frequently took trips. His efforts at business in New York were hampered by his injury. He could only visit a small number of the many houses he usually dealt with—perhaps only two. He was compelled to travel about in a cab, and to be accompanied by some one to assist him.

The parties were quite liberal in the breadth and scope each allowed the other at the trial of the cause, and that cuts an important figure in the conclusion we have reached, for the rule prevails uniformly in this State that the parties, on appeal are bound by the theory, mode, and manner they adopt in the trial court. Hill v. Drug Co., 140 Mo. 433, 41 S. W. 909. It appears that the policy did not insure plaintiff against a disabling of the performance of the general occupation of a proprietor of a wholesale and retail queensware merchant, for it specifically limited the insurance to the office duties and traveling of such occupation. And so the question should have been, under such limited view of the clause in question: "Was plaintiff wholly disabled from performing office duties and traveling?" The evidence shows that he was, perhaps, not so disabled, for he did, practically, much of the office duties he could have performed had he not been injured, and he did a part of the traveling. But defendant allowed the issues to broaden into the field of the plaintiff's general occupation as a wholesale and retail queensware merchant, for, while objection was made to plaintiff showing that he was substantially prevented from attending to his business as a queensware merchant, an examination of the record will show that no effort was made to confine such business to the two branches, viz, office business and traveling.

Digitized by Google

In other words, that point on the policy was not made and plaintiff was permitted by defendant to state the relation the injury had to his performing the whole business, defendant's counsel joining in such examination; that is, the parties have interpreted the policy as covering, generally, the entire business of a wholesale and retail queensware merchant. And plaintiff, not to be outdone in courtesy and liberality, permitted defendant to inquire into plaintiff's various other occupations, such as member of the school board, director of other business corporations, etc., with a view of ascertaining if he was wholly disabled from performing the duties devolving upon him in those parts of his business. One might be very well able to perform the duties of a director in a school or gas company and yet be wholly unable to travel or conduct the office of a queensware merchant. So we take the case as we find it, and must, therefore, determine whether the trial court would have been justified, under the evidence, in declaring, as a matter of law, that plaintiff was not wholly disabled from performing the general occupation of a wholesale and retail queensware merchant.

If, as appears from a case cited further on, a physician was insured for that occupation, he might receive an injury which would wholly disable him, physically, from going about to visit patients, yet leave him able to dictate prescriptions from a sick room; or the injury might leave him able to travel around as usual, but mentally unable to give prescriptions. In neither instance would a court be justified in declaring, as a matter of law, that he was not wholly disabled to perform the calling of a physician in the sense of the contract. We therefore hold the contract to mean, not that the assured was rendered absolutely and literally unable to perform any part of his occupation, but that he was disabled from performing substantially the occupation stated in the policy. Young v. Ins. Co., 80 Me. 244, 13 Atl. 896; Wolcott v. Ins. Co., 55 Hun. 98, 8 N. Y. Supp. 263; Hohn v. Ins. Co., 115 Mich. 79, 72 N. W. 1105; Turner v. Ins. Co., 112 Mich. 425, 70 N. W. 898, 38 L. R. A. 529, 67 Am. St. Rep. 428. In the latter case the assured's occupation was that of a real estate agent. His injury was a dislocation of the shoulder, which did not prevent him going to his office every day. Yet the court held that it should not be said, as a matter of law, that he was not wholly disabled within the meaning of the policy. These cases are supported by text writers. 4 Joyce on Ins., sec. 3031.

But stress is laid by defendant's able counsel upon a part of the clause above set out, which itself assumes to define what is meant by "wholly disabled," wherein it is said that the assured must be "totally" unable to perform "any part" of his duties. We do not consider that such provision has any material control over the other portion of the clause. When parties enter into a contract, it must be assumed that they intended that which in certain events or contingencies would mean something and have some effective force. And so it has been held that if a promisory note reads that A promises not to pay B $100, the word "not" will be disregarded, since the parties must have meant something by the execution of the note. Story on Promissory Notes, sec. 12; 1 Parsons, Notes and Bills, 26.

The occupation of a merchant calls for both mental and physical exertion. If "wholly disabled" means that he shall, literally, be totally unable to perform any part of his business, then mental capacity exercised in merely directing, in a single instance, a matter the most trivial—as, for instance, to sweep the floor—or the physical effort of doing it himself, would bar a recovery on the policy. Total mental disability means that one must have his mental faculties entirely suspended, and total physical disability means the loss of power to move. It can not be that the parties intended that before an assured could recover on the policy he should lie the full period of his injury in a state of coma. To interpret the clause in its contractual sense, as defendant seeks to have us do, would render the contract utterly useless to an assured, and would be nothing short, practically speaking, of collecting a premium without rendering a consideration. We therefore find ourselves driven back to the position taken by the authorities on the construction of the first part of the clause, viz, that the disability meant is a disability as to the performance of any substantial part of the business.

Subrogation—Paying Incumbrance for Another—Agreement for Subrogation.

In a proceeding entitled Re McGuire, decided by the United States District Court, N. D. Ohio, in May, 1905 (137 Fed. 967), it was held that one who, at the request of a debtor, furnishes the money to discharge a lien, under an agreement that he shall have the same lien, is entitled in equity to be subrogated to the lien of the creditor whose debt is paid. The court said:

This matter is before the court on the petition of the trustee for the review of the decision of the referee with reference to the claim of G. A. Cassell.

The facts in the case are as follows: McGuire, the bankrupt, in October, 1902, purchased a farm for $3,500, giving in payment $500 in cash, and six notes for $500 each, the first payable April 1, 1904, and the others annually thereafter, the notes being secured by mortgage on the farm. The mortgagee transferred the first three notes. When the first note became due, Cassell, at the request of the mortgagor, and upon the mortgagor's promise to turn over to him this first note, advanced to the mortgagor the money with which to pay the note, which was taken up by McGuire and given to Cassell. There seems to have been some argument between McGuire and Cassell on the one hand, and the agent of the holder of the note on the other, at the time of the negotiations for payment of the note. The latter refusing to assign the note, and stating that he would mark it "paid," but at the time of the payment no such indorsement was made.

Digitized by Google

Cassell claims that he is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the original payee of the note under the mortgage executed by McGuire to secure it, and this claim is disputed by the trustee. The contention of the claimant was sustained by the referee.

The doctrine of subrogation will be applied, in general, wherever any person, other than a mere volunteer, pays a debt or demand which, in equity and good conscience, should have been satisfied by another. Was Cassell, in the dealings above cited, a mere volunteer? In the case of Home Sav. Bank v. Bierstadt, 168 Ill. 618, 48 N. E. 161, 61 Am. St. Rep. 146, the court says:

"Subrogation, as a principle of equity jurisprudence, is generally confined to the relation of principal and surety and guarantors, or to a case where a person is compelled to remove a superior title to that held by him in order to protect his own, and also to cases of insurers. . . . Whilst these general heads include the doctrine and principles of subrogation, that doctrine has been steadily expanding and growing in importance and extent in its application to various subjects and classes of persons. This equitable principle is enforced solely for the accomplishment of substantial justice, where one has an equity to invoke which can not injure an innocent person.

The right of subrogation which springs from the mere fact of the payment of a debt, and which is included under the heads first above stated, is what is termed legal subrogation, and exists only where included within those classes. But, in addition to this principle of legal subrogation, there exists another principle, which is termed conventional subrogation, which results from an equitable right springing from an express agreement with the debtor, by which one advances money to pay a claim for the security of which there exists a lien, by which agreement he is to have an equal lien to that paid off, whereupon he is entitled to the benefit of the security which he has satisfied with the expectation of receiving an equal lien. . . . It is the agreement that the security shall be kept alive for the benefit of the person making the payment which gives the right of subrogation, because it takes away the character of a mere volunteer."

In the case of Wilkins v. Gibson, 113 Ga. 31, the court says, on page 43, 38 S. E. 374, 379, 84 Am. St. Rep. 204:

"In a case where a stranger pays off the debt of another which is secured by deed or mortgage the parties have a right to agree that the payor will have the same priority as the holder of the security, and be substituted for him. A court of equity will enforce this agreement as made, and give the second creditor just such security as he contracts for."

The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, in the case of Rachal et al. v. Smith et al., 101 Fed. 159, 164, 42 C. C. A. 297, 302, says:

"Since the equitable doctrine of subrogation was ingrafted on the English equity jurisprudence from the civil law it has been steadily growing in importance, and widening in its sphere of application. It is a creation of equity, and is administered in the furtherance of justice. It is applied to give the party who actually pays the debt the full benefit and advantage of such payment. It has been long settled, and it is not controverted, that the doctrine applies where a junior incumbrancer discharges the prior incumbrance, and where the surety pays the debt of his principal, and in cases of like character.

"A just limitation of the application of the doctrine is that it does not apply to payments made by a mere volunteer or stranger. 'No one can be allowed to intrude himself upon another as his surety, and, therefore, if a man voluntarily pays the debt of another, without any agreement to that effect with the debtor, he can not take the place of the creditor, or in any way recover the money so paid of the debtor, because the law does not permit one man thus officiously and without solicitation to intermeddle with the affairs of another.' Winder v. Diffenderfer, 2 Bland, 199; Harris, Subr. p. 558, sec. 810, note 'h.' This objection is made in the present case. It is urged that Francis Smith, in advancing the money to pay the mortgages, was a mere volunteer within the meaning of the authorities, and that the doctrine of subrogation, therefore, does not apply. It will be remembered that the money was lent and applied to the payment of the mortgages at the request of the debtor, the new mortgage being taken on the same lands covered by the older mortgages."

. . . . . .

Pomeroy, in his work on Equity Jurisprudence (1883, section 1212), after stating the general rule as to subrogation or equitable assignment in cases of payments made by persons who have subsequent interest in the premises, adds:

"The doctrine is also justly extended by analogy to one who, having no previous interest and being under no obligation, pays off the mortgage, or advances money for its payment, at the instance of a debtor party and for his benefit. Such a person is in no true sense a mere stranger and volunteer."

In the case of Straman v. Rechtine et al., 58 Ohio St. 443, 455, 51 N. E. 44, 46, the Supreme Court of Ohio says:

"Where money is loaned under an agreement to be used in the payment of a lien on real estate, and it is so used, and the agreement is that the one who loans the money shall have a first mortgage lien on the same land to secure his money, and through some defect in the new mortgage, or oversight as to other liens, the money can not be made on the last mortgage, the mortgagee has a right to be subrogated to the lien which the money supplied by him has paid, when it can be done without placing greater burdens upon the intervening lienholders than they would have borne if the old mortgage had not been released."

I am of the opinion that the facts in the case

Digitized by Google

under consideration clearly entitle Cassell to the relief claimed, and the decision of the referee is therefore affirmed.

Marriage Brokerage Contract.

The Supreme Court of Iowa holds a "marriage brokerage contract" to be invalid in the case of In re Grobe's Estate, 102 Northwestern Reporter, 804. The deceased agreed to pay complainant a certain amount if she would go to Chicago and see a woman whom deceased was desirous of marrying, and give her information concerning him. It did not appear whether deceased already had a contract of marriage with the woman or not, and in this respect the case differs somewhat from the ordinary marriage brokerage case. But the court holds that the rule that it is contrary to public policy to allow a recovery for services rendered in procuring a marriage, is as applicable to advice or solicitation with reference to carrying out a marriage contract as it is with reference to the formation of such a contract.

Humor of the Law.

Leonard Swett, the great Chicago lawyer, once agreed to charge a retainer of $100 per day in a criminal case wherein he was successful, and the trial lasted four days, but Swett forwarded a bill for $700. The satisfied client promptly sent in his check for the amount, although he could not quite understand the size of the bill. Some few days later, lawyer and client met casually, and the client quizzed the lawyer about the size of his bill. "You worked four days at $100 per day which makes $400, and yet your bill called for $700. How do you explain that?" quizzed the client. Swett readily explained that it was "a right," for he had accepted congratulations on his big victory for three full days, which was a part of the "refresher." The client was satisfied with Swett's explanations, thinking that the ways of lawyers like Swett are peculiar and past finding out.

Another story involving a serious example of absence of mind is told of a lawyer, who, on leaving his office to execute some business in another town, posted this card on his door: "Out of town, will be back tomorrow." On his return to his office on the morrow, he saw the above mentioned card and sat down on the last step of the stairs. A client coming up the stairs to see him, found the lawyer sitting as stated. Upon asking why he sat there, he, of the absent mind, pointed to the card and said: "He was waiting for his return."

Another judge has ruled that a wife has the right to pick her husband's pockets. Judge Slover declaring in the circuit court today that he would never interfere with that ancient and honorable right of a wife to search for loose change. W. M. Harding asked for a divorce from Ina M. Harding for several reasons, one of which was his wife had a habit of searching his pockets after he fell asleep. When the evidence was all in Judge Slover said:

"I want it distinctly understood that I am not granting this divorce because the wife went into her husband's pockets. I shall do nothing to interfere with that ancient privilege of the fair sex. A wife has the right to do that. I grant the divorce for other reasons."

The failure to perform an oral promise made by the sole heir at law of one desiring to dispose of her estate by will to third persons, that he will dispose of her estate as she desires, is held, in Cassels v. Finn (Ga.), 68 L. R. A. 80, not to make the heir at law of the promisor, in case of intestacy, a trustee ex maleficio as to the property inherited by him, in the absence of actual fraud.

Placing a car of lumber upon the team track, to be conveniently unloaded by the consignee, is held, in Southern R. Co. v. Lockwood Mfg. Co. (Ala.), 68 L. R. A. 227, not to be such an absolute delivery of the property into his possession as to cut off the carrier's lien for subsequent demurrage charges accruing while the lumber remains upon its car.

That the cause is ended is held, in Burdett v. Com. (Va.), 68 L. R. A. 251, not to prevent the punishment of a party for contempt in publishing an article charging the judge with misconduct during its trial, which consists in scandalizing and defaming the court itself. A note to this case reviews the other authorities on question of statements with respect to ended causes as contempt of court.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Ralston & Siddons, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of John Hay, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 30th day of August, 1905. J. W. WADSWORTH, JR., Mt. Morris, N. Y.; PAYNE WHITNEY, 51 Wall st., New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,136. Administration. 35-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Johanna Engel, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of August, 1905. NORMAN T. ENGEL, 590 Center Market. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,096. Administration. 35-3t

Lester & Price, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of James Coleman, sometimes known as James Colemon, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of August, 1905. E. L. SCHMIDT, HARRY M. PACKARD, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,118. Administration. 35-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caleb C. Willard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of August, 1905. KATE WILLARD BOYD, 1315 P st. N. W.; HENRY K. WILLARD, Kellogg Building; GEORGE E. HOWE, care of Henry K. Willard, Kellogg Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,101. Administration. 35-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Philo J. Lockwood, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,108. Administration. 35-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Louis Kurtz, Senior, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of August, 1905. ROBERT H. T. LEIPOLD, 1300 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,112. Administration. 35-3t

Legal Notices.

W. E. Harvey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Daniel A. Connolly, Deceased.
No. 1179. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration de bonus non on said estate, by William B. King, it is ordered this 29th day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to unknown next of kin and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 35-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Robt. E. Mattingly, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Margaret C. Mooney, Deceased.
No. 13,127. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Bettie Le Preux, it is ordered this 23d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mrs. Patrick Mooney, Mary Garbe, William Garbe, William Purcell, Florence Nicolls, Gertrude Mooney, Francis Mooney, and Walter Mooney, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 25th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 34-3t

H. Winship Wheatley, Attorney

In Justice's Court of the District of Columbia, Sub-District, No 2.
Northwest Eckington Improvement Company, a Corporation, v. Jane Arnold. At Law, No. —.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The object of this suit is to secure a judgment of condemnation of certain credits of the defendant amounting to one hundred and seventy-five 82-100 (175.82) dollars in the hands of a third party. It is, therefore this 19th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order to defend this suit, and to show cause why the plaintiff should not have judgment as set forth above. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. SAML. C. MILLS, Justice of the Peace, 1205 G street N. W. 34-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary C. Griffith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 18th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 18th day of August, 1905. JOHN R. KING, 615 15th st. N. W.; LINNIE BELL BATES, 1104 L st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,115. Admn. 34-3t

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Lavinia A. Hall, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 18th day of August, 1905. L. CABELL WILLIAMSON. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 11,904. Administration. 34-3t

Ralston & Siddons, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Helen C. Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of August, 1905. ALLAN R. CAMPBELL, 25 Broad st., New York City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,866. Administration. 34-3t

Julius I. Peyser, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Fannie Luchs, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of August, 1905. JOSEPH LUCHS, 823 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,117. Administration. 34-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Wilson & Barksdale, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John Hamerstrom, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of August, 1905. EMILY E. HAMERSTROM, 1338 N. Capitol st. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,094. Administration. 33-3t

W. Gwynn Gardiner, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Alfred A. Ames, Complainant, v. Hattie E. Ames et al., Defendants. Equity. No. 25,524.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce on the grounds of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is this 15th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Martin Glynn, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause shall be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. JOB BARNARD, Justice. True copy: J. R. Young, Clerk, by L. P. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 33-3t

Legal Notices.

S. D. Luckett, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Colorado, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Emily B. Muncey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 16th day of February, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 16th day of August, 1905. ELIZA BOOTH, CATHARINE R. BOOTH, Admxs., 622 and 624 F st. N. W., City. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 11,296. Administration. 33-3t

Wm. M. Lewin, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding the Probate Court.
In re Estate of M. Annie Van Mater, Deceased.
No. 12,398.

J. Bell Austin, executor of the last will and testament of M. Annie Van Mater, the above named decedent, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate known as lot numbered fifty-six (56) of a subdivision of the south grounds of Columbian College, and otherwise known as house and premises No. 1451 Stoughton street N. W., in said District of Columbia, of which real estate said decedent was seized and possessed at the time of her death, unto Carolyn G. Caughey, for the sum of seventy-two hundred and twenty-five dollars ($7,225), subject to existing lease, and to a mortgage for $4,000, with accrued interest, the same to be deducted from the purchase price, the balance to be paid in cash; it is this 14th day of August, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified aud confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown to this court on or before the 14th day of September, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned day. It is further ordered that said executor be and he is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the real estate agent finding said purchaser three (3) per centum on the amount of said sale, as a commission therefor. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 33-3t

Jas. A. Cobb, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Walter B. Hayson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of August, 1905. ABRAHAM HAYSON, Kenilworth, D. C. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,100. Administration. 33-3t

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Charles Henry Blumer, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 15th day of August, 1905. MAURICE D. ROSENBERG, Admr., by Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,392. Administration. 33-3t

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Eleanor M. Johnston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of August, 1905. JOHN VAN RENSSELAER, 2 Thomas Circle, city. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,102. Administration. 33-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Sophia Sautter, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of June, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of August, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., by Harry G. Meem, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,872. Administration. 33-2t

G. P. McGlue, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Daniel M. Ryan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of August, 1905. JAMES RYAN, 2911 13th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,922. Administration. 33-3t

Edward S. Duvall, Jr., Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Gustave Gunderson, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of August, 1905. EMMA R. TALBERT, 714 11th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,073. Administration. 33-3t

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Jane Roane, deceased has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 4th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 16th day of August, 1905. F. WALTER BRANDENBURG. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,351. Administration. 33-3t

Legal Notices.

L. E. Phillips, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Term for Equity Business.

Edward R. Taylor, Complainant, v. Julia Eva Taylor, Defendant; Julia Eva Taylor, Complainant in Cross Bill, v. Edward R. Taylor, Defendant in Cross Bill, and Mamie Downs, Defendant and Co-Respondent. Equity No. 22,820.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a vinculo from the defendant, Edward R. Taylor, upon the ground of the defendant's adultery with the defendant and co-respondent, Mamie Downs. On motion of the complainant in cross bill, Julia Eva Taylor, it is this 2d day of August, 1905, ordered that the defendant in cross bill, Edward R. Taylor, and the defendant and co-respondent in said cross bill, Mamie Downs, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. JOB BARNARD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 33-3t

Maurice Kelly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Anna Martin Rochester, Deceased.
No. 13,108. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by William Beatty Rochester, it is ordered this 17th day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Annie Townsend Rochester, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 18th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 33-3t

L. E. Phillips, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Term for Equity Business.

Katie L. Forrester, Complainant, v. Abram M. Forrester, Defendant. No. 25,412. Docket 56.

ORDER FOR APPEARANCE OF ABSENT DEFENDANT.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce a mensa et thoro from the defendant Abram M. Forrester, on the ground of the defendant's desertion of the complainant herein. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 19th day of July, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said day in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WRIGHT, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Harvey Given, Asst. Clerk. 33-3t

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Charles Milton Floyd, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 17th day of August, 1905. BERTHA F. IRWIN, Executrix, by Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,328. Admn. 33-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 • (WEEKLY) No 36

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - SEPTEMBER 8, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 561
The Bankrupt Law 562
SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Frederick Mertens et al., complainants, v. George Henry Proctor et al 565
COURT OF APPEALS OF MARYLAND:
Ward P. Littig, executor, etc., v. Vestry of Mt. Cavalry P. E. Church, etc 567
Miscellany 568
Legal Notices 574

Apartment House—Liability of Owner for Injury to Child of Tenant.

In Widing v. Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company, decided recently by the Supreme Court of Minnesota (104 N. W. 238), it appeared that the owner of a city apartment house rented flats therein to tenants for housekeeping purposes. For several years the children of the occupants had been allowed to play on the porches without reference to the relative occupancy of the adjacent apartments by their parents. Around these porches was a rail balustrade which had become defective, and had been repaired by the janitor in charge of the building. Two weeks afterwards it again broke, and was repaired by the tenant of the adjacent flat. A child 6½ years old, the daughter of one of the tenants, while on a visit to the flat having the defective porch, in playing with a companion ran against the same, and was precipitated to the ground and injured. It was held, upon these facts, first, that the injured child was not a trespasser or in a legal sense a mere licensee; and, second, that it was the duty of the owner of the building to exercise ordinary care to maintain railings around the porches where the children were permitted to play in a reasonably safe condition for use. The court said in part:

The theory of the learned trial court in dismissing the action was that plaintiff's child was trespassing upon the porch, or, at best, a mere licensee, and, conceding that she might have a right to be on the porch where her mother had stored her own articles, she did not have that same privilege on one of the porches of another tenant, but was required to take such premises at her own risk, or as she found them. It is a well settled principle of law which must be adhered to that trespassers are in duty bound to take the premises upon which they go as they are, and that the owner of the same is not in duty bound to go beyond the obligations which arise from actual or implied duties to provide a reasonably safe place for intruders or licensees. We have been cited to several cases which are supposed to be relevant to the questions here involved, but the peculiar situation that existed, in our judgment, must control and affect the liability based upon the particular facts before us, and no cited case is directly applicable. These apartments were occupied by tenants for domestic purposes. The defendant landlord, who rented and received compensation for their use, was in duty bound to contemplate all ordinary and reasonable purposes for which they might be used; and if, within such limitations, it was intended to restrict the occupancy of the porches by the tenants and their children, it was just and reasonable that such restrictions should be definitely made and brought home to such persons.

A number of families living in apartments like these would be reasonably expected to have children of tender years, and it would be difficult to prevent them from using the halls, though it might be done, as in this case, by regulation. It was also but reasonable to suppose that they would go upon the porches, and the fact that they had done so for a number of years without objection from the owner while the building was under the control of defendant's janitor, in connection with the natural and ordinary characteristics of children, has a tendency to establish an implied invitation to use the porches in this way. Defendant had knowledge not only of the fact of the use of the porches by the children of the building, but that the balustrade which was the direct cause of the injury was out of repair. The janitor in fact repaired it a sufficient length of time before the accident to put him upon inquiry that it was defective. The fact that it again got out of repair very soon would have a tendency, under such circumstances, to show that it was defective, and had not been properly repaired; and in permitting the balustrade to remain in a defective condition must be regarded as little less than a trap or hidden source of danger.

Under the evidence in this case, considering the use that was made of the building by the tenants, the natural relations that arise from such use, the habits of the children, their tendency, which can not be excluded from our inquiry, it seems very clear that it would be a question of fact for the jury to determine whether the defendant exercised proper care in maintaining the railing in a reasonably safe condition.

We may say with reference to testimony that was offered to show that there were no playgrounds in connection with the building that, while it was not the duty of the defendant to furnish a playground for the children, the natural tendency and inclination of the children, their habits, in connection with the permission it gave to use the porches, would require its surroundings and conditions to be shown, and that for this purpose it was error to exclude this evidence.

Digitized by Google

THE BANKRUPT LAW.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON COMMERCIAL LAW OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, held last week at Narragansett Pier, Rhode Island, the Committee on Commercial Law strongly disapproved of the bill pending in Congress to repeal the present bankrupt law, and states that while the "law is by no means perfect or incapable of improvement by amendment," the members of the committee regard it "as drawn upon correct lines and capable of perfection without drastic amendment." The report of the committee was signed by Messrs. Walter S. Logan, George Whitelock, and F. N. Judson, and is as follows:

To the American Bar Association:

Your Committee on Commercial Law respectfully report:

At the meeting of the association in 1897, a paper by Mr. Walter S. Logan, a member of the committee, entitled "A Broader Basis of Credit," was referred to this committee with instructions to report what, if, in their opinion, any legislation was necessary to carry out the suggestions contained in the paper, and to report such bill or bills as, in the judgment of the committee, should be deemed advisable to carry out such suggestions.

Before the meeting at which the committee was to report on this subject, the bankrupt law, approved July 1, 1898, was passed and went into effect. This law provided to a considerable extent a remedy for many of the evils pointed out in the paper referred to, but in the judgment of the committee and of this association was far from being perfect as a piece of legislation.

In the years 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, the committee made reports upon the bankrupt law and upon proposed amendments to it. All of these reports were approved—generally unanimously—by the association.

In the year 1899 the committee, after discussing the subject, summed up its conclusions as follows:

"Your committee on commercial law are of the opinion:

"1. That a bankrupt law is wise and beneficent legislation.

"2. That the general features of the present bankrupt law should have the approval and support of the bar and the commercial community.

"3. That whatever amendments are made to the provisions of the law relating to voluntary bankruptcy should be in line of a better protection to the creditor against fraud in the bankruptcy proceedings.

"4. That the amendments to the provisions of the law relating to involuntary bankruptcy should be along the lines of a better remedy for the creditor for fraud, actual or contemplated, on the part of the debtor previous to the institution of bankruptcy proceedings.

"5. That the ideal bankrupt law is one that—

"(a) Allows every honest debtor to procure a speedy discharge from his obligations upon the surrender of all his property.

"(b) Gives every creditor a complete remedy against actual or contemplated fraud on the part of the debtor.

"(c) Punishes all fraud on the part of debtor or creditor with relentless severity."

At the conclusion of the reading of this report it was moved by Mr. Robert D. Benedict, of New York, and seconded by Mr. Everett P. Wheeler, of New York, that the report be approved and adopted, and, further, that the committee be instructed to continue its study and investigation of the practical working of the Bankrupt Law, and to report further thereon at the next meeting of the association, with any amendments they may deem necessary for the perfection of the statute. This motion, after considerable discussion, was unanimously adopted.

At the meeting of the association in 1900 a report was made by the committee covering 14 full pages in the association's report, in which the amendments then pending before Congress, in what is known as the Ray Bill, were discussed at length and approved and other recommendations made in relation to the amendment of the law. The report was fully discussed at the meeting of the association, the discussion occupying the greater part of one entire session. Hon. E. C. Brandenburg, Assistant United States Attorney-General, having charge of bankruptcy proceedings, was present and was invited to participate in the discussion, and did so. After a comparatively unimportant amendment, the report was unanimously adopted.

In the report of the committee for the year 1901 the Ray Bill was further discussed and its passage advocated, and at the conclusion of its reading the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the report of the committee be accepted and approved, and

"Further resolved, That the Committee on Commercial Law for the ensuing year be authorized and instructed to continue the line of work of its predecessors, looking to the perfecting of the Bankrupt Law."

In the winter of 1901 and 1902 the Ray Bill passed the House of Representatives by an overwhelming majority, but was not acted upon by the Senate. In the report of your committee for 1902 the proposed amendments were still further discussed at considerable length and its conclusions unanimously approved and adopted, and the committee was again authorized and directed to advocate and urge proper legislation by Congress on the lines recommended by the report.

On February 5, 1903, the bill which had been so long and so earnestly advocated by the committee and supported by the association, after having been passed by both Houses of Congress, received the signature of the President and became a law. In the discussion of the subject before the committees of congress your Commercial Law Committee took a leading part, and its chairman was present in the rooms of the Senate Judiciary Committee at the request of the chairman of that committee when the bill was finally reported and put upon its passage in the Senate.

The bill as amended was not by any means all that your Committee on Commercial Law desired, but it was so great an improvement on any previous bankruptcy legislation, and embodies so much that your committee had long recommended, that your committee considered its passage a great triumph for the association. In the work of securing the passage of these amendments your committee co-operated with commercial bodies throughout the nation, and the adoption of the Ray Bill seemed to give general satisfaction to the legal and to the commercial community.

Digitized by Google

In the report of the committee for 1903 your committee again took strong ground in support of the bankrupt law, and, although their conclusions upon subjects other than the bankrupt law met with somewhat determined opposition in the association, their conclusions upon the bankruptcy question were accepted without question.

It thus appears that for seven consecutive years the Committee on Commercial Law have reported in favor of substantially the bankruptcy legislation which now appears upon the statute books of the United States, and that the association has at all times, with practical unanimity, sustained the committee in their work and adopted their conclusions.

If there is anything that the American Bar Association would seem committed to as a part of the permanent jurisprudence of the United States, it is a bankrupt law embodying the essential features of the present law. The lines upon which the battle for the bankrupt law has been fought are those laid down by the American Bar Association, and the existence of the present law is due in very large measure to its continued approval by this association and the constant contest which it has made in behalf thereof.

A bill is now pending before Congress which proposes to repeal this very bankrupt law. Your committee look upon this policy with the utmost disfavor. They believe that the bankrupt law, brought to its present improved state largely through the influence of this association, should be and remain a part of the legal polity of the nation. It should be perfected in all respects in which further improvement is possible. It should be made as far as possible a relief for the honest debtor, a protection for the honest creditor, and a means of punishment of all fraud in connection with bankruptcy.

If there are faults in the legislation they should be remedied by amendment. They should be eliminated by perfecting the existing law. If at any place or at any time this law is found to work injustice, its administration should be improved; but the body of the law should remain. To repeal the present law, only to reenact another at some future time, full of the crudities of new legislation, seems the height of legislative folly. If the law remains, modified only when necessary to make its provisions more logical and its administration more accurate, the business community and the legal profession will readily accommodate themselves to the changes as they have already accommodated themselves to the body of the enactment. If, on the other hand, a bankrupt law is to survive its enactment for a few brief years only, and no national system is to exist for an ensuing period until a new scheme of Federal policy is adopted, as has been the past history of bankruptcy legislation in this country, the path of the business man is made harder both by the enactment of the law and by its repeal, and the course of justice runs not on an even keel, but interruptedly, intermittently, and unsatisfactorily.

The present law has its enemies. One of its unpopular features in certain quarters is that which prevents preferences and compels all creditors of a bankrupt to share ratably in the division of his estate, a feature which your committee highly commend. Many creditors think that in the race and scramble for a preference they are in a position to fare better than their less fortunate or less favorably situated neighbors. But, however much they might profit by possible preferences, the business community and the general public suffer, and the policy is mischievous.

Your committee can not conceive that the people of the United States would ever be willing to go back permanently to the methods prevailing at times when there was no national bankrupt law. The only fair and equitable method for the division of an insolvent's estate is the method prescribed by the law. No State statute could take its place, for in these days of world-wide commercial relations no one State can have the requisite jurisdiction.

It would, in the judgment of your committee, be a reactionary and retrogressive movement to deprive the community of this enactment, which allows an honest but unfortunate debtor to start life anew on the condition of surrendering his whole property to his creditors, and which permits creditors, by taking the initiative, to rescue the salvage of an otherwise hopeless wreck, and to pursue this course without engaging in an unseemly scramble for preferences as among themselves.

"Your committee, therefore, recommend that the American Bar Association adhere to the strong stand taken in years past in support of a Bankrupt Law as a part of the permanent jurisprudence of the United States, and in support of the present law as being on the whole the best law heretofore enacted.

Your committee specifically recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

"Resolved, 1. That the American Bar Association approves now, as it has heretofore frequently approved, a Bankrupt Law as a permanent part of the jurisprudence of the United States.

"2. That the association regards the present law as by no means perfect or incapable of improvement by amendment, but as drawn upon correct lines and capable of perfection without drastic amendment.

"3. That the association disapproves of the bill now pending for the repeal of this law, and earnestly asks Congress not to pass it.

"4. That the Committee on Commercial Law be and they are authorized and requested to oppose the passage of the act before the proper congressional committees and its signature by the President, if passed.

"5. That the members of the association, in sympathy with the conclusions expressed by the committee, be and they are requested to communicate with their Senators and Representatives in Congress to that effect.

Digitized by Google

"6. That the secretary of the association be, and he is hereby directed, to send a copy of these resolutions to each member of the association as soon after this meeting as practicable without waiting for the publication of the annual report.

Insurance Policy—Conditions—Construction of "Loss Payable" Indorsement—Stipulation Against Chattel Mortgage.

In Atlas Reduction Co. v. New Zealand Life Insurance Co., decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit (138 Fed. 497), the following points were decided:

1. A policy of insurance is a contract by the terms of which must be measured the right of the insured and the obligation of the insurer.

2. Stipulations in written policies of insurance intended to preserve the policy from change or alteration by parol, and to make it and such indorsements thereon or additions thereto as may be made in writing a complete repository and memorial of the entire agreement, are valid and for the benefit of both parties and of the community at large; and to give effect to the purpose of such a stipulation, so far as it can reasonably be done, especial care should be taken to find in the policy and in any indorsements thereon or additions thereto the means of its or their proper interpretation, without resort to parol evidence.

3. An indorsement was made upon a policy of fire insurance, by the agents of the insurer, at the request of the insured, as follows: "Subject to all the conditions of this policy, loss, if any, payable to D. & S. as their interest may appear." Held: (a) The indorsement must be read in the light of the purpose which actuated the parties in stipulating that the policy could be modified, or any provision thereof waived, only by a writing of equal dignity and credit with the policy itself. (b) Such an indorsement is a common mode of furnishing a species of security by a debtor to his creditor, who may be willing to trust to the debtor's honesty, skill, and success in trade, but who requires some indemnity against such accidents as loss by fire; and it does not create a new contract of insurance with the payee, or abrogate or waive any condition of the policy. (c) The terms of the indorsement are not conflicting, but consistent and plain, and their purpose and effect are to make D. & S. the simple appointees of the insured to receive payment of any loss payable to the insured under the policy, and to receive it, not absolutely, but to the extent of any interest they may have in such payment at the time of the loss, consistently with the due observance by the insured of all the conditions of the policy. (d) The words "as their interest may appear" are plainly prospective, and refer to an interest, not in the property insured, but in the payment of the loss. They are words of restriction, without which the whole loss would be payable absolutely to D. & S., without any showing of an interest in its payment or of the extent of that interest. (e) The indorsement does not give consent to the incumbering of the insured personal property by a chattel mortgage (1) because it does not mention a chattel mortgage, or describe D. & S. as chattel mortgagees, or show that the attention of the parties was directed to a chattel mortgage; (2) because it was not necessary that there should be a chattel mortgage to enable the insured to make a valid appointment of D. & S. to receive payment of the loss, if any, or to give them an interest in the payment of the loss; and (3) because the words "subject to all the conditions of this policy" show that the conditions were not intended to be abrogated or waived, but to have effect and be respected as if the indorsement had not been made, and among the conditions of the policy are these: "This entire policy, unless otherwise provided by agreement indorsed hereon or added hereto, shall be void . . . if the subject of insurance be personal property and be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage, . . . and no officer, agent, or other representative of this company shall have power to waive any provision or condition of this policy, . . . unless such waiver, if any, shall be written upon or attached hereto, nor shall any privilege or permission affecting the insurance under this policy exist or be claimed by the insured, unless so written or attached." (f) There being no claim of fraud or mutual mistake, it is not permissible to show by oral testimony that at the time of making the indorsement the agents knew that the insured personal property was incumbered by a chattel mortgage and intended by the indorsement to consent thereto on behalf of the insurer, because what the agents may have known, and even what they may have said, is of no importance, as under the stipulations of the policy they were powerless to waive any provision or condition, or to affect the rights of the parties, except by a writing indorsed upon or added to the policy, and whatever was not so indorsed upon the policy or added to it was the same as if not done, because it was not authorized.

4. Where a policy of fire insurance covering personal property contains a stipulation entirely avoiding the policy, if such property be or become incumbered by a chattel mortgage, without consent thereto being indorsed upon or added to the policy, the giving of a chattel mortgage upon such property by the insured during the term of the policy, without the consent of the insurer indorsed upon or added to the policy, terminates the insurance and prevents a recovery under the policy by the insured or his appointee for a subsequent loss by fire.

Hook, circuit judge, dissenting.

A forfeiture of insurance for failure to keep and produce books is held, in American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Nunn (Tex.), 68 L. R. A. 83, not to be waived by an examination of the insured under oath, with knowledge of loss, which puts him to some expense, where the policy expressly provides that the insured shall submit to examination under oath, and that the company shall not be held to have waived any forfeiture under the policy by an examination so provided for.

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

FREDERICK MERTENS ET AL., COMPLAINANTS,

v.

GEORGE HENRY PROCTOR ET AL.

EQUITY PRACTICE; RIGHT OF COMPLAINANT TO DISMISS SUIT.

1. A complainant has the right to enter a dismissal of his bill at almost any stage of the proceedings before a final decree, unless defendant would be prejudiced thereby; and it is not considered that the defendant is prejudiced by a dismissal merely because he is liable to be sued over again.
2. Complainants sued to rescind an agreement whereby they had conveyed lands to defendants in consideration of stock in a corporation, and for a reconveyance of the lands, basing their claim to relief on the alleged fraud of the defendants, who, deeming themselves defrauded, had brought an action at law for damages against complainants. The defendants answered, denying the alleged fraud, alleging fraud on the part of the complainants, and consenting to a rescission of the agreement. Defendants also filed a motion for a decree in accordance with the prayers of the bill. Thereafter, while said motion was pending, complainants entered a dismissal of the bill, and defendants moved to strike off said dismissal. Held, that complainants had a right to dismiss the suit, and the motion denied.

In Equity. No. 25,519. Decided August 31, 1905.

HEARING on a motion by defendants to strike off the dismissal of a bill entered by complainants in the clerk's office. Denied.

Messrs. Birney & Woodard for the complainants.

Mr. A. S. Worthington and Mr. Charles L. Frailey for the defendants.

Mr. Justice STAFFORD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This case has been heard upon a motion of the defendants to strike off the dismissal of the bill of complaint which the complainants caused to be entered in the clerk's office. At the time when the complainants caused such entry of dismissal to be made the defendants had answered and had also filed a motion for a decree, and it is contended by them that the cause was in such a posture that they were entitled to a decree upon their own motion and that the complainants had no right to have their bill dismissed.

Very briefly stated, the bill sought a reconveyance to the complainants of lands which had been conveyed to one of the defendants in consideration of stock in a corporation transferred to the complainants by one of the defendants who had bought it from the other defendant. The basis of the complaint was that the complainants had been deceived and defrauded in respect to the value of the stock, and it required an answer under oath from the defendants in regard to the relations between them, as well as in regard to the main allegations of the bill. On the other hand, the defendants had considered themselves defrauded in the transaction by reason of alleged false representations in regard to the land, and had brought an action at law to recover their damages. In other words, both parties desired a rescission of the contract and restitution. The defendants answered accordingly.

The bill prayed not only for a reconveyance to the complainants of the land which they had parted with, but also that upon such reconveyance being made to them they might be decreed to deliver to the defendants, or one of them, the stock which the complainants had received for the land, and that the agreements between the parties might be delivered up and canceled. This relief the defendants in their answer consented to, and moved that the decree be entered in accordance with the prayers of the bill, giving notice of the time when they would call up said motion for action by the court.

The bill and the answer, it is said, had put the parties in such a situation that nothing was left for the court to do except to enter a decree. This decree was one which would afford the defendants positive relief by restoring them to the possession and ownership of the stock which they claimed to have been deprived of by the fraud of the complainants. To obtain such relief the defendants would be obliged to bring an action of their own, in case the complainants should be allowed to dismiss the bill. The complainants had invoked the aid of the court to obtain certain specific relief, which involved the restoration of property to the defendants. The defendants also desiring the restoration of that property, solemnly consented to the decree which the complainants had prayed for, moved that the decree be entered, and notified the complainants of the time when their motion would be heard. Immediately upon receiving a copy of the answer and this notice the complainants had the entry of dismissal made.

It is admitted by the complainants that if the defendants had filed a cross-bill, seeking the same relief which they sought by their motion, the complainants would have had no right to enter their bill dismissed. This might seem to put the case on a question of form rather than of substance. It is said the defendants were entitled to have the decree entered, and moved to have that action taken, that it was unnecessary to file a cross-bill because they desired exactly the same relief that the complainants offered and prayed for; that both parties having solemnly furnished the court the basis for a final decree between them, and one party having moved for the decree and notified his adversary, it would be trifling with the court to permit the complainants to withdraw; that the case differs entirely from those cases in which the answer is one of defense merely, and in which the decree will merely entitle the defendant to his costs, because in this case the decree will afford the defendants positive relief, and it is said they have taken every step incumbent upon them to entitle them thereto.

But let us take another view of the case.

Upon the facts stated in the complainant's bill the complainants were entitled to have their land again upon restoring to the defendants the shares of stock. Upon the facts stated in the answer the defendants were entitled to have their stock again upon reconveying to the complainants the land. The complainants' right to rescind was based upon the alleged fraud of the defendants. The defendants' right to rescind was based upon the alleged fraud of the complainants. What each desired was a rescission. Upon the facts stated in the bill the defendants were not entitled to any relief. They could not insist that the contract should be rescinded because of their own fault. Upon the facts stated in the answer the complainants were not entitled to any relief for a similar reason. The only basis for a decree was the common desire and prayer of the opposing parties. No facts were established upon the record which entitled either party to a decree. The complainants were not entitled to a decree because some of the essential facts which they alleged were positively denied by the defendants. The defendants were not entitled to relief upon the facts stated in their answer, even if they had been stated in the form of a cross-bill, until they had been established by proof or admission.

Digitized by Google

The court, therefore, having nothing as a basis for its decree, except the consent of both parties upon the record, why might not that consent be withdrawn by either side at any time before the decree was actually entered? If the defendants had put their allegations in the form of a cross-bill requiring an answer, they would have stood as a moving party, and the cause could not have been dismissed by the other party without their leave; but they chose to adopt the form of an answer, which means that they merely undertook to show why the complainants were not entitled to the relief they asked; and then after having shown that they were not entitled to the relief they asked, they said: "Nevertheless, we desire the same relief; therefore, we consent to it, and move the court to grant it." If the defendants had admitted the facts set forth in the complainants' bill, and then had moved the court for a decree, in accordance with the prayer of the bill, the court would have had a sufficient busis of fact upon which to render a decree; but would the defendants in that case have had a legal right to have the prayer of the bill granted when they had been guilty of a fraud upon the complainants, and it was that very fraud which was the basis of the decree? As the case now stands, the defendants have not even admitted the truth of the matters alleged by the complainants, but have alleged exactly contradictory matters by way of answer, and still claim that they are entitled to relief precisely as if they had established the truth of their own allegations.

The long and short of the matter is that there being no basis of fact established upon which a decree could be rendered, the decree could be based only upon the consent of the parties, which consent might be withdrawn at any time before the decree was entered.

The general rule is that a complainant has a right to enter a dismissal of his bill at almost any stage of the proceedings before a final decree unless the defendant would be prejudiced thereby, and it is not considered that the defendant is prejudiced by a dismissal merely because he is liable to be sued over again. In the present case it is not easy to see how he can be prejudiced because he has the same right and opportunity as before to establish the facts which would entitle him to the decree.

The proper province of a court is to find and establish the facts in controversy between litigants and then to render such a judgment upon those facts as the law requires. A court does not exist for the purpose of making bargains between parties. When the plaintiff alleges a state of facts which entitles him to relief, and the defendant answers by alleging a contrary state of facts which would entitle him to have the same judgment rendered which the plaintiff demands, there is no basis for a judgment of the court in such contradictory allegations upon the record, and if the common desire and prayer of the parties to have such a judgment rendered can be said to be a sufficient basis for a decree, it must certainly continue and exist at the very time when the judgment is rendered. The result is that the motion must be denied.

Pensioning Judges in England.

[From United States Consul Halstead, Birmingham, England.]

It is considered an essential condition of the English court system that the judges shall be absolutely independent financially, that their salaries shall be so large and provision for their future shall upon their retirement be so ample they need at no time of their service have any monetary anxiety.

The financial arrangements are explained quite fully in the following paragraphs from yesterday's issue of the Westminster Gazette, an evening paper published in London:

By the granting of an annuity of £3,500 ($17,032.75) a year to Sir Francis Jeune there are now no fewer than eight ex-judges in receipt of total pensions amounting to £28,000 ($121,662.50) a year. They are Sir Edward Fry, Lord Field, Sir Arthur Charles, Lord Brampton, Sir Ford North, Sir John C. Day, Sir Gainsford Bruce, and Sir Francis Jeune. Three other judges of the high court are also entitled to pensions as soon as they choose to take them. They are Justices Kekewich, Wills, and Grantham, and by the end of this month Mr. Justice Lawrance will become another.

A judge who continues on the bench after completing fifteen years' service really does his work for £1,500 ($7,299.75) a year, the difference between his salary and pension. In the court of appeal Lord Justice Mathew qualified for his pension nearly nine years ago, the master of the rolls becomes entitled to a pension of £4,200 ($21,899.25) a year, next year, while in the House of Lords Lord Macnaghten has been entitled to a pension for three years. The lord chancellor is entitled to a pension of £5,000 ($24,332.50) a year for life, however short his tenure of the chancellorship.

Getting shingle bolts to the mill, selling and shipping shingles therefrom, and placing some shingles in the dry kiln without turning on the steam, are held, in Brehm Lumber Co. v. Svea Ins. Co. (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 109, not to be an operation of the mill when the machinery is stopped, so as to prevent the operation of a clause in an insurance policy making it void if the property is shut down or idle for more than thirty days without permission.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of Maryland.

April Term, 1905.—Filed June 21, 1905.

WARD P. LITTIG, EXECUTOR, ETC., v. VESTRY OF MOUNT CALVARY PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH, ETC.

SAVINGS BANK DEPOSIT—ENTRY—TRUST FUND.

A sum of money was deposited in a savings bank by a testatrix as follows: "Mt. Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, subject to the order of Kate Littig, trustee, $500." Upon her death, her executor claimed the deposit as a part of her estate, but the lower court decreed that while the money should be paid to him by the bank, it was impressed with a trust in favor of the church and should be paid over by him to the church. Held, that the entry and testimony show that it was the intention of the testatrix to create a trust in favor of the church, and hence the decree should be affirmed.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of Baltimore City.

Mr. William M. Maloy and Mr. George M. Brady for appellant.

Mr. David S. Briscoe for appellee.

Argued before McSherry, C. J.; Fowler, Briscoe, Boyd, Page, Pearce, Schmucker, and Jones, J. J.

FOWLER, J.—The bill in this case was filed by Ward P. Littig, executor of Kate Littig, for the purpose of having a sum of money deposited in the Provident Savings Bank of Baltimore decreed to be a part of her estate. The defendants, the vestry of Mount Calvary Church and the Savings Bank, failed to answer. A decree pro confesso was obtained, testimony was taken, and the case was referred to Alexander H. Robertson, Esq., auditor and master, who subsequently filed a report holding that the fund in bank should be paid to the plaintiff as executor, but that it was impressed with a trust in favor of the defendant church, and he recommended that a decree be passed directing the fund to be paid over to the plaintiff, to be by him held in trust for and paid to said church. A decree was passed in accordance with this recommendation, and the plaintiff appealed.

The facts are few and may be briefly stated. Miss Littig opened an account with the Provident Savings Bank of Baltimore. The bill alleges and the testimony shows that the entry on the books of the bank is as follows: "Mount Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, subject to the order of Kate Littig, trustee, $500." If this were all, there could be no question whatever that this entry amounts to a declaration of trust in favor of the church.

In the case of Milholland v. Whalen, 89 Md. 212, the entry upon the books of the bank was "in account with Miss Elizabeth O'Neill in trust for herself and Mrs. Mary Whalen, joint owners, subject to the order of either, the balance at the death of either to belong to the survivor." It was held that Mrs. Whalen as cestui que trust was entitled to the fund.

In the course of the opinion delivered by the present chief justice it is said: "In Maryland it is not requisite that the cestui que trust should be notified of the declaration or establishment of the trust. It is the donor's act which originates the trust, and it is the intention with which he does the act that is material. The entry unexplained is a sufficient declaration of trust, because it indicates an intention to establish a trust, but this may be rebutted."

And again, quoting from Jones v. Lock, L. R., 1 Chy. App. 25, it is said: "The authorities all turn upon the question whether what took place was a declaration of trust, or merely an imperfect attempt to make a legal transfer of the property. In the latter case the court will afford no assistance whatever to volunteers; but when the court considers that there has been a declaration of trust, it is a trust executed, and the court will enforce it whether with or without considerations."

The wide difference between a declaration of trust and gifts, either inter vivos or causa mortis is there also pointed out, and it is said such gifts, to be effective at all, require a delivery of the thing itself, and must pass the whole title, so that the donor can have no further dominion or control of it; but a gift in trust withholds the legal title from the donee.

The legal title may be transmitted to a third person, or it may be retained by the donor, but in either case the equitable title has gone from him, and unless the declaration of trust contains a power of revocation it leaves him powerless to extinguish the trust.

But it is contended by the plaintiff that whatever may be the effect of the entry standing alone, the testimony shows that it was not the intention of Miss Littig to create a trust fund in favor of the church. In support of this contention reliance is placed upon the testimony of the officers of the bank, which was substantially that Miss Littig wanted to leave some money so that the Mt. Calvary Church would get it after her death, but that she did not wish to give the church the money during her life for fear she might need it herself; that her intention was if she did not draw the money during her lifetime for her own use that it should go to the church after her death, and that she intended to retain control of it for her own use as long as she lived.

This testimony, however, in our opinion, so far from showing no trust, was declared by Miss Littig, only shows that she intended to reserve a power of revocation, and that her real intention, as declared to one of the witnesses, and testified to by him, was that she wanted the church to have the money if she did not revoke the trust and use the fund during her life.

The question presented by this record has been so elaborately considered in the recent and leading case of Milholland v. Whalen, supra, that we deem it unnecessary to prolong this opinion by any further discussion.

Decree affirmed.

A finding by a coroner's jury that a person came to his death by a wound inflicted by himself with suicidal intent, is held, in Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Milward (Ky.), 68 L. R. A. 285, not to be admissible in an action upon a policy of accident insurance upon his life. The admissibility of the finding of a coroner to show cause of death is the subject of a note to this case.

Digitized by Google

Legal Effect of Use of Terms Wilful, Abandoned, Reckless, and Wanton Neglect.

In Southwest Missouri Electric Railway Co. v. Fry, decided by the Supreme Court of Kansas, the action was by the parents of a minor child to recover damages for his death caused by his being run over by a street car. The petition alleged that the child came to his death by the employees of the defendant "carelessly, negligently, recklessly, and wantonly running said car upon and over" the body of the child, instantly killing him. It was held that the petition was sufficient in its allegations to sustain a verdict for damages, notwithstanding a special finding that the injury was not inflicted through the "reckless and wanton neglect of the defendant's employees in charge of the car."

The decision is reported in the Central Law Journal, and in a note appended thereto the legal effect of the use of the terms wilful, abandoned, reckless, and wanton neglect is discussed as follows:

In the above case the jury found for the plaintiff, because there was evidence of negligence on the part of the street car company in managing that car, but did not find that it amounted to reckless or wanton negligence. In other words, the jury found that there could be no recovery for any reckless or wanton neglect on the part of the defendant. Had the jury found that the death of the child was caused by the reckless or wanton neglect of the railroad company, it then should have added punitory damages, in addition to compensatory damages. The point is that, with a petition stating that the injury was inflicted wantonly, wilfully, and recklessly, if the jury found that it was not done wantonly, wilfully, recklessly, and negligently, what right had the plaintiff to recover? All that was necessary to have stated was that the injury was negligently committed. But the greater includes the less, so that if the jury found that the plaintiff was entitled to verdict it could only have been on account of simple negligence, although the allegations included the words wanton and reckless negligence. If the charge is wanton and reckless negligence and the jury found that the defendant was guilty of ordinary negligence the allegation would support a verdict.

In the case of Heim v. McCaughan, 32 Miss. 17, the plaintiff was allowed to show, in aggravation of damages, that his physical condition unfitted him to bear the exposure to which he was subjected, in consequence of the carrier's neglect to stop a boat according to his advertisement and take him on board, and it was held that exemplary damages might be recovered if such conduct was wilful and capricious. It has also been held that exemplary damages may be given in cases where there was a wilful, reckless, or capricious neglect to stop a train at a station where it should have stopped, upon being signaled to do so, independently of the health of the person who desired to be a passenger. Wilson v. New Orleans & N. R. R. Co., 63 Miss. 352; Ala., etc., R. Co. v. Sellers, 93 Ala. 9, 9 So. Rep. 375, 30 Am. St. Rep. 17; Thomas v. Southern R. Co., 122 N. Car. 1005, 30 S. E. Rep. 343. Compare Martin v. Columbia & G. R. Co., 32 S. Car. 592, 10 S. E. Rep. 960. And where there was such a neglect to stop a street car, the employee having insulted the person who desired the car stopped, on his thereafter becoming a passenger. Jackson Electric R. L. & P. Co. v. Lowry, 79 Miss. 431, 30 So. Rep. 634. See, also, secs. 950, 951, Sutherland on Damages, 3d ed., vol. III. If in a case where the petitions charged wanton, wilful, and reckless negligence, the court should charge that the plaintiff could not recover in such suit unless the jury found the acts of the plaintiff to have been done wantonly, wilfully, and recklessly; there is no doubt but the court would be making a mistake, because wanton, wilful, and reckless, does not exclude the idea that the act may have, nevertheless, been negligently committed.

The rule adopted by the New York courts is such as not to permit the recovery of exemplary damages against the master for the act of negligence of his servant, unless he has authorized his act, or ratified it while such servant was in his office. Cleghorn v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. Co., 56 N. Y. 44; Hendricks v. Sixth Av. R. Co., 12 J. & S. 8; Murphy v. Cent. P. & R. Co., 16 Id. 96; Fisher v. M. E. & R., 34 Hun. 333. This is the same in the United States. Lake Shore & Mich. So. v. Prentice, 147 U. S. 101. In Colorado not allowed (Greely v. Yeager, 11 Colo. 345) unless proof of authority or valification. Same in Connecticut. Messenbasher v. Concordia Society. Not allowed in Indiana. Humphries v. Johnson, 20 Ind. 190. Not allowed in Nebraska. Boyer v. Barr, 8 Neb. 68. New Hampshire. Fay v. Parker, 53 N. H. 342. New Jersey same as New York. Frohman v. Consolidated T. Co., 63 N. J. L. 391. Rhode Island same as New York. Higgin v. Providence, etc. R. Co., 3 R. I. 88. All other States allow exemplary damages for the gross, wanton, malicious or wilful negligence of servants of corporations. Just why corporations should not be held bound by the same rules as private parties does not seem clear, that is to say, those States which hold that, the act of the servant must, in some way, have been ratified by the corporation before the corporation may be held to respond in punitive damages, is not based on general principles, and is against the decided right of authority.

If heavy punitive damages were given in those railroad accidents, which have been caused by the reckless negligence of servants, there would be greater care exercised in the selection of servants for those places where great care should be exercised to avoid accidents. The case of Goddard v. The Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, 57 Me. 202, 8 American Negligence Cases, 316, is the leading case on the question holding a corporation liable for the wilful misconduct of its servants toward passengers and giving punitive damages in such cases. In 8 Am. Neg. Cas. 330, Judge Walton states the doctrine in vigorous language: "We have given to this objection much consideration, as it was our duty to do, for the presiding judge declined to instruct the jury that if the acts and words of the defendant's servants were not directly nor impliedly authorized nor ratified by the defendant, the plaintiff could not recover exemplary damages. We confess that it seems to us that there is no class of cases where such a rule is less applicable than to railroad corporations in their capacity of common carriers of passengers, and it might as well not be applied to them at all as to limit its application to cases where the servant is directly or impliedly commanded by the corporation to maltreat and insult a passenger, or to cases where such an act is directly or impliedly ratified, for no such cases will ever occur.

Digitized by Google

A corporation is an imaginary being. It has no mind but the mind of its servants. It has no voice but the voice of its servants; and it has no hands with which to act but the hands of its servants. All its schemes of mischief as well as its schemes of public enterprise are conceived by human minds and executed with human hands, and these hands and minds are its servants' hands and minds; all attempts, therefore, to distinguish between the guilt of the servant or the guilt of the corporation, or the malice of the servant or the malice of the corporation, or the punishment of the servant or the punishment of the corporation, is sheer nonsense and only tends to confuse the mind and confound the judgment. Neither guilt, malice, nor suffering predicable for this ideal existence called a corporation, and yet under the cover of its name and authority there is in fact as much wickedness and as much that is deserving of punishment as can be found anywhere else, and since these ideal existences can neither be whipped, hung, imprisoned, or put in the stocks—since no corrective influence can be brought to bear upon them except that of pecuniary loss—it does seem to us that the doctrine of exemplary damages is more beneficial in its application to them than in its application to natural persons.

If those who are in the habit of thinking it is a terrible hardship to punish an innocent corporation for the wickedness of its servants and agents, will reflect for a moment upon the absurdity of their own thoughts their anxiety will be cured. Careful engineers can be selected who will not run their trains into open draws, and careful baggagemen can be secured who will not handle and smash trunks and bandboxes, as is now the universal custom, and conductors and brakemen can be had who will not assault and insult passengers, and if the courts will only let the verdicts of upright and intelligent juries alone, and let the doctrine of exemplary damages have its legitimate influence, we predict those great and growing evils will be very much lessened if not entirely cured. There is but one vulnerable point about these ideal existences called corporations and that is the pocket of the monied power that lies concealed behind them, and if this is reached they will wince. When it is thoroughly understood that it is not profitable to employ careless and indifferent agents, or reckless and insolent servants, better men will take their places and not before." This opinion was written in 1869, but is as applicable now as then, but for some reason there has been a hesitancy on the part of courts to grant punitive damages in our own day and generation.

In Atchison v. Wills, decided by the Court of Appeals of this District (31 Wash. Law Rep. 311), the declaration in an action for personal injuries alleged that the injuries complained of were occasioned by the gross and wanton neglect of the defendant's employees. It was contended for the defendant that this allegation made it incumbent upon the plaintiff to give affirmative proof of the case as alleged, and that proof of ordinary negligence only was a fatal variance. In denying this contention, the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Alvey, held that such allegation imposed upon the plaintiff no greater burden of proof than to show that the employees of defendant did not use the care that was required to avoid the accident. In that case, after admitting that some decisions had held in accordance with the contention of the defendant, the court said:

"But the great weight of authority, and especially of recent decisions, is clearly against the contention of the defendant in this case. The distinction between negligence and gross negligence, carelessness and gross carelessness, is to a great extent merely verbal. It is simply negligence with a strong adjective of qualification or description. There can be, legally speaking, no degrees of negligence on the part of the defendant, any more than there can be degrees of due care on the part of the plaintiff, for, in respect of the same transaction, the presence of the one element of conduct implies the absence of the other. Any negligence, therefore, which is legally sufficient to charge the defendant with liability is, in a legal sense, gross negligence, and the question whether the defendant is to be charged therewith, as being a question of fact, must depend upon the circumstances of the case, as must also the question whether the plaintiff was in the exercise of due care, or, in other words, not guilty of contributory negligence."

Bills and Notes—Procurement by Fraud—Liability of Maker—Negligence.

In Home National Bank v. Hill, decided by the Supreme Court of Indiana in June, 1905, 74 N. E. 1086, it was held that one who negligently signs a negotiable promissory note is liable thereon at the suit of a bona fide holder, although his signature is procured by fraud and without consideration, but one who without negligence is induced to sign a negotiable note by fraudulent practices leading him to believe that he is signing an instrument of a different character is not liable thereon, although it has passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser.

It was laid down that the question of negligence in signing a negotiable paper in ignorance of its true character is usually one of fact for the determination of the court or jury trying the cause, but it becomes one of law when the state of facts is established or is undisputed.

It appeared that defendant was surety on a guardian's bond. The attorney for the guardian went to defendant with a pretended petition for an order of court in the matter of the guardianship. Defendant read the petition sufficiently to understand its nature, and consented to sign the same at the attorney's solicitation. The attorney, during defendant's temporary absence from the room, artfully inserted a blank promissory note between the folds of the petition in such manner as to conceal all of the printed parts of the note, leaving exposed the lines which were intended for signatures, and pointed out to defendant the place where he should sign his name. Defendant, in ignorance of the trick, signed the note, and the attorney, without letting defendant see the papers again, filled in the blanks of the note and negotiated the same. Defendant was about 72 years of age, a farmer, of ordinary intelligence, could read and write, but was unfamiliar with court proceedings. His daughter was in the house on the occasion of the fraud, but he neglected to call her to his assistance in the matter. It was held that defendant was guilty of no negligence in signing the note, and could not be held liable thereon at the suit of a bona fide holder. The court said in part:

Digitized by Google

That appellee, under all of the circumstances, should have believed and relied on the statements or representations of Cunningham in regard to the purpose of the petition which he had agreed to sign, is certainly not unreasonable.

Appellant's contention that he did not exercise proper precaution or care in the matter or transaction in question is not sustained by the facts. That Cunningham was enabled to carry off the blank note after he had obtained appellee's signature thereto, and then convert it into a negotiable promissory note, and discount it at appellant's bank, does not, under the facts, appear in any manner to be due to an absence of proper precaution or care on the part of appellee. The following cases, in addition to those heretofore cited, support the doctrine or principle which we affirm and adhere to in this appeal: National Bank v. Lierman, 5 Neb. 247; Green v. Wilkie, 98 Iowa, 74, 66 N. W. 1046, 36 L. R. A. 434, 60 Am. St. Rep. 184; Soper v. Peck, 51 Mich. 563, 17 N. W. 57; Gibbs v. Linabury, 22 Mich. 479, 7 Am. Rep. 675; Whitney v. Snyder, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 477; National, &c., Bank v. Veneman, 43 Hun. (N. Y.) 241; Butler v. Carns, 37 Wis. 61; Kagel v. Totten, 59 Md. 447; Trambly v. Ricard, 130 Mass. 259; Griffiths v. Kellogg, 39 Wis. 290, 20 Am. Rep. 48; Bowers v. Thomas, 62 Wis. 480, 22 N. W. 710; Willard v. Nelson, 35 Neb. 651, 53 N. W. 572, 37 Am. St. Rep. 455.

Copyright—Action to Recover Penalty for Infringment—Evidence.

In Werckmeister v. Am. Tobacco Co., decided by the United States Circuit Court, S. D. New York, in March, 1905 (138 Fed. 162), it was held that in a suit under Rev. St., sec. 4965 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3414), to recover the penalty of $10 for each infringing copy of a copyrighted painting in defendant's possession, the judgment in a prior action in replevin brought under the same section, in which plaintiff recovered the infringing sheets, is not evidence that they were found in defendant's possession, although it recites that such was the fact, since that question was not an issue, nor a finding upon it essential to a forfeiture of the sheets. The court said:

Section 4965, Rev. St. U. S. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3414), provides that, if any person shall infringe a copyright in any of the ways specified—

"He shall forfeit to the proprietor all the plates on which the same shall be copied, and every sheet thereof, either copied or printed, and shall further forfeit one dollar for every sheet of the same found in his possession, either printing, printed, copied, published, imported, or exposed for sale; and in case of a painting, statue, or statuary he shall forfeit $10 for every copy of the same in his possession, or by him sold or exposed for sale, one-half thereof to the proprietor and the other half to the use of the United States."

The plaintiff, as proprietor of a copyrighted picture called "The Chorus," brought replevin to recover 1196 sheets of the same, as forfeited to him by the defendant, in which the marshal returned that he found the same in the possession of the defendant, and in which it was "adjudged that the plaintiff have and retain and is entitled to the possession of 1196 sheets, each containing a copy of the plaintiff's copyrighted picture 'Chorus,' found in the possession of the defendant, and replevined by the United States marshal as alleged in plaintiff's complaint." This suit is brought to recover $10, as forfeited for each of these copies, as found in possession of the defendant. Upon the trial the plaintiff offered no evidence of the finding of any copies of the picture in the possession of the defendant, but the record in the former case, whereupon a verdict for the defendant was directed, and this motion was made.

The plaintiff relies upon the recital in the former judgment as a conclusive adjudication that the sheets were found in the possession of the defendant. As to this it is to be noticed that there are, or may be thought to be, two distinct forfeitures imposed by this statute—one of the sheets, wherever found, to the proprietor, and the other of $10 to him and the United States for each sheet found in the possession of the defendant. In the former suit the material question would be as to whether there was infringement which would work a forfeiture of the title to the sheets, and the decision upon that may be so far conclusive. The question of finding in possession of the defendant was not material, but only incidental, and a finding upon that would not seem to be conclusive. It was not within the issue joined in the case upon which the parties would be bound to bring their proofs or afterwards remain silent concerning them, but was merely descriptive of the things forfeited and independent of that issue, and the finding upon it would not be material or conclusive. If this pecuniary forfeiture is only a part of the same forfeiture as that of the sheets, there could, on familiar principles, be but one recovery upon the one forfeiture, and, there having been one recovery of the sheets, the right of recovery would be satisfied, and there could not be another of the money. The decided cases do not seem to be in harmony about this, but, whichever are right, it seems clear that, if there is but one forfeiture there has been one recovery, which is all there can be, and if there are two there are two different issues to be tried on evidence of facts constituting each forfeiture in each action, respectively. And if there are two forfeitures there must be two actions, for the rights are different—one belonging to the proprietor alone and the other to him and the United States. A judgment for the proprietor would not conclude the United States, and consequently not the defendant, for both parties must be concluded by an estoppel or neither is.

Digitized by Google

Disqualification of Executors on Other Than Statutory Grounds—Personal and Immoral Unfitness.

[Central Law Jounal.]

Statutes exist in most States relative to the qualification of executors. A recent case decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois (Clark v. Patterson, 214 Ill. 533) is instructive as to whether other disqualifications may be urged by the children and heirs at law of the testator to the appointment and qualification of an executor named in the will than those specifically mentioned in the statute. In other words, may the probate court, or other court charged with the power of issuing letters testamentary, go outside of the strict letter of the statute and refuse letters to a person named in the will as executor on the ground of personal unfitness or moral degradation alleged against such person? Is the statute mandatory?

It has been contended with much force, and the public policy of a few States seems to be, that the court issuing letters testamentary should have discretion in determining the qualification of executors, or, at least, a supervisory power in that regard. The contention is based upon the idea that if the testator in the selection of his executors should select a person of bad morals, or questionable personal habits, or with whom illicit relations had been sustained, the court should be empowered to overrule such selection and refuse letters to such applicant.

On the other hand, it is contended, and the great weight of authority supports such contention, that the testator being of sound and disposing mind and memory, and being the absolute and unqualified owner of the subject-matter of his benefactions, to which the doctrine of jus disponendi attaches, has the absolute right, subject only to the statutory limitations and the common law requirements as to sanity to make his own selection of agents or instrumentalities who are to succeed to the management of his estate and the distribution thereof after his decease. The power to extend or limit the qualification of executors is the exercise of a legitimate legislative function and when that power has been exercised by the designation of persons who may or may not be qualified as executors it is not within the province of judicial authority to read into the statute additional grounds of disqualification. In a word, the statute will not be extended by judicial construction. Stated in its broadest and general terms the proposition would seem to be unquestioned that a person of disposing mind has a legal, equitable, and property right to select the agents to whom he intrusts the management of his property while living and has a tantamount right to select the agencies to whom he may intrust the management and disposition of his property after his death. It may be in particular cases the testator, in his selection, will be governed by whims and caprice, but it may also be equally true that legatees and beneficiaries may be influenced by capricious motives.

A mistaken idea seems to be countenanced in some of the reported decisions that an executor is appointed by the court issuing the letters testamentary, but in fact the selection and appointment are made by the testator and the letters are merely evidence of his authority to act under a will judicially determined to be valid.

Illustrative of the principles stated above a few leading, and, as we think, controlling cases are now referred to. In Saxe v. Saxe, 97 N. W. Rep. 187 (Wis.), objections were filed to the qualification of the executor based upon the alleged abuse of his stepmother; that he was obnoxious to the objecting heirs; that his character was not such as to inspire confidence and trust. The court held that inasmuch as the objections related to the temper, disposition, habits, and moral character of the executor rather than to his capacity to do business they were not available to set aside the expressed wish of the testator; that an executor according to the common law doctrine derives his office solely from the will by which he is appointed and not from the probate which is held to be only evidence of his right; that the authority of the court in the premises is limited to qualifying the executor and issuing letters testamentary and does not extend to the appointment, as that authority pertains to the testator alone. Citing 11 Am. & Eng. Ency. Law, 2d ed., pp. 744, 745; In re Somervail, 104 Wis. 72, 80 N. W. Rep. 65; Schouler's Ex. & Admrs., sec. 33, 2d ed. The court overruled the objections and held that the executor was legally competent to act as executor within the meaning of sec. 3792, Rev. St. 1898, and hence that the statute was mandatory and required the county court to give effect to the expressed wish of the testator by appointing him as such executor.

To the same effect is Smith's appeal, 61 Conn. 420, 24 Atl. Rep. 273, 16 L. R. A. 538, where it was alleged that the executor named in the will was incapable of accepting the trust because he was not a man of honesty and integrity and experience in business. The court held that the moral unfitness of the person appointed as executor of a will can not be inquired by the court to which he applied for permission to qualify, and that he derived his office from testamentary appointment, and if he was a person not disqualified by law from being an executor the court had no right to refuse to permit him to qualify or to refuse to grant him letters testamentary.

The Court of Appeals of New York, in McGregor v. McGregor, 3 Abbott's Appeal, 92, says: "I am of the opinion that any person appointed or named executor on the ground of his immorality, executor in a will is to be deemed to be competent unless he is declared incompetent by statute, and that it is the duty of the surrogate to grant letters to every person named executor in a will upon his application who is not incompetent by some statute. He has no discretion in the matter, but must obey the requirements of the statute which is the sole source of his power. To allow surrogates to invent new causes of disqualification and add to those prescribed by statute would be conferring novel and dangerous powers upon those officers of special and limited jurisdiction."

Digitized by Google

In Berry v. Hamilton, 12 B. Monroe 11, 54 Am. Dec. 515, objection was made to the court says: "If the opinions of men in regard to the moral characters of those who may be appointed executors, and in whom testators repose confidence, whatever those opinions may be are to be received and are to constitute the evidence by which, in law, we are to ascertain who may and who may not be appointed executors, we apprehend that but a few appointments would fail to be contested by some of the relatives of testators, who are often too easy to be dissatisfied, or by persons who themselves desire to be administrators for personal aggrandizement, or who would rejoice in so fit an opportunity to gratify some private hatred.

"Such inquiries would involve questions of very difficult and doubtful decision—such as, how good a man must be to qualify him for executor and how bad he must be to disqualify him—how could any certain rule of determination be established? Inquiries of such a nature would be the most vague and uncertain in their results of any ever instituted in a court of justice, and would, in our opinion, be absurd in the extreme. Besides, to allow an inquisition of this sort would be to deny to men a privilege which for centuries has been held to be most sacred and dear—that of freely disposing of their own property to whom they please, and of appointing trustees of their own choice to manage and control it when they are no more. . . . And men, it seems to us, would care but little for the high privilege of disposing of their estates to their own liking, if they are to be denied the right of selecting those who are to carry out and effectuate the benevolent purpose of their wills. It is true some persons are incapable of being executors—the law has pointed out who they are, and society has long been satisfied with the wisdom of the rules upon this subject."

Insurance—Breach of Warranty.

In the case of The Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company v. Dobler, decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, it appeared that an application for life insurance requested insured to answer whether he then had any insurance on his life. He answered, giving the name and amount of a life-insurance policy, and the name of the company writing the same. There was a further question, "Have you any other insurance?" which he answered, "None." It was held that such questions did not call for an answer as to other than life insurance, so that insured's failure to disclose that he then had certain policies of accident insurance did not constitute a breach of warranty. The court said that where questions asked by an insurance company in an application were of doubtful import, insurer was bound by an answer to which the questions were properly susceptible; also that where insured answered certain questions with reference to when he last consulted a physician, the name of the physician, the reason, etc., by stating that he did not remember when he had consulted a physician, that it was years ago, the fact that on several occasions a physician, who was a friend of insured, made physical examinations of him without charge, for the purpose of ascertaining his physical condition, on the physician's own initiative, and without finding any physical infirmity, and without prescribing for insured, did not show that such answers were untrue.

The Equity of Marshaling.

[Harvard Law Review.]

Where one creditor may resort to two securities for the payment of his debt while another has a subsequent claim upon only one of them, the former will be compelled in equity, in so far as he may not be prejudiced, first to exhaust that security which the latter can not reach.

Thus if A has mortgages of Whiteacre and of Blackacre, and B has a second mortgage upon Blackacre only, B may, in foreclosure proceedings, require A to resort first to Whiteacre. Aldrich v. Cooper, 8 Ves. 382, 394. And if A in fact proceeds first against Blackacre, B may reach Whiteacre by subrogation. Gibson v. Seagrim, 20 Beav. 614. In the United States the majority of the courts say that B has a fixed equitable right in Whiteacre, which, like ordinary equities, persists until the res gets to a bona fide purchaser, so that B may still marshal A against Whiteacre after it has been mortgaged to C with notice of the other mortgages. Robeson's Appeal, 117 Pa. St. 628.

The English courts deny that any equitable right arises until foreclosure proceedings are commenced. Accordingly, as between B and C, they pay A's mortgage ratably from Whiteacre and Blackacre. Barnes v. Racster, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 401.

This conflict of authority appears to turn on the nature of marshaling. Marshaling is an equitable procedure to apply assets in accordance with the rights of the parties under the circumstances presented to the court, whether in the payment of creditors from a decedent's estate or in the satisfaction of claimants from overlapping securities. It is part of the broad question, what property can be reached to satisfy an obligation, and is therefore a matter of remedy to be determined by the law of the forum at the time of the suit. Cf. Mineral Point R. R. Co. v. Barron, 83 Ill. 365.

This reasoning accords with the English view. In the one American case, however, which squarely raised the point in this form, a majority of the court held that it was a matter of right, to be governed by the law at the time of B's mortgage. Bank of Orangeburg v. Kohn, 52 S. C. 120.

Granting the correctness of the English theory, it does not follow, however, that the general result under the prevalent American view is wrong. The conflict should be regarded as a difference, not of legal principle but of fact, namely, whether under the circumstances it is fairer that C should exonerate B, or that they should contribute ratably, and on this courts may well differ.

Digitized by Google

Where part of property subject to three mortgages was taken for a railroad and, pending the suit for compensation, which was to be be subject to the mortgages, the third mortgage was cut out of the remaining land by a foreclosure of the second mortgage, it was recently held, approving the English cases, that the first mortgage could not be marshaled against the land in the hands of the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, but should be paid ratably from the land and the compensation money. Bates v. Boston Elev. R. Co., 72 N. E. Rep. 1017 (Mass.). These facts neatly avoid the general conflict so that no other decision would be justified, for, the moment the third mortgagee is in a position to seek marshaling against the land, the purchaser at foreclosure is on hand seeking similar relief against the compensation money. The situation would be the same if simultaneous mortgages were made of Blackacre and Whiteacre to B and C respectively. Neither deserves a preference.

The "Celebrated Steer Case."

At the December call of the Kansas City Court of Appeals docket, the biggest case over a small matter ever tried in Missouri passed into history. The style of the action was John Massengale v. Elijah E. Rice. The appellate court's uncontested order of affirmance crowned Elijah with the victor's laurel wreath.

The subject of litigation was a spindle-shanked steer, "a very ordinary animal, a scrub," the plaintiff said, "worth about $30." The life of the steer fight and the great civil war were about the same—five years.

If there is a Missourian who has not heard of the "Celebrated Steer Case," it is because his parents were shamefully derelict in their educational obligations to him. It has become a part of the State's fame, just as in less peaceful days Charles Quantrell, Bill Anderson, and the James boys enriched the commonwealth's history with a certain distinction.

In September, 1899, John Massengale, of Macon county (known as "Missouri John" when herding cattle back in Wyoming), missed from his ranch a small red steer. It didn't bother him much, because he had a thousand of much better quality left, and he never lost any time in hunting up the prodigal. But one evil day a horseman came along the road and called "Missouri John" out. He told him he had seen his missing animal down on Rice's farm, which was just across the line in Chariton County. John went over to see Farmer Rice. Together they visited the herd, and Massengale promptly spied the scrub.

"That's mine, Elijah," he said.

"No, John," replied Elijah, "we raised that steer ourselves."

Massengale telephoned to his lawyer at Macon and a suit in replevin was filed. Before the justice the plaintiff described his animal as "a dark red steer, a round body, rather a small, dark two-year-old, a little under average size, with a white spot in his forehead, and an underbit in the right ear."

Elijah gave the description of his steer as follows: "Well, the steer is what I would call a red steer. He had just a white spot on his forehead, with an underbit in the right ear."

The similitude of belief furnished beautiful grounds for warfare. Both men had money burning in their pockets. The border was soon aroused by adherents of the two prominent litigants. "Missouri John" had begun his career by rounding up cattle in the west and he knew he could not be mistaken. Elijah had grown up in the valleys where a man's social success was rated according to his knowledge of steercraft, and he felt that he knew the subject of controversy as well as he did any member of his family. In passing, it may be remarked that it is fairly safe to criticize a cattleman's command of the King's English, or his manners at the dinner table, but when you challenge his capacity to identify anything that wears horns you can look for trouble with entire confidence.

There were seven trials. Hung juries, appeals, and changes of venue strung the litigation out half a decade. It traveled along a highway paved with shining dollars, until at the climax it was figured the unsuccessful litigant stood to lose $5,000.

The case would have ended in 1900, but at the very end of the trial, during a strong appeal to the jury, Elijah's leading lawyer, J. A. Collect, used this language, taken from the printed record: "Massengale obtained his start by rounding up unbranded cattle in the west, and branding them as his own. In the west they call that 'branding mavericks,' but here in Missouri we call it plain-out cattle stealing."

That short tirade cost Elijah $300, for the plaintiff appealed on the ground that there was no evidence in the record to justify the attack, and after the appellate court had read through the 275 printed pages it so held, and Elijah had to pay for the brief.

During the life of the steer case it had been tried at Bynumville, Salisbury, Kansas City, and Fayette. When the trial was "on" in a town, the tavern keepers would send out for extra help in the cook room and buy out the grocers. Each side levied on its respective township for witnesses, and when the two clans would meet in a town there wasn't much room for anybody else.

The case was fought out with varying honors until a fatal day in last April, when a jury came into court at Fayette and said the steer belonged to Elijah.

"Missouri John's" lawyers went through the long record of the last trial with a microscope, and then met their client at Macon.

"The jig's up, John," said one of the barristers, gravely. "There ain't the ghost of a ground to hang an appeal on this time."

"We're beat, you mean?" asked the big ranchman.

"You've guessed right."

"Well," said John, "I hate a croaker. I went to law for a measly, spindle-shanked steer, and I am going to take what the law hands out. Figure up what the fun has cost me, boys, and the check's ready."

He sat awhile and calmly pulled at his pipe. Then he picked up his sombrero and walked to the door, where he hesitated and looked back.

Digitized by Google

"But, say, fellers," he remarked, "that was my steer!"

The defendant notified "Missouri John's" attorneys that he would file a motion for affirmance in the court of appeals at the fall term, and they told him to go ahead—they were tired.

The steer is still enjoying life on Elijah's broad pastures. He has recently had it photographed and to show he entertains no ill-will has sent copies of the picture to "Missouri John" and his four lawyers.—Green Bag.

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Washington College of Law,

1403 New York Ave. N. W.

Ninth year opens Monday, October 2, at 7 p. m., with an introductory lecture, to which the public is cordially invited.

Three years' course leading to degree of LL. B. Postgraduate courses of one year leading to degree of LL. M.

Full corps of eighteen lecturers and professors. Admits as students women and men properly qualified. Lectures between 6.30 and 9 p. m. Tuition, $50 a year.

For year books or further information apply to the Dean.

E. S. MUSSEY, LL. M.,

'Phone Main 4585. 1701 416 Fifth St. N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

FIRST INSERTION.

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Alice Bland McAboy, Deceased.
No. 13,181. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Theodore N. McAboy, it is ordered this 7th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Louise B. Legge, Austin Brockenbrough, Fanny Compton Frere, Ella Beckwith Lawton, Elizabeth Beckwith, and Brockenbrough Beckwith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 36-3t

Legal Notices.

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Melville Bell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,130. Admn. [Seal.] 36-3t

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William G. Zimmerman, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. JOHANNA M. ZIMMERMAN, 912 8th st. S. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,146. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

Coldren & Fenning, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Jennie M. Payne, Complainant, v. Thomas E. Waggaman, James B. Nicholson, Samuel E. Allen, Jr., John Sherman, Ella B. Sherman, Irving Williamson, Lawrence P. Graham, Josephine Chamberlain, R. W. McPherson, M. A. McPherson, E. T. McPherson, Stephen McArdle, the President and Directors of Georgetown College, H. Rozier Dulaney, Samuel Waggaman, and the Catholic University of America, a corporation, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,987.

Fred G. Coldren and Irving Williamson, trustees, having reported to the court that they have sold the real estate described as lots numbered 15, 16, and 17, in block 6 of Thomas E. Waggaman's subdivision of "Rosedale," now known as "Cleveland Park," as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in liber county 9, folio 71, at public auction, to Oscar Luckett, as trustee for Josephine Chamberlain and the other holders of the notes secured by the first deed of trust on said property as shown by the amended bill herein, for the sum of $7,500, it is this 7th day of September, 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided, a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. By the Court. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. [Seal] 36-3t

R. Preston Shealey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 29th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time and said court room as the place for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. CHARLES W. FLOECKHER, by R. Preston Shealey, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,346. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Union Trust Company v. C. P. Storrs et al.
No. 25,642. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to ascertain the ownership of a certain sum of money on deposit in complainant's banking department to the joint credit of the defendants, R. Randolph Hicks and C. P. Storrs, complainant having been advised that each of said defendants is now claiming said fund to the exclusion of the other. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 6th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, C. P. Storrs, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter.

[Seal] By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice.
A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 36-3t

H. H. Glassie and A. George Maul, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ross W. Morrison, Complainant, v. Annie E. Morrison, George L. Devers, Co-respondent, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,067.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 30th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, George L. Devers, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Times for three consecutive weeks prior to said day for once in each week.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 36-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Ralston & Siddons, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of John Hay, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 30th day of August, 1905. J. W. WADSWORTH, JR., Mt. Morris, N. Y.; PAYNE WHITNEY, 51 Wall st., New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,136. Administration. 35-3t

W. E. Harvey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Daniel A. Connolly, Deceased.
No. 1179. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration de bonus non on said estate, by William B. King, it is ordered this 29th day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to unknown next of kin and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 35-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Legal Notices.

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Johanna Engel, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of August, 1905. NORMAN T. ENGEL, 590 Center Market. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,096. Administration. 35-3t

Lester & Price, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of James Coleman, sometimes known as James Colemon, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of August, 1905. E. L. SCHMIDT, HARRY M. PACKARD, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,118. Administration. 35-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caleb C. Willard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of August, 1905. KATE WILLARD BOYD, 1315 P st. N. W.; HENRY K. WILLARD, Kellogg Building; GEORGE E. HOWE, care of Henry K. Willard, Kellogg Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,101. Administration. 35-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Philo J. Lockwood, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,108. Administration. 35-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Louis Kurtz, Senior, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of August, 1905. ROBERT H. T. LEIPOLD, 1300 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,112. Administration. 35-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

THIRD INSERTION.

H. Winship Wheatley, Attorney
In Justice's Court of the District of Columbia, Sub-District, No 2.
Northwest Eckington Improvement Company, a Corporation, v. Jane Arnold. At Law, No. —.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

The object of this suit is to secure a judgment of condemnation of certain credits of the defendant amounting to one hundred and seventy-five 82-100 (175.82) dollars in the hands of a third party. It is, therefore this 19th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order to defend this suit, and to show cause why the plaintiff should not have judgment as set forth above. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. SAML. C. MILLS, Justice of the Peace, 1205 G street N. W. 34-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary C. Griffith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 18th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 18th day of August, 1905. JOHN R. KING, 615 15th st. N. W.; LINNIE BELL BATES, 1104 L st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,115. Admn. 34-3t

Robt. E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Margaret C. Mooney, Deceased.
No. 13,127. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Bettie Le Preux, it is ordered this 23d day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mrs. Patrick Mooney, Mary Garbe, William Garbe, William Purcell, Florence Nicolls, Gertrude Mooney, Francis Mooney, and Walter Mooney, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 25th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 34-3t

Julius I. Peyser, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Fannie Luchs, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of August, 1905. JOSEPH LUCHS, 823 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,117. Administration. 34-3t

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W

Legal Notices.

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Lavinia A. Hall, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 18th day of August, 1905. L. CABELL WILLIAMSON. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 11,904. Administration. 34-3t

Ralston & Siddons, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Helen C. Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of August, 1905. ALLAN R. CAMPBELL, 25 Broad st., New York City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,866. Administration. 34-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Gilbert J. Osterman et al. v. Robert E. Poole et al.
No. 25,518. Equity.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to sublots 103 to 114, inclusive, square 104, Washington, D. C. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Robert E. Poole, Susan Erwin, and Ann Council, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Martin Casner, of Martin Kershnor, of Margaret Freeman, of Charles W. Goldsborough, and of Charles Henry Goldsborough, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month for the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clk.
au 11,18,25; sept. 8,22; oct. 13,27

FIFTH INSERTION.

John Ridout, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Minna Schafer v. the Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of Charles Wayman.
In Equity. No. 25,470.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple by adverse possession of the complainant to all of original lot eight, in square one hundred and ninety-six, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published twice a month for said period of three months in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. jul 14, 21; aug 11, 18; sept 8, 15.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 37

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - SEPTEMBER 15, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 577
BRANCH APPELLATE COURT, FIRST DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS:
Robert Smith Parks, appellant, v. Northwestern University 579
Miscellany 581
Legal Notices 589

Death of Hon. Andrew B. Duvall.

The announcement of the death of Hon. Andrew B. Duvall, corporation counsel for the District of Columbia, which occurred on Tuesday, September 12, 1905, at sea, three days out from Liverpool, was a shock not only to the members of the bar, practically all of whom he numbered as his personal friends, but to the community at large. Mr. Duvall had been suffering from organic disease of the heart for some time prior to his departure for Europe in July last, but the latest information as to his condition was that he had recovered and had sailed for home on September 9.

Mr. Duvall was one of the most prominent and popular members of the District bar. His legal abilities were of a high order, and he filled the important position of corporation counsel for the District of Columbia with distinction. On more than one occasion he received the hearty indorsement of representative members of the bar for the position of justice of the Supreme Court of the District, and it was recognized on all sides that he possessed the qualities of mind and character fitting him for that high office.

Mr. Duvall was a native of this District, and was 58 years of age. He was graduated from the law school of Columbian University in 1869, and immediately thereafter began the practice of the law in this District. His ability as a lawyer and his high character as a man speedily secured him a lucrative clientele, which he retained throughout his life.

Mr. Duvall was an earnest Christian, and a leading member of the Metropolitan Methodist Church in this city. He enjoyed to an exceptional degree the confidence and affection of his associates at the bar, who deeply sympathize with his family in their great bereavement.

Death of Judge Charles F. Scott.

Judge Charles F. Scott, of the Police Court of this District, died at his residence in this city on Thursday evening, September 14, 1905. The announcement of his death was not unexpected, as he had been a great sufferer for some months with a complication of sciatica and stomach tumor.

Judge Scott was a native of West Virginia, in which State he began the practice of the law. In 1889 he removed to this city and entered the service of the Government as clerk of pardons in the Department of Justice. Subsequently he was appointed as a justice of the peace for this District, which position he filled but a short time when, in 1898, he was appointed police judge, serving in the latter capacity until his death. The important duties of the position were discharged by him in a manner that earned for him the cordial respect and esteem of the people of the District.

Georgetown University School of Law.

Attention is invited to the announcement, in another column, of the thirty-sixth annual session of the Georgetown University Law School, which opens on Wednesday evening, October 4, 1905, at which time announcements for the ensuing term will be made.

The exceptional advantages afforded by this institution for the successful study of the law are too well known to require enumeration. It occupies a place in the front rank of the law schools of the country, as is evidenced by the high position taken by its graduates wherever they have gone.

Two courses are offered, the first of three years leading to the degree of bachelor of laws, and a fourth year or post-graduate course which entitles the student who successfully completes it to the degree of master of laws. The fourth year class furnishes a rare opportunity for those desiring an advanced course in legal science; and it is gratifying to know that it is being availed of by an increasingly large number of students.

Two members have been added to the faculty, Hon. John W. Yerkes, as lecturer on railroad accident law and municipal corporations, and Mr. Aldis B. Browne, as lecturer on jurisdiction and practice of the United States Courts. These subjects were formerly treated by the lamented Judge Charles C. Cole, who for some years prior to his death was an honored member of the faculty.

Digitized by Google

It is worthy of note that five of the six justices of the Supreme Court of this District, and two of the three justices of the Court of Appeals are members of the faculty of this school.

Indirect Advertisement by Lawyers.

The following provision on this subject is contained in the code of ethics of the Virginia State Bar Association:

"Indirect advertisement for business by furnishing or inspiring editorials or press notices regarding causes in which the attorney takes part, the manner in which they are conducted, and the importance of his positions, the magnitude of the interests involved, and all other like self-laudation, is of evil tendency and wholly unprofessional. Newspaper publications by an attorney as to the merits of pending or anticipated litigation call for the discussion and reply from the opposite party and tend to prevent a fair trial in the courts and otherwise prejudice the due administration of justice."

Washington College of Law.

The opening exercises of the tenth annual session of this institution will be held on Monday evening, October 2, 1905, in the law building. Established primarily for the benefit of women desiring to pursue the study of the law, this school has had a most successful career, and the advantages offered by it have been availed of by a large number of persons of both sexes. Two courses are open to students—a regular course leading to the degree of bachelor of laws, and a graduate course leading to that of master of laws.

Contract for Sale of Real Estate—Enforcement by Undisclosed Principal.

In Egle v. Morrison, decided by the Lucas (6th) Circuit Court of Ohio, and reported in the Ohio Law Bulletin, it is held that a written contract for the sale of real estate made and signed by an agent in his own name and without disclosing his agency or the name of his principal is binding on and may be enforced by his principal. The agency and assent of the principal may be established by parol evidence. Such a contract, it is held, satisfies the requirements of the Statute of Frauds. It is further held to be no defense to an action for specific performance of a contract, required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing, that it is not signed by both parties thereto; it is sufficient if it is signed by one of the parties to be charged, and is accepted by the other; and acceptance by the latter is shown by his bringing suit upon the contract.

Power of Lawyer to Bind Partner in Purchase of Law Books.

A case of interest to both lawyers and publishers of law books is Alley v. Bowen-Merrill Co., 88 S. W. Rep. 838, wherein the Arkansas Supreme Court holds that a member of a firm of lawyers organized for the practice of law has implied authority to bind his partner by a written contract for the purchase of law books. The court agrees to the proposition that one member of a non-trading firm can not, as a rule, bind the other members by signing the firm name to negotiable paper (citing 22 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 2d ed., 154), but deems this to be because such transactions are not generally within the legitimate scope of the business of such firms. But "the purchase of law books reasonably necessary in the business," the court holds to be "a responsibility and liability incident to a partnership for the practice of law, and when lawyers come together for that business they are presumed to repose in one another the trust and confidence necessary to attend to the duty of purchasing law books for the firm and to clothe each with authority to bind the other."—Law Notes.

Collision—Electric Car—Negligence.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota held, in the case of Smith v. Minneapolis Street Railway Company, that where an electric car collided with a vehicle which, while being driven along a public street parallel and in the same direction with an advancing street car, turned at a street crossing to go over the track in front of that car, the negligence of the street car company was to be determined in accordance with rules of law giving both the car and the vehicle the right to use the streets and intersections, and imposing on both the reciprocal duty of the exercise of due care to avoid harm. The court said that the exercise of care on the part of the motorneer had special reference to the rate of speed at which the car was moving, his control and exercise of control over it, and his opportunity for observing that the vehicle was about to cross, including the distance from the track at which the vehicle turned and the rapidity at which it was then traveling. The court further held that the test of the care to be exercised at a street crossing was not necessarily the same as was required at a steam railway crossing, and that if a driver of a vehicle approaching a street railway track to cross it at an intersection with another street looks and listens and sees and hears no car approaching for such a distance that he could make the crossing safely, he is not guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law if while attempting to cross the tracks the car strikes and overturns the vehicle.—Bradstreet.

Digitized by Google

Branch Appellate Court, First District of Illinois.

ROBERT SMITH PARKS, APPELLANT,

v.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY.

PUBLIC CHARITY; EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION; EXEMPT FROM DOCTRINE OF RESPONDEAT SUPERIOR.

1. A public charity is not necessarily confined to institutions or corporations which confine their gifts or assistance to the poor and needy. The term public charity has a broader significance. One of the earliest forms of public charity known to the law was that of a school and college.
2. The principle upon which public charities are held exempt from the doctrine of respondeat superior is that a public charity, whether incorporated or not, is but a trustee, and is bound to apply its funds and property in furtherance of the charity, and not otherwise. The law will not permit the trustee to divert or use the funds or property of his trust for any object not contemplated in the trust, and what the law will not permit the trustee to do it will not do itself.—Chicago Legal News.

Decided July 11, 1905.

APPEAL from Superior Court of Cook County. Affirmed.

Messrs. Ashcroft & Ashcroft for the plaintiff.

Mr. H. H. C. Miller and Mr. C. G. Little for the defendant.

Mr. Justice SMITH delivered the opinion of the Court:

The record in this case presents the question whether the appellee, Northwestern University, is liable to one of its students who paid to it a sum of money for his tuition, for an injury received by him while pursuing his studies in its chemical laboratory resulting from the negligence of the professor or instructor in charge, there being no allegation or charge in the declaration that the defendant was negligent in the selection or appointment of such professor or instructor.

The declaration charges the loss of an eye of the plaintiff, through the negligence of the professor, when the plaintiff was in his charge as a student, and in the class room or laboratory. A demurrer was sustained to the declaration upon the ground that the defendant is a charitable or eleemosynary institution, and for that reason was exempt from liability, although the declaration charges it was conducting a school and undertook to teach the plaintiff for hire.

The question as to whether the defense should be raised by demurrer or plea is waived by counsel for appellant in their brief, and it is agreed that the case may be considered as if the charter of the defendant was fully pleaded, and the issue of law made thereon.

The defendant is operating under a charter conferred by the legislature of this State (Private Laws of Illinois, 1851, p. 20) and amendments thereto passed in 1855, 1861, and 1867. An examination of the act of 1851 shows that the defendant holds its property of every kind solely for educational purposes. Its entire funds, whether derived from money or property given to it, or from income from such funds or properties, or from the tuition of students or other sources, must be used solely for educational purposes. The powers granted to it are for the purpose of enabling it to handle and manage its property in aid of the main purpose of its creation, which is education, and for no other object or purpose. A public charity is not necessarily confined to institutions or corporations which confine their gifts or assistance to the poor and needy. The term public charity has a broader significance. One of the earliest forms of public charity known to the law was that of a school and college. In Dexter v. Harvard College, 176 Mass. 192, the court said:

"That a gift for the promotion of education in Harvard College is a public charity, is a proposition too plain to need discussion. In St. 43 Eliz., chapter 4, section 1: 'Schools of learning, free schools, and scholars in universities, are mentioned as charitable objects. Such a public charity need have no special reference to the poor.' In American Academy v. Harvard College, 12 Gray, 582–594, Chief Justice Shaw says: 'That a gift designed to promote the public good, by the encouragement of learning, science, and useful acts, without any particular reference to the poor, is regarded as a charity, is settled by a series of judicial decisions and regarded as the settled practice of a court of equity. Such is a bequest for the improvement of a city, . . . to establish new scholarships in a college, . . . to found and endow a college.'"

The cases of Andrews v. Andrews, 110 Ill. 203–231; Female Academy v. Sullivan et al., 107 Ill. 365; Vidal v. Girard Executors, 2 How. 127; Downs v. Hospital, 101 Mich. 555; Fire Ins. Patrol v. Boyd, 120 Pa. State, 624; Currier v. Trustees Dartmouth College, 117 Fed. R. 48, hold to the same effect. Our conclusion, therefore, is that the defendant is a public charity, depending entirely upon trust funds for its support, and must be so treated and held by courts.

Counsel for appellant do not controvert the general proposition that defendant is a public charity, but they insist that it is not such a public or quasi public corporation as to entitle it to exemption from suits for damages arising from the negligence or mismanagement of its officers and agents within the scope of their duties as such; nor is it exempt from civil action on account of its negligence in not providing a safe place in its chemical laboratory in which the plaintiff could pursue his studies, or for the negligence of its vice-principals in conducting the business for which it is chartered. They urge that the doctrine which had its origin in Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 D. & East, 667, and Halliday v. St. Leonard, 11 C. B. N. S. 192, and has been generally accepted in the United States, exempting towns, counties, and all involuntary governmental organizations from liability for negligence in maintaining streets and bridges and in their municipal acts, has no application to corporations of the character of defendant, which have accepted a private charter.

We do not understand, however, that the exemption from liability contended for by appellee is based upon or springs from the principle upon which involuntary municipal corporations, such as towns, counties, school districts, etc., are exempt from liability for negligence in their municipal acts. As stated in Elmore v. Drainage Commissioners, 135 Ill. 269: "In such organizations the duties and their correlative powers are assumed in invitum, and there is no liability to respond in damages in a civil action for neglect in the performance of duties unless such action is given by statute.

Digitized by Google

"The grounds upon which the liability of the municipal corporation proper is usually placed are, that the duty is voluntarily assumed, and is clear, specific, and complete, and that the powers and means furnished for its proper performance are ample and adequate. In such cases there is a perfect obligation and a consequent civil liability for neglect in all cases of special private damage."

If we are to apply these principles to public charities, as appellant contends, the logic would be clear, and all public charities must be held liable, for they are all voluntarily assumed and administered, and being voluntarily assumed, the liability would follow, and the funds and properties contributed to them by the donors would be in danger of being swept away and applied to objects not contemplated by the donors. But, in our opinion, these principles are not applicable to public charities.

The principle upon which public charities are held exempt from the doctrine of respondent superior is that a public charity, whether incorporated or not, is but a trustee, and is bound to apply its funds and property in furtherance of the charity, and not otherwise. The law will not permit the trustee to divert or use the funds or property of his trust for any object not contemplated in the trust, and what the law will not permit the trustee to do it will not do itself. If the doctrine of respondent superior is to be applied to a trust of the character here involved, as contended by appellant, we would have a result contrary to all reason and justice. Damage would be paid, not from the pocket of the wrongdoer, but from a trust fund, in violation of the terms and objects of the trust.

In reviewing the case of Currier v. Trustees of Dartmouth College, 117 Fed. Rep. 48, Judge Putnam, although holding that the court was not compelled to decide the question, expressed so aptly the unreasonableness of the doctrine contended for by appellant that we quote his language. He says:

"Nevertheless, there are difficulties of a serious character, as suggested by the learned judge in connection with the disposition of this case in the circuit court, which render it apparently contrary to the fundamental notions of justice to apply to institutions of the character of the defendant, the ordinary rule with regard to negligence and reasonable care to their full extent. As well suggested by him, is the institution liable for some mistake of some professor in conducting a difficult experiment in the chemical laboratory, or of an assistant to the professor, when, by the very nature of things, assistants are somewhat largely inexperienced? Does the law require that all the appurtenances of a gymnasium, attached to an educational institution, shall be regarded with the same strict rules as those of a manufacturing establishment? Our institutions of learning are commonly known as often poorly endowed and in the receipt of no profits, and at the most of only a moderate income, and often, therefore, disenabled from making use on their premises of modern appliances for safety. Are they liable to one who enjoys their beneficence, knowing that such is their frequent position, as ordinary business corporations are liable?"

In the Feoffres of Heriot's Hospital v. Ross, 12 C. & F. 506, an action was brought by Ross, a person eligible for admission to the hospital, to recover damages for the wrongful refusal of the trustees to admit him. The case was appealed to the House of Lords, where it was unanimously held that the action could not be maintained. Lord Brougham said: "The charge is that the governors of the hospital have illegally and improperly done the act in question, and therefore, because the trustees have violated the statute—therefore, what? Not that they shall themselves pay the damages, but that the trust fund which they administer shall be made answerable for their misconduct. The finding on this point is wrong, and the decree of the court below must be reversed." Lord Cottenham said: "It is obvious that it would be a direct violation, in all cases, of the purpose of a trust if this could be done, for there is not any person who ever created a trust that provided for payment out of it of damages to be recovered from those who had the management of the fund. No such provision has been made here. There is a trust, and there are persons intended to manage it for the benefit of those who are to be the objects of the charity. To give damages out of a trust fund would not be to apply it to those objects which the author of the fund had in view, but would be to divert it to a completely different purpose."

From the time of the decision in the above case down to the present, no decision in England or in this country can be found, we think, holding that an institution of learning, like the defendant, is liable under like or similar circumstances to those charged in the declaration. On the contrary, the uniform course of the decisions has been in favor of non-liability. We refer to a few of them: Riddle v. Proprietors of the Locks, 7 Mass. 187; McDonald v. Mass. Gen. Hospital, 120 Mass. 432; Sherbourne v. Yuba Co., 21 Cal. 113; Brown v. Inhabitants of Venalhaven, 65 Me. 402; Mitchell v. City of Rockland, 52 Me. 118; City of Richmond v. Long, 17 Grattan, 375; Ogg v. City of Lansing, 35 Iowa, 495; Murtaugh v. City of St. Louis, 44 Mo. 479; Patterson v. Penn. Reform School, 92 Pa. 229.

It is further urged that the plaintiff was a student for hire, and that the defendant is authorized to charge and receive tuition by its charter. Therefore, when the plaintiff was admitted as a student and paid his tuition, a contract existed between the plaintiff and defendant in which the defendant assumed precisely the obligations and incurred precisely the same liability an individual would have incurred under a like contract.

We are of the opinion that the fact that the plaintiff was required to and did pay tuition for the instruction and benefits offered by the defendant does not deprive the defendant of its eleemosynary character. The amounts thus received from plaintiff and other students are not for private gain, but contribute to the funds of the institution and enable it more effectually to accomplish the purposes for which it was founded and organized. The fact that the defendant received from the plaintiff and other students tuition, does not make it the less a public charity, nor does it expose the trust fund to the liability of being depleted or frittered away by the negligence of its officers, professors, or employes. In case of injury the wrongdoer, not the trust fund, must respond. Gooch v. Association, 109 Mass. 558; Powers v. Mass. H. Hospital, 109 Fed. R. 294; Downs v. Hospital, 101 Mich. 555.

Digitized by Google

The judgment of the court below is correct and is affirmed.

Corporations—Trust Deeds Passing Property to Trustee in Bankruptcy—Foreclosure and Injunction.

[Central Law Journal.]

In re Jersey Island Packing Co., 138 Fed. Rep. 625, the facts were that the assets of said alleged bankrupt consist of about 4,000 acres of land described in the petition, together with the improvements, machinery, implements, and tools thereon situated, all of the value of $400,000; that on February 14, 1902, a mortgage on said property was executed to the Mercantile Trust Company, a corporation, to secure $100,000, represented by bonds of said corporation; that, as the petitioners are advised and believe, the issue of said bonds was and is illegal and void, for the reason that they were not used for purposes and objects of the company, and were issued neither for money paid, labor done, nor property actually received; that on December 11, 1902, said corporation executed to the Germanic Trust Company, afterwards known as the Central Trust Company, a conveyance and assignment of all the property of said corporation, and on April 27, 1905, said Central Trust Company transferred all of said property to William H. Wright, who in said transfer was alleged to be the owner and holder of a note for $30,000 issued by said Jersey Island Packing Company, and secured by said deeds of trust; that on September 19, 1903, there was filed for record in Contra Costa County, California, another deed of trust, executed by said corporation to William H. Wright and Myra E. Wright, to secure the payment of $100,000; that in said deeds of trust it is provided that notice of a sale thereunder shall be published in a newspaper in the city and county of San Francisco, as well as a newspaper published in the county in which the property is situated, and petitioners aver that notice has been published under said provisions, and that the time of sale under said notices is May 22, 1905; that William H. Wright is the treasurer of said Jersey Island Packing Company, and that, as petitioners are informed and believe, he has attempted to conceal from said company and others interested the intended sail of said property; that unless restrained by this court, said sale will be made on May 22, 1905, to the irreparable loss and injury of all unsecured creditors, and said trustees under said deeds of trust will be the only bidders at said sale and will bid in the property for the amount of the indebtedness mentioned therein; that, if all the property of said alleged bankrupt is disposed of as a whole in this court, it will realize sufficient to pay all its indebtedness, secured and unsecured, and that the unsecured claims aggregate about $140,000. The court said:

"It is earnestly insisted on behalf of the petitioners that the district court had no jurisdiction to make the order enjoining the sale; that the deeds of trust are absolute conveyances of the property of the alleged bankrupt, and the right of the trustees thereunder to sell upon default is not and can not be affected by the proceedings in bankruptcy. Upon the proposition that the trust deeds are absolute conveyances of the property of the alleged bankrupt, and the right of the trustees thereunder to sell upon default is not and can not be affected by the proceedings in bankruptcy. Upon the proposition that the trust deeds are absolute conveyances, the petitioners rely upon Powell v. Patison, 100 Cal. 234, 34 Pac. Rep. 676, and Moore v. Calkins, 95 Cal. 435, 30 Pac. Rep, 583, 29 Am. St. Rep. 128. The first of these cases goes no further than to recognize the established distinction between a defeasible and an absolute trust, and to say that the latter is a conveyance of property to a trustee for the purpose of selling it to pay debts, the effect of which is to pass the title unconditionally to the trustee and to vest it in him unconditionally and indefeasibly for the purposes of the trust. The second case held only that the instrument then under consideration was a trust deed; that it conveyed to the grantee, who was a creditor of the grantor, the legal title, and conferred on him the power to sell the property thus conveyed, and transmit the legal title to his grantee.

The trust deeds of the alleged bankrupt's property in this case are clearly not in the nature of an absolute conveyance. They are conveyances to secure debts of the grantor not then due. 'Like the mortgage at common law, the trust deed passes the legal title to the grantee in those jurisdictions where a mortgage passes such interest, and leaves in the grantor the equity of redemption only. Likewise in those States where it is held that the legal title remains in the mortgagor the same rule is generally applied in favor of the grantor in a trust deed.' 28 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law. (2d ed.), 753. The grantor of these trust deeds undoubtedly retained an interest in the property conveyed, which in bankruptcy would pass to its trustee for the benefit of its unsecured creditors. In re Union Trust Company, 122 Fed. Rep. 937, 59 C. C. A. 461. The filing of a petition in bankruptcy is in substance and effect an attachment and an injunction, and it places the property of the bankrupt constructively in the custody of the court of bankruptcy. Loveland on Bankruptcy, sec. 150; In re Weinger, Bergman & Co. (D. C.), 126 Fed. Rep. 875.

Property on which there is a mortgage or other lien passes to the trustee in bankruptcy, and is therefore in the custody of the court of bankruptcy. In re Rochford, 124 Fed. Rep. 182, 59 C. C. A. 388; In re Kellogg, 121 Fed. Rep. 333, 57 C. C. A. 547; Chauncey v. Dyke Bros., 119 Fed. Rep. 1, 55 C. C. A. 579; In re Booth (D. C.), 96 Fed. Rep. 943. And the beneficial interest of a bankrupt in property held in trust passes, also, in all cases where that interest might have been transferred to another by the bankrupt, or might have been levied upon under judicial proceedings against him. Stanford v. Lackland, 2 Dill. 6, Fed. Cas. No. 12,312; Spindle v. Shreve, 111 U. S. 542, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522, 28 L. Ed. 512. The trustee in bankruptcy has the election to refuse to take possession of mortgaged property, if its value, over and above the incumbrance, is not sufficient to justify an attempt to administer it. It is true that the bankruptcy act provides that liens such as the lienholders had under the trust deeds in this case shall not be affected by bankruptcy, but that is far from saying that such lienholders may, after the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy against the debtor, proceed to enforce their liens or contracts in the manner prescribed in the instruments which create them; and this is true whether such lien is an ordinary mortgage, or a deed of trust with provision for a strict foreclosure by a notice and sale.

Digitized by Google

The provision of the bankruptcy act that such a lien shall not be affected by the bankruptcy proceedings has reference only to the validity of the lienholder's contract. It does not have reference to his remedy to enforce his right. The remedy may be altered without impairing the obligation of his contract, so long as an equally efficient and adequate remedy is substituted. Every one who takes a mortgage or deed of trust intended as a mortgage, takes it subject to the contingency that proceedings in bankruptcy against his mortgagor may deprive him of the specific remedy which is provided for in his contract.

In the present case there was no jurisdiction over the property of the bankrupt in any other court. The only jurisdiction was in the court of bankruptcy. The interest of the bankrupt in the mortgaged property will pass to the trustee when he is appointed, and in the meantime it is under the protection of the bankruptcy court.

The petitioners also cite In re Browne (D. C.), 104 Fed. Rep. 762. In that case McPherson, district judge, while declining to pass on the question whether the court had jurisdiction to interfere and prevent a fraudulent or oppressive exercise of the right of sale of personal property which had been pledged by the bankrupt more than four months prior to bankruptcy, in a case where it had been agreed that the creditors intended to deal fairly with the property pledged, and to make an honest offer to sell for the best prices that could be obtained, was of the opinion that the bankruptcy act gave the court no authority to interfere between the creditors and the exercise of their right to sell given them by the collateral notes.

It may be remarked in this connection that the interest of a pledgee differs from that of a mortgagee. The pledgee has a special property in the thing pledged, which entitles him to the possession, to protect which he may maintain detinue, replevin, or trover, and the interest of the pledgor is not subject to execution. The decision in re Browne may be accepted as authority for the proposition that a district court will not interfere with a sale by a pledgee of the thing pledged, under the power of sale given by the terms of his contract, when there is no claim that such power is exercised in a fraudulent or oppressive manner.

The bankruptcy act provides (act July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 2, cl. 15, 30 Stat. 545 [U. S. Comp. St., 1901, p. 3421]) that courts of bankruptcy shall have power to make such orders, issue such process and enter such judgment, in addition to those specifically provided for, as may be necessary for the enforcement of the provisions of the act. Under this provision the court may, upon proper application and cause shown, restrain not only the debtor, but any other party, from making any transfer or disposition of any part of the debtor's property or from any interference therewith. Beach v. Macon Grocery Co., 116 Fed. Rep. 143, 53 C. C. A. 463.

We are of the opinion that the district court had jurisdiction to make the restraining order. Of the propriety of that order, assuming that the court had the power to make it, there can be no question. All the property of the alleged bankrupt was about to be sold, at the instance of its treasurer, to obtain satisfaction of debts owing to him and his wife, secured by the trust deeds. These facts evidently came to the knowledge of unsecured creditors but a few days before the proposed sale. They had no time in which to bring the creditors together, or to secure bidders for the property, or otherwise to protect their interests. The sale of the property under the trust deeds would have extinguished the equity of redemption. By selling the property under the direction of the bankruptcy court, the interests of all parties may be protected, and the trustees of the trust deeds will not be injured. They will be entitled to the proceeds of the sale to the same extent that they would have been if they had themselves made the sale under the power of sale given them by the trust deeds.

Note.—Like the mortgage at common law, the trust deed passes the legal title to the grantee in those jurisdictions where a mortgage passes such interest, and leaves in the grantor the equity of redemption. It has been judicially determined that a trust deed passes the title to the grantee in the following cases: Newman v. Jackson, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 570; Stevens v. Clay, 17 Colo. 489, 31 Am. St. Rep. 328; Sargent v. How, 21 Ill. 148; Thornhill v. Gilmer, 4 Smead. & M. (Miss.) 153; Brown v. Doe, 10 Smead. & M. (Miss.) 268; Anderson v. Holman, 1 Jones L. (46 N. Car.) 169; Taylor v. King, 6 Munf. (Va.) 358, 8 Am. Dec. 746. And in the following cases the title was held to be in the grantor: Norman v. Samuels, 17 Iowa, 528; Lenox v. Reed, 12 Kan. 223; Webb v. Haselton, 4 Neb. 308, 19 Am. Rep. 638; Hurley v. Estess, 6 Neb. 386; Kemp v. Small, 32 Neb. 318; Cullen v. Casey (Neb.), 95 N. W. Rep. 605; Hoffman v. McKall, 5 Ohio St. 124; Brown v. Drakes, 4 Hawks (11 N. Car.), 342, 64 Am. Dec. 637; McLean v. Paschal, 47 Tex. 365.

A creditor of one who sells his stock of goods in bulk without complying with the provisions of the statute regulating such sales, is held, in Rothchild Bros. v. Trewella (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 281, to have no right to maintain a direct action against the vendee to recover the amount of his claim.

Digitized by Google

Boarding House Keepers and Stolen Property.

[London Law Journal.]

Unlike an innkeeper, the proprietor of a boarding house is not an insurer of his guest's property. Of course, it does not follow that he is under no liability whatever in case of its loss, and the extent of his liability is the question which was litigated in Scarborough v. Cosgrove. In that case the guest sought to recover from the boarding-house keeper the value of some jewelry stolen from her room by another guest, and alleged negligence on the defendant's part (1) in accepting the thief as a boarder without a reference; (2) in not supplying keys to enable her to lock up her room and the chest of drawers in which the jewelry was kept. There are two fairly modern cases on the liability of a lodging-house keeper for the theft of a guest's property. In the earlier one (Dansey v. Richardson, 23 Law J. Rep. Q. B. 361: 3 E. & B. 144), the complaint was that the theft was brought about by the negligence of a servant who left the front door open, and thus enabled the thief to enter, and the judges in the Court of King's Bench were equally divided. Two of them held that the defendant could only be liable if she had personally failed to take such care of her house as a prudent housekeeper would take for the purpose of protecting his own goods. The other two considered that she was liable for the negligence of the servant, the result being that the defendant retained a verdict in her favor. In the latter case (Holder v. Soulby, 29 Law J. Rep. C. P. 246: 8 C. B. (N. S.) 254), the Court of Common Pleas held unanimously that there was no bailment of the guest's goods and no duty on the part of the lodging-house keeper to take care of them, and that he was only liable for his own misfeasance. In this state of the authorities, it seems to us that Mr. Justice Darling was bound to follow the unanimous decision of the Court of Common Pleas and to hold, as he did, that there was no case to go to the jury. The Court of Appeal, however, were in a position to review the authorities, and they have held that a boarding-house keeper is under a duty to take reasonable care of the guest's goods, and that there was a case for the jury on the question whether he had taken such care. Accordingly they ordered a new trial.

Title to Aerolite.

[New York Law Journal.]

The case of Goodard v. Winchell in the Supreme Court of Iowa, 86 Iowa, 71, attracted a great deal of attention when it was decided. It appeared that a person saw an aerolite fall on the land of another where it buried itself in the ground, becoming imbedded therein. On the following day he dug it up and removed it, claiming ownership as a finder. It was, however, very properly held that the meteorite belonged to the person upon whose land it fell, as it was an accretion to the soil from natural sources. The same principle has been recently applied by the Supreme Court of Oregon in Oregon Iron Company v. Hughes, 81 Pac. 572. It was held that a meteorite or aerolite, though not buried in the earth, is nevertheless real estate, belonging to the owner of the land, and not personal property, in the absence of proof of severance.

It was expressly decided that mere evidence of a tradition that Indians reverenced a meteorite, washed their faces in the water contained therein, and treated it as a kind of magic or medicine rock belonging to the medicine men of the tribe, and that there were fantastic potholes therein, thought to have been made by the Indians, was insufficient to justify an inference that they had severed the meteorite from the realty, and thereafter abandoned it, entitling defendant thereto, as the next finder.

As to the evidence relied on to show a severance from the soil and abandonment of the meteorite the court said:

"In substantiation of this defense Susap, a Klickitat Indian, 70 years of age, and about the last of his tribe, was called, who testified that when he was a young boy he used to go hunting with Wachino, a Clackamas chief; that he often saw the meteorite, and that there were lots of trees around it then. The stumps, as the evidence shows, are there at the present time, measuring from three to seven feet over, and some of them are very near to where it lay. Continuing, he says the old chief told him and the other Indians that the object in question was iron; that it had a hole in it; that when it rained the water fell in there, and that the Indians went there and washed their faces in the water, and put their bows and arrows in it that they used in time of war; that the medicine men said it came from the moon, and that the Indians called it 'Tomanowos.'

"Sol. Clark, 47 years of age, whose mother was of the Wasco tribe of Indians, was also called, who testified that his mother told him that there was a place up there where the Indians used to go to this Tomanowos; that they used to send their young people out there—generally made them go on dark nights—and that the Tomanowos was a kind of bowl or rock that had some holes in it, and, on cross-examination, that the Clackamas Indians used the rock; that it was a kind of magic or medicine rock, and belonged to the medicine men of the tribe, but that witness claimed no interest in it. This constitutes, in substance, all the testimony bearing upon the subject. Now, it is argued with much zeal that it is inferable from this testimony that the meteorite is an Indian relic; that it was an object of worship—a 'Tomanowos,' whatever that term implies; that the Indians must have at some time dug it from beneath the earth, where it naturally would have buried itself by impact from its fall; that they must have removed and erected it to a standing position at the place where found, and carved out the interior into 'those fantastic pot holes,' and that they maintained it there, and venerated and used it in their warfare, and thereby they severed it from the soil and appropriated it to their own use, rendering it personal property in their hands; that presumably they forsook and discarded it, and that it became abandoned property, and as such the property of the finder.

"But what is there to show that the Indians dug it from the earth and erected it in place, except its posture, or that they carved out the holes in its crown, except that they are there?

Digitized by Google

No witness said that they did this, and what has been related concerning their use of the object is traditional. Such evidence is very meagre from which to infer the substantial facts involved for the predication of the defense relied upon. Nature does many fantastic things, and presumably these are the result of natural causes, and the cavities contained therein are attributable to the same agency. As against this presumption there could be no rational inference that the Indians dug it from beneath the surface of the earth and removed and erected it in the position in which it was found in the dense forests, where it must have lain for some time, considering its great weight. Nor that they hollowed out the potholes in its crown, considering the almost impenetrability of the substance, and the primitive tools and implements with which they had to do their work.

"So that, conceding that it was an object susceptible of Indian worship, the fact does not afford reasonable inference that it was severed from the soil and appropriated by them. They may have worshiped and utilized it, dipping their bows and arrows and laving their faces in the water accumulating in these bowls, but all this they could well have done without an appropriation, as tradition tells us they worshiped Mt. Hood and other immovable objects as they existed in a state of nature, and there could have been no severance or appropriation by such use. So we conclude in this case that there was not sufficient evidence even to go to the jury, from which they would be permitted to infer that this was once Indian property, which they later abandoned, or that it is an Indian relic, and hence that the finder is not entitled to the ownership.

"Nor is this case ruled by Ferguson v. Ray, 44 Or. 557, 77 Pac. 600, 102 Am. St. Rep. 648, for in that case there was unmistakable evidence, not mere conjecture, that the quartz, the subject of the action, had been removed from its natural deposit by the hand of someone and reduced to possession by severance from the realty, and was again deposited where found, but here there is no evidence, pertinent, from which it may be deduced that there had been a severance and appropriation by the Indians."

A Contribution to the Microscopic Study of Pen and Ink Lines.

By Dr. Marshall D. Ewell, 59 Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

[Read at meeting of the American Microscopical Society, July 5, 1905.]

In the third edition of a work entitled "Bibliotics, or the Study of Documents," etc., by Dr. Persifor Frazer, the learned author has devoted an entire chapter (X) to the study of so-called serrations in ink and lead pencil lines and has attempted to show that by means of these serrations the authorship of a disputed writing may be determined. The author in the chapter mentioned calls these serrations "provisionally variations of nerve force," and states that "the fact of the existence of these peculiarities is unquestioned, and the value of the observations where proofs of identity or non-identity are sought is unquestionable." For a full presentation of the author's views reference is made to chapter 10 of said work, where a clear presentation of the theory profusely illustrated will be found.

The fact that the views of the author have, without, as it seems, any independent investigation, received a quasi indorsement from Drs. Wood, Mitchell, and Witmer, as appears from their letters published in the preface and body of said work, and also in the recent work (1905) of Winslow on "Applied Microscopy," page 139, together with the further fact that Dr. Frazer has in at least one case* attempted by this method to establish the authorship of a disputed writing, demands a careful investigation of the theory before it is allowed any weight in jeopardizing human life or liberty.

That numerous irregularities in the contour of lines traced on paper by a pen or pencil exist will not be denied. The grosser ones are apparent to the naked eye, and may be due to inexperience of the writer or to an unstable condition of his nervous system, however caused.

A microscopic examination of ink and pencil lines will also disclose the existence of more minute irregularities or "serrations," if one prefers that term; but that they have any significance or weight whatever in determining the authorship of a disputed writing is denied.

In order to settle this question the writer made a series of observations early in the present year which seem to him to bear directly upon this question and to show that the claim has no reasonable grounds to warrant its acceptance. The process of exclusion of the various factors involved was the method of research adopted. Granted the existence of the so-called serrations, what is their cause? That they have in written characters any regularity of sequence, is denied, and in the writer's judgment such regularity is not capable of proof.

In the use of a diamond tool in ruling micrometers on glass or metal, or in turning metal in a lathe with a metal tool, if the tool is not properly held or ground, it frequently happens that it will shatter and produce regular serrations upon the glass or metal surface upon which the work is performed. These serrations may have rounded extremities or may be sharp and regular like saw teeth; or the surface may be irregularly cut or torn. Let any one who is the possessor of an Abbe test-plate examine it and he will have a good example.

A microscopial examination of the engine-ruled lines on writing paper will also disclose these so-called serrations in great numbers.

In the investigation of the question the writer first ruled lines on paper with a pen and ink by means of a dividing engine, drawing the ruling carriage by a string in order to cut off any personal nervous influence. The lines so drawn uniformly exhibited serrations. The writer had years previously ruled lines on glass and through metal films on glass, and knew from experience thus gained that serrations might be produced by a ruling tool improperly mounted; but that if the tool was properly held, a line could be produced that showed not the slightest

*The State of New York v. Kennedy, tried in the city of New York in 1901.

Digitized by Google

irregularity of contour under a power of 1,500 diameters.

The next step in the investigation was to write with a pen not charged with ink on a thin film on glass in the same manner that ordinary writing is produced, the only difference being that the lines are not produced on paper by ink. Some experiments were necessary in order to produce a film that would exactly record the movements of the pen perpendicularly to and across the surface operated upon. Plate glass was held over a smoky flame, and a very thin film of carbon thereby deposited upon its surface. This made a very good medium for recording the action of the pen. The film must, however, be very thin, as otherwise the carbon will gather on the point of the pen and the accumulation will be deposited irregularly along the edges of the line much as a snow plough deposits the snow along the sides of the track, the difference being principally one of degree.

Another film was produced by flowing the glass with a thin solution of wax and asphaltum in bensole. If too thick a film is used the same phenemenon of the deposition of the substance of the film along the edges of the line will be manifested. Satisfactory films having finally been made thin enough to record the pen movements, they were written upon by various persons under the writer's direction with an ordinary dry steel pen, held and operated in the usual manner, and in every instance the margins of the lines under a power of over 120 diameters were absolutely clear, sharp, and free from serrations of any sort. The ordinary writing of the same persons on paper with pen and ink had previously shown abundant serrations.

A microscopic examination of ordinary writing paper will uniformly show irregularities of surface consisting of furrows, pits, and elevations. This fact was ascertained by a microscopical examination of the surface of the paper held at right angles to the optic axis of the microscope and from the examination of sections of the paper, the surface being parallel to said optic axis. These pits, furrows, and elevations afford an ample reason for the existence of the serrations in question, and the experiments above recorded show that they are not due to variations in the nerve force of the writer, but to irregularities in the surface of the paper itself.

The Ironies of Lord Justice Knight-Bruce.

[London Law Journal.]

Sir Frederick Pollock, in his preface to the new volume of the Revised Reports, culls some fresh flowers of rhetoric from Lord Justice Knight-Bruce's judgments. Here are his comments in a specific performance suit: "That year rolled on and ended; another spring came and still the purchase was, without any fault on the defendant's part, not completed and still the contract was alive. Matters, however, had by little and little so far advanced in the course of the fourteen or fifteen months which had passed since 1844, that there were indications promising him peace and speedy payment: Nescius aurce fallacis. Towards the close of March, 1846, there arose a cloud out of Lincoln's Inn like a man's hand. A letter from the defendant's solicitor to the plaintiff's solicitor was thus," and so on. Or hear him again on exoneration of personalty: "The reported cases more or less directly in point which have been decided within the last hundred and fifty years would, if extracted from the many volumes containing them, and collected, form, I do not say a great evil, but a good book." The following, apropos of privilege for professional communications, is not new, but it is worth resuscitating: "Truth, like other things, may be loved unwisely, may be pursued too keenly, may cost too much. And surely the meanness and mischief of prying into a man's confidential consultations with his legal adviser, the general evil of infusing reserve and dissimulation, uneasiness, and suspicion and fear into those communications which must take place and which, unless in a condition of perfect security must take place uselessly or worse, are too great a price to pay for truth itself." What agreeable reading the law reports would be if more judgments were conceived in this vein!

Conversion of Household Goods—Measure of Damages.

In Barker v. S. A. Lewis Storage & Transfer Co., decided by the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut in July, 1905 (61 Atl. 363), it was held that the measure of damages for the conversion of household goods is not restricted to the price which could be realized by a sale in the market, but is the value to the owner, based on his actual money loss resulting from his being deprived of his property, excluding any sentimental value placed thereon. The court said in part:

The defendant claimed that the measure of the plaintiffs' recovery for these articles was their fair market value at the time and place of conversion, with lawful interest since that date. It asked the court to so charge, and sought by the introduction of evidence to show that there was a second-hand market for such things in New Haven, and presumably, although no definite offer was made, to follow up that line of inquiry by offering evidence of some sort claimed to show the value of articles of the kind in question in such market. The court was correct in refusing to instruct the jury as requested, and in excluding said testimony.

The cardinal rule is that a person injured shall receive fair compensation for his loss or injury, and no more. Baldwin v. Porter, 12 Conn. 473. Commonly in cases of conversion the loss is the value of the property. Baldwin v. Porter, supra. Commonly the value of the property, as representing the owner's loss, is its market value, if it have one, since thereby is indicated the cost of replacing. Hence the subordinate rule of general application appealed to by the defendant. But the principal rule, which seeks to to give fair compensation for the loss, is the paramount one, and ordinarily, when the subordinate one fails to accomplish the desired result it yields to an exception or modification. Sutherland on Damages, sec. 12. It is now generally recognized that wearing apparel in use, and household goods and effects owned and kept for personal use, are articles which can not in any fair sense be said to be marketable and have a market value, or at least a market value which is fairly indicative of their real value to their owner, and of his loss by being deprived of them. So it has been frequently, and we think correctly, held that the amount of his recovery in the event of conversion ought not to be restricted to the price which could be realized by a sale in the market, but he should be allowed to recover the value to him based on his actual money loss, all the circumstances and conditions considered, resulting from his being deprived of the property, not including, however, any sentimental or fanciful value he may for any reason place upon it. Denver, etc., R. Co., v. Frame, 6 Colo. 385; McMahon v. City of Dubuque, 107 Iowa, 62: 77 N. W. 517: 70 Am. St. Rep. 143; Int. Ry. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 553; Fairfax v. N. Y. C. and H. R. R. R., 73 N. Y. 167: 29 Am. Rep. 119; Sell v. Ward, 81 Ill. App. 675; Joyce on Damages, sec. 1037; Sutherland on Damages, sec. 1117; Sedgwick on Damages, sec. 251.

Digitized by Google

Dying Declarations.

In State v. Craig, decided by the Supreme Court of Missouri, Division No. 2, in July, 1905 (88 S. W. 641), it was held that though deceased, when advised of a change for the worse, said that he did not feel any worse, and that he could not afford to die, his statement thereupon made in connection with a declaration that he believed that he was about to die, and that he had been told by the doctors he was about to die, and made the same as his dying statement, was admissible in evidence, it appearing that he had confidence in his physician, and the circumstances tending to show that his opinions as to his recovery had undergone a change, and his death having occurred within three hours after the statement was made. The court said in part:

The principal question in this case, and one upon which the defendant chiefly relies for reversal of the judgment, is the act of the court in admitting in evidence a paper writing as the dying declaration of the deceased, which defendant contends was error. It has always been ruled in this State that, in order to justify the admission of dying declarations, the impression of impending and immediate death and absence of any hope of recovery is essential to the admission of such declaration.

The evidence in this case discloses that the deceased had been fatally stabbed; that he seemed to improve in the first instance, from the time the stabbing occurred until the morning of the 16th day of November; that about 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning of said day there began a change for the worse in his condition, and that his physician arrived about 9 o'clock, noticed the change in the condition of the deceased and advised him of that fact. He answered the doctor, saying he did not feel any worse. The doctor said: "Walter, you are a very sick man, and the chances are all against your getting well. You are sinking now." Testifying further the doctor said: "He looked at me and said: 'Doctor, am I going to die?' I said: 'Walter, I don't believe you can possibly get well.' He said: 'I can't afford to die.'" Witness Motter testified that he (the deceased) said at the same time: "Well, I will be ready for the big show." Said witness also testified that the lips of the deceased were then blue; that his breast was rising and falling; that he was gasping for breath, and that he died within two hours thereafter. Deceased declared in the statement itself, which the evidence shows was written down as he made it in answer to questions asked, that he believed he was about to die; that the doctor told him he was about to die, and that he made that as his dying statement. This was read over to him and he signed it.

It is true that when the doctor told him he could not get well he said he could not afford to die, which would seem to indicate that he had not then abandoned all hope of recovery, but that he came to a different conclusion and believed that his end was near at hand is clearly indicated by the statement itself, in which he says: "Believing I am about to die, make this statement at 10.55 a. m., this 16th day of November, 1902." He died about 1.20 p. m. the same day. While deceased said nothing as to when he expected to die, the question was not asked him, nor was it necessary for the admission of the declaration in evidence that he should have made a formal statement that he was without hope of recovery, but "it is not enough that the declarant should have thought that he should ultimately never recover. The declaration should be made under an impression of almost immediate dissolution" (State v. Johnson, 118 Mo. 491, 24 S. W. 229, 40 Am. St. Rep. 405, and authorities cited; State v. Nocton, 121 Mo. 537, 26 S. W. 551), in so far as the evidence preliminary to the introduction of the dying declaration of the deceased in that case was concerned, was much the same as in the case at bar, and it was held admissible. In that case there is quoted, with approval from 1 Greenleaf on Evidence (14th ed. sec. 158) the following:

"It is essential to the admissibility of these declarations, and it is a preliminary fact to be proved by the party offering them in evidence, that they were made under a sense of impending death, but it is not necessary that they should be stated at the time to be so made. It is enough if it satisfactorily appears in any mode that they were made under that sanction, whether it be directly proved by the express language of the declarant or be inferred from his evident danger, or the opinion of the medical or other attendants, stated to him, or from his conduct, or other circumstances of the case, all of which are resorted to in order to ascertain the state of the declarant's mind. The length of time which elapsed between the declaration and the death of the declarent furnishes no rule for the admission or rejection of the evidence, though, in the absence of better testimony, it may serve as one of the exponents of the deceased's belief that his dissolution was or was not impending. It is the impression of almost immediate dissolution, and not the rapid succession of death, in point of fact, that renders the testimony admissible." 3 Russell on Crimes, 9 Am. ed., *250; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclopædia of Law, p. 108 et seq., and cases cited.

In the recent case of State v. Brown (not yet officially reported, 87 S. W. 519) the same subject was again under consideration, and the Nocton case was followed with approval. While deceased's remark that he did not feel any worse, in reply to his attending physician's statement that the chances for his recovery were all against him, and that he was then sinking, would seem to indicate that he was somewhat surprised, and this, together with his further remark that he could not afford to die, after being told by the physician that he could not possibly get well, tend to show that he was not then apprehensive of immediate dissolution, it is also shown by the evidence that, when informed that he could not get well, he said, "I will be ready for the big show," and that his lips were then blue, his breast rising and falling, and that he was gasping for breath; that he then made the statement itself, which the evidence shows was written down as he made it in answer to questions asked, and read over to and signed by him, in which statement he said he believed he was about to die; that the doctors told him he was about to die, and that he made it as his dying statement; that he died within less than three hours thereafter—all of which tends strongly to show that at the time of making the declaration his feelings and opinions respecting his recovery had undergone a change, in consequence, in all probability, of the statement of his physician, in whom he had confidence, that he could not possibly get well and was then sinking, and that the declaration was made under a sense of impending dissolution. There was no error committed in admitting the declaration in evidence.

Digitized by Google

Uniform Divorce Law.

[New York Law Journal.]

Governor Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, has suggested to the governors of the States of the Union to send delegates to a national congress to draft uniform divorce legislation to be presented in all the legislatures. It has been reported that a large majority of the governors have expressed themselves as willing to aid in pushing the scheme of cooperative legislation to a successful issue. While we are prepared to afford any assistance within our power, it seems not improper to recall certain considerations which have always seemed to point to amendment of the Federal Constitution as the more feasible scheme for obviating the conflict of divorce laws.

We are not unmindful of the inveterate tendency to resort to Federal legislation although there be no legitimate grounds therefor. The suggestion by many persons under the spur of notorious recent events for Federal legislation regulating life insurance is a good illustration. The subject of marriage and divorce, however, stands on a different basis. It concerns not only interstate property rights, but the national status of men and women and the legitimacy of children. It would therefore appear to offer a peculiarly proper field for the exercise of national control—one fully as proper theoretically as the regulation of interstate commerce or of bankruptcy.

On the score of practical feasibility we believe that the scheme of constitutional amendment and Federal legislation thereunder is to be preferred to that of co-operative State legislation. In order that co-operative legislation may accomplish the result in view it is necessary that all, or practically all, of the States join in and effectuate the movement. If one-quarter of the States hold aloof the present condition of affairs will contiuue. In say three-quarters of the States there is at present a substantial concurrence of sentiment as to the proper grounds for divorce, as evidenced by their respective statutory provisions. The real difficulty is to bring the other quarter of the States into line. When it comes to the adoption of a uniform statute there will be encountered not only ordinary inertia, but also decided opposition upon conscientious and religious grounds. Mere inertia has prevented unanimous adoption of the Negotiable Instruments Law, although so far as we know there has been little if any actual opposition to its policy. What is the chance of carrying through a co-operative statute of marriage and divorce when not only ordinary indifference to reform will be met with, but positive hostility founded upon the decided scruples of very many persons?

All that would be required for Federal legislation would be the adoption by three-quarters of the legislatures of an amendment in general terms authorizing Congress to take action. Under this scheme the opposition of one-quarter of the States could be disregarded, and, moreover, because of the general terms in which the amendment would be couched opposition to possible particular provisions would not be aroused.

We wish, however, to repeat that we will do everything in our power towards promoting the plans of Governor Pennypacker, believing that any discussion of the present condition of matrimonial relations must tend towards promoting a general demand for reform, and also realizing that the State of New York is one of the hardest fields in which the advocates of reform will have to labor. If the present movement for co-operative legislation fails the agitation will probably make it easier ultimately to secure the adoption of an amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Carriers—Contributory Negligence—Jumping from Train.

In Staines v. Central R. R. of N. J., decided by the Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey in June, 1905 (61 Atl. 384), it appeared that a passenger in the act of alighting from a railway car was told by the conductor to jump, as the train was in motion. The train was not in motion, as the passenger could readily have ascertained. She became excited, jumped, and was injured. It was held that it was a question for the jury whether the passenger had contributed to her injury by her own negligence. The following is from the opinion:

It has been held in somewhat similar cases that it is not necessarily negligent for the passenger to jump even from a moving trian. Filer v. N. Y. Central R. R., 49 N. Y. 48, 10 Am. Rep. 327; Lewis v. Del. & Hudson Canal Co., 145 N. Y. 508, 40 N. E. 248. "No reasonable man," says a text-book of recognized authority, "would hesitate to risk a moderate leap rather than be carried miles away from home." Shearman & Redfield, 5th ed. 519. The case is still stronger in favor of a passenger jumping from a train standing still, as in this case. It may possibly have been negligent for a woman of the age and weight of the plaintiff to jump, but the case is not so clear that a jury might not lawfully find to the contrary.

Digitized by Google

In this case, too, the plaintiff was very much excited by the alarm given by the conductor. We can not say that the language of the conductor under the circumstances of this case was not likely to produce such an alarm in the plaintiff's mind as to deprive her for the moment of self-control, and thus bring the case within the rule established in this court by Tuttle v. Atlantic City R. R., 66 N. J. Law 327, 49 Atl. 450, 54 L. R. A. 582, 88 Am. St. Rep. 491. It is true that there was no actual peril of injury to life or limb if she had waited. The peril presented to her mind was that of being carried beyond her station, and, although she could have ascertained that the train was not actually moving at the moment, she would naturally, and almost unavoidably, infer from the conductor's language that the train was on the point of moving, and that the danger of being carried beyond her station was imminent. We think it is a question for a jury whether the conductor's language was such as naturally to deprive her of the power of judgment and self-control. If it was she is not, as a matter of law, chargeable with contributory negligence, even though the peril present to her mind was not a peril to life or limb, but only the danger of being carried beyond her destination.

Sentimental Damages.

An action recently tried in the city of London court furnished an example of those breaches of contract for which it is difficult to assess compensation in money, though they have undoubtedly been attended by annoyance and inconvenience. The action was against the well-known tourist agents, Messrs. Thomas Cook & Co. The plaintiff had bought from them a return ticket from London via the United States to Japan. Coupons were attached to the tickets, which were exchanged at the different termini for steamer or railway tickets. On the return journey, he handed all his baggage at San Francisco to one of the defendants' servants, for them to place on board the steamer at New York in his own particular stateroom. He paid the defendants for that service, and they assured him on his arrival in New York some days later that his baggage was on board, and that it would be handed to him as soon as the steamer was under way.

When the steamer started, he found that his baggage was not on board, and he had to cross the Atlantic with nothing but a tooth brush and a sponge. He could scarcely present himself at the dinner table, and had to borrow a collar of the purser. He recovered his baggage after his arrival in Liverpool, and the damages for which he brought his action were the price of clothes he had to buy in Liverpool. There could be no difficulty about this head of damages, but let us suppose that the plaintiff had found his luggage immediately on his arrival at Liverpool and that it had been unnecessary to buy clothing to replace that which had been mislaid. Could the annoyance which the plaintiff suffered during the voyage be the ground of a claim for substantial damages? Many persons who have left London by railway for a visit to friends during the Christmas holidays have found at the end of their journey that their luggage had not been placed in the van, and have, in consequence, been exposed to so much discomfort that it has seriously interfered with the pleasure of their visit. But could they claim substantial damages for the breach by the company of their contract? Could the discomfort be measured in money?

We remember to have heard of a case where the wine for a splendid banquet in the country had been purchased in London and had been dispatched by railway. It did not arrive in time, and the depression of the guests can readily be imagined. But Englishmen who hold that alcohol in any form is a poison would say that, though there might be a breach of contract, there was no real damage, and in any case it is difficult to ascertain the principle on which damages could be assessed. Does the rule de minimis non curat lex apply to such cases? Are there to be no damages for mere vexation and disappointment? We can not find that there is much authority on the subject. The reason may be that the claim would usually be a modest one, and would therefore not be investigated in the superior courts. And in many cases where the breach of contract could not be disputed the party in default might think it expedient, without admitting liability, to offer some solatium for the annoyance which had been sustained.—Solicitor's Law Journal.

That an employer can not be relieved from the consequences of his neglect in providing unfit material for the construction of a staging, which results in the death of his employee, by the fact that the staging was constructed by another employee who had the power to reject material not fit for the purpose to which it was applied, is held in Farrell v. Eastern Machinery Co. (Conn.), 68 L. R. A. 239.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

Digitized by Google

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

(FOUNDED 1789.)

SCHOOL OF LAW.

FACULTY.

REV. DAVID H. BUEL, S. J.,
President of the University.
HON. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice, Supreme Court, District of Columbia)
Dean of the Faculty and Lecturer on Common Law Pleading and Practice, and Equity Pleading and Practice.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
Lecturer on the Law of Wills.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on Constitutional Law, the Law of Corporations, and Equity Jurisprudence.
HON. ASHLEY M. GOULD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Contracts, Criminal Law, and Domestic Relations.
HON. DANIEL THEW WRIGHT,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Insurance.
HON. WENDELL PHILLIPS STAFFORD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Agency.
CHAS. A. DOUGLASS, A. B., LL. B.,
Lecturer on the Law of Torts, Negotiable Paper, and Elementary Law.
MICHAEL J. COLBEBT, A. M., LL. M.,
Lecturer on the Law of Personal Property and Partnership.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Real Estate and the Law of Evidence.

Judge of the Circuit Court: DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., Ph. D., LL. M.
Court of Appeals: HON. JOB BARNARD and MESSRS. LEIGH ROBINSON and J. HOLDSWORTH GORDON.
Quiz Masters: CLARENCE R. WILSON, A. B., LL. M.; DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., PH. D., LL. M., and JAMES S. EASBY-SMITH, A. M., LL. M.
SAMUEL M. YEATMAN, A. M.,
Secretary and Treasurer.
FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM,
Assistant Secretary.

ADDITIONAL LECTURERS IN THE FOURTH YEAR OR POST-GRADUATE COURSE.

HON. HOLMES CONRAD,
(Late Solicitor-General of the United States)
On the History of the Development of Law and Comparative Jurisprudence, and on the History of the English Law.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On the History of Constitutional Law and the Foundations of Civil Liberty.
REV. RENE HOLAIND, S. J.,
On Natural Law and Canon Law.
MONROE SMITH, LL. D.,
(Professor in the School of Political Science of Columbia University, New York City)
On Civil Law.
HON. LOUIS E. McCOMAS, LL. D.,
(Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On International Law and Foreign Relations of the United States.
RALEIGH C. MINOR, LL. D.,
(Professor of Law in the University of Virginia)
On the Conflict of Laws.
HON. JOHN W. YERKES, LL. D.,
On Railroad Accident Law, Municipal Corporations.
J. NOTA McGILL, LL. M.,
On Patent Law.
ALDIS B. BROWNE, LL. B.,
On Jurisdiction and Practice of United States Courts.
WILLIAM C. WOODWARD, M. D., LL. M.,
On Medical Jurisprudence.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
On Legal Ethics.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
On General Practice and Exercises in Pleading and Evidence.

The thirty-sixth annual session opens on Wednesday, October 4, 1905, at 6.30 p. m., in the Law School Building, Nos. 506 and 508 E street northwest, at which time announcements will be made for the ensuing term. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

The Secretary will be at his office in the Law Building daily from 4.30 to 6.00 p. m. for information, enrollment, payment of fees, etc.

Students proposing to connect themselves with the School are earnestly requested to enroll before the opening night.

Circulars can be obtained at the bookstore of Lowdermilk & Co., 1424 F street northwest, and John Byrne & Co., 1322 F street northwest, and at the W. S. Thompson Pharmacy, 708 Fifteenth street northwest, or upon application to the undersigned. S. M. YEATMAN, 37-4t Secretary.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Virginia D. Corbit, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. GEORGE HELLEN, 1528 18th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,486. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Anson S. Taylor, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Clinton Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. ALICE M. SMITH, Conduit road. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,119. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Newton & Gillett, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Catherine A. Newton v. Thomas A. Valentine.
Equity No. 25,510.

The object of this suit is to have partition by sale of east fifteen feet of lot nine, in Davidson's subdivision of square one hundred sixty-three, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On the motion of the complainant it is, this 14th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Thomas A. Valentine, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Post and The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice.
[Seal]
True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 37-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Joseph R. Fague, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Richard A. Arnold, Deceased. Probate. No. 12,773.

On consideration of the petition of Richard W. and Frederick S. Emmons, executors of said Richard A. Arnold, it is by the Court, this 13th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of part of original lot numbered four (4), in square numbered nine hundred and twenty-five (925), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, made by said executors to A. D. Butz, at and for the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars ($3,500.00), cash, subject to a commission of three (3) per cent on said amount, to the party making the sale, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of October, A. D. 1905.

Provided a copy of this order be published in [Seal] The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three (3) weeks before said last named day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 37-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Faunce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of September, 1905. PHILIP P. FAUNCE, 814 8th st. S. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,142. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

John L. Johnson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, Deceased.
No. 13,185. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Otho Sullivan, it is ordered, this 8th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Sullivan, Julia McCarthy (nee Sullivan), William Morgan, Ellen Morgan, Mary Morgan, and Ellen Morgan (nee Sullivan), and their unknown heirs, alienees, devisees, and next of kin, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. [Seal] Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 37-3t

R. B. Behrend, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Louis Esberg, Deceased.
No. 13,007. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Herman L. Karpeles, it is ordered this 12th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alfred I. Esberg, Herman Esberg, Gus Simon, Ida Graebeke, —— Simon, —— Neuberg, —— Katz, —— Katz, —— Katz, M. H. Esberg, Henry Esberg, Joster Esberg, Edith Esberg, and Solomon Esberg, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 37-3t

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Samuel Thomas Labby, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of September, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,988. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Cassie Ann Butler, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,991. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

T. Percy Myers, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of James Dowd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of September, 1905. JOHN J. BROSNAN, 482 La. ave.; T. PERCY MYERS, 486 La. ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,069. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Wolf & Cohen, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Heinrich W. F. Dukehart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of September, 1905. JOHN WALDMAN, 699 7th st. N. W.; H. A. SCHEUERMAN, 7 Cst. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,010. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph Jefferson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,990. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Caspar Morgenweck, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. LINA MORGENWECK, by Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,409. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia and the State of New Jersey, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Phebe Holmes Lea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK A. LEA, 1458 Bacon st., Wash., D. C.; AUGUSTUS S. CRANE, 227 Rahway ave., Elizabeth, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,157. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Alice Bland McAboy, Deceased.
No. 13,131. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Theodore N. McAboy, it is ordered this 7th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Louise B. Legge, Austin Brockenbrough, Fanny Compton Frere, Ella Beckwith Lawton, Elizabeth Beckwith, and Brockenbrough Beckwith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 36-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Union Trust Company v. C. P. Storrs et al.
No. 25,642. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to ascertain the ownership of a certain sum of money on deposit in complainant's banking department to the joint credit of the defendants, R. Randolph Hicks and C. P. Storrs, complainant having been advised that each of said defendants is now claiming said fund to the exclusion of the other. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 6th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, C. P. Storrs, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 36-3t

Legal Notices.

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Melville Bell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,130. Admn. [Seal.] 36-3t

Coldren & Fenning, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Jennie M. Payne, Complainant, v. Thomas E. Waggaman, James B. Nicholson, Samuel E. Allen, Jr., John Sherman, Ella B. Sherman, Irving Williamson, Lawrence P. Graham, Josephine Chamberlain, R. W. McPherson, M. A. McPherson, E. T. McPherson, Stephen McArdle, the President and Directors of Georgetown College, H. Rozier Dulaney, Samuel Waggaman, and the Catholic University of America, a corporation, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,987.

Fred G. Coldren and Irving Williamson, trustees, having reported to the court that they have sold the real estate described as lots numbered 15, 16, and 17, in block 6 of Thomas E. Waggaman's subdivision of "Rosedale," now known as "Cleveland Park," as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in liber county 9, folio 71, at public auction, to Oscar Luckett, as trustee for Josephine Chamberlain and the other holders of the notes secured by the first deed of trust on said property as shown by the amended bill herein, for the sum of $7,500, it is this 7th day of September, 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided, a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. By the Court. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. [Seal] 36-3t

R. Preston Shealey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 29th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time and said court room as the place for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. CHARLES W. FLOECKHER, by R. Preston Shealey, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,346. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

H. H. Glassie and A. George Maul, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ross W. Morrison, Complainant, v. Annie E. Morrison, George L. Devers, Co-respondent, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,067.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 30th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, George L. Devers, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Times for three consecutive weeks prior to said day for once in each week. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 36-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William G. Zimmerman, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. JOHANNA M. ZIMMERMAN, 912 8th st. S. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,146. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Ralston & Siddons, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of John Hay, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 30th day of August, 1905. J. W. WADSWORTH, JR., Mt. Morris, N. Y.; PAYNE WHITNEY, 51 Wall st., New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,136. Administration. 35-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Philo J. Lockwood, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,103. Administration. 35-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Louis Kurtz, Senior, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 30th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of August, 1905. ROBERT H. T. LEIPOLD, 1300 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,112. Administration. 35-3t

Lester & Price, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of James Coleman, sometimes known as James Colemon, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of August, 1905. E. L. SCHMIDT, HARRY M. PACKARD, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,118. Administration. 35-3t

Legal Notices.

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Johanna Engel, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of August, 1905. NORMAN T. ENGEL, 590 Center Market. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,096. Administration. 35-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caleb C. Willard, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 29th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 29th day of August, 1905. KATE WILLARD BOYD, 1315 P st. N. W.; HENRY K. WILLARD, Kellogg Building; GEORGE E. HOWE, care of Henry K. Willard, Kellogg Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,101. Administration. 35-3t

W. E. Harvey, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Daniel A. Connolly, Deceased.
No. 1179. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration de bonus non on said estate, by William B. King, it is ordered this 29th day of August, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to unknown next of kin and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 35-3t

SIXTH INSERTION.

John Ridout, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Minna Schafer v. the Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of Charles Wayman.
In Equity. No. 25,470.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple by adverse possession of the complainant to all of original lot eight, in square one hundred and ninety-six, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 7th day of July, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published twice a month for said period of three months in The Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. jul 14, 21; aug 11, 18; sept 8, 15.

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No 38

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - SEPTEMBER 22, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 593
Notes of Cases 596
Legal Notices 604

Corporation Counsel Edward H. Thomas.

As was confidently expected, the vacancy in the office of corporation counsel of this District, caused by the death of Hon. Andrew B. Duvall, has been filled by the promotion to that position of Mr. Edward H. Thomas, for some years first assistant to Mr. Duvall. The wisdom of this action on the part of the Commissioners is beyond question. Mr. Thomas is a prominent member of the District bar, and in legal ability fully measures up to the requirements of the important office to which he has been appointed.

Mr. Thomas was admitted to the bar of this District in 1877, and has had a successful career. He served for several years as an assistant United States attorney for this District under Hon. A. S. Worthington, resigning in 1886 to engage in private practice. As first assistant to the corporation counsel his duties consisted largely in the defense of suits brought against the District, and he added to the reputation previously gained as a capable trial lawyer. The ability and fidelity thus displayed earned for him the entire confidence of the Commissioners and of the community, and a guarantee that his administration of the office of corporation counsel will be one of exceptional success. It has been remarked of him that "he has no habits except the habit of work;" and the important and exacting duties of his new position will afford abundant scope for its exercise.

Mr. Thomas is exceedingly popular with his brethren at the bar, who cordially respect and esteem him as man and lawyer, and has been heartily congratulated by them upon his well-deserved promotion.

Renewals by Implication of Contract of Employment for Definite Term.

The case of Baker v. D. Appleton & Company, decided by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, is interesting as bearing upon the question of the tacit renewal from year to year of an original contract of employment. The facts, as stated in the opinion of the court, are as follows:

Prior to November, 1883, William H. Appleton, Daniel Sidney Appleton, William W. Appleton, and Daniel Appleton were engaged in business as copartners under the firm name and style of D. Appleton & Company, and the plaintiff, who had been the manager of the business of the copartnership at Chicago, Ill., was, on the 16th day of November, 1883, employed by William H. Appleton by the year at an annual salary of $5,000 and transferred to the city of New York. He continued with the copartnership firm till March, 1897, when the corporation of D. Appleton & Company was formed. After that he remained in the employ of the corporation at the same compensation, and continued to render the same services, with no new (or actual) arrangement or agreement, however, as to his compensation or the duration of the term of his employment.

On or about March 21, 1900, the corporation of D. Appleton & Company passed into the hands of a receiver, who on that day discharged the plaintiff and terminated his employment. On September 24 of that year the defendant was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, and in October said receiver transferred to the defendant in this action all of the assets and property of the corporation that came into his possession, "subject, nevertheless, to the payment of the business indebtedness of this company and of J. Hampden Dougherty, as receiver of this company, all of which indebtedness, principal and interest, the party of the second part hereby assumes and covenants to pay as a part of the consideration for this sale and conveyance." The plaintiff brings this action to recover the unpaid salary accruing during the year 1900, subsequent to his discharge, upon the theory that his original employment by the firm of D. Appleton & Company was for one year—from December 1, 1883, to December 1, 1884—and that such contract was continued from year to year, and that in each successive year thereafter he continued in the employ of the firm and first corporation, rendering the same services and receiving the same compensation.

At the close of the evidence, both parties moved for the direction of a verdict, and the court granted the motion made by the plaintiff and directed a verdict in his favor. In affirming this ruling the appellate court said:

If the action were between the plaintiff and the firm of D. Appleton & Co., there would be no ground for contention, but it is claimed that, granting this, the evidence is insufficient to charge the defendant with the knowledge imputable to the firm and does not furnish a sufficient or proper foundation for such conclusions of law or fact as is necessary to establish the liability of defendant in this action, and the question thus presented for our consideration is whether the evidence justified the conclusion reached by the trial justice that there was an existing yearly contract between the first corporation of D. Appleton & Co. and the plaintiff, which was renewed yearly during the existence of such corporation and operative and in force at the time of plaintiff's discharge, and if so whether the damages sustained by plaintiff, by its breach, were assumed by defendant when it succeeded the first corporation.

Digitized by Google

As between the plaintiff and the firm the latter were chargeable with knowledge of the contract made by the plaintiff with one of its members, to the extent of fixing the liability of the firm for damages resulting from its breach. Although the question presented is a close one and not entirely free from doubt, we are of the opinion that the liability assumed by the corporation was not limited to the payment of the existing indebtedness of the firm it succeeded. A fair construction of the instrument under which the property of the firm was transferred to the corporation charges the corporation, as matter of law, with knowledge of the existing contracts of the firm, and the obligations and liabilities attaching to such contracts were assumed by the corporation. As to such contracts the effect of the transfer and execution of the instrument referred to was to substitute the corporation in the place of the firm, with all the knowledge that the firm had or was chargeable with regarding them, and with all the liabilities arising therefrom that rested upon the firm.

The corporation became charged with knowledge of the plaintiff's original contract; that it had been renewed from year to year; that he was then in the employ of the firm under a yearly contract expiring on December 1, 1897, at an annual salary of $5,000, and his retention after that date, under the circumstances disclosed by the evidence, renewed the existing yearly contract which became operative and binding upon both parties until December 1, 1898.

The contract was on each December 1 thereafter renewed by the retention of plaintiff at the same rate of compensation, and at the time of his discharge was an existing valid contract by the provisions of which he was entitled to employment by the corporation until December 1, 1900, and the compensation for his services during that period of time at the rate of $5,000 per year.

It necessarily follows that his discharge, without justifiable cause, on March 21, 1900, was a breach of the contract, and for the damages resulting therefrom the first corporation was liable. This obligation and liability the defendant assumed when it succeeded the first corporation.

The learned trial justice was justified in directing a verdict for the plaintiff; the judgment is supported by the evidence, and the order appealed from must be affirmed, with costs.

In a concurring opinion by Hirschberg, P. J., it is said:

I concur in the view of this case which has been adopted by Mr. Justice Rich. The leading cases in the Court of Appeals on the duration of an indefinite contract hiring are Adams v. Fitzpatrick (125 N. Y. 124) and Martin v. The New York Life Ins. Co. (148 id. 117). In the Martin case it was held that an original hiring where no time was specified was only a hiring at will, notwithstanding the agreement was for the payment of compensation at a yearly rate. In the Adams case it was held that where there was a hiring for the fixed period of a year, it would be presumed on continuance in the employment after the expiration of the year, without further agreement, that the parties had assented to renew the engagement for a like period. This is in harmony with the prior decisions of the courts in this State, and the rule asserted has been often followed. Wallace v. Devlin, 36 Hun, 275; Dean v. Woodward, 52 id. 421, 432; Ball v. Stover, 82 id. 460; Lichtenhein v. Fisher, 87 id. 397; Hotchkiss v. Godkin, 63 App. Div. 468; Brightson v. Claflin Co., 84 id. 557.

Under these decisions it can not be doubted that when the members of the firm incorporated their business in March, 1897, the firm was under a legal obligation to retain the plaintiff in its service that year, being the fourteenth consecutive year of his employment, under no other contracts than an agreement for the first year as a fixed and definite period, and at an annual salary renewed from year to year by continuance in the service without change in the terms of the employment. As the firm then ceased doing business it is equally beyond doubt that it remained under a legal obligation to make good to him whatever loss might be sustained by reason of the deprivation of employment nine months before the expiration of the term.

It is conceded that the corporation in March, 1897, on taking over the property and business of the firm, duly assumed its business obligations. The form of the assumption is not disclosed by the record, the parties having stipulated on the trial in general terms that the transaction was accomplished in this way:

"The firm of D. Appleton & Company wrote a letter to the corporation offering to sell and transfer to that corporation all its assets, business, and property, subject to the payment of the business indebtedness of said firm, and the corporation passed a resolution agreeing to purchase the assets, business, and so forth of the firm, subject to such indebtedness of said firm to be assumed by the corporation." The corporation retained the plaintiff for the year 1897 without any agreement between him and it, and credited him upon their books at the end of the year the precise sum which the firm had agreed to pay him as annual salary and credited it to him as "salary for the year." In view of the nature of the plaintiff's services, and the importance to both parties of an engagement for some definite period; in view of the fact that the transfer of the business was practically only the continuance of it by the same men and with the same capital, although in an altered form; in view of the fact that the plaintiff's services were continued with the corporation during the remainder of the year 1897, and during subsequent years precisely the same both in scope and compensation as they had been rendered for years to the firm, and in view of the manifest object of the general stipulation as to the terms of the transfer of the business, I do not think a court would be warranted in narrowing the expression of "the business indebtedness of the said firm" to the mere debts, as such, which may have been recorded upon the books, but that upon the contrary it may be fully found as a fact that the language used, whatever it may have been, was intended and understood by the parties to embrace the contractual obligations of the firm incident to and connected with the conduct of its business, including the firm's business contract with the plaintiff. That contract was presumably of equal benefit to the contracting parties, and in the absence of anything indicating a contrary intent, the right to the exclusive control of the plaintiff's services for the balance of the year 1897 may well be deemed to have been included among "the assets, business, and so forth of the firm" which the corporation acquired by its purchase.

Digitized by Google

If the corporation thus acquired and assumed the plaintiff's contract with the firm to complete the employment for the yenr 1897 (as it certainly did carry it out in fact) I can not see why at the end of that year the corporation was not in the same position logically as if it had made the bargain with the plaintiff for that year's work. It assumed his contract, whatever the terms may have been, and could not, without inquiry, deny knowledge of the nature and extent of the terms. It was chargeable in any event with the knowledge of such facts as inquiry would have disclosed. Williamson v. Brown, 15 N. Y. 354; Reed v. Gannon, 50 id. 345; Ellis v. Horrman, 90 id. 466; Fruhauf v. Bendheim, 127 id. 587. If at the end of the year 1897 the corporation desired that the plaintiff should continue his services at will instead of under an annual contract, good faith required that some notice of announcement should have been made of the change, but he was kept until the receivership in 1900, credited on the books each year with the same annual salary, and on his discharge in that year was clearly entitled to claim whatever loss might result to him by reason of that act.

That the defendant corporation was created for the purpose of reorganizing the business of the first corporation, and that on the purchase of the property of the corporation from the receiver it expressly assumed all its liabilities of whatever nature, is beyond dispute. The facts are so set forth in the complaint, and, not being denied in the answer, are to be regarded as admitted.

In commenting on the decision, the New York Law Journal says:

In our judgment the court is right in holding that the evidence justified the conclusion that there was an existing yearly contract between the first corporation of D. Appleton & Co. and the plaintiff, which was renewed yearly during the existence of such corporation and in force at the time of the plaintiff's discharge, and further, that the liability for damages sustained by the plaintiff by the breach of such contract was assumed by the second Appleton corporation. In his concurring opinion Presiding Justice Hirschberg directs attention to the rule of law governing the subject as illustrated by the decisions of the Court of Appeals in Adams v. Fitzpatrick (125 N. Y. 124) and Martin v. N. Y. Life Ins. Co. (148 N. Y. 117).

In the Martin case it was held that an original hiring where no time was specified was only a hiring at will, notwithstanding the agreement was for the payment of compensation at a yearly rate. In the Adams case it was held that where there was a hiring for the fixed period of a year it would be presumed on continuance in the employment, after the expiration of the year, without further agreement, that the parties had assented to renew the engagement for a like period.

Such legal rule and its limitations were further exemplified in the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Third Circuit, in Taber v. Trustees of State Hospital, &c. (June, 1905, 138 Fed. 865), wherein it appeared that plaintiff was elected resident physician for a State hospital for the insane, for several terms of one year each. At the expiration of one of such terms the board of trustees postponed action on the election of a physician, and continued to postpone the matter for several meetings, when a successor to plaintiff was elected, and she was notified of such fact. She had full knowledge of the action taken at each meeting. It was held that under such circumstances there was no implied contract employing plaintiff for another year, but at the expiration of the year for which she had been elected her employment was subject to termination at any time, either by the board or by herself. The court said in part:

"It is true, no doubt, that where a person employed for one year continues in the employment, by mutual acquiescence, after the expiration of the year, the inference ordinarily is that the term of the employment has been extended for another period of one year; but in this instance that inference can not be deduced. No renewal of the plaintiff's employment for any fixed period can be implied, because the established facts do not admit of it. She was not re-elected in October, 1900, and she knew it. She was informed, too, of all the proceedings which have been referred to, from time to time as they occurred. They were contemporaneously recorded in the minutes of the board, and she testified that she always looked at the minutes; that it was part of her duty to do so. She saw fit to remain in her position with full knowledge that the question of her re-election was an open one, and she could not have failed to understand that, until an election should actually take place, her employment was but temporary, and subject to termination at any time, either by the board or by herself. She had no ground whatever for supposing that, if not re-elected, she would be retained precisely as if she had been; and her contention that there was, in legal effect, an employment for another year, is without force because the implication of an agreement to that effect is absolutely precluded by the circumstances which the evidence conclusively disclosed."

Digitized by Google

Collision—Street Car—Negligence.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana held, in the case of Dewez v. Orleans Railroad Company, that persons emerging from streets that are intersected by others upon which electric cars are operated are bound in common caution to look and listen for the approach of such cars before attempting to drive across the tracks, and that though there may be a rule imposed upon its employees by the railway company that its cars shall keep a certain distance apart, the precaution mentioned should nevertheless be observed, and that the mere fact that a car has passed will not justify the driver of a vehicle in acting upon the assumption that no other is near when the contrary would become known by the ordinary use of his eyes and ears. In the case before it the court held that where a milk cart and an electric car moving upon lines which intersected each other almost at right angles collided in such a way as to show that the points of contact were the right shaft of the cart and the left front umbrella post of the car, it could not be said that the car ran into the cart any more than that the cart ran into the car.

Negligence—Dynamite—Children.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota held, in the case of Mattson v. Minnesota and North Wisconsin Railroad Company, that the degree of care required of persons having the possession and control of dangerous explosives, such as firearms or dynamite, is of the highest; that the degree of care must be commensurate with the dangerous nature of the article, and is greater and more exacting as respects young children, and that in cases where the latter are involved the utmost care must be exercised respecting the use and custody of such instrumentalities to guard against injury to others. In this case it appeared that the defendant left exposed and unguarded on its premises a large quantity of dynamite, which was found by the plaintiff's children, who caused it to explode, killing one and permanently injuring another. The court held that the evidence was sufficient to justify the jury in finding that the dynamite was obtained from the premises of the defendant; that the defendant negligently permitted it to remain thereon exposed and unguarded, and that the children were not guilty of contributory negligence.

Railway—Accident—Negligence—Risk.

In the case of The Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington Railroad Company v. Devers, recently decided by the Maryland Court of Appeals, it appeared that the appellee was employed by the appellant as a flagman at night at a street crossing of its railroad tracks in Chester, Pa. Between the two main tracks the appellant had placed a watch box for the appellee to find shelter when not on the tracks. The box was temporarily moved for repairs, but had been apparently moved back to the place where it belonged before the appellee returned to work. When replaced, however, the box was too close to the track and was struck by an engine, and as a result the appellee was injured. He brought suit for damages and recovered judgment. On an appeal by the railroad company the court of appeals held that the case had been properly submitted to the jury, as the "watch box" in the case fell within the familiar rule which requires the master to exercise all reasonable care to provide and maintain proper and safe machinery, appliances, and places for his employees, and that the appellee did not assume the risk of a watch box placed without his knowledge too close to the track so as to be liable to be struck by passing trains.

Bankruptcy—Partnership—Insolvency.

In a recent bankruptcy proceeding in the U. S. District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri (In re Perley & Hays, 138 Fed. 927), it is held that a partnership is not insolvent, within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, where the property of the partnership, together with that of the individual members, exceeds in value the indebtedness of the firm and members. The court said in part:

The question arises as to whether or not the properties of individual members of a firm are to be taken into consideration when the issue of insolvency is raised of the partnership of which they are members. It is, I think, settled that a partnership, under the existing bankrupt law, is a distinct legal entity, which may be adjudicated a bankrupt by voluntary or involuntary proceedings, irrespective of any adjudication of the individual partners as bankrupts. At all events, it has been held by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in Re Meyer et al., 98 Fed. 977, 39 C. C. A. 368. That case seems to indicate that, in order to put a firm into bankruptcy, the act of bankruptcy complained of must have been committed by the firm. In this case, however, if that were the only question involved, I should hold that the sale of the remnant of goods, after the fire, and within the four months, and the refusal to pay the petitioning creditor, and the concealment of the money, were of themselves intended to hinder, delay, and defraud the creditor. But if I should so hold, the real question in this case still remains. It is whether or not the bankrupts were insolvent, within the meaning of the present bankrupt law, or, to state it in another way, whether or not the individual properties of the partners are to be considered in determining the question of insolvency. It has been held in a number of cases that the individual properties must be considered, and I find no case to the contrary. Vaccaro et al. v. Security Bank of Memphis et al., 103 Fed. 436, 43 C. C. A. 279. This case, while not binding on this court, was decided by the Court of Appeals of the Sixth Circuit. The same doctrine is distinctly held in the case of Davis et al. v. Stevens et al., by Judge Carland, of this circuit, in 104 Fed. 235-242. In both these cases the question was carefully considered, and those cases have the approval of this court. The court therefore finds the issues in favor of the defendants, and the petition in bankruptcy will be dismissed.

Digitized by Google

Depositions—Right to Compel Answers to Questions.

In Perry v. Rubber Tire Wheel Co. et al., decided by the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York (138 Fed. 836), the court states the general rule to be that witnesses whose depositions are being taken under section 863 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 661), should be required to answer all questions which may possibly be material, subject to their right to be protected in their constitutional privileges. The court said:

The counsel herein are engaged in taking depositions under section 863, Rev. St. (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 661). The plaintiff and her husband have refused to answer certain questions, and counsel for defendant has moved for an order to direct the witnesses to answer said questions. It is thought that the rule laid down in Blease v. Garlington, 92 U. S. 1, 23 L. Ed. 521, should be applied in the taking of such depositions. There is some uncertainty as to the practice in such cases, but the duty of this court is merely to see that the witness is properly protected in his constitutional rights, and that the process of the court is not abused. Wertheim v. R. R. (C. C.), 15 Fed. 716. The question as to the admissibility of the evidence is to be tested by the laws of the forum. Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 1 Sup. Ct. 102, 27 L. Ed. 104. The general rule is that the witness should be required to answer all questions which may possibly be material. Matter of Whitlock, 51 Hun, 354, 3 N. Y. Supp. 855; Matter of Strong v. Randall, 90 App. Div. 192, 85 N. Y. Supp. 1089; Id., 177 N. Y. 400, 69 N. E. 721. An order may be entered that the witnesses Augusta L. E. Perry and John W. Perry answer the questions put to them.

Liability of Owner for Personal Injuries Inflicted by Horse.

In Conway v. Rheims, decided in September, 1905, by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, the action was brought to recover for personal injuries inflicted by a horse. It appeared from the evidence on behalf of the plaintiff that the horse was driven by servants of defendant up and down a city block for about twenty minutes, manifesting all the time extreme nervousness and fright, if not actual viciousness, constantly plunging, jumping, and rearing, going from one side of the street to the other in an unruly manner, until finally, without any apparent cause to especially frighten him, he broke for the sidewalk, throwing one of the drivers out of the wagon and acting uncontrollably, in spite of all the drivers and bystanders could do, until finally he ran into the plaintiff and injured him. It was held that the question of defendant's negligence was properly submitted by the trial court to the jury. The court said:

On the argument of this appeal I was inclined to the view that there was no sufficient proof of the defendant's negligence, inasmuch as there appeared to be no direct evidence tending to establish that the defendant or his servants knew, or should have known, that the horse was a dangerous one to drive upon the city streets. Subsequent study of the case has convinced me, however, that the learned trial justice properly submitted the question to the jury for disposition as one of fact. The plaintiff was injured without fault on his part by a horse in charge of two of the defendant's servants while they were driving or exercising it on Liberty street, in the Borough of Brooklyn, the horse becoming unmanageable under circumstances which might fairly be regarded as admonishing them that the event was reasonably to be anticipated.

The defendant is a dealer in horses, has been all his life, and as such was thoroughly familiar with their habits and dispositions. The horse which occasioned the accident was one of a carload which he had purchased in Pennsylvania a few days before the occurrence complained of. The horse was a large one, young and green, had never been fully shod until after his purchase by the defendant, and at the time of the injury to the plaintiff was being driven for training or exercise apparently for the first time since his purchase, although he had been previously exhibited to a prospective purchaser, when it is claimed he behaved well and properly. The defendant's stables are on Liberty street, and his servants were exercising the horse by driving him up and down the block. According to their evidence the horse acted all the time in an entirely docile and gentle manner until just before the accident, when he became frightened by the flapping curtain of a passing express wagon, got beyond their control, ran upon the sidewalk, got one leg over the shaft, and as they, jumping out of the wagon, endeavored with the aid of a bystander to hold him by the head, broke away from them and ran into the street again and there into the plaintiff, who was then about to mount his wagon, standing near the curb.

The learned trial justice charged the jury that if the accident occurred in the way these witnesses said it did there could be no recovery. But the evidence given by the plaintiff and on his behalf was very different and it must be assumed that the jury accepted it as true. According to that evidence the horse was driven up and down the block for a period of about twenty minutes, manifesting all the time extreme nervousness and fright, if not actual viciousness, constantly plunging, jumping, kicking, prancing, and rearing, going from one side of the street to the other in a very unruly manner, until finally, without any apparent cause to specially frighten him, he broke for the sidewalk, throwing one of the drivers out of the wagon and acting uncontrollably, in spite of all the bystanders and drivers could do, until he ran into the plaintiff and inflicted the injury as stated. If this evidence furnishes the true history of the occurrence it can not be said as matter of law that the defendant's servants exercised reasonable care in keeping the horse so long a time upon the street while he was exhibiting such continuous manifestations of a fractious and unmanageable nature. On the contrary, the fair inference from this evidence is that the behavior of the horse was such as was well calculated to inform a driver of competent skill and experience that it was unsafe to drive him upon the street without special precaution to avoid possible mischief.

Digitized by Google

It can not be doubted that the defendant owed some duty of caution to the public when trying a green and unknown horse upon the street. Indeed, in the obvious expectation that trouble would be likely to occur when green horses were being driven for the first time, he had told his men that if a new horse became fractious they should not persist in driving him in single harness, but should take him to the stable and hitch him double with an old horse. This rule his servants wholly disregarded on the occasion in question, but aside from that fact I think the jury could properly say that ordinary care required that they should have taken the horse to the stable before he got beyond their power and control. It seems impossible that they, if in the possession of average skill, could not have foreseen in the course of twenty minutes of trial, for the purpose largely of ascertaining whether he was safe in harness, during all which time his unruly temper was displayed, that he would ultimately break the bounds of management to the possible injury of persons lawfully on the street, and if so their conduct was certainly lacking in ordinary care and prudence.

The case is very different from those wherein a horse which has proved tractable for years suddenly displays some vicious or dangerous propensity. In such cases it is necessary to prove a scienter as a condition precedent to a recovery for damages which may have been inflicted. But the purchaser of green horses by the carload is bound to apprehend the occasional exhibition of infirmities of disposition or want of restraint during the process of training, whatever assurances of docility may have accompanied the sale, and when it is made apparent upon a trial that one of the number is not kind and gentle, it is not unreasonable to require a degree of caution in handling him somewhat commensurate with the danger incident to the situation. There is no difference in legal effect between actual knowledge of dangerous traits and circumstances which naturally suggest the likelihood of their existence. As was said by Chief Judge Andrews in Benoit v. Troy & Lansingburgh R. R., 154 N. Y. 223, 227: "It may very well be that horses may be so unmanageable that they can not be driven in the public streets without manifest danger. If this was established in a particular case, we see no reason why their use by the owner, with knowledge of their vicious character, should not make him responsible for any consequent injury."

In Cadwell v. Arnheim, 152 N. Y. 182, 189, Judge Gray says: "There is no rule of law which compels a person driving horses upon a highway absolutely to keep them under control. He is bound only to exercise that reasonable degree of diligence and care which a man of ordinary prudence might be expected to exercise under the same circumstances. If the servant of the master is driving, the latter is, of course, responsible for the omission by his servant of the diligence and care exacted by the rule." Tested by this rule, I think it was for the jury to say as a fact whether the defendant's servants acted with reasonable diligence and care in continuing to drive the horse up and down the block until the apparently inevitable crisis came, and whether ordinary vigilence would not have sooner admonished them that persistence in the attempt to subdue him in the public street without some customary adventitious aid would result in the animal finally getting the best of them to the injury of others.

There are errors in ruling charged by the appellant, but none which compels a reversal.

Injury to Employee—Negligence of Master.

In Fuller v. Ann Arbor R. Co., decided by the Supreme Court of Michigan in July, 1905 (104 N. W. 414), it appeared that a servant, while repairing a railroad car for his master, threw a wrench thereon, striking a torpedo, which exploded, injuring him. He recognized the torpedo as one used by the master, but it was not shown how it happened to be on the car, or who put it there, or how long it had been there. It was held as a matter of law that actionable negligence on the part of the master in failing to furnish a safe place for the servant's work was not shown.

Injury to Employee—Negligence of Third Person—Liability of Master—Safe Place to Work.

In Penner v. Vinton Co., decided by the Supreme Court of Michigan in July, 1905 (104 N. W. 385), it was held that the contractor for the woodwork on a building is not liable for injury to his employee from negligence of an employee of the contractor for the mason work in dropping a brick on him.

It was further held that the doctrine of safe place to work has no application where the place is merely made unsafe by the negligent act during work by an employee of a third person, for which the employer is not liable.

Railroads—Yard—Duty to Fence—Injuries to Trespassers—Warning Notice.

In Katzinski v. Grand Trunk Ry., decided by the Supreme Court of Michigan in June, 1905 (104 N. W. 409), it was laid down that the law does not require a railroad company to fence its railroad yard.

It was held that where a railroad company posted a warning notice along its yard limits, notifying all persons to keep off the tracks, it was not liable for the injuries sustained to a child going on a track filled with cars liable to be moved at any time, on mere proof that children were in the habit of playing on or near the tracks, without showing that the employees knew the child was on the track.

Digitized by Google

Posthumous Libel.

Mr. Kipling Common writes to the London Times: It is well known that the maxim actio personalis cum persona moritur applies to all actions of libel and slander, and that, if either party die before the verdict, the action is at an end. Those, therefore, who approve of a defendant's estate being exonerated in this way can hardly be expected to feel much sympathy for the victim of a posthumous libel contained in a will. Yet the latter may have a very substantial grievance.

The court, it is true, can exercise its power of omitting from the probate offensive or libellous passages in a testamentary disposition; but this it will not do, except in cases of a very special and definite character. Probably, therefore, the following bequest from an ardent teetotaller to a moderate drinker would not be omitted: "I give and bequeath to A B the sum of 50*l.* upon condition that she signs the pledge." Yet such a condition inserted in a will might do the lady legatee an amount of damage for which 50*l.* would be but poor compensation. If it be said that the court makes itself particeps criminis by allowing probate of such a bequest, the answer must be that a testator should look after himself and his estate, and has no right to expect a judicial tribunal to protect him from the consequences of his malice or his folly.

It certainly is a curious condition of the law that, while a libel upon a dead man may form the subject of a criminal prosecution, a libel by the dead upon the living leaves the latter without redress. I submit that in cases of posthumous libel the executors should be answerable in damages to the extent of the testator's estate.

Accord and Satisfaction.

[London Law Journal.]

In Nathan v. Ogdens (Lim.), one of the numerous cases arising out of the sale of the defendants' business to the Imperial Tobacco Company and the consequent lapse of their bonus scheme, several interesting points as to accord and satisfaction were raised. The liquidator of the defendant company sent to the plaintiffs a check to order, on the back of which the words, "Received this check, being my share of the second and final bonus distribution of the company," were printed; and the plaintiffs signed this receipt and cashed the check and afterwards brought this action for damages for breach of contract. Mr. Justice A. T. Lawrence disposed of the defense that by accepting the check and signing the receipt the plaintiffs had waived any further claim on the simple ground that there were no words of release or discharge in the receipt. The company having gone into liquidation, the use of the words "Final distribution" expressed the true state of facts. There would be no further distribution; but the language of the receipt was evidence of an intention to waive a claim for damages. It thus became unnecessary to give a decision on the argument that the check was a negotiable instrument, the acceptance of which in respect of a debt for a larger sum amounted to an accord and satisfaction. There is, of course, authority that a negotiable instrument will operate, if so taken, as satisfaction for a debt of a greater amount, its negotiability making it in theory more advantageous than the original debt (see Sibree v. Tripp, 15 Law J. Rep. Exch. 318; 15 M. & W. 23, and Goddard v. O'Brien, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 37); and the learned judge was of opinion that the check was a negotiable instrument, notwithstanding a direction on the face of it that the receipt must be signed, and that the signature would be taken as an indorsement. This direction, he said, was not addressed to the bankers, and did not affect the nature of the order to them. Even if the receipt had plainly admitted that it was in full satisfaction of a debt, it might in some circumstances have been arguable that it was not conclusive, though no doubt strong evidence of accord and satisfaction, for there is ample authority that a receipt is not technically an estoppel.

The Measure of Damages in Conversions by Stock Brokers.

The ease with which the English system of common law can be molded to meet the exigencies of modern business is aptly illustrated in the evolution of the rule of damages in conversion, where the subject of the conversion is liable to rapid fluctuation in value, as is the case with stocks or bonds in the hands of a broker. Out of a conflict which seemed for the time utterly hopeless, the courts have gradually produced a rule which is now being rapidly seized upon as affording a just and safe criterion. This is stated with extreme lucidity in the twin cases of Federal Stock & Grain Co. v. Wiggins, 77 Conn. 507, and Ling v. Malcom, 77 Conn. 517. Both cases arose out of an unauthorized conversion of stocks in the hands of a broker, and the rule was there given as follows: "The correct measure of the plaintiff's damage was, therefore, the excess, if any, over the price realized (at the sale on June 10) of the lowest sum for which he could have placed the stocks after notice of the sale, had he given an order to that effect with reasonable promptness; or, in case of fluctuations of market price between the wrongful sale and the latest day to which it would have been reasonable to defer a repurchase, the difference, if any, between the price obtained when the shares were converted and the highest market price, in excess thereof, attained during that period."

Three rules for the computation of damages in cases of this character have been adopted by the various courts. In a few States it is held that the value of the stock at the time of the conversion should furnish the standard of measurement. Freeman v. Harwood, 49 Me. 195; Baltimore Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 269; Brylan v. Huguet, 8 Nev. 345. It is obvious, however, that this rule leaves the customer at the mercy of his broker, and the rule has received but limited indorsement.

The first rule to be adopted by influential courts was that damages for the conversion of stock should be computed upon the basis of the highest price intermediate the conversion and the time of trial. This rule originated in, and is still followed by, the English courts. Oud v. Rutts, 1 P. Wms. 572; Harrison v. Harrison, 1 C. & P. 412, 11 E. C. L. 436; Owen v. Routh, 14 C. B. 372. When cases involving the point arose in the United States the tendency was to follow the English cases. Romaine v. Allen, 26 N. Y. 309; West v. Pritchard, 19 Conn. 212. But the rule was found to be inequitable in many cases, as it practically allowed the party bringing suit to delay his action, and thus increase in many instances the amount of his damages. The rule continues, however, to be followed in a few States. Sturgis v. Keith, 57 Ill. 451; Parsons v. Martin, 11 Gray (Mass.) 111; Neiler v. Kelley, 69 Pa. St. 403, 408. In the latter State it has been limited to those cases where a relation of trust exists between the parties, and, where a transfer of stock was permitted by a bank on a forged power of attorney, there being no breach of trust, the value at the time of the conversion was accepted as a criterion. In re Jamison & Co.'s Est., 163 Pa. St. 143; Ins. Co. v. Phila., etc., R. R. Co., 153 Pa. St. 160. In some States the English rule has been adopted by statute, but the courts have required the complainant to proceed without unreasonable delay, and where this was not done, have estimated upon the basis of the value at the time of conversion. Fargo First Nat. Bk. v. Minn. Elevator Co., 8 N. Dak. 430.

Digitized by Google

The case of Romaine v. Allen, supra, opened the eyes of the New York courts to the dangers of the English rule. In that case the trial was a protracted one before a referee, and the stock, which was worth $3,937.50 at the time of conversion, rose to $8,175 during the course of the trial. This was allowed by the referee as damages. When the subject came again before the Court of Appeals in Baker v. Drake, 53 N. Y. 211, 217, the decision in Romaine v. Allen was reversed, and the now prevailing rule adopted.

This was subsequently reaffirmed in Wright v. Bank of Metropolis, 110 N. Y. 237, and by the Federal Supreme Court in Galigher v. Jones, 129 U. S. 193. The rule in these cases, and as it is more clearly stated by the Connecticut court, is now adopted by the majority of the States. Citizens' St. Ry. Co. v. Robbins, 144 Ind. 671; Dimock v. U. S. Nat. Bk., 55 N. J. Law, 296; Ralston v. Bk., 112 Cal. 208. Although severely criticised by Mr. Sedgwick in his work on "Damages," it has the advantage of affording the complainant a just and equitable relief without either giving him the opportunity to speculate upon his damages upon one hand, or on the other, of imposing a harsh and excessive punishment upon the debtor. Sedgwick, Damages, sec. 508, et seq. Where the stock has not advanced, under the prevailing rule the complainant can obtain only nominal damages. Taussig v. Hart, 58 N. Y. 425.

It is interesting to note that the Connecticut court held it necessary to plead as special damage the fact that the stock had risen in value between the time of conversion and the time when it might have been replaced, and would not allow proof of that fact to be admitted under the general claim for damages.—Yale Law Journal.

Liability of Innkeeper.

The decision of Judge Cochrane at the Albany Trial Term of the Supreme Court in Crapo v. Rockwell, 94 N. Y. Supp. 1122, is to be commended because administering sound legal principles as well as reaching a just result. It was held that a woman who had lived for seventeen months in a hotel which accommodated both transient and permanent lodgers, and had moved property into her rooms, which indicated an intention to make more than a temporary sojourn, and had made the arrangements for her stay with the proprietors themselves, instead of the clerk, was not a traveler and guest, within the rule which makes an innkeeper an insurer of the property of his guest, although when she first went to the hotel she contemplated housekeeping, and never made any agreement for lodging for a definite time, and had frequently changed her apartments during her stay.

The most interesting feature of the opinion is that portion which distinguishes the case of Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1. The learned judge remarked:

"Great stress is placed by the plaintiff on the case of Hancock v. Rand, 94 N. Y. 1. 46 Am. Rep. 112. That case was decided by a bare majority of the court, and while, of course, it is controlling in reference to a similar state of facts, nevertheless it is manifest that the doctrine of innkeepers' liability was there carried to the limit. But there is a wide distinction between that case and this. In that case plaintiff was an inmate of the hotel in question for seven months, and had been there four months when her property was taken. In this case plaintiff was at the annex about seventeen months. But the controlling feature in that case was that plaintiff was the wife of General Hancock, an officer in the United States Army, without a permanent residence anywhere, and continually subject to marching orders."

The decision in Hancock v. Rand was logical enough in theory, but the distinction drawn in favor of the plaintiff was, in our judgment, without substantially just ground. Certainly the doctrine of that case ought not to be extended so as to increase the arbitrary, highly technical liability of an innkeeper.

The pecular obligations and liabilities imposed upon innkeepers as such are based upon the theory of providing temporary accommodations for transient guests. Public policy formerly required that a traveler should be guaranteed shelter at public inns, and that because he was presumably unacquainted with the character of an inn, the proprietor should be held an insurer of the safety of his property. It is obvious that these considerations do not apply—especially under changed modern conditions—in cases where an inmate of an inn is not a wayfarer, but remains indefinitely as a boarder.

The question is treated with strong common sense by the English courts. In Lamond v. Richmond, 1897, 1 Q. B. 541, in which the action of an innkeeper in terminating business relations with a person and compelling her to leave his inn on the theory that she had ceased to be a traveler and had become a boarder, was justified, Lord Fisher, M. R., observed:

"The plaintiff has brought this action relying on the custom of England, and not on the point raised now for the first time of a contract outside the custom. The question is whether it is the law that if a person goes to an inn in the character of a traveler that person retains the same character for any time, however long. If so the law would be contrary to the truth, and I will never submit, unless compelled by an act of Parliament, to say that a thing shall be deemed to be that which it is not. Therefore, the question whether a person has ceased to be a traveler seems to me again to be a question of fact, and mere length of residence is not decisive of the matter, because there may be circumstances which show that the length of the stay does not prevent the guest being a traveler, as, for instance, where it arises from illness; but it is wrong to say that length of time is not one of the circumstances to be taken into account in determining whether the guest has retained his character of traveler."

Digitized by Google

Commenting on the same decision, Law Notes says:

It has just been decided by a New York court that the proprietor of a hotel is not responsible for the safety of the goods of his permanent boarders. This will doubtless be regarded as something new and revolutionary by the large and increasing class of people who nowadays live permanently in hotels. And so it may appear, indeed, to others, as witness the following newspaper comment upon the decision: "It has long been the rule that money and valuables should be kept in a safe, and that the proprietor of a hotel was not responsible for the possessions of transient lodgers unless such valuables are put into the possession of the hotel proprietor to be locked in a safe place. But this new decision leaves the permanent guest in quite as helpless a situation. It would seem from this decision that even the permanent guests must take their money and valuables down to the proprietor every night and have them put in a safe to be called for when wanted." As a matter of fact, the decision is neither new, nor is it, in its last analysis, anything more than the reaffirmation and application to modern conditions of certain principles as old, almost, as the law itself. The precise question has been heretofore passed upon by at least one of the State courts of last resort. In Utah, thirty years ago, the Supreme Court decided in the case of Lawrence v. Howard, 1 Utah, 142, that a party living at a hotel, as a regular boarder, by the month, at a fixed price, is in no sense a guest so as to hold the proprietors liable as innkeepers. And there are numerous other authorities which inferentially, at least, are to the same effect.

The peculiar liability of an innkeeper in respect to the goods of his guest has long been recognized as demanding, as a primary requisite, that the relation of innkeeper and guest shall actually exist. That is, the guest must be a mere transient visitor and not a permanent boarder. In early times the actual as well as the legal distinction between inns and boarding houses was much more apparent than at present. Then inns were patronized only by travelers seeking transient accommodations, and boarding houses were sought by those who wished to find a permanent home, at least for a certain length of time. The innkeeper was liable for the safety of the goods of his guest, while the boarding-house keeper was under no such obligations. In modern times the situation has changed, but the legal rule remains the same. Hotels are now used both as inns and as boarding houses. As was said in the Utah case above mentioned: "In this country hotel keepers act in a double capacity, being both innkeepers and boarding-house keepers. As innkeepers they entertain travelers and transient persons, those who come without bargain as to time and price and go away at pleasure, paying for only actual entertainment received. As boarding-house keepers they entertain residents and regular boarders and lodgers for definite lengths of time and at specific prices previously agreed upon." The liability of the proprietor of a hotel, then, for the safety of the goods of his patrons depends upon his relation to such patrons. If they are using his hotel as an inn, that is, making it a place of transient accommodation, the relation of innkeeper and guest exists and the innkeeper is liable as an innkeeper. But if they are using the hotel as a boarding house, the relation of boarding-house keeper and boarder exists, and there is no obligation upon the part of the former to take care of the personal belongings of the latter.

Rescission—Restoration of the Status Quo.

The following interesting opinion was rendered in the Court of Common Pleas, Allegheny County, Pennylvania. It may be found in the Pittsburg Legal Journal of August 23, 1905. Ward v. Anderson. A bill in equity to cancel an agreement for the purchase of real estate and of a note given in part payment therefor and the redelivery of security given as collateral security for the note, will be decreed where it appears that the agreement of sale provided for a general warranty deed and the land to be free of incumbrance, but the plaintiff (the purchaser) discovered before the delivery of the deed that the lessee had the right to remove one of the buildings, which was of material value at the termination of his lease. The plaintiff's right to a decree in this case was strengthened because there was nothing in the agreement relating to the tenant's right to removal of the building and the defendant's parol evidence tending to establish plaintiff's knowledge of this fact was not established by evidence which was clear, precise, and indubitable. Among other things the court said:

"If Ward has the right to recover, why not the right to rescind this contract before final execution? Why should this court, exercising equitable powers, compel payment for lands, even with general warranty, when Ward does not obtain a good right to all that he purchased? If enforced payment could not be retained, why make sincerity of action a necessity? Stoddart v. Smith, 5 Binn. 355. This is not the case of a suit upon a note or bond, given for purchase of money after delivery and acceptance of a deed on the ground of a defect in title, of which defendant had notice at the time of purchase; nor of a purchaser taking property with a known defect and taking the covenant as a protection against the defect, but it is a case where the purchaser agreed to take all of a certain piece of property without incumbrances, and with covenants of general warranty. Even if he knew there were defects in the title, it does not follow that he agreed to so accept it. If such was the intention, it should have been put in the contract. The contention that the first contract expired and that this transaction depends upon the second contract alone, can not be sustained. The two contracts must be taken together, as the second distinctly refers to the first and recites that it, the first contract, is arranged on a new basis. One of these new stipulations is that Anderson may sell the property to someone else. The tender of deed to Ward on November 3d and his statement that he would accept the property when the money was raised, did not execute the two contracts and bind him to final acceptance, if before that time he ascertained that the tendered deed did not convey all that was contracted for. Let a decree be prepared continuing the injunction; cancelling the agreement of purchase and sale and the note in defendant's possession; directing the redelivery of the collateral security now held by him, as well as the repayment of the purchase money advanced."

Digitized by Google

This case shows the scope of equitable powers. It is a proceeding for a rescission. There is a marked difference between a proceeding in equity for a rescission and a proceeding at common law upon a rescission. See Central Law Journal, May 19, 1905, leading article entitled the "Difference Between a Proceeding for a Rescission and One Upon a Rescission." In the above case the court must have proceeded upon the theory that there had been a total failure of contract. It is not necessary that every stipulation in a contract be broken in order to constitute a total failure. If a stipulation, which might be regarded as one of the elements, without which it is reasonable to conclude the contract might not have been made, is abandoned, or there has been a refusal to perform it, or the party upon whom performance devolves put it out of his power to execute, then there is a total failure, an abandonment of the contract, or a rescission of it, and the injured party may so regard it. Lake Shore & Mich. So. Ry. Co. v. Richards, 30 L. R. A. 30 and notes thereunder; Lincoln Trust Co. v. Nathan, 175 Mo. 175.

Negligence—Right of Workman Putting Himself in a Place of Danger to Expect a Customary Warning.

[Central Law Journal.]

In the case of D'Agastino v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 60 Atl. Rep. 1113, the plaintiff's intestate was employed by the defendant as a track laborer. On March 18, 1902, he was working on the tracks of the company at Waverly. There are several parallel tracks at this point. At the time he was killed the deceased was working upon track No. 5. The gang of which the deceased was a member was working on tracks Nos. 3, 4, and 5. Deceased was engaged in sorting loose stones from the earth on track No. 5, which was the drill track, and throwing the stones, when sorted, on track No. 4, which is the west-bound passenger track. While at work the deceased was necessarily bent over. He could not, of course, devote his attention to his work and the approaching trains at the same time. The proof in the cause shows that there was a foreman and an assistant foreman present, who did not actually engage in the work, but only acted as superintendents. The proof was that the foreman of gangs of men at work as the deceased and his fellow laborers were at the time he was killed were accustomed, upon the approach of a train, to call out to the men, "Look out on track No. 3!" "Look out on track No. 4!" or whatever track it happened to be upon which the train was approaching. It is clear that the men relied upon this warning, and it is equally clear that it was the custom of the company to give it. It is conceded that when the deceased was killed by the backing upon him of a freight engine on track No. 5 no such warning was given. Both the foreman and his assistant were absent at the time. They were at the "shanty" some distance away. It was testified by the foreman that it was the custom, when he left the men unprotected, owing to his going on some temporary duty, for him to warn them of his leaving, and to caution them to look out for themselves; to call out to them, "Now boys, look out!" He says he did this on this day, but it appears by the proof that, if he called at all, he did not call so that all heard, and that the deceased was too far away to hear, if he did so call.

On this state of facts the court said: "We think that the deceased had a right to rely upon the fact that, if there was any danger from an approaching train, the customary warning would be given. There was no error in the refusal to nonsuit or to direct a verdict for the defendants. Where a workman, in the discharge of his duty, has placed himself in a position of probable danger, and where he has a right to expect a warning before the danger becomes actual, and he is injured because no warning was given, the question whether he assumed the risk or was guilty of contributory negligence can not be decided by the court. Albanese, Admr. v. Central R. Co., 70 N. J. Law, 241, 57 Atl. Rep. 447; Harmer v. Reed Apartment Co., 68. N. J. Law, 332, 52 Atl. Rep. 402. Under the proof this case can not be distinguished on principle from that of the Belleville Stone Co. v. Mooney, 61 N. J. Law, 253, 39 Atl. Rep. 764, 39 L. R. A. 834. In that case it was held, where the giving of a warning was embraced in the duty owed by the employer to the employee in order that the place where the employer sets the employee to work may be kept safe, that the failure of the foreman to discharge this duty carefully was imputable to the employer, and that such failure was not one of the obvious dangers of which the employee assumed the risk. It was strongly contended in this case that the danger to the deceased of being run over was clearly an obvious one. On this point, in Belleville Stone Co. v. Mooney, Mr. Justice Dixon says: 'Nor will the doctrine that servants assume the obvious risks of their employment save the defendant in this case, for that doctrine is not applicable to the risks arising from negligence in the discharge of the master's duty to his servant. No doubt the plaintiff took the risks of the system under which he knew the quarry was worked. He could not be heard to complain that places of refuge close at hand were not provided, or that other possible precautions, which he saw were not in use, were omitted. But he had a right to expect that the precautions which the defendant had provided for the security of the quarrymen should be carefully observed, and he did not assume the risk of a negligent observance.' "

Digitized by Google

A foreman who directs a workman to engage in work which turns out to have been dangerous, the workman having relied on the foreman to notify him of the danger, is not guilty of contributory negligence. Hass v. Balch, 26 Fed. Rep. 984, 6 C. C. A. 201, 12 U. S. App. 534.

Where there was doubt as to the boss having given warning of dangers of which it was his duty to warn men under his charge, the question is one for the jury. Alaska Treadwell Gold Min. Co. v. Whelan, 64 Fed. Rep. 462, 29 U. S. App. 1; Mills v. East Tenn., V. & G. Ry. Co., 87 Ga. 102, 13 S. E. Rep. 205; Morebach v. Home Min. Co., 53 Kan. 731, 37 Pac. Rep. 122; Cox v. Senite Granite Co., 39 Mo. App. 439; Warner v. C., R. I. & P. Ry. Co., 62 Mo. App. 184; Fort v. Whipple, 11 Hun, 586; Benzing v. Steinway, 101 N. Y. 547, 5 N. E. Rep. 449; Kooswrowska v. Glasser, 8 N. Y. Supp. 197.

Residents of a schoolhouse neighborhood who contribute money for the erection of a building, to be built by individual contributions, for the use and benefit of the people of the neighborhood, in order that a private school may be taught there when subscriptions for that purpose can from time to time be raised, the title to the building being vested exclusively in the people of the neighborhood, are held, in Lomax v. Phillips (La.), 68 L. R. A. 661, to have no right to sue to recover individual damages to themselves against one who maliciously tears down and removes the building.

Keeping a hotel is held, in United States Hotel Co. v. Niles (C. C. A. 6th C.), 68 L. R. A. 588, not to be trading, or a mercantile pursuit, within the meaning of a statute permitting the institution of involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against corporations principally engaged in trading or such pursuit.

Failure to present and give notice of dishonor of a note given as collateral security to another is held, in Coleman v. Lewis (Mass.), 68 L. R. A. 482, not to operate as pro tanto satisfaction of the principal note.

One holding as collateral security commercial paper which is secured by mortgage on chattels is held, in Scott v. First Nat. Bank (Ind. Ter.), 68 L. R. A. 488, to be liable to his debtor for permitting the lien of the mortgage to expire, and the obligors upon the paper to become insolvent, without taking any steps to enforce payment of it, so that the security is entirely lost. With these cases is a note on the effect of failure of holder to make demand or give notice of dishonor of paper held as collateral or conditional payment.

A railroad company which can not, because of a strike, obey the shipping directions as to the route by which the goods shall be sent forward, is held, in Fisher v. Boston & M. R. Co. (Me.), 68 L. R. A. 390, to be liable to the shipper in case it selects another route, without consulting him, on which the freight charges are greatly increased, where means of communication with the shipper are easily available, and can be utilized without injury to the property, although the bill of lading stipulates that it may, in case of necessity, forward the goods to destination by any route.

The inability of the railroad company to perform its contract to carry the purchaser of a round-trip limited ticket on his return journey because of a strike is held, in Elliott v. Southern P. Co. (Cal.), 68 L. R. A. 393, not to extend the time within which it is bound to honor the ticket.

The consent of a patient to be treated by a Christian Science healer is held, in Spead v. Tomlinson (N. H.), 68 L. R. A. 432, to preclude his holding him liable in damages for failure to effect a cure, although that method of treatment is illegal under the statutes of the State.

A statute giving the personal representation of a person negligently killed a right of action for the death, the proceeds of which are to be distributed among his legal representatives, is held, in Whitlow v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. (Tenn.), 68 L. R. A. 503, not to be a penal statute, which can not be enforced by the courts of other States.

A statute forbidding the forfeiture by local corporations of insurance policies for non-payment of premiums, until a certain time after notice of the amount and date of payment has been mailed to the insured at his last-named post-office address "in this State," is held, in Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Bradley (Tex.), 68 L. R. A. 509, not to apply to policies issued in other States, unless expressly made applicable by the terms of the policy.

Exhibition of a painting at an academy of arts to which the public is admitted only by payment of a fee, and the rules of which expressly forbid patrons to copy paintings while so on exhibition, is held, in Werckmeister v. American Lithographic Co. (C. C. A. 2d C.), 68 L. R. A. 591, not to be a publication, although it contains no notice of copyright, which will prevent the artist or his assignee from enforcing against persons subsequently attempting to publish copies of it for commercial purposes the rights which would have been secured by compliance with the copyright law.

A member of a corporation organized in the interest of a political organization is held, in McClintock v. Young Republicans of Philadelphia (Pa.), 68 L. R. A. 459, to have a right to the inspection of the membership roll, which may be enforced by mandamus.

Digitized by Google

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

(FOUNDED 1789.)

SCHOOL OF LAW.

FACULTY.

REV. DAVID H. BUEL, S. J.,
President of the University.
HON. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice, Supreme Court, District of Columbia)
Dean of the Faculty and Lecturer on Common Law Pleading and Practice, and Equity Pleading and Practice.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
Lecturer on the Law of Wills.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on Constitutional Law, the Law of Corporations, and Equity Jurisprudence.
HON. ASHLEY M. GOULD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Contracts, Criminal Law, and Domestic Relations.
HON. DANIEL THEW WRIGHT,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Insurance.
HON. WENDELL PHILLIPS STAFFORD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Agency.
CHAS. A. DOUGLASS, A. B., LL. B.,
Lecturer on the Law of Torts, Negotiable Paper, and Elementary Law.
MICHAEL J. COLBERT, A. M., LL. M.,
Lecturer on the Law of Personal Property and Partnership.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Real Estate and the Law of Evidence.

Judge of the Circuit Court: DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., Ph. D., LL. M.
Court of Appeals: HON. JOB BARNARD and MESSRS. LEIGH ROBINSON and J. HOLDSWORTH GORDON.
Quiz Masters: CLARENCE R. WILSON, A. B., LL M.; DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., PH. D., LL. M., and JAMES S. EASBY-SMITH, A. M., LL. M.
SAMUEL M. YEATMAN, A. M.,
Secretary and Treasurer.
FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM,
Assistant Secretary.

ADDITIONAL LECTURERS IN THE FOURTH YEAR OR POST-GRADUATE COURSE.

HON. HOLMES CONRAD,
(Late Solicitor-General of the United States)
On the History of the Development of Law and Comparative Jurisprudence, and on the History of the English Law.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On the History of Constitutional Law and the Foundations of Civil Liberty.
REV. RENE HOLAIND, S. J.,
On Natural Law and Canon Law.
MONROE SMITH, LL. D.,
(Professor in the School of Political Science of Columbia University, New York City)
On Civil Law.
HON. LOUIS E. McCOMAS, LL. D.,
(Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On International Law and Foreign Relations of the United States.
RALEIGH C. MINOR, LL. D.,
(Professor of Law in the University of Virginia)
On the Conflict of Laws.
HON. JOHN W. YERKES, LL. D.,
On Railroad Accident Law, Municipal Corporations.
J. NOTA McGILL, LL. M.,
On Patent Law.
ALDIS B. BROWNE, LL. B.,
On Jurisdiction and Practice of United States Courts.
WILLIAM C. WOODWARD, M. D., LL. M.,
On Medical Jurisprudence.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
On Legal Ethics.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
On General Practice and Exercises in Pleading and Evidence.

The thirty-sixth annual session opens on Wednesday, October 4, 1905, at 6.30 p. m., in the Law School Building, Nos. 506 and 508 E street northwest, at which time announcements will be made for the ensuing term. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

The Secretary will be at his office in the Law Building daily from 4.30 to 6 00 p. m. for information, enrollment, payment of fees, etc.

Students proposing to connect themselves with the School are earnestly requested to enroll before the opening night.

Circulars can be obtained at the bookstore of Lowdermilk & Co., 1424 F street northwest, and John Byrne & Co., 1322 F street northwest, and at the W. S. Thompson Pharmacy, 708 Fifteenth street northwest, or upon application to the undersigned. S. M. YEATMAN, 37-4t Secretary.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

P. S. Riggs, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of John S. Manning, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. HELEN P. MANNING, care of R. S. Riggs, 146 Broadway, New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,161. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

R. R. Horner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of David Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. JULIA I. DAVIS, 1757 S st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,080. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Robert E. Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 15th day of September, 1905. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W.; DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 1825 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,137. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles Ippolito, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. BENJAMIN W. GUY, 315 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,968. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Fred L. Rosemond, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Ohio, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alice V. C. Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally, authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 14th day of September, 1905. J. W. CAMPBELL, Cambridge Ohio; FRED L. ROSEMOND, Cambridge, Ohio. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,317. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold the south 8.29 feet of lot 54, all of lot 55, the north 12.46 feet of lot 56, the south 14 feet of lot 57, and all of lots 58 and 59 in square 302, improved by seven houses numbered 2240, 2242, 2244, 2246, 2250, 2252, and 2254 Eleventh street Northwest, Washington, D. C., for ninety-eight hundred ($9,800) dollars cash, less 3 per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 19th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 19th day of October, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. A true copy. [Seal]
Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 38-3t

Legal Notices.

[Filed September 18, 1905.]

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.
In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 3 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. A true copy. Test: [Seal]
J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-6t

Evans Browne, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Napoleon J. T. Dana, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. MABEL LANIER TIDBALL, 210 Walnut st, Montclair, N. J. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,150. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Halbert E. Paine, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of September, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,113. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Saml. Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Thomas E. Waggaman v. Thomas E. Waggaman et al. In Equity, No. 25,649.

The object of this suit is to sell a certain tract of land in the District of Columbia known and designated on the plats thereof as Woodley Park, as subdivided by Thomas E. Waggaman and John Ridout, trustees, and distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and to set aside as a preference under the bankrupt law a certain deed of trust, dated July 25th, 1904, and given by said trustees to secure notes held by the Catholic University of America, aggregating $876,168.96. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Samuel Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley, it is by the court this 18th day of, September, A. D. 1905, ordered that defendants, Eugene Ives, Emily A. Shuman, Kate M. Billings, Clara V. Dorsey, James L. McLane, Annie E. Bowie, and E. C. Humphrey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. By the Court:
[Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice.
True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-3t

Arthur R. Alexander, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James Dorsey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,149. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Anson S. Taylor, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Clinton Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. ALICE M. SMITH, Conduit road. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,119. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Newton & Gillett, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Catherine A. Newton v. Thomas A. Valentine.
Equity No. 25,510.

The object of this suit is to have partition by sale of east fifteen feet of lot nine, in Davidson's subdivision of square one hundred sixty-three, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On the motion of the complainant it is, this 14th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Thomas A. Valentine, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Post and The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice.
[Seal]
True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 37-3t

Legal Notices.

Joseph R. Fague, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Richard A. Arnold, Deceased. Probate. No. 12,773.

On consideration of the petition of Richard W. and Frederick S. Emmons, executors of said Richard A. Arnold, it is by the Court, this 13th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of part of original lot numbered four (4), in square numbered nine hundred and twenty-five (925), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, made by said executors to A. D. Butz, at and for the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars ($3,500.00), cash, subject to a commission of three (3) per cent on said amount, to the party making the sale, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in [Seal] The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three (3) weeks before said last named day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 37-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Faunce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of September, 1905. PHILIP P. FAUNCE, 814 8th st. S. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,142. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

John L. Johnson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, Deceased.
No. 13,135. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Otho Sullivan, it is ordered, this 8th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Sullivan, Julia McCarthy (nee Sullivan), William Morgan, Ellen Morgan, Mary Morgan, and Ellen Morgan (nee Sullivan), and their unknown heirs, alienees, devisees, and next of kin, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice.
[Seal] Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 37-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Virginia D. Corbit, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. GEORGE HELLEN, 1528 18th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,436. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Cohen, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Heinrich W. F. Dukehart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of September, 1905. JOHN WALDMAN, 609 7th st. N. W.; H. A. SCHEUERMAN, 7 Cst. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,010. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph Jefferson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,990. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Cassie Ann Butler, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,991. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of James Dowd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of September, 1905. JOHN J. BROSNAN, 482 La. ave.; T. PERCY MYERS, 486 La. ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,069. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Samuel Thomas Labby, late of the District of Columbia, deceased All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of September, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,988. Admn. [Seal] 37-3t

Legal Notices.

R. B. Behrend, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Louis Esberg, Deceased.
No. 13,007. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Herman L. Karpeles, it is ordered this 12th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alfred I. Esberg, Herman Esberg, Gus Simon, Ida Graebeke, —— Simon, —— Neuberg, —— Katz, —— Katz, —— Katz, M. H. Esberg, Henry Esberg, Joster Esberg, Edith Esberg, and Solomon Esberg, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day.
[Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 37-3t

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Caspar Morgenweck, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. LINA MORGENWECK, by Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,409. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia and the State of New Jersey, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Phebe Holmes Lea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK A. LEA, 1458 Bacon st., Wash., D. C.; AUGUSTUS S. CRANE, 227 Rahway ave., Elizabeth, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,157. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Melvi le Bell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under its hand this 30th day of August. 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,130. Admn. [Seal.] 36-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Alice Bland McAboy, Deceased.
No. 13,131. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Theodore N. McAboy, it is ordered this 7th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Louise B. Legge, Austin Brockenbrough, Fanny Compton Frere, Ella Beckwith Lawton, Elizabeth Beckwith, and Brockenbrough Beckwith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 9th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 36-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Union Trust Company v. C. P. Storrs et al.
No. 25,642. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to ascertain the ownership of a certain sum of money on deposit in complainant's banking department to the joint credit of the defendants, R. Randolph Hicks and C. P. Storrs, complainant having been advised that each of said defendants is now claiming said fund to the exclusion of the other. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 6th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, C. P. Storrs, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published at least once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 36-3t

Coldren & Fenning, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Jennie M. Payne, Complainant, v. Thomas E. Waggaman, James B. Nicholson, Samuel E. Allen, Jr., John Sherman, Ella B. Sherman, Irving Williamson, Lawrence P. Graham, Josephine Chamberlain, R. W. McPherson, M. A. McPherson, E. T. McPherson, Stephen McArdle, the President and Directors of Georgetown College, H. Rozier Dulaney, Samuel Waggaman, and the Catholic University of America, a corporation, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,987.

Fred G. Coldren and Irving Williamson, trustees, having reported to the court that they have sold the real estate described as lots numbered 15, 16, and 17, in block 6 of Thomas E. Waggaman's subdivision of "Rosedale," now known as "Cleveland Park," as per plat recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in liber county 9, folio 71, at public auction, to Oscar Luckett, as trustee for Josephine Chamberlain and the other holders of the notes secured by the first deed of trust on said property as shown by the amended bill herein, for the sum of $7,500, it is this 7th day of September, 1905, ordered that said sale be finally ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided, a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. By the Court. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clk. [Seal] 36-3t

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Legal Notices.

R. Preston Shealey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 29th day of September, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time and said court room as the place for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. CHARLES W. FLOECKHER, by R. Preston Shealey, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,346. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

H. H. Glassie and A. George Maul, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ross W. Morrison, Complainant, v. Annie E. Morrison, George L. Devers, Co-respondent, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 24,067.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 30th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, George L. Devers, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Times for three consecutive weeks prior to said day for once in each week. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 36-3t

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William G. Zimmerman, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of September, 1905. JOHANNA M. ZIMMERMAN, 912 8th st. S. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,146. Administration. [Seal.] 36-3t

FIFTH INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Gilbert J. Osterman et al. v. Robert E. Poole et al.
No. 25,518. Equity.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to sublots 103 to 114, inclusive, square 104, Washington, D. C. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Robert E. Poole, Susan Erwin, and Ann Council, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Martin Casner, of Martin Kershner, of Margaret Freeman, of Charles W. Goldsborough, and of Charles Henry Goldsborough, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month for the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clk.
au 11,18,25; sept. 8,22; oct. 13,27

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No 39

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - SEPTEMBER 29, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 609
SUPREME COURT OF NEW YORK:
Emma Walker, appellant-respondent, v. Lyman A. Best, respondent, and William H. Maxwell, appellant 610
Notes of Cases 612
Court of Appeals Calendar 617
Legal Notices 620

Assistant Corporation Counsel Henry P. Blair.

The announcement of the appointment of Mr. Henry P. Blair to fill the vacancy in the position of first assistant to the corporation counsel has been received with exceptional favor, as it is generally conceded that a better selection for this important office could not have been made. The appointment is based entirely upon merit, as Mr. Blair was not an applicant for the position, and his name had not appeared among those mentioned in connection therewith.

Mr. Blair is a native of New Hampshire, and a son of former United States Senator Henry W. Blair, of that State. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1889, and from the Columbian Law School in 1892. For several years he was connected with the office of the late Henry Wise Garnett, a prominent member of the bar of this District; and after the death of Mr. Garnett, in 1897, formed a partnership with Mr. Corcoran Thom, under the firm name of Blair & Thom, which has since continued.

Mr. Blair is an able lawyer, and admirably equipped for the responsible duties of his new position. His knowledge of the law is thorough and accurate, and he has had much experience in the trial of cases. That he will be a valuable accession to the office of the corporation counsel can not be doubted; and not only the Commissioners and Corporation Counsel Thomas, but the entire community, are to be congratulated that, even at the cost of a personal sacrifice, he has consented to accept the appointment.

Mr. Blair has been for some years a member of the faculty of the George Washington University Law Department, lecturing on torts, domestic relations, and personal property, and this year will begin a series of lectures on sales.

Changes in the Office of the United States Attorney for This District.

Mr. Charles A. Keigwin, for some time an assistant in the office of the United States attorney for this District, has resigned and will devote his attention to private practice. In accepting his resignation United States Attorney D. W. Baker pays a deservedly high tribute to the ability and faithfulness with which Mr. Keigwin has discharged his duties in connection with the office. Mr. Keigwin has participated in the trial of some of the most important cases disposed of during the administration of the office by Mr. Morgan H. Beach, and his work has been the subject of very general commendation.

The vacancy caused by his resignation has been filled by the appointment of Mr. Stuart McNamara to the position. Mr. McNamara is a young lawyer of fine ability, and will doubtless prove a valuable addition to the office force. He is a native of this District and a graduate of both the academical and law departments of the Georgetown University. His career in the law school was exceptionally brilliant, having attained first honors in each of his classes. He has been quite successful since his admission to the bar, and has achieved a reputation as a writer on legal subjects.

The appointment is also announced of Mr. Rudolph Yeatman as private secretary to the United States attorney. Mr. Yeatman is also a native of this District, and is at present a student in the Georgetown University law school. He has for some years been connected with the office of Lambert & Baker, and is considered a capable stenographer and clerk.

No further changes in the office force are at present contemplated. Assistant Attorney Charles H. Turner will be specially assigned to Criminal Court No. 1, and Assistant Attorney J. S. Easby-Smith to Criminal Court No. 2. Mr. Easby-Smith will also represent the office in the several cases in the Court of Appeals in which Mr. Baker is disqualified by reason of his having been counsel for the appellants in the court below.

Mental anguish because of inability to work and properly to support his child is held, in Maynard v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. (Ore.), 68 L. R. A. 477, not to be a proper element of damages to be allowed one injured in a railroad accident.

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of New York—Appellate Division.

SECOND DEPARTMENT.

EMMA WALKER, APPELLANT-RESPONDENT,

v.

LYMAN A. BEST, RESPONDENT, AND WILLIAM H. MAXWELL, APPELLANT.

LIBEL; PRIVILEGED COMMUNICATIONS.

Where writings are not libelous in themselves there can be no recovery at all unless pecuniary injury has been sustained by reason of the publication, and there can be no recovery of punitive damages in the absence of express malice, that is, malice in fact as distinguished from malice implied.

An official report prepared by defendant B., the principal of a school in which plaintiff taught, stating, among other things, that plaintiff was "careless" in a portion of her work, and a communication by defendant M., superintendent of schools, relating to such report and plaintiff's work, both held privileged.

Decided September, 1905.

APPEAL by the plaintiff, Emma Walker, from portion of a judgment of the Supreme Court in favor of the defendant, Lyman A. Best, and by the defendant William H. Maxwell from portion of said judgment in favor of the plaintiff, and from orders denying the plaintiff's and the said defendants' motions for a new trial made upon the minutes.

Samuel Walker for the plaintiff as appellant and respondent; J. Edward Swanstrom (Conrad Saxe Keyes with him on the brief) for respondent Best and appellant Maxwell.

HIRSCHBERG, P. J.—As the learned trial justice said in charging the jury, "there are here two cases which are entirely separate, one against Mr. Maxwell and one against Mr. Best." They were tried as one, and will be so considered on the appeal, the point not having been raised that a joint action only lies where joint liability exists.

The plaintiff is a teacher in one of the public schools of the borough of Brooklyn. The defendant Best is her principal and the defendant Maxwell is the city school superintendent. In the complaint it is charged that the defendant Best on October 5, 1900, libeled the plaintiff by stating in an official report that she was "careless" in blackboard work, and that the defendant Maxwell, on March 30, 1901, libeled her by writing a letter in which he stated in reference to such report that he "never had any doubt that Mr. Best's estimate (of the plaintiff) is pretty nearly correct." No special damage was alleged or proven. Neither defendant appears to have been connected in any way with the alleged libel charged against the other. The jury found in favor of the defendant Best, but against the defendant Maxwell in a substantial amount, and the plaintiff and the defendant Maxwell appeal from so much of the judgment entered on the verdict as is adverse to each respectively.

The court charged the jury in substance that the report made by the defendant Best was privileged, and that in order to recover damages from him the plaintiff must establish that in it he had depreciated her below his true conception of her merit, and that he had done so with the intent of injuring her chances for preferment. The verdict of the jury exonerated Mr. Best and justifies his report as an honest and unprejudiced estimate of the plaintiff as a teacher at the time it was made. I do not see how any other conclusion could have been reached. The report records the plaintiff's school work as good in many particulars; no fault seems to have been found with it by the plaintiff, excepting as to the allegation charging carelessness in the blackboard work; and the evidence nowhere suggests actual malice in its preparation or publication.

The report, indeed, is but the common, ordinary affair of modern school life. Its good faith has not been successfully impugned; it bears no obvious imprint of malice; it is not unkind in tone; it is not unjust in substance; it was not inspired by ill will; it has wrought no financial harm. But the same jury which has thus relieved Mr. Best from all suspicion of blame in the making of the report has found against Mr. Maxwell for his expression of confidence in its correctness; a curious result, which possibly may have been due to some extent at least to the difference in the rules of law applied by the court to the two defendants. The court charged the jury that Maxwell's letter was not privileged, but that, on the contrary, "it was a purely unnecessary, gratuitous, and uncalled-for letter." He charged that as to Best's report the burden was on the plaintiff to prove her cause of action, while as to Maxwell's letter the burden was on him to justify it. Throughout the trial he ruled that there was no evidence in the case from which an inference of actual malice on the part of Maxwell could be deduced. And at the very end of the case when Maxwell was testifying he said "there isn't the slightest evidence of malice on the part of this witness, except what may be inferred from the character of the letter he wrote. . . . There isn't a shade of evidence of express malice." In the opinion written on the motions for a new trial, however, he wrote in reference to the case against Maxwell "there was ample evidence of actual malice."

And he told the jury in his charge to them in substance that they were at liberty to find punitive damages against Maxwell; that "in all cases where the right to recover involves a finding of malice on the part of the defendant, the jury have a right to give punitive damages; that is, damages to punish; that they have a right to add something to compensation by way of punishment, and this is one of those cases, if you conclude that she is entitled to recover at all." It is true that this part of the charge was addressed to the case against Best, but all that he said on the subject of the rule as to damages as against Maxwell was that "as to the damages, the rule I have given you in the other case will apply to this." The charge was erroneous. Where writings are not libelous in themselves, there can be no recovery at all unless pecuniary injury has been sustained by reason of the publication (Bassell v. Elmore, 48 N. Y. 561; Beecher v. Press Publishing Co., 60 App. Div. 536; King v. Sun Printing and Publishing Asso., 84 id. 310); and there can be no recovery of punitive damages in the absence of express malice; that is, malice in fact as distinguished from malice implied (Krug v. Pitass, 162 N. Y. 154, 160).

Digitized by Google

I think that both writings were privileged; that neither was libelous per se, and that in the absence of any claim of special injury the complaint should have been dismissed as to both defendants. It was clearly the duty of the defendant Best, as principal of the school in which the plaintiff teaches, to note and to record her work and his opinion of her capacity and skill, and the offense attaches to an unfavorable expression which is believed to be truthful and honest.

Moreover, the charge of carelessness is not libelous as might be a charge of unskillfulness or general incapacity. History furnishes many instances of genius wasted by a life of carelessness and indifference. The plaintiff is not necessarily injured in her profession by a charge of carelessness in the performance of a particular branch of her work. The case of Mattice v. Wilcox (147 N. Y. 624), cited by the learned trial justice in the opinion heretofore referred to, was a case wherein the charge was one of general professional incapacity. But, as was said by Mr. Justice Hatch in Ratzel v. N. Y. News Pub. Co. (67 App. Div. 598), where the plaintiff was accused of "a general careless manner of attending to our business" (p. 600): "This does not state, either directly or by inference, that the plaintiff was unfitted, unskilled, or incompetent. He might be possessed of the highest degree of skill in his particular department, and still be careless in the performance of his duties. The averments of the complaint seek to show that the use of the words 'careless manner' necessarily implied that the plaintiff was unfitted, unskilled, and incompetent. On the contrary, such words are entirely consistent with the fact that the plaintiff was fitted, skilled, and competent, and there is nothing either in the alleged libelous matter, or in the pleading itself, which can in any way be construed to mean that the defendant charged the plaintiff with being unfitted, unskilled, or incompetent. Consequently there is nothing made to appear by the pleading upon which a libel may be founded, or that the use of these words injured the plaintiff in his trade, business, or calling." In Battersby v. Collier, 34 App. Div. 347, 354, the court said: "Nothing can be said to be libelous of a man in his profession except something which degrades or lowers him in his professional character generally, and it is not a libel of one in that regard to say that, in any particular work, he has fallen below the proper standard or has made a failure."

The learned counsel for the plaintiff conceded on the argument that the report was not libelous per se, but claimed that the letter of the defendant Maxwell was so. The claim is inconsistent with the concession. It can not be that a written expression of confidence in the accuracy of a report is libelous if the report itself is not so. The report was made to Maxwell as being in a sense the official head of the city schools. The letter was written by Maxwell in response to one which had been sent to him in the plaintiff's interest, and at her request, by Edward G. Ward, the borough superintendent of schools, calling attention to an alleged conflict between the opinion expressed in the report in question and one made shortly before by the same principal. Shortly afterwards Ward wrote to Maxwell, withdrawing the complaint, and saying in that letter in reference to the first one: "I wish to say that I desire the said letter to be regarded as if it had never been written, as I have just had an interview with Mr. Best, during which he has given me a full and adequate explanation of the apparent discrepancies in his reports. Clearly I was too precipitate in my action, and I very much regret having been so." It was in reply to this second letter that the communication was written which is sought to be made the basis of the action against Maxwell.

The relation of the parties to the subject-matter of the correspondence invests the communication with a privileged character. It is not shown to be untruthful in any respect, or to have been written in bad faith or from unworthy motives. On its face it is only a qualified approval of the approximate correctness of Mr. Best's report, and the plaintiff admits through her counsel on the argument that it would not be regarded as libelous, but for the assertion of the writer that he had known her for some years. She testified that this official acquaintance was at least of six years' duration, but aside from that consideration it certainly is not libelous per se for the superintendent of schools to claim in writing to be acquainted with one of the teachers in his charge.

The rule of privilege is reasonably well settled. Each of the parties to the correspondence in question had an official interest in the accuracy of Mr. Best's report. In Lewis and Herrick v. Chapman, 16 N. Y. 369, 373, Judge Selden said: "Where both parties, i. e., the party making as well as the party receiving, have an interest in the communication, it has never been doubted that it was privileged." The rule has been frequently reiterated in the Court of Appeals. See Van Wyck v. Aspinwall, 17 N. Y. 190; Klinck v. Colby, 46 id. 427; Byan v. Collins, 111 id. 143. And in Decker v. Gaylord, 35 Hun, 584, it was held that oral communications made in good faith and in a proper manner to a school commissioner by a resident of the district charging a teacher with obscenity and unchastity are privileged; that the presumption is that the person mailing such a communication is acting in good faith, and the burden of proving that he acted with actual malice rests upon the party seeking to hold him liable for slander, and that the falsity of the charge is not of itself sufficient to raise an inference of malice. The rule differs somewhat, of course, in cases of libel, but the general principle of privilege applies in either case.

The judgment in so far as appealed from by the plaintiff and the order denying her motion for a new trial should be affirmed, with costs to the defendant Best, and the judgment in so far as appealed from by the defendant Maxwell and the order denying his motion for a new trial should be reversed and a new trial granted, costs to abide the event.

All concur.

Digitized by Google

Personal Injury—Contributory Negligence—Promptness in Leaving Car.

In Philadelphia, etc., Railroad Company v. Hand, decided recently by the Court of Appeals of Maryland, the plaintiff was thrown from the platform of a railroad car and injured. The trial court granted an instruction requested by the plaintiff which in effect told the jury that the contributory negligence of the plaintiff "must be proved by the defendant;" and refused an instruction requested by defendant to the effect that it was the duty of the plaintiff to leave the train with reasonable promptness upon its arrival at her destination, and that if she was negligent in this respect, and such negligence contributed in any degree to cause the accident, she could not recover. In holding both of these rulings to be erroneous, the Court of Appeals, by Chief Judge McSherry, says:

There is one bill of exceptions in the record now before us, and the only questions presented by it for review are the rulings made by the trial court on the prayers for instructions to the jury. The suit was brought by the appellee, Sophia B. Hand, against the appellant, the Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington Railroad Company, to recover damages for a personal injury sustained by the appellee.

The facts which need be stated and about which there is no controversy can be briefly set forth; but there is one particular that will be noticed presently in which there is a contest as to a presumption arising from them. On June the 26th, 1903, the appellee and her husband purchased from the appellant company's ticket agent at Havre de Grace round trip tickets to Baltimore and return. They went to Baltimore, and on the afternoon of the same day they took a train on the appellant's road in the last-named city to go back to their home. They reached Havre de Grace shortly after 5 o'clock p. m. When the train stopped at the station the appellee and her husband arose from the seat which they occupied and proceeded towards the front door of the car to alight therefrom. There were several persons in advance of them, and the appellee followed closely behind her husband. Whilst the persons in advance of the appellee's husband were descending the car steps he passed over the rear platform of the car immediately in front of the one in which he and his wife had been riding, and descended the steps of that car so as to get on the station platform before the appellee alighted, and so as thereby to be able to assist her in alighting. Before she stepped down from the car platform the train lunged forward some five or six feet, and then suddenly stopped, whereby the appellee was thrown from the car platform, down the car steps on to the station platform and, according to the testimony, was considerably hurt and injured.

Upon this state of facts the appellee asked eight instructions and the appellant requested the court to give three. All of the prayers of the appellee, except the eighth, were granted; whilst the first and second of the appellant were also granted. The case then went to the jury and a verdict was returned for the appellee and upon the verdict a judgment was subsequently entered. From that judgment this appeal has been taken.

We need not set out the first, second, third, and fourth instructions given at the instance of the appellee, because they are almost literal transcripts of those which were granted in the case of Anderson v. P., W. & B. R. R. Co., 72 Md. 519. As they were held in that case to be free from objection, it is unnecessary to discuss them again. The fifth instruction, however, is obviously erroneous. By it the jury were told that they "were not entitled to presume that the plaintiff was guilty of negligence, but that fact, if relied upon by the defendant, must be proved by the defendant by preponderating testimony, and if the jury find that if their minds are in a state of equipoise as to whether she was guilty of negligence or not, then in such event they can not find that she was guilty of negligence."

In the Anderson case, there was an instruction to the effect that in order to defeat a recovery on the ground of contributory negligence on plaintiff's part, the defendant must satisfy the jury by preponderating evidence of two facts; first, that the plaintiff was negligent; and secondly, that such negligence directly contributed to the injury. The same instruction was given in the case at bar.

It is manifest that the fifth instruction is a radical expansion of the principle asserted in the Anderson case. Under the principle there asserted the defendant could rely upon the plaintiff's own evidence, or the evidence adduced by the plaintiff's witnesses to prove contributing negligence, and from that source alone might satisfy the jury of the existence of the two requisite facts above indicated.

But under the fifth instruction given in the pending case, contributing negligence, to be available, "must be proved by the defendant," even though the plaintiff has conclusively established the fact that it did exist and did directly occasion the injury constituting the cause of action. The instruction introduces a new doctrine in the law of negligence.

Heretofore, certainly in this jurisdiction, and we imagine in every other where negligence is not apportioned, if the plaintiff is making out a case distinctly and clearly showed that his own negligence directly contributed to the happening of the injury which befell him, the defendant was under no obligation to adduce any evidence at all, but might satisfy the court or jury from the plaintiff's own showing that contributing negligence barred a recovery.

If the instruction we are now reviewing is sound, this can no longer be done; for even though the plaintiff may by establishing his own contributing negligence, prove himself out of court, the defendant will still be responsible unless it can adduce evidence to establish what has already been proved, viz, contributing negligence; because under this instruction contributing negligence to be available as a defense "must be proved by the defendant."

Contributory negligence will defeat a plaintiff's action. It can, therefore, make no possible difference whether that negligence is proved by the plaintiff or by the defendant. It is its existence, and not the party by whom its existence is proved, that is material. It is the thing itself that defeats the action, and not the mere accident that it happens to be proved by the one or the other of the opposite parties. It is just as complete a bar to the action when its presence is revealed in the evidence introduced by the plaintiff as it is when disclosed in the testimony adduced by the defendant.

Digitized by Google

Inasmuch, then, as the negligence of the plaintiff directly contributing to the happening of the injury sustained bars a recovery, it would seem a priori to follow that it is absolutely of no consequence by which party to the suit that negligence is proved. Consequently, it was error to instruct the jury that to be a defense such negligence must be proved by the defendant.

The error just indicated is not cured by any other instruction. If the fifth instruction, which embodies the above-mentioned error, were in conflict with other instructions, that fact would, of itself, constitute a ground for reversing the judgment. B. & O. R. R. Co. v. Blocher, 27 Md. 277. If there is no such conflict there is no modification or correction of the error.

It is true the sixth introduction after setting forth certain facts hypothetically defines the right of the plaintiff to recover, "unless the jury believe from the evidence that she was guilty of want of ordinary care, and that such want of ordinary care was a direct cause of her injury."

But this in no way changed the principle laid down in the fifth instruction. The two are in accord. By the sixth the jury were told that contributing negligence would defeat the action, but by the fifth they were instructed that the contributing negligence which would so defeat the action must be proved by the defendant.

We come now to the appellant's third prayer. It was rejected because there was, in the judgment of the trial court, no evidence to support its hypothesis of facts. By it the appellant asked the court to say to the jury that "it was the duty of the plaintiff to leave the train upon which she was riding upon its arrival at Havre de Grace with reasonable promtness, and that if she was negligent in this respect, and such negligence directly contributed in any degree to cause the accident complained of, that then the plaintiff is not entitled to recover in this case, and their verdict should be for the defendant."

There can be no doubt it was the duty of the plaintiff to leave the train with reasonable promptness, and a failure by her to perform that duty would constitute negligence on her part, unless her tardiness in this respect were shown to be excusable. If her alleged negligence in this particular directly contributed to the injury she received, then, of course, there was no cause of action.

But it is said there was no evidence to show that the appellee was dilatory in leaving the train. It may be conceded that there was no direct evidence on that subject; but there were circumstances from which the jury might have legitimately inferred that she was not reasonably prompt in alighting. It does not appear that there was any other passenger behind her; there were several in advance of her. Those who were in advance of her had all alighted and had walked entirely off of the station platform and were no longer in sight before the appellee started to descend the car steps. The jury might well have inferred that if the other ladies who preceded her out of the car had time enough to do so, and in addition had time to walk wholly away from the station platform before the appellee attempted to alight, that she delayed for an unreasonable time to leave the car.

It was clearly a matter for the jury to determine, because from the facts alluded to an inference might well have been drawn by them that the appellee did not leave the train with reasonable promptness.

We have made no allusion to the appellee's seventh instruction because it relates only to the measure of damages and is not open to criticism.

We hold that there was error in granting the appellee's fifth instruction and in refusing to grant the appellant's third prayer. Because of those errors the judgment must be reversed and a new trial will be awarded.

Evidence—Res Gestæ—Statement by Train Conductor.

In Northern Pacific Railway Company v. Kempton, decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, 138 Fed. 992, the action was to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by the negligence and delay of the defendant in the transportation of certain live stock. A conductor in the employ of the defendant, in response to a question by the plaintiff during the transportation, "Why don't you get over the road?" replied, "I can't get anywhere with this dummy. They should have known better than to send it out this kind of weather." It was held that the statement was admissible as part of the res gestæ. The court said in part:

The question at issue in the case was whether there was any unreasonable delay in moving the train containing the cattle. The defendant was charged with negligence in attaching plaintiff's cars to a train that proceeded at a slow rate of speed and stopped at many stations. The defendant denied that it had been guilty of the negligence charged. The statement of the conductor was made in the midst of the act complained of, reflecting light upon its quality and character, and under the general rule was part of the res gestæ. As said by Mr. Justice Cooley in Sisson v. Cleveland R. Co., 14 Mich. 489, 90 Am. Dec. 252: "The statements . . . were made while the conductor was engaged in the business of the defendants in respect to the contract in question, and had control of the train, and they related to the delay complained of, which was the res gestæ of the case."

The declaration of a servant while engaged in enforcing the regulations of a steamboat company concerning passengers, with respect to which complaint was made that the regulation was being enforced with unnecessary or cruel severity, was held to constitute a part of the res gestæ. New Jersey Steamboat Co. v. Brackett, 121 U. S. 637, 649; 7 Sup. Ct. 1039; 30 L. Ed. 1049. Where a railroad employee has been injured by the movement of cars about which he was at work, statements of the conductor of the train, made almost immediately, and while the cars were moving or had just stopped, and while the injured man was bleeding from the injury at that moment received, describing his own part in bringing about the motion that effected the injury, were held to be admissible as part of the res gestæ. Pierce v. v. Van Dusen, 78 Fed. 693, 706; 24 C. C. A. 280 (Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, opinion by M. Justice Harlan). A conversation of a conductor with a passenger who expressed fear of a fellow passenger, as to the latter's sanity, being in discharge of the conductor's duty to the passenger, was held admissible as part of the res gestæ in an action against the railroad company for the killing, shortly after such conversation, of another passenger by the person whose sanity was questioned. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. v. Greenthal, 77 Fed. 150, 152; 23 C. C. A. 100 (Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, opinion by Judge Caldwell). These and other similar cases indicate the scope of the rule as established by the courts, under which we think the evidence was properly admitted.

Digitized by Google

Action on Note—Parol Evidence.

[New York Law Journal.]

In Graham v. Remmel, decided by the Supreme Court of Arkansas in June, 1905 (88 S. W. 899), it was held that where an application for insurance was accompanied by a note for the premium, both of which were delivered in due form to the agent of the insurer, parol evidence was admissible in an action by the agent on the note to show that the plaintiff requested that defendants execute the note as evidence of their good faith, but not to be binding on them unless the policy, when it arrived, was satisfactory and they accepted it. The court said in part:

In Ware v. Allen (128 U. S. 590), the Supreme Court of the United States held: "Parol evidence is admissible in an action between the parties to show that a written instrument executed and delivered by the party obligor to the party obligee, absolute on its face, was conditional, and was not intended to take effect until another event should take place." Following Ware v. Allen, the Supreme Court of the United States, in Burke v. Dulaney (153 U. S. 228, 14 Sup. Ct. 816, 38 L. Ed. 698), carried the application of the dictum into a case identical in principle and analogous in fact with the one at bar. Mr. Justice Harlan, for the court, said:

"And the evidence offered by the appellant and excluded by the court did not in any true sense contradict the terms of the writing in suit, nor vary their legal import, but tended to show that the written instrument was never in fact delivered as a present contract, unconditionally binding upon the obligor according to its terms from the time of such delivery, but was left in the hands of Dulaney, to become an absolute obligation of the maker in the event of his electing, upon examination or investigation, to take the stipulated interest in the property in question. In other words, according to the evidence offered and excluded, the written instrument upon which this suit is based was not —except in a named contingency—to become a contract or promissory note which the payee could at any time rightfully transfer. Evidence of such an oral agreement would show that the contingency never happened, and would not be in contradiction of the writing. It would prove that there never was any concluded binding contract, entitling the party who claimed the benefit of it to enforce its stipulations. The exclusion of parol evidence of such an agreement could be justified only upon the ground that the mere possession of a written instrument, in form a promissory note, by the person named in it as payee, is conclusive of his right to hold it as the absolute obligation of the maker.

"While such possession is undoubtedly—prima facie, indeed, should be deemed—strong evidence that the instrument came to the hands of the payee as an obligation of the maker, enforceable according to its legal import, it is open to the latter to prove the circumstances under which possession was acquired, and to show that there never was any complete, final delivery of the writing as the promissory note of the maker, payable at all events and according to its terms. The rule that excludes parol evidence in contradiction of a written agreement presupposes the existence in fact of such agreement at the time suit is brought. But the rule has no application if the writing was not delivered as a present contract." After citing many authorities supporting these views, the court concluded: "For the reason stated, and without considering the case in other aspects, we are of the opinion that it was error to exclude the evidence offered by the defendant tending to show that the writing sued on was not delivered to or received by Dulaney as the promissory note of the defendant, binding upon him as a present obligation, enforceable according to its terms, but was delivered to become an obligation of that character when, but not before, the defendant examined, and by working them tested, the mining properties purchased by the plaintiff, and elected to take the stipulated interest in them.

According to the evidence so offered and excluded, the writing in question never became, as between Burke and Dulaney, the absolute obligation of the former, but was delivered and accepted only as a memorandum of what Burke was to pay in the event of his electing to become interested in the property; and from the time he so elected, or could be deemed to have so elected, it was to take effect as his promissory note, payable according to its terms. His election within a reasonable time to take such interest was made a condition precedent to his liability to pay the stipulated price. The minds of the parties never met upon any other basis, and a refusal to give effect to their oral agreement would make for them a contract which they did not choose to make for themselves."

Following these authorities, and approving the reasoning in Burke v. Dulaney, above quoted, the court is of opinion that the Circuit Court erred in excluding the evidence offered and directing a verdict. The evidence raised an issue of fact determinable by the jury.

Digitized by Google

Imputed Negligence of Parent or Guardian.
[New York Law Journal.]

The decision of the Supreme Court of Minnesota in Mattson v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. (July, 1905, 104 N. W. 443), is of especial interest in the State of New York, because the Minnesota court disapproves of a doctrine which is quite well settled in New York, expressly overruling a previous Minnesota decision which followed New York cases. It was held inter alia that in an action brought by a child non sui juris for injuries to his person caused by the negligence of defendant, the contributory negligence of his parent or guardian will not be imputed to him (Fitzgerald v. Railway Co., 13 N. W. 168, 29 Minn. 336, 43 Am. Rep. 212, overruled), and that the negligence of the parent will bar an action by him for loss of services, but not an action by or in behalf of the infant. The action was prosecuted for the benefit of an injured child and on the point in question the Minnesota court said:

It is also urged that plaintiff, the injured boy's father, was guilty of contributory negligence; that he knew that his boys had been frequenting the railroad premises, had obtained dynamite therefrom, and wholly neglected to take adequate steps to keep them away and failed to inform defendant that they had obtained dynamite therefrom; hence that he was guilty of such negligence as will bar recovery in this action, brought for the benefit of the injured boy. It may be conceded that plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, as contended by defendant, but as his negligence can defeat a recovery only by imputing it to the injured son, as held in Fitzgerald v. Railway Co. (29 Minn. 336, 13 N. W. 168, 43 Am. Rep. 212), we take this occasion, the question being squarely presented by the facts, to reconsider the rule announced in that case. It was there held that negligence of a parent having the care of an infant non sui juris, which contributes with the negligence of a third person to produce injury to the child, bars recovery by the latter. The decision was by a majority of the court, and was based upon what was regarded sound principle. There has been much discussion of this question by text writers and judges, and the courts have not agreed thereon.

A number of the States have adopted the reasoning of the leading New York case of Hartfield v. Roper (21 Wend. 615, 34 Am. Dec. 273), and held to the doctrine as announced by this court in the Fitzgerald case, while other States, following the lead of the Supreme Court of Vermont in Robinson v. Cone (22 Vt. 213, 54 Am. Dec. 67), utterly repudiate the doctrine as unsound in principle and at variance with the general rules of law applicable to the rights of infants. It is said in 4 Current Law, 778, that by weight of modern authority negligence of a parent or custodian is not imputable to a child non sui juris, so as to bar an action brought on its behalf, and the authorities in support of the statement are there cited. Bishop, in his work on Non-Contract Law, says that the doctrine of imputed negligence, whereby an infant loses his suit, 'not only where he is negligent himself, but where his father, grandmother, or mother's maid is negligent, is as flatly in conflict with the established system of the common law as anything possible to be suggested.' The law, says the writer, never took away a child's property because his father was poor or shiftless, or a scoundrel, or because anybody who could be made to respond to a suit for damages was a negligent custodian of it.

But by this doctrine, "after a child has suffered damages, which confessedly are as much his own as an estate conferred upon him by gift, and which he is entitled to obtain out of any one of several defendants who may have contributed to them, he can not have them if his father, grandmother, or mother's maid happens to be one making a contribution." The writer concludes that the "law's established reasons" do not to any extent sustain the doctrine. The rule is criticised and declared obnoxious to sound principles by Beach in his work on Contributory Negligence, 3d ed., sec. 127 et seq., and by Judge Jaggard in his work on Torts, 2 Jaggard on Torts, 985. These criticisms are sustained by a vast majority of the courts, State and Federal. The authorities will be found cited in the works referred to and in 7 Am. & Eng. Ency. of Law, 2d ed., 448 et seq. See also Berry v. Railway Co., C. C., 70 Fed. 679; Battishill v. Humphreys, Mich., 31 N. W. 894, and Westbrook v. Railway Co., Miss., 6 South. 321, 14 Am. St. Rep. 587, where the subject is ably discussed and the authorities reviewed.

We have given the matter very serious consideration, with the result that in our opinion the doctrine of the Fitzgerald case is unsound, at variance with elementary principles of the law respecting the rights of infants, and should be overruled. The right of an infant to damages for injuries to his person caused by the wrongful act of others is a property right and entitled to the same protection in the courts as is accorded other property held or owned by him. He is entitled to the protection of the law equally with persons who have attained their majority, and to refuse him relief on the ground of his parents' indifference or negligence would be to deny it to him. To impute to him negligence of others is harsh in the extreme, whether the negligence so imputed be that of his parents, their servants, or his guardian. He is a citizen within the meaning of the law of the land and entitled to such rights and privileges as are appropriate to his class, and to the equal protection of the law. Though the Fitzgerald case has remained undisturbed many years as the law of this State, the rule there laid down is not a rule of property; no rights will be affected by a departure from it, for no one has a vested right to negligently cause injury to another, and we have no misgiving as to consequences in setting the court right on this important question, and placing it in line with the weight of modern thought. If it had become a rule of property we would not disturb it, but not being such, and being clearly wrong in principle and contrary to sound policy, it should not be longer adhered to. Ganser v. Ganser, 83 Minn. 199, 86 N. W. 18, 85 Am. St. Rep. 461.

Digitized by Google

Interstate Rendition of Paroled Convict.
[New York Law Journal.]

The law is quite well settled that an ordinary convict who has escaped and is found in another State may be returned by extradition to serve out his unexpired term. Dolan's case, 101 Mass. 219; Holton v. Hopkins, 21 Kan. 638; In re Hope, 10 N. Y. Supp. 28. The recent case of Hughes v. Pflanz, jailer, applies the same principle to the case of a convict sentenced to a reformatory and allowed to go out on parole. This decision was by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, and it adds the authority of the Federal tribunal to that of the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut in Drinkall v. Spiegel (68 Conn. 441), where the same question came up. A convict was allowed to go outside of the New York Reformatory on parole, as permitted by the statutory regulations of such reformatory, on his promise to comply with the terms of the parole which, among other things, directed that he go to Michigan, where employment had been procured for him. He went instead into Connecticut, and it was held by the Connecticut court that he was a fugitive from justice within the meaning of section 2 of article 4 of the Federal Constitution and as such might be surrendered to the New York authorities. The following language from the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals in Hughes v. Pflanz sufficiently states the argument in favor of the position taken in both cases:

"The term 'charged with crime,' as used in the constitution and statute, seems to us to have been used in its broad sense and to include all persons accused of crime. It would be a very narrow and technical construction to hold that after the accusation, and before conviction, a person could be extradited, while after conviction, which establishes the charge conclusively, he would escape extradition. The object of the provisions of the constitution and statute is to prevent the escape of persons charged with crime, whether convicted or unconvicted, and to secure their return and punishment if guilty. Taking the broad definition of 'charged with crime' as including the responsibility for crime, the charge would not cease or be merged in the conviction, but would stand until the judgment is satisfied. It would include every person accused, until he should be acquitted, or until the judgment inflicted should be satisfied. Any other construction would prevent the return of escaped convicts upon the charge under which they had been sentenced, and defeat in many instances the ends of justice."

Contract—Time for Performance—Specifying Day for Performance.

Where a contract by its terms is to be performed on a day named, both parties have the whole of the business day in which to tender performance. Plaintiff entered into a contract with defendant for the purchase of a vessel, title to which was to be transferred at a place and on a day stated, together with her "unexpired insurance fully paid." Plaintiff was at the same time and place to make payment in accordance with the terms of the contract. In an action for breach of the contract, it was shown that plaintiff's agent and defendant met at the designated time and place in the forenoon, when defendant stated that he had obtained assignment of some of the insurance policies, but other underwriters refused to transfer, and he offered to obtain new insurance for the deficiency, or new insurance for the entire amount, for the unexpired term of the old policies. There was evidence on behalf of defendant that after some discussion plaintiff's agent went out, stating that he would return at 2 o'clock; also that defendant could have procured the required insurance, and otherwise complied strictly with the terms of the contract before the close of the day, but no formal tender of full performance was made. Held, as determined on a prior hearing, that the insurance offered, if in reliable companies, met all the requirements of the contract, and that defendant had the full day in which to perform or tender performance; also, that plaintiff could not recover if performance was prevented by the action of his agent, which was a question for the jury. Brauer v. Macbeth, 138 Fed. 977.

Railroad—Conductor—Negligence.

Where a passenger in the act of alighting from a railway car was told by the conductor to jump as the train was in motion, but the train was not in motion, as the passenger could easily have ascertained, and she became excited, jumped, and was injured, the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals held (Staines v. Central Railroad of New Jersey) that it was a question for the jury whether the passenger had contributed to her injury by her own negligence. The court said: "The peril presented to her mind was that of being carried beyond her station, and although she could have ascertained that the train was not actually moving at the moment, she would naturally, and almost unavoidably, infer from the conductor's language that the train was on the point of moving, and that the danger of being carried beyond her station was imminent. We think it is a question for a jury whether the conductor's language was such as naturally to deprive her of the power of judgment and self-control. If it was, she is not as a matter of law chargeable with contributory negligence, even though the peril present to her mind was not a peril to life or limb, but only the danger of being carried beyond her destination."

Principal and Surety.

In Dyer v. Jacoway, decided by the Supreme Court of Arkansas in June, 1905, 88 S. W. 901, it was held that where a conveyance is made by the principal debtor to the surety to secure the payment of the debt, the creditor has an interest therein which the surety can not destroy, but, where the conveyance is merely to indemnify the surety, the creditor acquires no interest until the insolvency of the principal, until which time, and even afterwards, if he acts in good faith and before claim is made upon him, the surety may, both in equity and law, release the security.

Digitized by Google

COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Calendar for October Term, 1905.

GENERAL CALENDER.

No. 1490. James R. Clements, by his next friend, James T. Clements, appellant, v. Potomac Electric Power Co., a corporation. C. C. Tucker, J. M. Kenyon, E. S. Bailey for appellant; C. C. Cole, J. J. Darlington, R. S. Huidekoper for appellees.

No. 1518. The National Council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics of U. S., etc., appellant, v. The State Council of the District of Columbia, Junior Order of United American Mechanics, etc., et al. A. A. Birney, G. F. Williams, A. W. Shunk for appellant; J. J. Darlington for appellee.

No. 1533. Lawrence W. Sherwood, appellant, v. Brainard H. Warner. M. J. Colbert and C. J. Murphy for appellant; J. J. Darlington for appellee.

No. 1538. George B. Starkweather, appellant, v. Herbert W. T. Jenner et al. Richard P. Evans, J. E. Padgett, and E. Forrest for appellant; B. F. Leighton and R. G. Donaldson for appellees.

No. 1540. Mary A. Dobbins, appellant, v. Frank H. Thomas. Leo Simmons for appellant; R. G. Donaldson for appellee.

No. 1544. The Supreme Commandery of the United Order of the Golden Cross of the World, a corporation, appellant, v. Richard Bernard, et al., etc. Andrew Wilson and N. W. Barksdale for appellant; I. Q. H. Alward for appellees.

No. 1546. Moses Smith, jr., appellant, v. Alfred H. Casey. C. A. Keigwin for appellant; Joseph H. Stewart for appellee.

No. 1547. The Washington Times Co., appellant, v. Johanna Downey. D. W. Barker and W. J. Lambert for appellant; Hayden Johnson and J. McD. Carrington for appellee.

No. 1550. J. Charles McGuire, et al. appellants, v. Louis Gerstley, et al. L. A. Bailey for appellants; S. Wolf, M. Cohen, and E. A. Jones for appellees.

No. 1561. James T. Bradford, appellant, v. National Benefit Association, etc. John Ridout for appellant; A. A. Birney for appellee.

No. 1562. James T. Bradford, appellant, v. Isidore Small. John Ridout for appellant; A. A. Birney for appellee.

No. 1563. Joshua H. Millett et al., appellants, v. F. I. Allen, Commissioner of Patents. W. H. Singleton for appellants; John M. Coit for appellee.

No. 1566. Henry U. Rheam et al., appellants, v. James W. Martin. W. E. Lester for appellants; Jos. A. Burkart and J. Altheus Johnson for appellee.

No. 1567. The Washington, Alexandria and Mt. Vernon Ry. Co., appellant, v. Austin Chapman. A. A. Hoehling, Jr., for appellant; Hayden Johnson, J. McD. Carrington, Campbell Carrington for appellee.

No. 1569. John W. Clark, appellant, vs. Louis Gerstley et al. M. J. Keane for appellant; Simon Wolf, Myer Cohen, and Eugene A. Jones for appellees.

No. 1570. Francis Winslow et al., appellants, v. The Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co., etc. W. G. Johnson for appellants; G. E. Hamilton and M. J. Colbert for appellees.

No. 1571. The District of Columbia, etc., appellant, v. Andrew Glass et al. A. B. Duvall and F. H. Stephens for appellant; Aldis B. Browne and Chas. F. Benjamin for appellees.

No. 1572. Computing Scale Co. of America, appellant, v. The Automatic Scale Co. Melville Church for appellant; E. Hilton Jackson for appellee.

No. 1573. Wilson McD. Lindsey, appellant, v. The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. et al. Burton T. Doyle and J. Altheus Johnson for the appellant; F. D. McKenney and J. S. Flannery for the appellees.

No. 1574. The Potomac Laundry Co., a corporation, appellant, v. Elizabeth J. Miller, executrix, etc. L. J. Mather and C. T. Hendler for appellant; W. C. Prentiss and Geo. Francis Williams for appellee.

No. 1577. Virginia Dangerfield, et al., appellants, v. Charles P. Williams et al. J. E. Padgett, E. Forrest, and H. E. Davis for appellants; T. Percy Myers for appellees.

No. 1578. Elmore Embrew Bernsdorff, appellant, v. Lucy Eva Bernsdorff. C. F. Carusi for appellant.

No. 1579. Frederick S. Young et al., appellants, v. The Norris Peters Co. R. G. Donaldson and John Ridout for appellants; R. Ross Perry, R. P. Barnard, and Guy H. Johnson for appellee.

No. 1581. The Capital Construction Co., appellant, v. Jennie W. Holtzman. R. Ross Perry and R. Ross Perry, jr., for appellant; C. W. Needham and J. J. Darlington for appellee.

No. 1582. Emma J. Overand, appellant, v. Edith A. Lane. B. F. Leighton for appellant; D. W. O'Donoghue for appellee.

1587. Katherine Atkins et al., appellants, v. Mary Best. A. A. Birney and G. E. Tralles for appellants; R. Golden Donaldson for appellee.

1588. Antonio Malnati et al., appellant, v. Noble H. Thomas. Henry E. Davis and E. B. Kimball for appellants; A. A. Lipscomb for appellee.

1589. Oscar J. Rickets, appellant, v. The Sun Printing and Publishing Association, a corporation. D. W. Baker for appellant; A. S. Worthington and C. L. Frailey for appellee.

No. 1591. Nonie L. Sullivan, admrx., etc., appellant, v. Virginia C. Huidekoper. A. E. L. Leckie, C. M. Fulton, and J. W. Cox for appellant; R. S. Huidekoper for the appellee.

No. 1592. The United States of America, appellant, v. William A. Day et al. Morgan H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellant; Henry E. Davis for appellees.

No. 1593. Henry F. Iglehart et al., appellants, v. J. Howard Iglehart, executor, etc. C. H. Stanley, Andrew Wilson, N. W. Barksdale, and W. C. Balderston for appellants; W. V. R. Berry, B. S. Minor, and T. L. Jeffords for appellees.

No. 1594. Anna Grinnell, administratrix, appellant, v. Charles B. Purvis. C. W. Stetson for appellant; W. J. Lambert and D. W. Baker for appellee.

No. 1597. The Ohio National Bank of Washington, appellant, v. Henry S. Berlin et al.

Digitized by Google

Thomas C. Taylor and Jesse C. Adkins for appellant; C. F. Carusi for appellees.

No. 1598. Frank C. Muller, appellant, v Caroline G. Muller. Hayden Johnson and W. W. Boarman for appellant; John E. Taylor for appellee.

No. 1599. Leander Scott et al., appellants, v. Henry A. Herrell et al. John E. Roller for appellants.

No. 1600. James E, Clements, appellant, v. Alonzo S. Mutersbaugh, admr., etc. Leonard J. Mather for the appellant; Clayton E. Emig for appellee.

No. 1601. Berton O. Wetmore, admr., etc., appellant, v. James L. Karrick. Wm. L. Ford for appellant; W. W. Millan, R. E. L. Smith, J. J. Darlington for appellee.

No. 1602. John H. Adriaans, appellant, v. William B. Reilly et al. Alfred D. Smith for appellant; J. G. Bigelow for appellees.

No. 1603. Leslie M. Shaw. Secretary of the Treasury, appellant, v. Morgan Bryan, trustee in bankruptcy. D. W. Baker for appellant; G. E. Hamilton, M. J. Colbert, and J. J. Hamilton for appellee.

No. 1606. Mary F. Ford, appellant, v. Joseph C. Ford. John Raum for appellant.

No. 1607. George B. Cortelyou, Postmaster-General, appellant, v. Henry O. Houghton, trustee, et al. Henry H. Glassie for appellant; William S. Hall for appellees.

No. 1608. George B. Cortelyou, Postmaster-General, appellant, v. Bates and Guild Company. Henry H. Glassie for appellant; William S. Hall for appellee.

No. 1611. Stilson Hutchins, appellant, v. John W. Langley, Receiver. E. C. Brandenburg, C. A. Brandenburg, and F. W. Brandenburg for appellants; D. W. Baker and W. J. Lambert for appellees.

SPECIAL CALENDAR.

1 (1541). Stephen U. G. Johnson, alias Garnet S. Johnson, appellant, v. United States. D. W. Baker for appellant; M. H. Beach, C. A. Keigwin, and J. S. Easby-Smith for appellee.

2 (1542). United States, appellant, v. Stephen U. G. Johnson, alias Garnet S. Johnson. M. H. Beach, C. A. Keigwin, J. S. Easby-Smith for appellent; D. W. Baker for appellee.

3 (1552). William W. Payne et al., appellants, v. Leigh Robinson, executor, et al. J. J. Darlington for appellants.

4 (1554). The Washington Loan and Trust Co., garnishee, appellant, v. Susquehanna Coal Co., a corporation. A. S. Worthington and C. L. Frailey, for appellant; F. D. McKenney and J. S. Flannery for appellee.

5 (1555). U. S. ex rel Willis C. West, appellant, v. Ethan A. Hitchcock, Secretary of the Interior, S. A. Putnam, W. C. Shelley, and W. H. Robeson for appellant; Morgan H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellee.

6 (1556). The U. S. of A. on the relation of Emilie C. Riley, appellant, v. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co., etc. C. A. Douglass and and E. B. Sherrill for appellant; G. E. Hamilton and M. J. Colbert for appellee.

7 (1559). The U. S. ex rel. Margarito Romero et al., appellants, v. George B. Cortelyou, Postmaster General. W. H. Robeson and S. A. Putnam for appellants; Morgan H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellee.

8 (1564). Samuel Gassenheimer, appellant, v. United States. H. E. Davis and D. W. Baker for appellant; Morgan H. Beach, C. A. Keigwin, and J. S. Easby-Smith for appellee.

9 (1565). Charles P. Posey, appellant, v. United States. D. W. Baker and M. F. Mangan for appellant; Morgan H. Beach and J. S. Easby-Smith for appellee.

10 (1568). James H. Harris, Warden of the U. S. Jail, in and for the District of Columbia, appellant, v. Robert Lang. M. H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellant; A. W. Scott and M. T. Clinkscales for appellee.

11 (1575). District of Columbia, plaintiff in error, v. Percy T. Lewis. A. B. Duvall for appellant; W. J. Lambert and D. W. Baker for appellee.

12 (1580). Taylor Knoll, appellant, v. United States. John W. Patterson for appellant; Morgan H. Beach, C. A. Keigwin, and D. W. Baker for appellee.

13 (1583). The United States of America, appellant, v. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co. M. H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellant; G. E. Hamilton and M. J. Colbert for appellee.

14 (1585). Thomas R. Martin, appellant, v. The District of Columbia. C. A. Brandenburg, E. C. Brandenburg, and F. W. Brandenburg for appellant; A. B. Duvall and F. H. Stephens for appellee.

15 (1586). Clarence A. Brandenburg, appellant, v. The District of Columbia. C. A. Brandenburg, E. C. Brandenburg, and F. W. Brandenburg for appellant; A. B. Duvall and F. H. Stephens for appellee.

16 (1590). Theodore A. Cook, appellant, v. United States. Hayden Johnson and J. McD. Carrington for appellant; Morgan H. Beach and D. W. Baker for appellee.

17 (1595). Frank S. Cahill et al., plaintiffs in error, v. District of Columbia. W. S. Duvall for appellant; A. B. Duvall and E. H. Thomas for appellee.

18 (1596). Mabel Grace McKay et al., etc., appellants, v. John C. Bradley, to the use of the Guarantee Trust and Safe Deposit Co., a corporation. A. A. Birney and A. S. Worthington for appellants; Fulton Lewis for appellee.

19 (1602). William A. White, Superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, appellant, v. Alexander N. Willis. D. W. Baker for appellant; Richard P. Evans for appellee.

20 (1605). William A. White, Superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, appellant, v. James L. Shaffer. D. W. Baker for appellant; Richard P. Evans for appellee.

21 (1609). Emory A. Bryant, appellant, v. The District of Columbia Dental Society. Irving Williamson and W. G. Johnson for appellant; Conrad H. Syme and Chas. A. Douglass for appellee.

22 (1610). Samuel Gassenheimer, plaintiff in error, v. District of Columbia. M. F. Mangan for appellant; E. H. Thomas for appellee.

PATENT APPEALS.

No. 259. Samuel Alexander, appellant, v Frederick S. Blackman, administrator of John J. Blackman, deceased. G. D. Seymour, H. A. Seymour, and W. Klingenstein for appellant; Chester A. Weed for appellee.

Digitized by Google

No. 289. In the matter of the application of Clara Amelia Baker. L. S. Bacon and J. H. Milans for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 296. Edmund L. French, appellant, v. Charles H. Halcomb. George H. Christy for appellant; Alfred Wilkinson for appellee.

No. 299. Augustus O. Bourn, appellant, v. William G. Hill, Jr. Charles E. Foster for appellant.

No. 300. Henry C. Lavery, appellant, v. George W. Heene. D. P. Wolhaupter for appellant; Jos. B. Connolly for appellee.

No. 302. In the matter of the application of Otto Briede. G. H. Christy for applicant; J. M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 304. Joseph J. O'Connell, appellant, v. Louis A. Schmidt. G. P. Barton for appellant; L. S. Bacon and J. H. Milans for appellee.

No. 305. In the matter of the application of Edward A. Hill. Jos. B. Connolly for applicant; J. M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 306. In the matter of the application of Henry B. Moeser. Jos. B. Connolly and Henry C. Evert for applicant; J. M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 307. In the matter of the application of George H. Thurston. Thomas F. Sheridan for applicant; J. M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 309. In the matter of the application of William D. Hawley. A. E. Parsons and G. W. Hey for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 310. Henry Price Ball, appellant, v. Ellsworth E. Flora. Geo. R. Hamlin for appellant; L. S. Bacon for appellee.

No. 311. In the matter of the application of Arthur S. Garrett. E. H. Fairbanks for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 312. Henry J. Podlesak et al., appellants, v. Benjamin McInnerney. C. Le Roy Parker for appellants; J. F. Williamson and J. C. Pennie for appellee.

No. 313. In the matter of the application of Otis A. Mygatt. Melville Church for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 314. In the matter of the application of William A. Schraubstadter. H. H. Simms and James A. Carr for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 315. Charles D. Seeberger, appellant, v. Howland Russell. Chas. E. Foster for appellant.

No. 316. Charles A. Rolfe, appellant, v. Otto C. Hoffmann. L. S. Bacon and J. H. Milans for appellant; Luther L. Miller for appellee.

No. 317. Darius M. Orcutt, appellant, v. Benjamin T. McDonald, Jr., et al. Jackson H. Ralston for appellant.

No. 318. In the matter of the application of William I. Thomson. F. P. Warfield and H. S. Duell for applicant; John M. Coit for Commissioner of Patents.

No. 319. Carl E. Bauer, appellant, v. Seth A. Crone. Francis W. H. Clay for appellant.

The right of plaintiff in a suit to enjoin the maintenance of a nuisance, and for damages, to have the questions as to the existence of the nuisance, and the amount of damages, tried by a jury, is declared in Chesseman v. Hale (Mont.), 68 L. R. A. 410.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

(FOUNDED 1789.)

SCHOOL OF LAW.

FACULTY.

REV. DAVID H. BUEL, S. J.,
President of the University.

HON. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice, Supreme Court, District of Columbia)
Dean of the Faculty and Lecturer on Common Law Pleading and Practice, and Equity Pleading and Practice.

GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
Lecturer on the Law of Wills.

HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on Constitutional Law, the Law of Corporations, and Equity Jurisprudence.

HON. ASHLEY M. GOULD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Contracts, Criminal Law, and Domestic Relations.

HON. DANIEL THEW WRIGHT,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Insurance.

HON. WENDELL PHILLIPS STAFFORD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Agency.

CHAS. A. DOUGLASS, A. B., LL. B.,
Lecturer on the Law of Torts, Negotiable Paper, and Elementary Law.

MICHAEL J. COLBERT, A. M., LL. M.,
Lecturer on the Law of Personal Property and Partnership.

HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Real Estate and the Law of Evidence.

Judge of the Circuit Court: DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., Ph. D., LL. M.

Court of Appeals: HON. JOB BARNARD and MESSRS. LEIGH ROBINSON and J. HOLDSWORTH GORDON.

Quiz Masters: CLARENCE R. WILSON, A. B., LL. M.; DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., PH. D., LL. M., and JAMES S. EASBY-SMITH, A. M., LL. M.

SAMUEL M. YEATMAN, A. M.,
Secretary and Treasurer.

FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM,
Assistant Secretary.

Digitized by Google

ADDITIONAL LECTURERS IN THE FOURTH YEAR OR POST-GRADUATE COURSE.

HON. HOLMES CONRAD,
(Late Solicitor-General of the United States)
On the History of the Development of Law and Comparative Jurisprudence, and on the History of the English Law.

HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On the History of Constitutional Law and the Foundations of Civil Liberty.

REV. RENE HOLAIND, S. J.,
On Natural Law and Canon Law.

MONROE SMITH, LL. D.,
(Professor in the School of Political Science of Columbia University, New York City)
On Civil Law.

HON. LOUIS E. McCOMAS, LL. D.,
(Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On International Law and Foreign Relations of the United States.

RALEIGH C. MINOR, LL. D.,
(Professor of Law in the University of Virginia)
On the Conflict of Laws.

HON. JOHN W. YERKES, LL. D.,
On Railroad Accident Law, Municipal Corporations.

J. NOTA McGILL, LL. M.,
On Patent Law.

ALDIS B. BROWNE, LL. B.,
On Jurisdiction and Practice of United States Courts.

WILLIAM C. WOODWARD, M. D., LL. M.,
On Medical Jurisprudence.

GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
On Legal Ethics.

HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
On General Practice and Exercises in Pleading and Evidence.

The thirty-sixth annual session opens on Wednesday, October 4, 1905, at 6.30 p. m., in the Law School Building, Nos. 506 and 508 E street northwest, at which time announcements will be made for the ensuing term. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

The Secretary will be at his office in the Law Building daily from 4.30 to 6.00 p. m. for information, enrollment, payment of fees, etc.

Students proposing to connect themselves with the School are earnestly requested to enroll before the opening night.

Circulars can be obtained at the bookstore of Lowdermilk & Co., 1424 F street northwest, and John Byrne & Co., 1322 F street northwest, and at the W. S. Thompson Pharmacy, 703 Fifteenth street northwest, or upon application to the undersigned. S. M. YEATMAN, 37-4t Secretary.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Robert E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret C. Mooney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1905. BETTIE LE PREUX, 1501 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,127. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Legal Notices

O. B. Glason, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maine, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen J. Thompson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. HOSEA H. CARY, East Pittston, Me. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,186. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

John B. Larner, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,298.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.
[Seal]
sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Chas. L. Frailey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Andrew Wylie, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. HORACE WYLIE, 1205 Vermont ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,174. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

McKenney & Flannery, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caroline A. Baker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. NATHAN C. TWINING, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Dept. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,079. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Michael J. Keane, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Equity Court.

Mary C. Deery, Complainant, v. John T. Neumeyer et al., Defendants.
In Equity, No. 25,617.

Michael J. Keane, the trustee in the above entitled cause, having reported a sale at public auction of part of lot ten (10), in square five hundred and twelve (512), as more fully described in the bill of complaint filed herein, to R. Harrison Johnson, for the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty ($2,250) dollars, it is this 22d day of September, 1905, ordered that the said sale be confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 22d day of October, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Wilson Gregory, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of September, 1905. FRANCES G. GREGORY, 2510 M st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,948. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

W. C. Martin, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Reuben Taylor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. W. J. HOWARD, 100 Mass. ave. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,751. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Legal Notices.

Philip Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Minnesota, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adelaide M. Shedd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK G. STUTZ, 48 W. 3d st., St. Paul, Minn. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,151. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding an Equity Court.

Terrence J. McMahon v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Charles Carter, Deceased.
Equity No. 25,554.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-seven (37) in John M. Graham's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and fifty-two (252) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, as said subdivision is recorded in Liber H. D. C., at folio 184½, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is, this 27th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Charles Carter, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of November, 1905; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based upon the bill and affidavit filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. [Seal] HARRY M CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-4t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Mary E. Letts, Deceased.
No. 13,143. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by The Washington Loan and Trust Company, it is ordered this 27th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Mary E. Letts, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 39-3t

Millan & Smith, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Frank Waters et al., Complainants, v. Lavinia Waters et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,667. Docket 57.

Upon consideration of the report of W W. Millan, trustee, herein filed, showing that he has sold the south forty-five (45) feet of original lot seventeen (17) in square eight hundred and fifty-nine (859) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles Specht, for four thousand five hundred dollars ($4,500), it is, this 28th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905.

Provided copy of this order be published once in each of three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

SECOND INSERTION.

R. B. Horner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of David Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. JULIA I. DAVIS, 1757 S st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,080. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Robert E. Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 15th day of September, 1905. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W.; DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 1825 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,137. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles Ippolito, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. BENJAMIN W. GUY, 315 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,968. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Fred L. Rosemond, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Ohio, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alice V. C. Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 14th day of September, 1905. J. W. CAMPBELL, Cambridge Ohio; FRED L. ROSEMOND, Cambridge, Ohio. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,317. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

P. S. Riggs, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of John S. Manning, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. HELEN P. MANNING, care of R. S. Riggs, 146 Broadway, New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,161. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Legal Notices.

[Filed September 18, 1905.]
A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.
In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 3 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE [Seal] W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. A true copy. Test: J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-6t

Evans Browne, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Napoleon J. T. Dana, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. MABEL LANIER TIBBALL, 210 Walnut st, Montclair, N. J. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,150. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Halbert E. Paine, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of September, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,113. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold the south 8.29 feet of lot 54, all of lot 55, the north 12.46 feet of lot 56, the south 14 feet of lot 57, and all of lots 58 and 59 in square 302, improved by seven houses numbered 2240, 2242, 2244, 2246, 2250, 2252, and 2254 Eleventh street Northwest, Washington, D. C., for ninety-eight hundred ($9,800) dollars cash, less 3 per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 19th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 19th day of October, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 38-3t

Saml. Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Thomas E. Waggaman v. Thomas E. Waggaman et al. In Equity, No. 25,649.

The object of this suit is to sell a certain tract of land in the District of Columbia known and designated on the plats thereof as Woodley Park, as subdivided by Thomas E. Waggaman and John Ridout, trustees, and distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and to set aside as a preference under the bankrupt law a certain deed of trust, dated July 25th, 1904, and given by said trustees to secure notes held by the Catholic University of America, aggregating $876,168.96. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Samuel Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley, it is by the court this 18th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that defendants, Eugene Ives, Emily A. Shuman, Kate M. Billings, Clara V. Dorsey, James L. McLane, Annie E. Bowie, and E. C. Humphrey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. By the Court: HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 38-3t

Arthur A. Alexander, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James Dorsey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,149. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Anson S. Taylor, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Clinton Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. ALICE M. SMITH, Conduit road. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,119. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Legal Notices.

Joseph R. Fague, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Richard A. Arnold, Deceased. Probate. No. 12,773.

On consideration of the petition of Richard W. and Frederick S. Emmons, executors of said Richard A. Arnold, it is by the Court, this 13th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of part of original lot numbered four (4), in square numbered nine hundred and twenty-five (925), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, made by said executors to A. D. Butz, at and for the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars ($3,500.00), cash, subject to a commission of three (3) per cent on said amount, to the party making the sale, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three (3) weeks before said last named day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 37-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret Faunce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of September, 1905. PHILIP P. FAUNCE, 814 8th st. S. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,142. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

John L. Johnson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, Deceased.
No. 13,135. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Otho Sullivan, it is ordered, this 8th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Sullivan, Julia McCarthy (nee Sullivan), William Morgan, Ellen Morgan, Mary Morgan, and Ellen Morgan (nee Sullivan), and their unknown heirs, alienees, devisees, and next of kin, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 37-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Virginia D. Corbit, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 14th day of September, 1905. GEORGE HELLEN, 1528 18th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,486. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Cohen, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Heinrich W. F. Dukehart, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 8th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 8th day of September, 1905. JOHN WALDMAN, 609 7th st. N. W.; H. A. SCHEUERMAN, 7 Cst. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,010. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph Jefferson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,990. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Cassie Ann Butler, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. R. GOLDEN DONALDSON, Century Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,991. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of James Dowd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of September, 1905. JOHN J. BROSNAN, 482 La. ave.; T. PERCY MYERS, 486 La. ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,069. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Samuel Thomas Labby, late of the District of Columbia, deceased All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 12th day of September, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,988. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

Legal Notices.

R. B. Behrend, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Louis Esberg, Deceased.
No. 13,007. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Herman L. Karpeles, it is ordered this 12th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alfred I. Esberg, Herman Esberg, Gus Simon, Ida Graebeke, —— Simon, —— Neuberg, —— Katz, —— Katz, —— Katz, M. H. Esberg, Henry Esberg, Joster Esberg, Edith Esberg, and Solomon Esberg, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 20th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 37-3t

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Caspar Morgenweck, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 2d day of October, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. LINA MORGENWECK, by Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,409. Admn. [Seal.] 37-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia and the State of New Jersey, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Phebe Holmes Lea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK A. LEA, 1458 Bacon st., Wash., D. C.; AUGUSTUS S. CRANE, 227 Rahway ave., Elizabeth, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,157. Administration. [Seal.] 37-3t

Newton & Gillett, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Catherine A. Newton v. Thomas A. Valentine.
Equity No. 25,510.

The object of this suit is to have partition by sale of east fifteen feet of lot nine, in Davidson's subdivision of square one hundred sixty-three, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On the motion of the complainant it is, this 14th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendant, Thomas A. Valentine, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Post and The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 37-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 40

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - OCTOBER 6, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 625
A Municipal Court for the District of Columbia 626
SUPREME COURT OF NEW YORK:
Ruth Cranch, respondent, v. The Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company 630
Miscellany 632
Legal Notices 636

The District Courts.

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia convened for the October term on Tuesday, October 3, with Chief Justice Shepard and Associate Justices Duell and McComas sitting. The calendar for the term is quite heavy, containing ninety-two cases, the largest number on the calendar at the beginning of any term in the history of the court. All of the cases heard by the court at the last term were disposed of prior to taking the recess for the summer.

The Supreme Court of the District, in its several branches, convened for the October term on the same day. The several civil calendars of the court contain 787 cases, showing an increase of 12 cases as compared with the number at the commencement of the October term last year. On the equity calendar are 101 cases, a decrease of 6; on the law calendar, 686 cases, of which 491 are on the trial calendar, a decrease of 3, and 195 are cases coming up from justices of the peace, either by appeal or by certiorari, an increase of 21. The criminal calendars of the court are also quite heavy.

The assignment of the justices to the several courts remains the same as prior to the adjournment of the court, viz: Circuit Court No. 1, Mr. Justice Barnard; Circuit Court No. 2, Mr. Chief Justice Clabaugh; Equity Court No. 1, Mr. Justice Anderson; Equity Court No. 2, Mr. Justice Stafford; Probate Court, Mr. Justice Stafford; Criminal Court No. 1, Mr. Justice Wright; Criminal Court No. 2, Mr. Justice Gould.

The Washington College of Law.

The opening exercises of the Washington College of Law were held on Monday evening, October 2, in the presence of an interested audience of friends of the students and of the institution. Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey, dean of the faculty, presided, and made a brief address, and remarks were made by other members of the faculty. The enrollment of students was quite large, and embraces about an equal number of men and women. This fact is of interest as showing that, although the college was founded primarily for women, the members of the other sex are availing themselves of the advantages it affords for the study of the law.

Georgetown University Law School.

The opening exercises of this institution were held on Wednesday evening, October 4, in the Law Building, and were largely attended. Chief Justice Clabaugh, of the Supreme Court of the District, dean of the faculty, presided, and introduced Rev. David H. Buell, S. J., the newly-elected president of the university, who spoke briefly, dwelling particularly upon the importance of unity of feeling and action on the part of the students of the several departments.

The dean then announced the changes in the faculty and the addition of several new courses of lectures. Hon. John W. Yerkes, commissioner of internal revenue, will lecture to the fourth year class on railway law and municipal corporations, in place of the lamented Judge Charles C. Cole. Rev. John A. Conway, S. J., will lecture on natural and canon law, in place of Rev. Reve Holaind, S. J., who is made emeritus professor. Mr. Justice Morris, late of the Court of Appeals of this District, has retired from the faculty and is succeeded by former Solicitor-General Holmes Conrad.

A new course on Federal Practice and Procedure has been added to the fourth year course, and Mr. Aldis B. Browne, of the District bar, has been elected to that chair. Three courses of special lectures will be delivered by the quiz masters at the commencement of each term, as follows: For the first term, by Mr. J. S. Easby-Smith; for the second term by Mr. Daniel W. O'Donoghue, and for the third term by Mr. Clarence R. Wilson.

Mr. Justice Stafford, professor of the law of agency, welcomed and congratulated the students; and brief addresses were also made by other members of the faculty.

The session has opened most auspiciously, with the largest enrollment of students in the history of the school.

Digitized by Google

A MUNICIPAL COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

[Communicated.]

After three years of trial, it can be truthfully said that the present system of having certain cases tried by ten justices of the peace, each having a separate and distinct office, situated in a different part of the city, is not only clumsy, but even with the experiment of paying the justices only two-thirds of their legal salaries, needlessly expensive.

The cases tried before these justices are of two classes:

First. Landlord and tenant cases, where a landlord seeks to dispossess a tenant for the nonpayment of rent or for other reasons. This class comprises much the larger number of cases coming before the justices of the peace, or nearly nine-tenths of the whole number. The great majority of the landlord and tenant cases are uncontested.

Second. Debt cases including all the ordinary cases of debt, in which the sum involved does not exceed $300, as well as replevin and attachment. These cases are generally contested, frequently take hours to try, and involve difficult questions of law and fact.

The Code provides that each justice shall have a separate and distinct sub-district, and that his office or court shall be situated in that sub-district, and that a person shall be sued before the justice in whose sub-district he resides. These different courts are supposed to be situated close together and in proximity to the Court House, but in reality they they are quite far apart; and a person desiring to visit each one of them, and to transact any business there, would have to give up the greater portion of the business hours of the day in order to do so.

As the landlord and tenant cases form the greater portion of the cases before these courts, it follows that the real estate men have most of the business before them, and not infrequently they have to visit many of them in one day. Therefore on account of the situation of these different courts, the real estate men have to spend a considerable part of their day going from one court to another in order to attend to their cases, or employ some one to do this for them. Each case has to be watched and some one has to be present to see that it is properly tried or it may be passed over and possibly dismissed.

Real estate men generally expect to get judgment by default, and get it without delay, and make their arrangements accordingly, setting their cases for trial at the different courts about a half an hour apart in order that they may get through their business as soon as possible. On account of this peculiar arrangement of things, a real estate man's day may, at any time, be disarranged and all his plans to visit these various courts in time to meet his different engagements frustrated by an unexpected delay. He may find a case on trial at one of the courts and be compelled to wait until it is over; and this may prevent him from being in time to keep his engagement in another court. This may be obviated by the justice stopping the trial he is engaged in and allowing him to be heard, but this practice, while frequently indulged in, is troublesome and apt to lead to confusion. It is sometimes difficult and embarrassing to interrupt a case in the progress of trial, in order to take up other business, while it is very unpleasant to keep a man waiting against his will, especially when such delay may make him late for an engagement elsewhere and possibly cause him to lose a suit by default. If, however, the real estate man should find his tenant in court, ready to contest his suit, he will be compelled to wait; and he finds himself in an unpleasant predicament if he has arranged to try a similar case in another justice's court half an hour later. He may be able to have one of the cases continued, but whatever course is taken results in an unnecessary trouble and expense to one or both of the parties to the suit.

A real estate man is apt to consider himself a favored suitor and to expect that the justice will in his absence act as his attorney and friend and see that his interests are protected. He rarely hesitates to interrupt proceedings, if he finds it inconvenient to wait until the justice can attend to his business. He sometimes appears long after the time set for the trial of his case, and if his tenant has not appeared, he expects to have judgment given in his favor without question, but if his tenant has appeared and had the case dismissed for want of prosecution, as he has an undoubted right to do, he is apt to complain of injustice and consider himself badly treated. Consequently great trouble and confusion arises by the awkwardness of the system which requires these litigants to make an almost daily circuit of the different justices' courts.

Thus we see a set of courts with their principal litigants constantly on the move, never expecting and rarely being ready for trial, if a contest should be made, and expending a large part of the day in going from court to court, with the constant fear that a busy justice or an unexpected trial may put their whole circuit out of order and cause them to lose a case because of the impossibility of being in two places at the same time. Certainly a system, by which such things are possible, is clumsy and presents a most ridiculous spectacle.

The boundaries of the different sub-districts are not very clear, as they have been changed more than once; and a litigant sometimes has to visit several courts before he can find the right one in which to bring suit. The defendant must be sued in the sub-district in which he resides, and it is sometimes very difficult to locate the residence of a constantly moving defendant. A plaintiff has been put to the expense of a change of jurisdiction by a defendant who had just changed his residence. This action was taken simply for the purpose of giving the plaintiff unnecessary trouble and expense, as no contest was made, and the case was allowed to go by default as soon as the change of jurisdiction had been effected.

The difference of opinion of the several justices, who act entirely independant of each other, not only in regard to questions of law, but in regard to practice, is most confusing and demoralizing. A litigant who is allowed to pursue a course of action by one justice and finds that another does not allow it feels seriously aggrieved, and not without some justification.

Digitized by Google

An unoccupied justice can not help a busy one or relieve him in any way in his work. Justice A may be busy from morning until night and have more than he can properly attend to; Justice B may not have an hour's work a day. Yet Justice A can not call upon Justice B to help him, or assign any of his cases to him to try, and Justice B could not do so, if he wished.

It is also a well-known fact that there is not enough business for ten justices to attend to, and some of them have very little to do. One justice has made the remark that he would do the business of any three of the sub-districts, if he could receive the pay of two justices and be allowed to make his own rules and regulations in regard to the trial of cases before him.

This system of separate and distinct minor courts, situated in separate parts of the city, having separate and distinct jurisdictions, and exercising their powers often in different and discordant ways, is antiquated, confusing and irritating to litigants, and needlessly troublesome and expensive to the District of Columbia. It should be changed, and the justices brought together in one compact, united, and harmonious body, when, acting in unison, they would be able to transact the business brought before them more efficiently and more satisfactorily to themselves and all concerned. The only proper way to do this is to establish a municipal court. Such a court, properly constituted, would be more dignified, more efficient, and less expensive than the present system.

The name of this office should be changed. It is by no means the ordinary "justice of the peace," a man generally unlearned in the law, who tries cases for a small fee on the principles of common sense. Under the requirements of the Code, this officer has to be a lawyer who has practiced law five years in the District of Columbia, which of necessity requires a man of considerable legal knowledge. Cases are frequently argued before them, on written briefs, involving questions of law which no one but a man of a thorough legal training could decide with any degree of intelligence. This officer resembles more closely the "trial justice," "the municipal justice," and "the district judge" of other cities, and he should be given a title commensurate with the dignity of the office which he holds. The amount of business transacted by these courts is considerable and they exercise no petty jurisdiction. The debt cases can be roughly estimated to involve $25,000, and the landlord and tenant cases $500,000 worth of real property per month.

The name "justice of the peace" is one which never can acquire much consideration or dignity in the District of Columbia. Under the old fee system, these officers had virtually to bid against one another and to tout for business in order to support themselves; and the one offering the best inducement to litigants coming before him or to his "patrons," as they were called, got the business away from the others. They could not be blamed for this, as a man could not be a justice of the peace without business, and there was only one way in which he could get business under the fee system. Under these circumstances a justice of the peace was little else than a hired agent of his "patrons," and was expected to do their will under the penalty of loss of business and hence of livelihood. The abbreviation for justice of the peace or "J. P." was under these circumstances known as "judgment for the plaintiff." This feeling still exists to some extent, and litigants frequently complain that they do not get what they pay for when cases are decided against them.

The name "municipal judge" would be more dignified and proper and would inspire more respect, and in that way make the office more efficient; and the establishment of a "municipal court" would impress the community more forcibly than anything else with the fact that the old "J. P." system, the fee system, and their accompanying evils, had been finally abolished in the District of Columbia.

A municipal court will be more efficient, as five judges working in unison and together can transact more business and do it better and quicker than ten judges working separately and apart, not being able to help one another or relieve each other in any way. The judges of a municipal court can divide the work up between them, so that each will have the same amount to do; they can consult with and help each other and act in unison, which is not the case at present.

The same thing can be said in regard to the deputy marshals. Each justice has his own separate deputy marshal; some are very busy and some have little or nothing to do. By bringing them under one head and working them as a unit their work could be done better and fewer need be employed; and the spectacle of one deputy having more than he can well attend to while another loafs will be no longer seen.

A municipal court would be less expensive than the present system, even with the reduced salaries of the justices. Its present expenses are as follows:

10 justices, $2,000 per annum each	$20,000
Expenses, $250 per annum each	2,500
10 deputies, $1,000 per annum each	10,000
Total	$32,500
Municipal Court (estimated).
5 justices, $3,000 per annum each	$15,000
7 deputies, $1,000 per annum each	7,000
Clerks	2,500
Rent, stationery, etc	3,500
	$28,000

This court will be easily self-supporting. The fees received from January 1, 1902, to December 31, 1904, by the ten justices of the peace and the marshal's office from the business transacted before them are as follows:

Receipts From Jan. 1, 1902, to Dec. 31, 1904.

Justices' fees:
January 1 to June 30, 1902	$8,435 92
July 1, 1902, to June 30, 1903	21,553 45
July 1, 1903, to June 30, 1904	22,212 55
July 1, 1904, to June 1, 1905	11,534 80
	63,736 72
Marshal's office:
For year 1902	$9,138 81
For year 1903	10,032 46
For year 1904	10,978 73
	30,150 00

Digitized by Google

Total receipts for the three years	$93,886 72
Expenses of municipal court for three years	84,000 00
Surplus	9,886 72
Expenses of present system for three years	$97,500 00
Total receipts for three years	93,886 72
Deficit	3,613 28

But for the first six months the ten justices received their legal salaries, so the actual deficit for this time has been $8,613.28. Part of this time, however, additional deputy marshals were employed because some of the justices had more business than one deputy marshal could properly attend to, so that the deficit has been really larger. Had this municipal court been in existence during these three years, it would have cost about $20,000 less than the present system and have been more efficient and satisfactory.

A municipal court, therefore, need not be any more expensive to litigants than the present system; the cost of procedure can remain the same. The expense of the court is, of course, estimated, but it is a reasonable one and may be rather high. The receipts are not estimated but actual, and show a surplus of receipts over expenses of more than $3,000 per annum. These receipts are gradually increasing. The receipts for the last fiscal year from July 1, 1904, to June 30, 1905, were:

Justices' fees	$23,983 28
Marshal's office	11,444 01
Total	35,427 29

The argument, therefore, that a municipal court will be more expensive to litigants and will not be the poor man's court, like the courts of the present justices of the peace, falls to the ground.

A municipal court would also prove less burdensome to litigants, especially to the real estate men. Instead of being obliged to make the circuit of the different courts as they do now, they would only have to go to one place. The landlord and tenant cases could always be taken up the first thing in the morning, and, as they are mostly uncontested, they could be quickly disposed of, and the real estate men or their representatives could immediately return to their business. This one thing would do much to avoid confusion and annoyance, not only for the judges but also for the litigants. After the landlord and tenant cases and the other uncontested cases are disposed of, the serious business of the day could be taken up, that of trying the cases in which there is a contest.

A municipal court would be also more expeditious. As soon as one judge of this court becomes unoccupied any case awaiting trial could be assigned to him, and a trial could be immediately given.

The item of clerks is a most important one. A busy justice can not be his own clerk and attend to his duties as a judge at the same time. Imagine, if you can, a justice in the midst of a trial, with lawyers on both sides and a witness on the stand; he is fully occupied. A man comes in who wishes to file a suit; he does not hesitate to interrupt the case on trial, and the justice is expected to prepare his papers and swear him to them, fix the time for trial, change his money, and possibly do other things for him, while the case on trial waits or the judge tries to attend to both at once, much to his annoyance and the annoyance of those engaged in the trial and to the serious detriment of the case. By the employment of clerks all these things can be taken care of where they belong, and the justice would be relieved of a very laborious task, which does not form part of his judicial duties or belong to his office. The keeping of a docket, preparing the necessary writs, and seeing that the proper charges are made and collected, are serious matters, and a busy justice can not give them proper attention when occupied with his other duties, and he often has to suffer in consequence. These dockets are carefully inspected, and the justice is held to a strict account; no excuse is allowed on account of confusion and hurry for fees not collected, and they must come out of the justice's pocket.

Thus it appears that a municipal court is more dignified, more efficient, and less expensive than the present system of separate justices' courts. It is no more expensive in the way of costs and fees to litigants, and much less burdensome and annoying to them in every other way. Much can be said in favor of its adoption, and nothing of serious importance against it.

Too much importance can not be given to the great benefit to be gained by centralizing and concentrating the work now done by the different justices of the peace. At present the work is performed by nine justices (one of the original ten having died) located in different parts of the city, each having a separate office, a separate district, and a separate deputy marshal. We thus have nine distinct tribunals, independent of and having no relation or connection with each other, except that they have the same powers and try the same kind of cases. We consequently have:

1st. The daily round or enforced journey of the litigants, already mentioned and referred to at some length.

2d. The difficulty in finding the proper court in which to bring a suit. A litigant, owing to the want of knowledge of the exact boundaries of the different sub-districts, sometimes has to visit two or three of these courts before he can find the right one in which to bring his suit. It is often difficult to locate a defaulting debtor, but the creditor must do so at his own risk. If he makes a mistake and sues him in the wrong sub-district, the debtor can have the case removed to the proper sub-district at the creditor's expense. The creditor can be thus put to unnecessary trouble and expense by a captious debtor, who may have just changed his residence. This is manifestly unjust and absurd.

3d. Cases can, however, be and are not infrequently brought by consent before a justice in whose court they do not belong, because of the convenient location of his office or for other reasons. This is not illegal; it is only subject to the objection of the defendant, who alone can take exception to it. If he deliberately waives this objection, the jurisdiction of the justice is complete and he can try the case. By such action on the part of the litigants, one of the principal provisions of the Code in regard to these courts can be evaded.

Digitized by Google

4th. Inequality in the amount of work of the different justices. As each case has to be tried in the sub-district in which it belongs, the justices can not divide up the work or relieve each other. As a consequence some of them are very busy and some have little to do most of the time. This inequality becomes more apparent when the fact is remembered that a justice has to be his own clerk. A busy justice can not possibly attend to clerical duties during business hours, and consequently he has to remain at his office from one and a half to two hours afterwards, fixing up his writs and making his docket entries. This inequality can not be well remedied by changing the boundaries of the sub-districts. This has been done once or twice, but without much success.

5th. Important matters are sometimes seriously delayed. The deputy of a justice may be busy and away when an important case, such as an attachment or replevin, needing the immediate attention of that deputy, is brought into the office. Nothing can be done in the absence of the deputy, and the case has to wait to the great detriment and annoyance of the litigant and the possible loss of the very object of his suit, unless the litigant is willing to go out on a search and lucky enough to find another deputy who is unemployed. This is especially true in the summer time, when some of the deputies are off on their vacations and the rest are doing double duty.

The reduction of the number of the justices to six, as proposed by the Code, will not cure these evils. It will mitigate some of them, while it will tend to aggravate others. It will be less expensive, even with the payment to the justices of their legal salaries, than the present system. But with the reduction in the number of justices the business of each court will be necessarily increased, and some of them will undoubtedly require more than one deputy marshal to attend to this increased amount of business. This will make the expense of the six justices about the same as that estimated for the municipal court. It will be somewhat less burdensome on litigants, as it will be easier to visit six courts than ten; but in every other respect the evils will remain, as the same system is retained. The justices will continue to act independent of each other, disunited if not discordant. The amount of work done by the different justices can not be equalized, because there is no means by which this work can be properly divided up so as to have it done in the most expeditious and economical manner. Important matters coming before one justice and needing the immediate attention of his deputy will still have to wait, if that deputy happens to be occupied and away from the office. It is the system and not the number of the justices and deputies which is at fault.

Under the present system, or rather utter lack of system, everything is scattered. There is no head, no center, no guiding force. Much energy is wasted, much time lost, and much money needlessly expended. With a municipal court these evils will disappear. There then would be only one place in which to file suits, and one place to try them. The litigant, especially the real estate man, would be spared his daily journey. A litigant would not be compelled to go to two or three places in order to find out the proper court in which to bring his suit. The justices could divide up the work between them each day and attend to it more effectively and more expeditiously, and an unoccupied deputy could always be found at the court and the litigant need not be obliged to search for one to serve his papers. Not until the work done by these different justices is united and concentrated under one head and one court can it be definitely ascertained and determined how many justices and how many deputies will be required to do it properly, expeditiously, and most economically. As long as this work is scattered among several different distinct tribunals, there will continue to be a waste of time, of force, and of money.

HENRY RANDALL WEBB.

September 11, 1905.

Railroad—Negligence—Accident—Risk.

In the case of Campbell v. Railway Transfer Company et al., recently decided by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, it appeared that the plaintiff, a switchman, while coming down the side of one car, was injured by one end of a grain door board resting against a cleat supporting the way on top of another car and protruding over the side of the latter, which was standing on an adjoining track. It was shown that one defendant was in the habit when unloading cars of placing boards used for the purpose of closing car doors upon the top of such cars, and that another defendant was in the habit of receiving such cars with admitted knowledge of such custom. The court held that the question of negligence as to both defendants was properly a question of fact for the jury; that the defense of assumption of risk was not available as a defense to a defendant not an employer of the person injured; that the plaintiff under the circumstances could not be held as matter of law to have assumed such risk, and that an award of $3,000 for a compound comminuted fracture of the right leg, resulting in permanent injury, and for some damages to the left leg, whereby the plaintiff, who was earning $3 a day, was confined to a hospital for several months and was incapacitated from labor for about a year, was not excessive.

The practice, in case of an excessive verdict, of naming a sum for which judgment may be rendered at the option of one of the parties, is held, in Heimlich v. Tabor (Wis.), 68 L. R. A. 669, not to violate the rights of either party if grounded upon the proper basis.

That no warranty that the article will be suitable for the intended use can be implied, is held in Rollins Engine Co. v. Eastern Forge Co. (N. H.), 68 L. R. A. 441, where an express contract is made to forge a steel piston rod of specified dimensions, without stating that it is intended for any particular use.

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of New York.

APPELLATE DIVISION—SECOND DEPARTMENT.

RUTH CRANCH, RESPONDENT,

v.

THE BROOKLYN HEIGHTS RAILROAD COMPANY.

PERSONAL INJURIES; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE.

Held, that the plaintiff was not chargeable with contributory negligence as matter of law in assuming that an approaching train would not continue on its way up to the point where she attempted to cross the tracks.

Decided September, 1905.

Before HIRSCHBERG, P. J.; WOODWARD, JENKS, RICH, and MILLER, JJ.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action for personal injuries, and from an order denying a motion for new trial. Affirmed.

I. R. Oeland for appellant.

Stephen C. Baldwin for respondent.

JENKS, J.—In view of the satisfactory opinion of Kelly, J., on the motion for a new trial, full discussion is unnecessary. I think that the plaintiff was not chargeable with contributory negligence as a matter of law in assuming that the approaching train would not continue on its way up to the point where she attempted to cross. She is entitled to the most favorable inferences (Smith v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 177 N. Y. 224). In that case the court, per Werner, J., say:

"Was the plaintiff's intestate reasonably and ordinarily careful of his own safety in the circumstances? It can not be said that intelligent and reasonable men, applying the rule of ordinary care to the facts of this case, could not fairly differ in their answers to this question, and, therefore, it is one for the arbitration of a jury, and not for the decision of a court." So, too, in Canning v. Buffalo, R. & P. Ry. (168 N. Y. 555), Cullen, J., for the court, says: "Therefore the question to be determined in this case is whether it can be said that, as a matter of law, the plaintiff recklessly approached a known danger or took doubtful chances of passing safely in front of the train, or whether, under the circumstances of the case, it was a question as to which prudent men might reasonably differ." And in Parsons v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R. (113 N. Y. 355), the court, per Ruger, Ch. J., say: "The law does not forbid persons from crossing railroad tracks or impose upon them exclusive responsibility for damages incurred in making such an attempt. The question is whether the injured party, under all of the circumstances of the case, exercised that degree of care and caution which prudent persons of ordinary intelligence usually exercise under like circumstances. This rule must in all cases, except those marked by gross and inexcusable negligence, render the question involved one of fact for the jury."

The plaintiff desired to go to the station of the defendant in order to take passage on its train which was scheduled to stop there at a particular time for passengers. To reach the platform of the station she was compelled to cross the rails at grade. The plaintiff was not held to the rule that applies to a mere traveler crossing a railroad track on a public highway. Terry v. Jewett, 78 N. Y. 338; Brassell v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 84 N. Y. 241; Warner v. B. & O. R. R., 168 U. S. 339. Upon the evidence the jury could have found properly that the plaintiff, seeking the station to take the train, need not "exercise the same circumspection and care" as a traveler on the highway or a trespasser. Warner v. B. & O. R. R., supra. In determining whether the plaintiff was justified in attempting to cross the tracks there are certain circumstances which were germane, in that they may have implied an invitation to the plaintiff. The place of the station, relative to the situation of the tracks which required her to cross the tracks at grade in order to take the train, might warrant her in concluding that she would not be put in jeopardy when thus seeking to gain the platform. Jewett v. Klein, 27 N. J. Eq. 550, cited with approval in Terry v. Jewett, supra. Indeed, in that case, Dalrimple, J., for the court, says that under similar circumstances a passenger was "fully justified in concluding that he would be safe from harm from a train on the track which he was thus obliged to cross in order to secure his passage." See, too, Warner v. B. & O. R. R., supra.

There is evidence that the plaintiff, who had lived in the neighborhood for sixteen years and had taken these trains constantly, believed reasonably that it was the uniform custom of all trains to stop before coming to the point at which she attempted the crossing. See Beecher v. Long Island R. R., 35 App. Div. 292, 294, aff'd 161 N. Y. 222. This case may be discriminated from the criticism of Cullen, J., in Beecher's case at page 300, in that the evidence in this case for the plaintiff was that the custom was practically uniform.

There was evidence that the train which struck the plaintiff approached, passed the crossing, and came upon her with unabated speed and without any notification that it was to continue on its course by platform and by station, in departure from this uniform custom of stoppage. It might be concluded that the plaintiff would have been justified in assuming that the train would give some warning of such a course. In Dublin, Wicklow & Wexford R. R., vol. 3, App. Cas. 1115, Lord Selborne said: "Where there is a crossing so used at a station where a train by which an intending passenger proposes to travel may stop, and where by the arrangement of the company another train not stopping there may also be appointed to pass through that station from the opposite direction about the same time, it appears to me to be the duty of the company to use proper and sufficient means to give warning of the approach of such other train," etc. See, too, Vandewater v. N. Y. & N. E. R. R., 135 N. Y. 583, 588; Henavie v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 166 N. Y. 280, 284.

The question of omitted signals is not up in this case, as if the plaintiff had not seen the train, but I think that that omission may be considered in scrutinizing the conduct of the plaintiff in her attempt to cross the tracks. In Dublin, Wicklow & Wexord R. R. (supra), Lord Selborne said: "But as the present case actually stands upon the supposition (which has been affirmed by the verdict) that there was no whistling, the question of contributory negligence appears to me to be one particularly fit to be submitted to the jury. I could not (on that supposition) say that the jury were drawing inferences which they were not entitled to draw from the evidence if they thought that the deceased might have been put off his guard and induced to cross the line at the time and in the manner he did by the practice (on the one hand) of the company with respect to the use of this crossing for passengers alighting from or going (with their friends) to meet trains stopping at the station, and by this omission (on the other hand) to give the usual notice by whistling of the approach of this particular express train." See, too, Parsons v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., supra, at 363; McNamara v. N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., 136 N. Y. 650; Doyle v. Penn. & N. Y. Canal & R. R., 139 N. Y. 637, 639; Warner v. B. & O. R. R., supra.

Digitized by Google

My brother, who dissents, writes: "It should not avail the plaintiff that she believed the train would stop, for a train stopping could properly reach the point of the accident less than a car's length beyond the rear of the down train." I do not think that the evidence warrants this statement as bearing upon contributory negligence as matter of law, but that the jury were free to conclude that a train about to stop at that station in the usual and proper manner would not reach the point of the plaintiff's crossing. The defendant maintained a concrete platform, 120 feet long, in connection with its station. Examination of the map in evidence shows that the end of that platform nearest Eighty-fourth street was 9 feet 2 inches distant from the nearest curb line thereof, and that there was a space of 36 feet from that curb line to the further curb line. The roadway of the street is covered with boarding. The plaintiff, when crossing, was on the Brooklyn side, the further side, the north side of the board crossing. If this be correct she must have been in Eighty-fourth street and at least 9 feet plus 15 feet or 24 feet (and may have been nearly 39 feet, and she says about 35 feet) distant from the end of the concrete platform. Now let us consider all of the evidence as to the point reached by trains which stopped at the station and its adjunct, this concrete platform. The plaintiff testifies that when she saw trains stop there they stopped at about the end of the concrete platform. Her witness Brilles testifies that they stopped half a foot or a foot over the concrete platform. Her witness Gillespie testifies that trains stopped within the concrete—this side of Eighty-fourth street—that it stops before it goes on Eighty-fourth street.

Plaintiff's witness Foley testifies they stopped before they went to Eighty-fourth street, in front of the platform, "generally on about a line with the station sidewalk, as near as I can recollect." Her witness Voorhees testifies that he never saw a train stop at the depot with any part of the train over on to Eighty-fourth street—afterward qualified by the statement that at some times the front of the cars would "reach on" the planking; not as a general thing. Nor was he materially shaken on cross examination, for in answer to the question as to the extension of the train over Eighty-fourth street under certain conditions he said, "yes, it would if it did, but I never see them," and he reiterates on the redirect: "I say they never cross the crossing." The plaintiff's witness P. Mayott testifies that when trains stopped with reference to the station platform the front of the car stopped right on the end of the platform. On cross-examination he says it might run a little "on the sidewalk," "not a foot away from the end of the platform." His testimony as to 35 or 40 feet, it must be noted, is as to the distance of the rear platform of the first car from the end of the concrete platform—that is, the rear end was that far back from the end of the concrete towards Eighty-fourth street, not Eighty-fifth street. This is clear from the context, in view of his location of the front platform of the car, made in answer to the previous question, "not a foot away from the end of the platform."

If the jury accepted the evidence adduced by the plaintiff as to the position of trains stopping at the station, they were clearly justified in the conclusion that the plaintiff crossed at a point never reached by the trains which stopped at that station, for she was at least 23 feet distant therefrom. There is evidence in contradiction adduced by the defendant. Its motorman testifies that they usually stopped so as to get the front of the cars right across Eighty-fourth street; that "it would go right across the street." A former employee, Vance, testifies that when they have a four-car train and they stop the front of the car extends over the sidewalk; "I think" that the front car generally runs over past the concrete platform. Uhlenbush testifies that some would stop before; the front of the car would stop just at Eighty-fourth street, and others would cross over. Roth testifies that the point of stoppage differed according to the number of cars; that three-car trains generally stopped at the head of Eighty-fourth street, but that four-car trains "have got to stop over Eighty-fourth street in order to have the platform to reach the lower platform." On cross-examination he testifies: "The trains running around between 10 and 11 in the morning at that time were three-car trains generally. Those regular passenger trains were three-car trains. Those trains, the three-car trains, when they stopped would stop so that all of the train was opposite the cement platform."

As the evidence warranted the inference by the jury that the trains in the operation of stopping never reached the point where the plaintiff crossed, but there was always a space from at least 23 to possibly 35 feet between the head of the train and her place of crossing, it seems to me that it can not be said properly that "it should not avail the plaintiff that she believed the train would stop, for a train stopping could properly reach the point of the accident less than a car's length beyond the rear of the down train."

The judgment and order must be affirmed, with costs.

Hirschberg, P. J., and Rich and Miller, JJ., concur.

Digitized by Google

Woodward, J. (dissenting.)—I dissent. In order to cross both tracks preparatory to taking an up train, the plaintiff and her husband waited for a down train to pass and stop opposite the station. Upon her direct examination the plaintiff testified:

"My husband crossed behind the train that had come in from the city, and I looked down and saw the train coming, after I passed the back of this stopped car, or stopped train. Q. When you passed behind this stationary train and looked down and saw the train coming, where was that train? A. Well, it was about entering the station. . . . So what did you do? A. I made a detour up the track to clear the ——. Q. Towards Brooklyn? . . . A. Yes, sir—to clear the train. . . . When I came out from behind that stationary train and saw this train coming in I thought that this was that 10.53 train which I wanted to catch. I received a dreadful blow on the head." This is substantially all of the plaintiff's direct testimony as to her movements immediately before the accident. Upon the cross-examination she explained that from her position between the tracks, near the rear of the stationary train, whence she last looked at the approaching train, her "detour" extended about 35 feet in the direction in which the latter train was running. In other words, after her last look, when she could have crossed in safety the single remaining track, she turned her back on the approaching train and walked about 35 feet without looking before attempting to cross, the train then being immediately upon her. It should not avail the plaintiff that she believed the train would stop, for a train stopping could properly reach the point of the accident, less than a car's length beyond the rear of the down train.

I think that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law, and that the judgment should be reversed.

Assault—Surgical Operation Unauthorized.

[Central Law Journal.]

In the case of Mohr v. Williams (Minn.), 104 N. W. Rep. 12, the facts were as follows:

Plaintiff consulted defendant concerning a difficulty with her right ear. Defendant examined the organ and advised an operation, to which plaintiff consented. After being placed under the influence of anæsthetics, and when plaintiff was unconscious therefrom, defendant examined her left ear, and found it in a more serious condition than her right, and in greater need of an operation. He called the attention of plaintiff's family physician to the conditions he had discovered, who attended the operation at plaintiff's request, and finally concluded that the operation should be performed upon the left instead of the right ear, to which the family physician made no objection. Plaintiff had not previously experienced any difficulty with her left ear, and was not informed prior to the time she was placed under the influence of anæsthetics that any difficulty existed with reference to it, and she did not consent to an operation thereon. Subsequently, on the claim that the operation seriously impaired her sense of hearing and was wrongful and unlawful, she brought this action to recover damages for an assault and battery.

The court found that the operation was consented to by plaintiff is not sustained by the evidence. At least, the evidence was such as to take the question to the jury. This contention is based upon the fact that she was represented on the occasion in question by her family physician; that the condition of her left ear was made known to him, and the propriety of an operation thereon suggested, to which he made no objection. It is urged that by his conduct he assented to it, and that plaintiff was bound thereby. It is not claimed that he gave his express consent. It is not disputed but that the family physician of plaintiff was present on the occasion of the operation, and at her request. But the purpose of his presence was not that he might participate in the operation, nor does it appear that he was authorized to consent to any change in the one originally proposed to be made. Plaintiff was naturally nervous and fearful of the consequences of being placed under the influence of anæsthetics, and the presence of her family physician was requested under the impression that it would allay and calm her fears. The evidence made the question one of fact for the jury to determine.

The contention of defendant that the act complained of did not amount to an assault and battery is based upon the theory that, as plaintiff's left ear was in fact diseased, in a condition dangerous and threatening to her health, the operation was necessary, and, having been skillfully performed at a time when plaintiff had requested a like operation on the other ear, the charge of assault and battery can not be sustained; that, in view of these conditions, and the claim that there was no negligence on the part of defendant, and an entire absence of any evidence tending to show an evil intent, the court should say, as a matter of law, that no assault and battery was committed, even though she did not consent to the operation. In other words, that the absence of a showing that defendant was actuated by a wrongful intent, or guilty of negligence, relieves the act of defendant from the charge of an unlawful assault and battery. We are unable to reach that conclusion, though the contention is not without merit. It would seem to follow from what has been said on the other features of the case that the act of defendant amounted at least to a technical assault and battery. If the operation was performed without plaintiff's consent, and the circumstances were not such as to justify its performance without, it was wrongful; and, if it was wrongful, it was unlawful.

As remarked in 1 Jaggard on Torts, 437, every person has a right to complete immunity of his person from physical interference of others, except in so far as contact may be necessary under the general doctrine of privilege; and any unlawful or unauthorized touching of the person of another, except it be in the spirit of pleasantry, constitutes an assault and battery. In the case at bar, as we have already seen, the question whether defendant's act in performing the operation upon plaintiff was authorized was a question for the jury to determine. If it was unauthorized, then it was, within what we have said, unlawful. It was a violent assault, not a mere pleasantry; and, even though no negligence is shown, it was wrongful and unlawful. The case is unlike a criminal prosecution for assault and battery, for there an unlawful intent must be shown. But that rule does not apply to a civil action, to maintain which it is sufficient to show that the assault complained of was wrongful and unlawful or the result of negligence. 1 Addison on Torts, 689; Lander v. Seaver, 32 Vt. 114, 76 Am. Dec. 156; Vosburg v. Putney, 80 Wis. 523, 50 N. W. Rep. 403, 14 L. R. A. 226, 27 Am. St. Rep. 47.

Digitized by Google

The amount of plaintiff's recovery, if she is entitled to recover at all, must depend upon the character and extent of the injury inflicted upon her, in determining which the nature of the malady intended to be healed and the beneficial nature of the operation should be taken into consideration, as well as the good faith of the defendant.

"Strikes" Against Estates.

[New York Law Journal.]

The New York Supplement and State Reporter for July 31, 1905, contains the report of three cases exemplifying a tendency which may well be warned against, especially as concerns young lawyers who too often are inclined to sue first and analyze the evidence afterwards. In Schultz v. Carrard, in the Supreme Court, Appellate Division, First Department (94 N. Y. Supp. 740), it was laid down that where it is shown that a decedent against whose estate a claim is presented was amply able to pay his debts, it will be presumed that he discharged his duty, and this presumption will not be overborne without clear and convincing proof on the part of the plaintiff. The evidence was held insufficient to establish against an estate a claim for board and lodging furnished to deceased. In Mulhern v. Carrard, in the same tribunal (94 N. Y. Supp. 741), it was held that the unsupported testimony of a claimant is insufficient to establish against an estate a claim for personal services rendered to the decedent during his lifetime. The evidence was pronounced insufficient to establish against an estate a claim for personal services consisting of taking care of premises and nursing and tending decedent during his lifetime. In both of these cases the decision of a referee, disallowing the claim, was, very properly, affirmed.

In Maisenheider v. Crispell, in the Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third Department (94 N. Y. Supp. 707), it was held in a proceeding to establish a claim against a decedent's estate for services in shaving deceased in his lifetime and other similar services, that the evidence was insufficient to establish a promise on the part of deceased to pay claimant anything more than he was actually paid at the time the services were rendered. The court emphasized the judicial policy of requiring clear and satisfactory proof before sanctioning payment of a claim against the estate of a decedent. The opinion lays bare the spirit of petty sordidness that is apt to crop out in litigations of this character. The court said:

"The proof shows that the plaintiff was a barber employed by one Lowerhouse at his barber shop in the Mansion House in the city of Kingston, at which house Cornell lived during all the time in question and until he died; that plaintiff was employed by the deceased to shave him daily, including Sundays, at his room in the Mansion House, and that at the time of shaving him he aided him in lacing his shoes, putting on his stockings, assisting him with his cuffs, necktie, and collar, and in brushing his clothes. The proof also shows that Cornell paid the plaintiff daily during all this time the sum of 25 cents, except on Sunday, when the plaintiff was paid by Cornell the sum of $1; that plaintiff paid the 25 cents daily to his employer, Lowerhouse, but retained the dollar paid to him on Sundays as his own.

"The proof also shows that these services were rendered in the morning of each day, and required from fifteen minutes to a half an hour in their performance, and that the time required for shaving was from fifteen to twenty minutes. The claim of the plaintiff was never presented to the deceased in his lifetime. This fact alone casts suspicion upon the validity of the claim, and the court can not sanction its payment, except upon satisfactory proof of its validity. Kearney v. McKeon, 85 N. Y. 136, at 141. There is no proof and no finding that the plaintiff ever promised to pay for these alleged extra services. There is some proof that Cornell felt kindly towards the plaintiff, and that he said he didn't know what he would have done without him, and that he was going to start him in business for himself in a barber shop. And one witness testified that Cornell said he was going to start plaintiff in business for himself for what he had done for him. But all that comes far short of a promise to pay the plaintiff for these services as extra services, and this testimony is not sufficient from which such a promise can be implied. At the most it merely showed a friendly interest in the plaintiff, and that the kindly disposition of the deceased towards him was such that he would be pleased to aid him in starting business on his own account, if the opportunity offered.

"The fact that the plaintiff was paid at the conclusion of all the services rendered the deceased each week day a specified amount, which was given to his employer, and that on each Sunday Cornell paid the plaintiff an extra or larger compensation for like services, which the plaintiff retained as his own, shows very clearly that Cornell thought he was paying daily for all the services rendered, and negatives the idea that any portion of such services rendered were regarded by either party as extra services. This is especially so in view of the fact that there is no proof that there was any special or extra compensation agreed upon at the time for any of these services as extra work, and the case comes far short of being supported by that clear and satisfactory proof which is required in cases of this character to justify a recovery."

The practical suggestion to be deduced from cases of this character is that it behooves a member of the bar critically to sift the evidence before undertaking the prosecution of a claim against the estate of a decedent, especially where it is for personal services, and, although the decedent was amply able to pay, no demand was made during his lifetime. The hostile attitude of the courts is well founded in justice and experience, and the average attorney should recognize the duty of showing some substantially meritorious features in support of any claim of this class that he professionally fathers.

Digitized by Google

Receivers—What Attorney's Fees Constitute Expenses of Receivership.

[Central Law Journal.]

The general rule is that the determination of the expenses of a receivership, including court costs and attorney's fees, is largely discretionary with the trial court, and the latter's action is treated on appeal as presumptively correct.

The recent case of Myers v. Mutual Life Insurance Company, 75 N. E. Rep. 31, is interesting on the question as to what attorney's fees will be allowed as expenses attending a receivership. In that case the court held that while expenses incurred in the administration of a receivership for an insolvent, including expenses of litigation by which the trust fund is created or preserved, are chargeable against such fund, yet services rendered in litigation intended and operating to diminish the trust fund can not be made the basis of a claim for compensation out of such fund, although the result of such litigation was to establish a rule by which similar claims were expeditiously settled without litigation, and it was thus incidentally advantageous to the trust fund.

In this case one Huter intervened in the receivership case, and asked that a bond and mortgage given by him to the insolvent company be found paid and ordered cancelled. The conclusions of law were against him. He appealed to the Supreme Court, and secured the reversal of a judgment following the conclusions. Huter v. Union Ins. Co., 153 Ind. 204, 54 N. E. Rep. 755. The claim presented by the intervener arises out of services rendered by him as an attorney for Huter in such litigation. Against the claim of the intervener in this case arises the general rule that where the object of the litigation is to diminish or destroy the fund, expenses incurred in its prosecution are not chargeable as expenses. Trustees v. Grenough, 105 U. S. 527.

To escape the effect of the general rule thus stated, the intervener pleaded three excuses which he contended constituted exceptions to such general rules. First: That the result of the appeal was to establish a rule by which many similar claims throughout the State were expeditiously settled without litigation, and its establishment, which could not have been had without the appeal, was to the advantage of the trust, and its cost, therefore, a proper charge against the fund. To this the court answered: "The advantage thus secured was an incidental one. The duties which were performed by the intervener were such as were due from him to his client, whose interest was adverse to the trust, and there is therefore no warrant for his payment out of the fund. Ober, etc., Co. v. Macon, etc., Co., 100 Ga. 635, 28 S. E. Rep. 388."

The second excuse was that the appeal was taken at the suggestion of the judge of the court in which both the receivership and the action against Huter were pending, and in reliance upon a statement by him that he would, in view of the desirability of procuring an early and authoritative construction of the contract involved therein, make an order for the payment of expenses and fees thus incurred by the receiver. To this the court answered: "The allowance of costs, expenses, and attorney's fees incurred in litigation beneficial to a trust estate is largely discretionary with the lower court, and is upon appeal treated as presumptively correct. Stuart v. Boulware, 133 U. S. 78, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242, 23 L. Ed. 568; Trustees v. Greenough, supra. It appears that during the pendency of the appeal an allowance of $125 was made for the expenses thereof. Had the trial court made a further allowance to the intervener, the question of its power to do so would be directly involved, but, having refused to make such allowance, this court can not reverse its action because of previous alleged oral agreements between its judge and the intervener." The third excuse was that after the determination of the appealed cause the intervener aided and assisted the receiver by explaining the effect and force of the decision to various persons who were sent to him by said receiver, and "advised them to settle their claims in accordance therewith." To this the court answered: "The duty of an attorney is to his client, whose corresponding duty it is to reasonably compensate him. Such duty does not consist with the payment of his fees by the opposite party. There is in this case no suspicion of unprofessional conduct or misconduct, and the advice given to such persons was evidently correct and to their interest, but it would be a dangerous precedent to recognize the right of an attorney to charge one party for advice given to the other in pursuance to any kind of an arrangement to which the person advised is not a party."

The Right Bower of the Profession.

Some time in the forties, and before the election of Taylor and Fillmore to the presidency and vice-presidency, Mr. Fillmore was senior member of the law firm of Fillmore, Hall & Havens, of Buffalo, N. Y. The firm was well known all over the State on account of the ability of its members. A young man of the Buffalo bar had brought an action in the supreme court, and the defendant had retained the first named. At the opening of the trial of the case the plaintiff's attorney stated to the jury that he would have to depend entirely upon the justice of his client's case, as the defendant had sought and obtained the aid and counsel of one of the ablest firms of lawyers in western New York, and he might say he had opposed to him the right bower of the legal profession. "What does he mean by that?" said Mr. Fillmore. Mr. Havens—who, like Jerrold and Lamb, would rather lose his best friend than his joke—replied, "He means you." "Yes, I know," replied Mr. Fillmore, "but what does he mean by that particular expression?" "Did you never play euchre?" said Havens. "No," said Fillmore. "Well," said Havens, "in the game of euchre the right bower is the biggest knave in the pack."—Ohio Law Bulletin.

Digitized by Google

Builder's Bond—Mortgage—Condition.

In the case of The American Bonding & Trust Company v. The Progressive Permanent Building, Loan & Savings Association, recently decided by the Maryland Court of Appeals, suit was brought by the appellee against the appellant as surety on a builder's bond. The builder assigned a mortgage on nineteen lots to the appellee to secure a loan of $3,500. The condition of the bond sued on provided that the assignor of the mortgage should "fully complete and finish the buildings and improvements now in the course of erection on said respective lots of ground, fence in said lots, lay the pavements, and put the ground and premises in complete order for occupancy by tenants on or before the first day of July next." Nine of the lots were released and the mortgage was foreclosed on the remaining ten, and the auditor's account showed a balance due the appellee of $950.66. It was practically conceded that none of the houses were completed by July 1. The appellee recovered judgment for the balance found due. The Court of Appeals held that the appellant was not a guarantor of the mortgage debt, and was only responsible for the loss sustained by the appellee because of the non-completion of the houses by July 1.

A railroad company is held, in Kentucky & I. Bridge & R. Co. v. Snydor (Ky.), 68 L. R. A. 183, to be liable for injuries to a car repairer by propelling cars against the one under which he was working, notwithstanding his neglect in failing to place his signal flag in the best position, if those in charge of the train by the exercise of ordinary care might have discovered the flag, where it was placed in time to avoid the injury.

Bills of discovery are held, in Brown v. McDonald (C. C. A. 3d C.), 68 L. R. A. 462, not to be abolished by statutes empowering the Federal courts, in actions at law, to require the parties to produce books and writings, and making parties to suits at law competent witnesses therein.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

(FOUNDED 1789.)

SCHOOL OF LAW.

FACULTY.

REV. DAVID H. BUEL, S. J.,
President of the University.
HON. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice, Supreme Court, District of Columbia)
Dean of the Faculty and Lecturer on Common Law Pleading and Practice, and Equity Pleading and Practice.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
Lecturer on the Law of Wills.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on Constitutional Law, the Law of Corporations, and Equity Jurisprudence.
HON. ASHLEY M. GOULD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Contracts, Criminal Law, and Domestic Relations.
HON. DANIEL THEW WRIGHT,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Insurance.
HON. WENDELL PHILLIPS STAFFORD,
(Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Agency.
CHAS. A. DOUGLASS, A. B., LL. B.,
Lecturer on the Law of Torts, Negotiable Paper, and Elementary Law.
MICHAEL J. COLBERT, A. M., LL. M.,
Lecturer on the Law of Personal Property and Partnership.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
Lecturer on the Law of Real Estate and the Law of Evidence.

Judge of the Circuit Court: DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., Ph. D., LL. M.
Court of Appeals: HON. JOB BARNARD and MESSRS. LEIGH ROBINSON and J. HOLDSWORTH GORDON.
Quiz Masters: CLARENCE R. WILSON, A. B., LL. M.; DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, A. M., PH. D., LL. M., and JAMES S. EASBY-SMITH, A. M., LL. M.
SAMUEL M. YEATMAN, A. M.,
Secretary and Treasurer.
FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM,
Assistant Secretary.

ADDITIONAL LECTURERS IN THE FOURTH YEAR OR POST-GRADUATE COURSE.

HON. HOLMES CONRAD,
(Late Solicitor-General of the United States)
On the History of the Development of Law and Comparative Jurisprudence, and on the History of the English Law.
HON. SETH SHEPARD, LL. D.,
(Chief Justice Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On the History of Constitutional Law and the Foundations of Civil Liberty.
REV. RENE HOLAIND, S. J.,
On Natural Law and Canon Law.
MONROE SMITH, LL. D.,
(Professor in the School of Political Science of Columbia University, New York City)
On Civil Law.
HON. LOUIS E. McCOMAS, LL. D.,
(Associate Justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia)
On International Law and Foreign Relations of the United States.
RALEIGH C. MINOR, LL. D.,
(Professor of Law in the University of Virginia)
On the Conflict of Laws.
HON. JOHN W. YERKES, LL. D.,
On Railroad Accident Law, Municipal Corporations.
J. NOTA McGILL, LL. M.,
On Patent Law.

Digitized by Google

ALDIS B. BROWNE, LL. B.,
On Jurisdiction and Practice of United States Courts.
WILLIAM C. WOODWARD, M. D., LL. M.,
On Medical Jurisprudence.
GEORGE E. HAMILTON, LL. D.,
On Legal Ethics.
HON. D. W. BAKER, A. M., LL. M.,
(United States Attorney for the District of Columbia)
On General Practice and Exercises in Pleading and Evidence.

The thirty-sixth annual session opens on Wednesday, October 4, 1905, at 6.30 p. m., in the Law School Building, Nos. 506 and 508 E street northwest, at which time announcements will be made for the ensuing term. All interested are cordially invited to be present.

The Secretary will be at his office in the Law Building daily from 4.30 to 6.00 p. m. for information, enrollment, payment of fees, etc.

Students proposing to connect themselves with the School are earnestly requested to enroll before the opening night.

Circulars can be obtained at the bookstore of Lowdermilk & Co., 1424 F street northwest, and John Byrne & Co., 1322 F street northwest, and at the W. S. Thompson Pharmacy, 703 Fifteenth street northwest, or upon application to the undersigned. S. M. YEATMAN, 37-4t Secretary.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Francis H. Stephen, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George T. Morgan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. JAMES A. KEMP, Police Headquarters. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,200. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Robert S. Hume and A. S. Worthington, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Special Term for Probate Business.
In the Matter of the Estate of Ellen O'Brien, Deceased.
No. 10,958. Administration Doc. 29.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to trial of the issues in this case, relating to the validity of the paper writing dated the 10th day of June, A. D. 1902, purporting to be the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, has been returned as to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of said Ellen O'Brien, deceased, "not to be found," it is thereupon by the court this 5th day of October, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this cause be, and they hereby are, set down for trial in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, and that the substance of the issues and the date fixed for the trial, as shown in the margin of this order, be published for three months, once a month during the said period in The Washington Law Reporter, twice a week for not less than four weeks and twice a month for the remainder of the said period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

MARGIN:

This is to give notice to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, that, whereas a certain paper writing, bearing date of the 10th day of June, 1902, has been presented for probate and record in this court as the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, and the validity thereof is contested by certain of the parties in interest, issues have been framed and set for trial by jury in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, presenting the questions whether the said Ellen O'Brien was, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, of sound and disposing mind and capable of making a valid deed or contract; whether said paper writing, or the execution thereof, was procured from her by undue influence, fraud, and circumvention. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.
[Seal]
oct. 6; nov. 3; dec. 1.

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams, Solicitors for Complainant

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ernest L. Schmidt, Complainant, v. Ada G. Earhart Ross et al., Defendants. No. 25,522, Equity Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to sell certain property in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described as follows, and being, to wit: The lots 17, 18, 20, and 21, in Butler's subdivision of lots in square 226, also original lot 1 in square 252, together with the improvements thereon, and to distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and also to substitute a trustee pending any such sale. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ada G. Earhart Ross, Jessie Elizabeth Earhart McGuire, Virginia Butler Earhart Ferguson, Carter Earhart, and Lyttleton Reese, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 40-3t
[Seal]

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, Deceased.
No. 13,193. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by William Holabird and Joseph Willard Preston, as executors, it is ordered this 4th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Agnes Theodosia von Konowsky, Mary Edna Preston, Julia Starr Preston, Joseph Willard Preston, Jr., and Henry Grant Preston, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t
[Seal]

Alex. H. Bell, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Denney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. FANNIE E. CARTER, Nichols ave., Anacostia, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No 13,173. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Gustavo L. Roxer, Jr., late of Austria, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. F. WALTER BRANDENBURG, Fendall Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No.13,183. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Robt. E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary Helen Rowland, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. ROBERT E. MATTINGLY, 472 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,167. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

A. Coulter Wells, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Buchanan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. MARY WEAVER, 1518 Que st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,154. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Hallam & Hallam, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Evalyn Doughty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. CAVOUR O. BOHRER, 113 C st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,906. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

P. J. Ryan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert Georgii, Deceased.
No. 13,162. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ignatius Nau, it is ordered this 2d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Max Georgii and Herrmann Georgii, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

George Francis Williams, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Maria W. Richards, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of September, 1905. CHARLES H. RICHARDS, 35 Hillside ave., Montclair, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,089. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Legal Notices.

M. A. Mess, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ottilie Aumann, Deceased.
No. 13,169. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Frank A. B. Wünnenberg, it is ordered this second day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Christian Aumann (a brother), Ottilie Aumann (a niece), and Walburga Aumann (a stepsister), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and New Yorker Staatszeitung once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

Sheehy & Sheehy, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Thomas Murphy, Deceased.
No. 3356. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Catherine J. Murphy, it is ordered this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Murphy, Edward Murphy, and Thomas Murphy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

F. P. Sheehy, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Michael Burke, Deceased.
Administration, No. 11,704.

Upon consideration of the report herein filed by Charles J. Springmann, executor of the last will and testament of Michael Burke, deceased, showing that he has sold at public auction to John W. Weitzel for twenty-five hundred ($2,500) dollars cash the real estate mentioned and described in the proceedings had in the above entitled matter, namely, lot numbered fourteen (14) in square numbered five hundred (500), improved by premises No. 495 L street southwest, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 4th day of November, 1905. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. [Seal] 40 3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 909 H street northeast, Washington, D. C., being lot twenty (20) in Moses Kelley's subdivision of square nine hundred and thirty-four (934), as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in book W. B. M., page 853, to Paul Leverone for thirty-seven hundred and fifty ($3,750) dollars cash, less three (3) per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 3d day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. [Seal] 40-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

SECOND INSERTION.

O. B. Glason, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maine, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen J. Thompson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. HOSEA H. CARY, East Pittston, Me. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,186. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,293.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Loultz and John B. Loultz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law [Seal] Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Legal Notices.

McKenney & Flannery, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caroline A. Baker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. NATHAN C. TWINING, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Dept. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,079. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Michael J. Keane, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding Equity Court.

Mary C. Deery, Complainant, v. John T. Neumeyer et al., Defendants.

In Equity, No. 25,617.

Michael J. Keane, the trustee in the above entitled cause, having reported a sale at public auction of part of lot ten (10), in square five hundred and twelve (512), as more fully described in the bill of complaint filed herein, to R. Harrison Johnson, for the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty ($2,250) dollars, it is this 22d day of September, 1905, ordered that the said sale be confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 22d day of October, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law [Seal] Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Wilson Gregory, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of September, 1905. FRANCES G. GREGORY, 2510 M st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,948. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Chas. L. Frailey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Andrew Wylie, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. HORACE WYLIE, 1205 Vermont ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,174. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

Robert E. Mattingly, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret C. Mooney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1905. BETTIE LE PREUX, 1501 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,127. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Holding an Equity Court.

Terrence J. McMahon v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Charles Carter, Deceased.

Equity No. 25,554.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-seven (37) in John M. Graham's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and fifty-two (252) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, as said subdivision is recorded in Liber H. D. C., at folio 184½, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is, this 27th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Charles Carter, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of November, 1905; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based upon the bill and affidavit filed [Seal] herein, that further publication is unnecessary. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-4t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Mary E. Letts, Deceased.

No. 13,143. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by The Washington Loan and Trust Company, it is ordered this 27th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Mary E. Letts, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty [Seal] days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 39-3t

Philip Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Minnesota, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adelaide M. Shedd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK G. STUTZ, 48 W. 3d st., St. Paul, Minn. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,151. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

W. C. Martin, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Reuben Taylor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. W. J. HOWARD, 100 Mass. ave. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,751. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Legal Notices.

Millan & Smith, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Frank Waters et al., Complainants, v. Lavinia Waters et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,667. Docket 57.

Upon consideration of the report of W W. Millan, trustee, herein filed, showing that he has sold the south forty-five (45) feet of original lot seventeen (17) in square eight hundred and fifty-nine (859) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles Specht, for four thousand five hundred dollars ($4,500), it is, this 28th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided copy of this order be published [Seal] once in each of three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

R. R. Horner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of David Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. JULIA I. DAVIS, 1757 S st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,080. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Robert E Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceas·d are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 15th day of September, 1905. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W.; DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 1825 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,137. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles Ippolito, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. BENJAMIN W. GUY, 315 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,968. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Fred L. Rosemond, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Ohio, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alice V. C. Williams, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 14th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 14th day of September, 1905. J. W. CAMPBELL, Cambridge Ohio; FRED L. ROSEMOND, Cambridge, Ohio. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,317. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Saml. Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, H. Rozier Dulany, Trustee in Bankruptcy of Thomas E. Waggaman v. Thomas E. Waggaman et al. In Equity, No. 25,649.

The object of this suit is to sell a certain tract of land in the District of Columbia known and designated on the plats thereof as Woodley Park, as subdivided by Thomas E. Waggaman and John Ridout, trustees, and distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and to set aside as a preference under the bankrupt law a certain deed of trust, dated July 25th, 1904, and given by said trustees to secure notes held by the Catholic University of America, aggregating $876 168.96. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Samuel Maddox and H. Prescott Gatley, it is by the court this 18th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that defendants, Eugene Ives, Emily A. Shuman, Kate M. Billings, Clara V. Dorsey, James L. McLane, Annie E. Bowie, and E. C. Humphrey, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. By the Court: [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-3t

---

Arthur A. Alexander, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James Dorsey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. DANIEL W. O'DONOGHUE, 412 5th st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,149. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

---

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold the south 8.29 feet of lot 54, all of lot 55, the north 12.46 feet of lot 56, the south 14 feet of lot 57, and all of lots 58 and 59 in square 302, improved by seven houses numbered 2240, 2242, 2244, 2246, 2250, 2252, and 2254 Eleventh street Northwest, Washington, D. C., for ninety-eight hundred ($9,800) dollars cash, less 3 per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 19th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 19th day of October, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive [Seal] weeks before said last named day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 38-3t

---

Wm. A. McKenney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Halbert E. Paine, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of September, 1905. AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY, by James F. Hood, Secretary. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,113. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Legal Notices.

P. S. Riggs, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of John S. Manning, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15 h day of September, A. D. 1 06; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of September, 1905. HELEN P. MANNING, care of R. S. Riggs, 146 Broadway, New York. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia. Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,161. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

---

[Filed September 18, 1905.]

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 8 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE [Seal] W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. A true copy. Test: J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-6t

---

Evans Browne, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Napoleon J. T. Dana, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 19th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 19th day of September, 1905. MABEL LANIER TIDBALL, 210 Walnut st, Montclair, N. J. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,150. Administration. [Seal.] 38-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 41

Published by

THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY

Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - OCTOBER 13, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 641
Notes of Interest 642
Legal Notices 652

Police Judge Alexander R. Mullowney.

Mr. Alexander R. Mullowney, of the District bar, has been appointed by the President as one of the judges of the Police Court of this District, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. Charles F. Scott. The appointment has been well received, as it is recognized that Mr. Mullowney possesses many qualifications for the position.

Judge Mullowney is a native of Richmond, Va., but the greater part of his life has been spent in this city. He is in the prime of life, being in the forty-first year of his age. He has had a long record of efficient service as assistant United States attorney for the District in charge of prosecutions in the Police Court, to which place he was appointed by United States Attorney A. S. Worthington, and continuing in the discharge of that duty under the successors of Mr. Worthington. Some time after the appointment of Mr. Morgan H. Beach as United States attorney, Mr. Mollowney was called from the Police Court to assume important duties in connection with the office, having especial charge of the matter of drawing indictments, etc.

The position to which he has been appointed is an important and responsible one, requiring qualities of head and heart possessed by few. Those who are acquainted with Judge Mullowney's work as prosecuting officer are confident that in the higher post to which he has been appointed he will prove himself equally capable.

Labor Unions.

An important question arising from a contract made between an employer and a labor union was passed upon by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts in Berry v. Donovan, 74 N. E. Rep. 603. The right of the union, acting under a contract which obligated the employer to employ only union men and to discharge such as refused to join the union, to insist upon the performance of the contract, is denied. The opinion of the court contains an interesting and instructive discussion of the right of a person to dispose of his labor without hindrance, and also enters fully into the interesting relations between labor and capital.

Damages for Lowering Grade of Street.

A rather curious theory as to the measure of damages in an action against a municipal corporation for lowering the grade in front of property abutting upon a certain street, was contended for by counsel for the plaintiff in the case of Swope v. City of Seattle, 78 Pac. Rep. 607. Mortality tables were offered in evidence for the purpose of showing the expectancy of the plaintiffs' lives as a basis for determining the length of time during which there would be the extra burden of climbing additional steps in entering and leaving their homes. No authorities were cited, and the court denied the contention, with the statement that the plaintiff's counsel had not mentioned any rule of law justifying such an offer.

Mortgages Left for Record at Same Moment—Neither Entitled to Priority.

In Borstein v. Schweyer, decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania (61 Atl. 447), it appeared that two mortgages, one given to the widow and the other to the daughter of a deceased, were left for record at the same time, and that the one given the widow was recorded on page 81 and that to the daughter on page 83 of the record. It was contended for the widow that the paging in the mortgage book conclusively established the priority of entry, and therefore the priority of lien. The court, however, denied this contention, holding that neither mortgage had priority over the other, the lien of each commencing at precisely the same moment. It was impossible, said the court, to record the two mortgages at the same instant in the same mortgage book; one had to appear there first, but the page on which it appeared had nothing to do with the lien. That commenced the moment of the arrival of the mortgage in the recorder's office was noted by the recorder, and in contemplation of law it was recorded from the moment it was left for record. As a matter of universal experience, the court further remarks, we know that mortgages and deeds are not actually recorded as soon as they are brought into the office, because it is not possible to so record them.

Digitized by Google

Right of Jurors to Consider Their Own Knowledge and Experience.

[Reprinted from the Bench and Bar.]

The right of jurors to consider their own personal knowledge and experience, aside from the evidence introduced on the trial of a cause, which may be called experiential notice, for lack of a better term, is perhaps somewhat analogous to the function of judicial notice exercised by the court. The two topics possess also in common the characteristic of being somewhat unsettled in limit and extent, so far as the rules deducible from adjudged cases are concerned.

The thought which naturally occurs to one at the outset is that in arriving at a determination upon the issues of fact presented in a cause, it is the strict and invariable duty of jurors to consider only the evidence presented, disregarding all other sources of knowledge, information, or belief. Next in order, the qualification would probably present itself that at all events, in weighing the evidence and passing upon the credibility of the witnesses, the jurors must, of necessity, resort to that fund of knowledge which is the sum of the experience and observation of their own lives, otherwise called "common sense." Beyond this elementary principle and its qualifying consideration, if the latter may be properly so termed, stretches out a wide field of speculation and conjecture, so that whenever a judicial decision clearly settles any portion of the doubtful or disputed territory, it should be eagerly seized upon, with a feeling of thankfulness for small favors.

The case of People ex rel. Lovett v. Miller, 101 App. Div. 291, decided by the Appellate Term, Third Department, in January of this year, may therefore be hailed with a certain satisfaction, for in it it was distinctly declared that upon an issue as to the value of the services of a real estate appraiser, a jury, or the auditing officer of a municipal corporation, had clearly the right to consider their own knowledge and their own notions of the value of such services, aside and apart from and independent of the testimony of experts thereupon. In this connection the case of Head v. Hargrove, 105 U. S. 45, was cited. This was an action to recover the value of legal services, and in the course of its opinion the Supreme Court of the United States, through Mr. Justice Field, observed:

"It was the province of the jury to weigh the testimony of the attorneys as to the value of the services, by reference to their nature, the time occupied in their performance and other attending circumstances, and by applying it to their own experience and knowledge of the character of such services. To direct them to find the value of the services from the testimony of the experts alone, was to say to them that the issue should be determined by the opinions of the attorneys, and not by the exercise of their own judgment of the facts on which those opinions were given. The evidence of experts as to the value of professional services does not differ in principle from such evidence as to the value of labor in other departments of business, or as to the value of property. So far from laying aside their own general knowledge and ideas, the jury should have applied that knowledge and those ideas as to the matters of fact in evidence in determining the weight to be given to the opinions expressed, and it was only in that way that they could arrive at a just conclusion. While they can not act in any case upon particular facts material to its disposition resting on their private knowledge, but should be governed by the evidence adduced, they may, and to act intelligently they must, judge of the weight and force of that evidence by their own general knowledge of the subject of inquiry. If, for example, the question were as to the damages sustained by a plaintiff from a fracture of his leg by the carelessness of a defendant, the jury would ill perform their duty, and probably come to a wrong conclusion, if, controlled by the testimony of the surgeons, not merely as to the injury inflicted but as to the damages sustained, they should ignore their own knowledge and experience of the value of a sound limb. Other persons besides professional men have knowledge of the value of professional services, and, while great weight should always be given to the opinions of those familiar with the subject, they are not to be blindly received, but are to be intelligently examined by the jury in the light of their own general knowledge; they should control only as they are found to be reasonable."

In Anthony v. Stinson, 4 Kan. 211, a question almost identical with that passed upon by the United States Supreme Court in the case just referred to, was decided, and in the same way. An instruction given to the jury had told them that the testimony of certain lawyers as to the value of professional services should be the guide of the jury, and that they should be governed by it in finding the value of the services rendered. This was held to be error, the appellate court observing that the jury were not to be instructed as to what part of the testimony before them should control their verdict. In order to control the verdict, it was declared, the testimony of experts should be of such a character as to outweigh by its intrinsic force and probability all conflicting testimony, and that the jury should not be required to accept, as a matter of law, the conclusions of the witnesses instead of their own.

In Patterson v. Boston, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 159, the question was as to the damages to be awarded to the plaintiff for his property, taken to widen a street in Boston. The trial court instructed the jury that in estimating the amount of the damages, if any of them knew of their own knowledge any material fact which bore upon the issue, he ought to disclose it and be sworn, and communicate it to his fellows in open court in the presence of the parties, but that in making up their verdict they might rightfully be influenced by their general knowledge on such subjects, as well as by the testimony and opinions of witnesses. The case being taken to the Supreme Court, it was held that these directions were not open to exception. Said Chief Justice Shaw, speaking for the court:

Digitized by Google

"Juries would be very little fit for the high and responsible office to which they are called, especially to make an appraisement which depends on knowledge and experience, if they might not avail themselves of those powers of their minds when they are most necessary to the performance of their duties."

In Murdock v. Sumner, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 156, the same court, speaking also through Chief Justice Shaw, said that "the jury very properly exercise their own judgment and apply their own knowledge and experience in regard to the general subject of inquiry." In that case a witness had testified as to the quality, condition, and cost of certain goods, and given his opinion as to their worth, and the court said that "the jury were not bound by the opinion of the witness. They might have taken the facts testified by him as to the cost, quality, and condition of the goods, and come to a different opinion as to their value."

Another Massachusetts case, decided in 1899 (Leary v. Fitchburg R. Co., 173 Mass. 373), in which the opinion was delivered by the distinguished Mr. Justice Holmes, now a member of the United States Supreme Court, seems inclined to the view that a jury may, as a matter of their own knowledge and experience, take notice of the fact that the side of a train toward the railroad station is the usual and proper side for passengers to alight from. In that case one Leary, plaintiff's decedent, had been found under the wheels on the wrong side of the train. "How he got there," observed Mr. Justice Holmes, being "a pure matter of conjecture." A verdict had been directed for the defendant, which ruling was sustained on appeal, the court, through the learned jurist referred to, declaring:

"In all cases of this sort, where the evidence stops short of direct testimony to the personal causes of the accident, the question is whether the jury are warranted by common experience in saying that such accidents are so much more likely to be due to the defendant's fault than to any of the other possible causes, that they ought to presume that this one was due to such fault. This is a practical question of experience, and depends upon the nature of the particular case."

The appellate division of the New York Supreme Court, however, at its April term of this year, reversed a judgment for the plaintiff in a negligence suit for what was held to have been error in the trial court in charging the jury that they might, in weighing the testimony of the witnesses, consider their own experience as to whether a man 77 years of age would be likely to attempt to pursue a moving electric car and try to board it. The plaintiff, at the age stated, testified that he attempted to embark upon one of the defendant's cars while it was at a standstill; that he put his foot on the car, when the car started and threw him upon the street. This testimony was contradicted by several witnesses, but the case was submitted to the jury, who found a verdict for the plaintiff. The appellate division after observing that it was a serious question whether the verdict was not against the weight of evidence, continued:

"There is, however, one portion of the charge to the jury which possibly explains this verdict, which was excepted to, and which requires us to order a new trial. The learned trial court called the attention of the jury to the fact that the plaintiff was an interested witness and was not corroborated by any direct evidence, and then continued: 'We may draw the reasonable inferences which, as reasonable men of the world, we are apt and accustomed to draw, and put them alongside of or connected with the facts proved, and say whether the story is probable, is reasonable, or improbable or impossible. Each side asks you to draw an inference. The plaintiff says: Is it reasonable to believe that a man of this age would run after a car and try to board it? You can ask yourselves the question whether people do that sort of thing in the city of New York.'"

Mr. Justice Ingraham, who delivered the opinion of the court, concluded:

"I think it was clearly error to allow the jury to consider what they thought people did in the city of New York in deciding the case. The jury were instructed that they would ask themselves the question whether people do that which the witnesses testified that the plaintiff did. We can not tell what influence this had on the jury, but it might well be that the jury would consider that people in New York did not run after these street cars, and that the story told by the witnesses for the defendant was not, therefore, a true account of the transaction."

[In this opinion Van Brunt and McLaughlin, JJ., concurred without qualification; Patterson and Laughlin, JJ., concurred on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence.]

Probably, however, the most familiar example of the exercise by the jury of this function of "experimental" notice arises in negligence cases, in which the question whether or not the particular act was negligent, depends upon whether or not injurious consequences should have been anticipated by a person of reasonable and ordinary foresight, prudence, and discretion. This issue is, as a general rule, always for the jury, and it is difficult to see how it can be determined otherwise than in the light of their own knowledge, experience, and common sense. For example, where the lock on the door of an elevator shaft was in such condition that the door might be opened either by its own weight or by some person from outside the shaft, and the plaintiff walked into the opening and was injured, it was held that whether or not the injurious consequences which resulted from the condition of the lock were such as ought reasonably to have been contemplated or foreseen was for the jury. Colo. Mtge. and Ins. Co. v. Rees (Colo.) 42 Pac. 42. But of course, like other issues of fact, if the court can say upon the evidence that any finding that the defendant could or should have contemplated or foreseen the occurrence of the injuries would be utterly unwarranted, and that there is no evidence from which such a conclusion could be drawn, then the exercise of the function discussed will not be called into play, as the issue should not be left to the jury at all.

Digitized by Google

So in the case of Heffernan v. Arnold, 48 App. Div. 419 (Third Dept. 1900), which was an action to recover damages for personal injuries, it appeared that the defendants, who were truckmen, delivered two heavy iron girders at a building in process of construction, placing one on top of the other, with square sticks of timber between; that the builder, without, so far as appeared, the knowledge of the defendants, substituted iron rollers for the square pieces of timber between the girders, also placing wooden chuck blocks to hold the girders in position. Thereafter the defendants were directed by the builder to deliver a third girder with one end at the opening of the building, and while backing the truck with this object in view, the rear wheels of the truck unexpectedly slid on the pavement, bringing the end of the girder on the truck in contact with the end of the upper girder lying on the ground, causing it to move upon the rollers and fall and strike the plaintiff, who had just alighted from another truck loaded with stone to be delivered at the building. It was held upon such facts the duty of the court to say that the defendants could not, by the exercise of reasonable care and prudence, have anticipated the happening of such an accident, and that it was error, therefore, to submit the question of the defendant's negligence to the jury.

Thus, also, in the case of Clare v. N. Y. etc., R. Co., 167 Mass. 39, where there was no direct testimony as to the cause of the accident, the court said:

"Such a case is not to be left to the jury unless the court can say that the jury are warranted from their experience as men of the world, in saying that the accident is more likely to happen from the alleged defect than from other possible causes. If, on the other hand, the court can see that common experience does not warrant such judgment, it is its duty to direct a verdict. . . . It is a practical question with reference to the particular facts of the case, but it is one of those practical questions upon which the court have to exercise their judgment in the first place before submitting it to anyone else."

The doctrine of res ipsa loquitur has intimate connection with, if not its foundation in this function of "experiential" notice. Indeed, the Massachusetts Supreme Court, speaking again through Mr. Justice Holmes, in Graham v. Badger, 164 Mass. 42, 47, used this language:

"Res ipsa loquitur—which is merely a short way of saying that, so far as the court can see, the jury from their experience as men of the world, may be warranted in thinking that an accident of this particular kind commonly does not happen except in consequence of negligence, and that, therefore, there is a presumption of fact, in the absence of explanation or other evidence which the jury believe, that it happened in consequence of negligence in this case. Presumptions of fact, or those general propositions of experience which form the major premises of particular conclusions of this sort, usually are for the jury."

It has also been held that a jury is at liberty to consider their own knowledge of the instinct of self-preservation and its natural effect upon human conduct. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Beaver, 119 Ill. 34; Hopkinson v. Knapp Co., 92 Ia. 328. But while, as already stated, the jury may employ their general experience in judging of a witness' credibility (Jenney Electric Co. v. Branham, 145 Ind. 314), yet any undisclosed knowledge of particular facts bearing upon the character or veracity of a particular witness should not be considered by any one or more members of the jury. See Schmidt v. Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.), 529.

Provocation in Mitigation of Damages.

[New York Law Journal.]

This journal for Tuesday last contained a note of the case of Schoemaker v. Jackson in the Supreme Court of Iowa (July, 1905, 104 N. Y. 503), wherein it was held that one who has deliberately decided to assault another can not show in mitigation of damages a provocation to the assault. The court very properly said that "provocation to be admissible in mitigation of damages must be so recent and immediate as to induce a presumption that the violence was committed under the immediate influence of the passion thus wrongfully excited."

The recent case of Shockey v. McCauley, in the Court of Appeals of Maryland (June, 1905, 61 Atl. 583), lays down another obviously just principle with regard to the mitigation of damages by provocation. It was held that the fact that slanderous words were uttered under the influence of passion or excitement, or under circumstances of great provocation, can not be considered in mitigation of damages, unless the passion or provocation was attributable to plaintiff. The court uses the following langurge, which, although treating specifically of actions for defamation, would seem to be applicable generally whenever the question of mitigation is raised:

"The defendant's third prayer, to the effect that if 'the slanderous words were uttered under the influence of passion or excitement, or under circumstances of great provocation,' such facts could be considered in mitigation of damages, was rejected. The jury was not required to find, in addition, that the passion and excitement was produced by the immediate provocation of the appellee. It has frequently been held that the jury may, in estimating damages in cases of slander, take into account the excitement wrongfully provoked by the plaintiff. Newell on Slander and Libel, 2d ed., 907; Thomas v. Fischer, 71 Ill. 576; McClintock v. Crick, 4 Iowa, 453; Moore v. Clay, 24 Ala. 235: 60 Am. Dec. 461. It seems to be entirely reasonable to permit the defendant, in a suit for slander or libel, to offer evidence of provocation created by the improper conduct of the plaintiff. As Chancellor Walworth said, in Maynard v. Beardsley (7 Wend. 564; 22 Am. Dec. 595): 'The law makes allowances for the infirmities of human nature.' The weight of authority seems to be that the defendant may show, in mitigation of damages, that the words were uttered in heat of passion or under great excitement, whenever such condition has been caused by the wrongful and proximate act of the plaintiff. 18 A. and E. Enc. of Law, 1109.

Digitized by Google

"In Watts v. Fraser (7 Car. & Payne, 369), the defendant was allowed to offer evidence showing provocation, and this court, in Botelar v. Bell (1 Md. 173), referring to that case, said there was a vast deal of good sense in the view that 'a man who indulges in slanderous language towards another, when he has been provoked to it by a long series of abuse, is less culpable in the eye of the law and of morals than he who, from a fiendish dislike to his fellow man, or from a spirit of idle gossip, invents slander against his neighbor.' But there are no authorities that go so far as to support the contention that any passion or excitement or provocation, no matter how or by whom caused, can be given to the jury, and no sound reasons can be assigned for so holding. Certainly passion or provocation created by causes for which the plaintiff is not responsible should not furnish a mitigation of the grave offense of maliciously slandering the character of another."

According to the general policy of the law there might be more plausible ground for arguing that stress of passion for which the victim is in no wise responsible, operated as an extenuation of criminal offenses than for relying on a similar excuse in mitigation of damages recoverable in a civil action. Assuredly the fact that some other person had provoked the defendant to anger should not exonerate him from any liability for injury he has wrought to an entirely innocent plaintiff.

Prohibition of Marriage of Epileptics.

[New York Law Journal.]

The opinions in Gould v. Gould in the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut (August, 1905, 61 Atl., 604) are interesting upon a question of constitutional law which has been raised by comparatively recent legislation in several States. The Connecticut provision in question is as follows:

"No man or woman, either of whom is epileptic, imbecile, or feeble-minded, shall intermarry, or live together as husband and wife, when the woman is under 45 years of age. Any person violating or attempting to violate any of the provisions of this section shall be imprisoned in the State prison not less than three years."

Similar acts have been passed in Michigan, Minnesota, Kansas, and Ohio. They result from an agitation that has been carried on for many years looking to the prevention of reproduction by persons who are grievously diseased in mind or body. The following extract from the opinion by Judge Baldwin seems very clearly to uphold the constitutionality of such a law:

"Was the statute a valid act of legislation? It forbade the marriage of certain classes of persons under any circumstances. One of these, only, it is now necessary to consider—that of epileptics. The provisions of the act of 1895 were separable with respect to the different classes of persons with whom it deals, and, so far as this action is concerned, it is enough if it can be supported as to marriages contracted after its enactment by those in the condition of the defendant (Pub. Acts, 1895, p. 667, chap. 325). The constitution of this State (preamble and art. 1, sec. 1) guarantees to its people equality under the law in the rights to 'life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness' (State v. Conlon, 65 Conn. 478, 489–491, 33 Atl. 519, 31 L. R. A. 55, 48 Am. St. Rep. 227). One of these is the right to contract marriage, but it is a right that can only be exercised under such reasonable conditions as the legislature may see fit to impose. It is not possessed by those below a certain age. It is denied to those who stand within certain degrees of kinship. The mode of celebrating it is prescribed in strict and exclusive terms (Gen. St. 1902, sec. 4538). The universal prohibition in all civilized countries of marriages between near kindred proceeds in part from the established fact that the issue of such marriages are often, though by no means always, of an inferior type of physical or mental development.

That epilepsy is a disease of a peculiarly serious and revolting character, tending to weaken mental force, and often descending from parent to child, or entailing upon the offspring of the sufferer some other grave form of nervous malady, is a matter of common knowledge, of which courts will take judicial notice. State v. Main, 69 Conn. 123, 135, 37 Atl. 80, 36 L. R. A. 623, 61 Am. St. Rep. 30. One mode of guarding against the perpetuation of epilepsy obviously is to forbid sexual intercourse with those afflicted by it, and to preclude such opportunities for sexual intercourse as marriage furnishes. To impose such a restriction upon the right to contract marriage, if not intrinsically unreasonable, is no invasion of the equality of all men before the law, if it applies equally to all, under the same circumstances, who belong to a certain class of persons, which class can reasonably be regarded as one requiring special legislation, either for their protection or for the protection from them of the community at large. It can not be pronounced by the judiciary to be intrinsically unreasonable if it should be regarded as a determination by the general assembly that a law of this kind is necessary for the preservation of public health, and if there are substaintial grounds for believing that such determination is supported by the facts upon which it is apparent that it was based. Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 398, 18 Sup. Ct. 383, 42 L. Ed., 780; Bissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 192, 32 Atl. 348, 29 L. R. A. 251.

There can be no doubt as to the opinion of the general assembly, nor as to its resting on substantial foundations. The class of persons to whom the statute applies is not one arbitrarily formed to suit its purpose. It is certain and definite. It is a class capable of endangering the health of families and adding greatly to the sum of human suffering. Between the members of this class there is no discrimination, and the prohibitions of the statute cease to operate when, by the attainment of a certain age by one of those whom it affects, the occasion for the restriction is deemed to become less imperative. . . . Laws of this kind may be regarded as an expression of the conviction of modern society that disease is largely preventable by proper precautions, and that it is not unjust in certain cases to require the observation of these, even at the cost of narrowing what in former days was regarded as the proper domain of individual right. It follows that the statute in question was not invalid as respects marriages contracted by epileptics after it took effect."

Digitized by Google

The extract of the practical effect of legislation of this character yet remains to be seen. Undoubledly the mere presence of such an act on the statute book will deter a certain limited number of persons from contracting marriages of the prohibited kind. The tangible result of the Connecticut case was of comparatively slight significance. It was held under the general law of Connecticut that, while a marriage contracted in contravention of the statute was not void, yet as the fact that the defendant was an epileptic had been concealed from the plaintiff, she might be entitled to a divorce, or a decree of nullity, on the ground of fraudulent concealment. Such result is substantially no broader than the one reached by the New York Court of Appeals in Di Lorenzo v. Di Lorenzo, 174 N. Y. 467.

In such a case as the one reported and in other cases that may arise, where marriages are contracted with epileptics or between epileptics with mutual knowledge of the facts, the question of the enforcibility of the criminal penalty provided will have to be tested. Undoubtedly the legislation is salutary, and juries ought to convict and substantial terms of imprisonment should be imposed as punishment upon persons convicted. If at first the average jury be not disposed seriously to enforce the law, discussion and agitation should be continued until public sentiment sanctions and demands it.

Direction to Executor to Erect Monument.

[New York Law Journal.]

In re Koppicus' Estate in the Court of Appeals, Third District of California (May, 1905, 81 Pac. 732), an unusual question was passed on, as we think correctly.

It was held that where testatrix's will directed that she be buried in a certain cemetery and that a monument should be erected over her grave, and she was buried there with the knowledge and consent of her husband, and the body remained so buried for over a year, but, after a petition was filed asking a sale of real estate for the purpose of raising funds to erect the monument, the husband caused the remains to be cremated, and the ashes were not returned to the grave, the executor was, nevertheless, obliged to erect a monument on the spot where testatrix had been buried. The court said in part:

"It is contended by the appellant that the testatrix, by the direction in her will, attempted to dispose of her dead body. But, supposing she did so intend, her intention was carried into execution, not against the wish of her husband, who would have the right to dispose of it himself, but it was with his knowledge and consent that the body was buried in the Georgetown Cemetery. The case is unique, and we have failed to find any case similar in any of the books of reports. The husband allowed the said body of his wife to remain where it had been buried for over a year, and made no move toward removing and cremating it until after the petition was filed by which the court was asked to direct a sale for the purpose of raising funds with which to erect the monument. We think the court was committing no error when it said that her grave was located and established in the Georgetown Cemetery, and that when, a year later, the husband removed the remains from the grave and had them cremated, the establishment and location of the grave was not changed so as to defeat the direction of the testatrix; that, for all purposes of the will and the duty of the executor, the grave remained the same, and for all purposes of this case became a certain, fixed, and definite place, a grave over which the executor must erect a monument, as contemplated in the will."

It may be suggested in addition to what the court has said that commemorative monuments are often erected at places other than where the remains of the subject of commemoration are buried, and that it was eminently proper to effectuate the testator's intention approximately and as far as possible, independently of whether her grave permanently remained where the monument was to be erected.

Liability of Landlord for Repairs in the Absence of Express Agreement.

[Canadian Law Review.]

The duties between landlord and tenant arise from contract, and it is more than fifty years since it was held in Gott v. Gandy, 2 E. & B. 845, that, in the absence of express agreement no obligation to do substantial repairs on notice will be implied from the relation of landlord and tenant. It is often the practice for landlords, in their own interest, and without assuming liability, to do external repairs, and attempts have from time to time been made to show that in particular circumstances the landlord is subject to some duty with regard to repairs, independently of any contract. In the case of Hargroves v. Hartopp, decided by the Divisional Court on the 23d of January last, the plaintiffs were tenants of a floor in a building of which the defendants were landlords. A rain-water gutter in the roof, the possession and control of which was retained by the defendants, became stopped up. Notice of the stoppage was given by the plaintiffs to the defendants, but the defendants neglected to have the gutter cleared out till after the lapse of four or five days from the receipt of the notice, and in the meantime the plaintiffs had suffered damage by reason of rain-water having found its way into their premises in consequence of the stoppage. It was argued, as might have been expected, that, in the absence of express agreement, the defendants were subject to no duty with regard to the repair of the gutter; that the negligence with which they were charged was an omission and not a commission; and that no cause of action was established. The Divisional Court declined to adopt this view, and held that the defendants were liable, on the ground that it must be implied from the fact that they kept the roof in their possession and the plaintiffs had no special privilege to go there, that they were responsible for not clearing the gutter after reasonable notice of its condition.

Digitized by Google

Burden of Proof in Case Passenger is Injured in Collision.

[Case and Comment.]

In Black v. Boston Elevated R. Co., 68 L. R. A. 799, occurs a statement which, on its face, appears to be so at variance with the ordinary understanding of the law upon the subject as to attract attention. A passenger on a street car, who was himself in the exercise of due care, was injured by a collision of the car with a team at a road crossing. He brought an action to recover for his injuries, and the court stated that "to recover the burden was on the plaintiff to prove that the collision was caused by the negligence of the defendant."

The opinion is quite widespread that when a passenger, being in the exercise of due care, is injured through the operation of the car, it is sufficient to warrant a recovery for him to show his injury. The broad statement of the court in the case referred to would seem to indicate that that rule did not apply in case the injury was caused by the act of the carrier combined with that of a stranger. The actual decision did not go quite to that extent, the court holding merely that no recovery could be had if the evidence, so far as it went, tended to show that the collision was due to the negligence of the stranger.

The case referred to is the subject of an annotation in which it is stated that it is believed that there is not an authority but which either holds or concedes that, in an action by a passenger for hire against the carrier, no success awaits the plaintiff until he has shown negligence on the part of the carrier, and that at the commencement of the trial of such an action the plaintiff assumes the burden of proving such negligence. As to whether that burden, by reason of proof made by the plaintiff, or of admissions by the defendant in his favor, is ever shifted to, or cast upon, the defendant; or whether it remains throughout the trial upon the plaintiff, is a question upon which the courts of the various jurisdictions would appear to differ. But it is intimated that the apparent difference between the courts is due to the use of language and terms which do not indicate exactly what the court meant to say. Most of the cases concede that when a plaintiff shows the injury, he raises a presumption of negligence on the part of the carrier, and some of the cases say that the effect of this is to cast or shift the burden of proof onto the carrier, while others hold that it remains upon the plaintiff throughout the trial.

The annotator suggests that where the court says that, after the presumption of defendant's negligence has arisen, the burden is thereafter on the carrier, an inspection of the context will disclose the fact that what it really meant to be understood to say is that, by means of the facts creating such presumption, the plaintiff has sustained or discharged the burden of proof, and thereby established a prima facie case which will entitle him to judgment in the absence of explanation or contradiction. It will thus be seen that there is in fact very little difference in the courts, and that the statement which attracted attention in the Black case may be construed to mean no more than that plaintiff must prove his case, but that he may be aided by the presumption of negligence, unless facts appear which destroy that presumption. The annotator concludes that the weight of authority would seem to be in favor of the theory that, when a passenger is injured under the circumstances shown in the Black case, the presumption of the carrier's negligence arises which will support an action, and which, unexplained or uncontradicted, will enable the plaintiff to recover. He states that there will not be found substantial variance between the cases upon the subject, and even of those cases which say that, once the presumption has arisen, the defendant must show affirmatively, must satisfy the jury of the absence of negligence, it may be regarded that what is intended by such statements is that, as the plaintiff, by aid of legal presumption, has make a prima facie case, it is incumbent upon the defendant to make such proof as will refute it in order to succeed. But he concludes that the position of those who hold that the onus probandi which rests at commencement with the one alleging the negligence of the carrier as the direct and proximate cause of the injury continues to be so during trial, is the more logical.

We can, therefore, conclude that the common opinion that the passenger makes his case when he shows the injury is not necessarily in conflict with the statement in the Black case that the burden of proving the carrier's negligence was upon him, since proof of the injury raises a presumption of negligence which, unexplained, will warrant a recovery; but in the Black case the plaintiff was defeated because additional circumstances were shown by plaintiff's own proof which neutralized the effect of the presumption, since they indicated that the negligence was caused by the stranger, in which case, of course, the carrier would not be liable.

Mistaken Identity.

"A Barrister" writes to the Pall Mall Gazette: Judges no less than juries are often impressed by hearing that the witness picked out the prisoner from a group of seven or eight persons without doubt or hesitation. Now it is plain that the weight to be attached to this evidence must vary greatly with the circumstances. Take the case of Beck. The defrauded women complained to the police and gave descriptions of the man who defrauded them. I think the commission ought to have asked to see these descriptions if they had been preserved, but there is little doubt that they stated that the swindler was an elderly man with a white moustache, who wore spectacles. If so, what weight should be attached to an identification which consisted of picking Beck out of seven or eight other men, none of whom had a white moustache or wore spectacles? The picking-out might impose on the jury, or even on a careless judge, but in reality the witness had Hobson's choice—that or nothing.

This entire picking-out system is wrong. It would be far better to make the men pass in single file before the witness. In that case an eager witness would sometimes identify an early comer before the real suspect appeared, while a more cautious witness might allow the entire number to pass while waiting for the right man to appear. Yet in both instances, if the eight or nine men were simultaneously present, the two witnesses might select the same man. Prepossession has much to do with the identification. If the witness is led to believe that the criminal will certainly be found among the batch presented to him, his task is reduced to picking out the person from among that batch who bears most resemblance to the criminal. And this prepossession may arise from other causes than information derived from the police. In the Beck case it is not at all unlikely that if the women had been closely questioned it would have been found that some of the witnesses were told by others that they had seen the man in custody and that he was the right man before they were allowed to see him; and they were very possibly also informed that he was not arrested by the police because they thought he answered the description of the swindler, but that he had been identified by a defrauded woman who met him in the street and gave him in charge to a constable.

Digitized by Google

While I think single file preferable to the present system, I think it might be better still if the witness were brought to see a batch of prisoners at each of three or four police stations, no hint being given beforehand as to the station at which the suspected person was in custody; and where there were several witnesses they should visit these stations in a different order. There would here again be the chance of a hasty witness fixing on the person at the first station who most resembled the culprit, while a witness of a different temperament would wait for the last station and then perhaps find nobody there who bore even a distant resemblance to the man who was wanted. Of course, careful notes should be made of what actually occurred on each such occasion. The police officer in charge should, I think, make and sign a contemporaneous note, allowing both the witness and the prisoner to see it at the time, the notes being subsequently produced at the trial.

Unfair Competition.

[New York Law Journal.]

In DeLong Hook & Eye Co. v. Francis Hook & Eye & Fastener Co., decided in the United States Circuit Court, W. D., New York, in June, 1905, 139 Fed. 146, it was held that where cards used by complainant and defendant, containing competing hooks and eyes, which were attached thereto by thread, were substantially the same in size, color, and form, and, although the words printed on defendant's card were different, the style, printing, spacing, etc., were made to simulate complainant's card as closely as possible, and defendant later simulated complainant's mode of fastening the invisible eyes to the card, though stitched in a different manner, defendant was guilty of unfair competition.

In Revere Rubber Co. v. Consolidated Hoof Pad Co., decided in the United States Circuit Court, S. D. New York (June, 1905, 139 Fed. 151), it appeared that complainant and defendant both manufactured rubber hoof pads so similar in appearance that a purchaser would hardly distinguish the one from the other, both being adapted and applied to the same use. The pads were sold in sharp competition; and there was evidence that defendant's pads were inferior to complainants, and were sold at a less price. Complainant's predecessor first began making the pads under the firm name of "Air Cushion Rubber Pad Company," and the pads became known as "Air Cushion Pads," and as "A. C. Pads." After complainant's pad had been patented defendant began the manufacture of its pads, on which it stamped the name "Air Cushion," and below used the words, "Consolidated Hoof Pad Co., 18 Vesey st., N. Y.," and filed and registered the letters "A. C." as a trade-mark. It was held that defendant's acts in thus imitating complainant's goods constituted unlawful competition, which complainant was entitled to restrain.

In the latter case the court also specifically held that "when one manufacturer or dealer has used certain letters as a trade name until his goods have come to be known and called for generally by that name, a competitor in the same business can not gain any right, superior or otherwise, by procuring such letters (or such name, if it be a name) to be registered under the trade-mark laws as his or its trade-mark. Such larceny as this is neither encouraged, sanctioned, nor legalized. Glencove Mfg. Co. v. Ludeling, C. C., 22 Fed. 823; Welsbach L. Co. v. Adam, C. C., 107 Fed. 463; Brower v. Boulton, 58 Fed. 888, 7 C. C. A. 567."

These decisions are cited, not because they involve anything in the nature of legal novelty, but merely because they were in two of the most recent cases of a class constantly passing through the courts. A few years ago Judge Lacombe, in deciding an unfair competition case, used some satirical language that aptly applies to a large proportion of the litigations of this character. He said, in effect, that, as the defendant claimed that he had used every effort to avoid simulation of the appearance of the complainant's goods, packages, etc., it would be well if defendant would endeavor directly to imitate the complainant's business paraphernalia, because in that event he might succeed in making the merchandise of the respective parties distinguishable. There has lately been much discussion of business immorality on a large scale by persons acting in a trust capacity. Another phase of the same immoral tendency is exhibited in the constant succession of cases in which obviously the defendant has imitated another person's business appliances closely enough to hope to deceive the public, yet not so closely as not to hope to escape legal intervention. It is to be said that the courts are quick to penetrate specious pretenses and grant relief to persons whose rights are substantially invaded.

The right of a tenant to cut for firewood trees planted to meet some special purpose of the landlord, or to cut trees growing in their native state, is denied in Anderson v. Cowan (Iowa), 68 L. R. A. 641, unless they are such as are customarily cut down for that purpose. A note to this case collates the other authorities on right of tenant to cut wood for fires or fences.

Digitized by Google

Architect's Plans.

We shall probably hear no more of the question whether an architect who has been retained to prepare plans and drawings for a building is entitled to retain these plans and drawings after he has recovered his proper remuneration. In Gibbon v. Pease, an appeal from a judgment of Ridley, J., was brought recently before the Court of Appeal. The action was by a building owner to recover from an architect plans, specifications, and other documents which he had prepared on behalf of the building owner. The defense was that there was a custom in the profession under which the defendant was entitled to retain the plans. At the trial it was proposed to call a large body of witnesses to give evidence of this custom, but the learned judge refused to receive the evidence, and directed a verdict for the plaintiff. There has always been a strong disinclination among architects to hand over the plans and drawings which they have prepared to their employer or to another architect. So far back as the year 1870, the claim to retain them was insisted upon in the document called the Professional Practice as to the Charges of Architects, published by the Royal Institute of British Architects, and it was also raised in the case of Ebdy v. McGowan, which came before the Court of Exchequer in that year.

In that case the plaintiff had been employed to prepare plans and get tenders for a vicarage, and it was provided that his charges were to be on a lower scale if no invitations for tenders were issued. The plans were prepared but the defendant decided not to proceed with the work, and asked for the plans on payment of what was due. The plaintiff declined to give them up, relying upon a custom among architects to retain the plans if the work was not proceeded with. The court of exchequer held that this custom, even if proved, was unreasonable, Bramwell, B., saying that it was contrary to reason, good sense, and justice that the architect should retain the plans for which he had been paid. Ebdy v. McGowan was not reported in the Law Reports, the point being probably thought too clear for a report, but the claim continued to be made, though, from a practical point of view, there is little to recommend it. It seems only reasonable that the plans, as records of the construction of a building, should pass into the custody of the owner. Without the plans and drawings there might be great difficulty in tracing the mechanism of such things as house drains, chimney flues, and other arrangements which are not readily accessible. We believe that Mr. Ayrton, as first commissioner of public works, claimed the drawings of the houses of Parliament from the son of the architect, and recovered them. In Gibbon v. Pease, the architect could only contend that it was the essence of contract that certain work should be done, and not that certain things should be sold. But this argument would support an artist who had painted a portrait and received his price in refusing to give it up. The court was clearly of opinion that the true effect of the contract was that the plans belonged to the building owner, and the architect must in future be satisfied with a copy of them.—Solicitors' Journal.

Adverse Possession—Abandonment.

[Central Law Journal.]

A purchaser located a certain tract of land, cleared, fenced, and planted it in fruit trees, etc. He continued to so occupy it for about nine years, when he procured a survey to be made, which showed that the boundaries of the land as located extended over the land of adjacent owners. He then improved the land with reference to the new survey, and removed the improvements from the strip outside the boundaries. Two years later he placed a house on the strip. Upon the above state of facts the Supreme Court of Washington, in the case of Noyes v. Douglass, 81 Pac. Rep. 724, held that the claimant did not acquire by adverse possession of the strip outside the boundaries fixed by the survey, and that there was an abandonment of the strip outside of the boundaries fixed by the survey within the statutory period of ten years fixed for acquiring land by adverse possession. This is in pursuance of the decisions of the Washington court in the cases of Suksdorf v. Humphrey, 36 Wash. 1, 77 Pac. Rep. 1071, and Wilcox v. Smith (Wash.), 80 Pac. Rep. 803, where the rule is stated as follows: "If one by mistake inclose the land of another, and claim it as his own, his actual possession will work a disseisure; but if, ignorant of the boundary line, he makes a mistake in laying his fence, making no claim, however, to the lands up to the fence, but only to the true line as it may be subsequently ascertained, and it turns out that he has inclosed the lands of the adjoining proprietor, his possession of the land is not adverse."

This is, unquestionably, good sense. In the case of Murray v. Romine (Neb.), 82 N. W. Rep. 318, the court held that where defendant's grantor held possession of a piece of land several years without color of title, pasturing and partly fencing it, and then transferring it to defendant, who occupied it by pasturing cattle, cutting hay, and building additional fences, and such possession continued for more than ten years, that it constituted a right to title by adverse possession. The distinction between the above and the principal case is that in the principal case there was evidence of an abandonment, while there was an open, notorious, continuous, and adverse possession without interruption, with acts of ownership in the latter case. These cases seem often difficult to determine, and in the principal case the nisi prius judge's opinion was reversed. We presume he was influenced by the opinion of the Washington Supreme Court in the case of Flint v. Lang, 12 Wash. 342, 41 Pac. Rep. 49, where a purchaser of a city lot built a fence around three sides of it (the land being inaccessible from the fourth side on account of the roughness of the ground), cleared it of brush and timber, a considerable quantity of which was on it and the surrounding lots, and planted shrubbery thereon. It was held sufficient to constitute a good title, while in the case of Carroll v. Gillion, 33 Ga. 539, it was held that the possession of land was not sufficiently open and notorious to extend an inclosure on adjoining land over the line of another lot some 10 or 15 feet wide, and taking in such inclosure a strip of land of that width and running half across the lot under a claim of title. Nor was it considered sufficient in the case of Royall v. Lisle, 15 Ga. 545, 60 Am. Dec. 712, where a cow pen was built on the boundary line separating two lots of land, and immediately contiguous to defendant's land, occasionally felling trees and permitting cattle to range over the uncultivated land. There is no end to the cases on this subject. We have cited some of those which encroach on the limits.

Digitized by Google

Evidence—Evidence of Handwriting—Testing Witness by Writings Only Partially Disclosed.

In an action upon a promissory note, after denying the genuineness of the maker's signature, a non-expert witness was shown documents, apparently already in evidence, so covered as to leave visible only the signatures, and was asked whether the latter were genuine. Held, that the witness is not entitled to see the entire document before expressing an opinion. Groff v. Groff, 209 Pa. St. 603.

A witness to handwriting, whether expert or not, may on cross-examination be tested by writings which are properly in evidence or are admitted by the parties or the witness to be genuine. Whether he may be questioned as to writings not already in evidence is in conflict. Where the handwriting of an instrument is disputed, it has been held not error to require an expert to be shown the entire document. West v. State, 22 N. J. Law, 212, 240. The opposite result has been reached in the case of expert or non-expert witnesses examined as to signatures. Browh v. Woodward, 75 Conn. 261; Hoag v. Wright, 174 N. Y. 36; contra, Insurance Co. v. Throop, 22 Mich. 146.

If the signature only is disputed and the witness' knowledge is not limited to the alleged author's signature on a particular class of documents, the practice employed in the principal case seems unobjectionable. Generally, the question should rest with the discretion of the trial judge. It should be noticed that the decision of the precise question under discussion should not vary whether or not the court is one of those which allow witnesses to be tested by documents extrinsic to the issue.—Harvard Law Review.

That the contents of an extrinsic document can not be incorporated into a will by a clause stating that a sum was given in trust, "for the purpose set forth in the sealed letter, which will be found with the will," is declared in Bryan's Appeal (Conn.), 68 L. R. A. 353, where the will contains no clear, explicit, and unambiguous reference to a specific document as the one intended. The other authorities on incorporation of extrinsic document into will are considered in a note to this case.

The enforcement of the penalty of forfeiture of interest, imposed by a will upon a legatee who attempts to contest the instrument, is denied in Re Friend (Pa.), 68 L. R. A. 447, where it clearly appears that the contest to have the will set aside was justified under the circumstances, and was not the mere vexatious act of a disappointed beneficiary. A note to this case reviews the other authorities on effect of provision in will that any beneficiary who contests the instrument shall forfeit his interest.

Defective Machinery—Negligence.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota held, in the case of Shalgren v. Red Cliff Lumber Company, that where an employee complained to his employer of a defective condition of machinery, and the employer promised to correct such defect and directed the employee to continue his work until the repairs could be made, and the employee, in reliance upon such promise, continued to work with the defective instrumentality without harm for a period of ten days, the danger was not so great nor the risk so imminent as to impose upon him as a matter of law the assumption of the risk involved. In this case it appeared that the plaintiff's hand was caught in the shavings pocket of a shavings baler and there crushed by its advancing packer bar. It was alleged that the loose roller over which the bar passed was worn off from its cylindrical form; that thereby a plate which passed over the bar as it advanced was made to jump up and catch the plaintiff's hand while down in the pocket to adjust the board used to evenly apply the impact of the bar against the shavings. There was a conflict of evidence as to whether or not such irregular motion could have been produced by the defective or loose roller, and the court held that this question, as well as one as to whether the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, was properly presented to the jury.

To permit an administrator to bring an action in forma pauperis for the alleged negligent killing of his intestate, it is held, in Christian v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. (N. C.), 68 L. R. A. 418, that he need not show personal inability to give the required bond, or make the necessary deposit, but that it is sufficient if he shows such inability on behalf of the estate and those for whose benefit the suit is really brought. The other cases on the right of executor or administrator to sue, defend, or appeal in forma pauperis are considered in a note to this case.

A judgment against the principal on a promissory note is held, in Nelson v. Webster (Nebr.), 68 L. R. A. 513, not to be extinguished by its payment by the surety, who takes an assignment thereof to himself for the purpose of enforcing it against his principal, and the surety is held to be entitled to collect it by issue of execution against the principal. An extensive note to this case reviews all the other authorities on extinction of judgments against principal by sureties' payment.

The right to set aside a provision by which testator placed property intended for the benefit of his son in trust, and to turn the property over to the son, upon evidence that at the time the trust was established the son was partially paralyzed, and testator feared he would become mentally incapacitated, but that in fact he did not become so, and that his health had become so far restored that he was perfectly competent to manage his estate, is denied in Carpenter v. Sturgeon (Ky.), 68 L. R. A. 637.

Digitized by Google

One on trial for murder perpetrated in carrying out a conspiracy to rob is held, in People v. Lawrence (Cal.), 68 L. R. A. 193, to have no right to object to the use of the language, "even if he did not intend to take life, and regretted that it was done," in an instruction that he was guilty of murder if one of the party killed a person in carrying out the conspiracy. The other authorities on homicide in carrying out unlawful conspiracy are collated in a note to this case.

Failure of police officers having charge of the holder of an accident insurance policy to protect him from assaults by other persons is held, in Jarnagin v. Travelers' Protective Asso. (C. C. A. 6th C.), 68 L. R. A. 499, not to take his killing by them out of a provision in the policy that no recovery can be had upon it in case of death from intentional injuries inflicted by insured or any other person.

The right to the use of steam from the landlord's plant to heat water and warming tables is held, in Slack v. Knox (Ill.), 68 L. R. A. 606, not to pass to the lessee under a renewal lease which does not mention it, where the first lease was under seal, and the right claimed was acquired under an oral contract made for a separate consideration after the lease was executed.

The liability of a master for the negligence of his foreman in designating from among several competent employees a helper for another servant, merely because he was not as competent as one who might have been designated, and who was asked for to assist on the particular job, is denied in Hilton v. Fitchburg R. Co. (N. H.), 68 L. R. A. 428.

That equity will raise a trust by construction is declared in Stahl v. Stahl (Ill.), 68 L. R. A. 617, where a mother, ill in bed, at the solicitation of her children, conveys her property to one of them upon his agreeing to hold it for the benefit of all, to avoid the expense of distributing it through the courts, and he, without consideration, conveys it to another child with notice.

A remainderman is held, in Roby v. Newton (Ga.), 68 L. R. A. 601, to be entitled to the forfeiture of the life tenant's interest because of waste only when it appears that there has been both permissive and voluntary waste by the tenant, or one for whom he was responsible, and that the voluntary waste was committed wantonly.

Offering a worthless bill in satisfaction of an obligation, with a request for change, is held, in Com. v. Beckett (Ky.), 68 L. R. A. 638, to be within a statute providing for the punishment of anyone who, by false token, with intent to commit a fraud, obtains money or property, although it is not expressly stated that the bill is a good one.

An exception in favor of those who can show that no practicable device exists which will prevent the nuisance when applied to their buildings, is held, in State v. Tower (Mo.), 68 L. R. A. 402, not to render unconstitutional a statute making the emission of dense smoke into the air a penal offense.

The right of the courts to consider the adequacy of the provision for an unborn child to save a will from revocation by his birth is denied in Re Newlin (Pa.), 68 L. R. A. 464, if the provision for him shows that he was in fact in the testator's mind.

Authority to confess judgment contained in a power of attorney attached to a lease for any rent that may be due by the terms of the lease is held, in Weber v. Powers (Ill.), 68 L. R. A. 610, not to extend to rent accruing when the lessee is holding over after the expiration of the lease.

The drawing of a check for part of a fund on deposit, by one under the fear of impending death, and delivering it to the drawee with directions to forward it to the bank, accompanied by a statement that the amount is to become the property of the drawee in case of the drawer's death, is held, in re Collins (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 119, to be a sufficient gift causa mortis to prevent an escheat to the State.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

TO LAWYERS.

You may learn by mail how to organize stock companies to exploit any kind of business or invention and finance them; how to sell their stock and bond issues; to raise capital for development purposes, and underwrite; guarantee same from loss of money invested therein, and act as registrar and transfer attorney thereof, for $25, including books. Address CORPORATION CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE, NEW YORK CITY. 41-lt

Digitized by Google

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Bernard P. Mimmick, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Catalina Juliana Mason Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10 day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. CASSIE MASON MYERS JULIAN-JAMES, 1602 20th st. N. W. Attest: TAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,185. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

J. J. Waters, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Stanley Pearce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of October, 1905. GEORGE PIMPER, 3245 M st. N. W.; HENRY F. KUNKEL, 806 20th st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,062. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

George F. Graham, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Columbus J. Eslin, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 8th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 9th day of October, 1905. BENJ. J. ESLIN, GEO. F. GRAHAM, by Geo. F. Graham, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,505. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Saml. Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Thomas Culhane, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of October, 1905. BRIDGET M. CULHANE, 921 N. J. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,199. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Legal Notices.

Lyon & Lyon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louise Lansburgh, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. GUSTAVE LANAHAM, 1018 Vt. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,211. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Eugene A. Jones, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Adolf Cluss, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of October, 1905. LILLIAN C. DAW, 2301 H st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,179. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Irvin B. Wright, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,195. Administration. 41-3t

Mason N. Richardson, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Ira T. Bryant et al. v. Jerome A. Johnson et al.
No. 24,729. Equity Docket No.—

The object of this suit is to subject lot 36, sq. 194, in the District of Columbia, to the claim of complainants as judgment creditors, and to divest defendants of all title and interest thereof. A copy of this order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks prior to the return day hereto. On motion of the complainant, it is this 10th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Robert H. Bundy, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise [Seal] the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 41-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys,

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Brison Norris, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. MARY E. NORRIS, 501 H. st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,207. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Albert E. Shoemaker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Richard Edwards, Deceased.
No. 13,213. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate and record of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Susan Edwards, it is ordered, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Sarah Wilkins, Alice Minor, and Garrit S. Edwards, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 41-3t

E. H. Thomas.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 48 and 52 Q street northeast, in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, being lots numbered one hundred and five (105) and one hundred and seven (107) in Francis A. Blundon's subdivision of lots in square numbered three, "West Eckington," as per plat recorded in liber county No. 11, folio 29, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, to Charles L. Selecman for the sum of seventy-five hundred ($7,500) dollars cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 6th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 6th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 41-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 909 H street northeast, Washington, D. C., being lot twenty (20) in Moses Kelley's subdivision of square nine hundred and thirty-four (934), as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in book W. B. M., page 353, to Paul Leverone for thirty-seven hundred and fifty ($3,750) dollars cash, less three (3) per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 3d day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 40-3t

Francis H. Stephen, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George T. Morgan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. JAMES A. KEMP, Police Headquarters. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,200. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams, Solicitors for Complainant

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Ernest L. Schmidt, Complainant, v. Ada G. Earhart Ross et al., Defendants. No. 25,522, Equity Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to sell certain property in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described as follows, and being, to wit: The lots 17, 18, 20, and 21, in Butler's subdivision of lots in square 226, also original lot 1 in square 252, together with the improvements thereon, and to distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and also to substitute a trustee pending any such sale. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ada G. Earhart Ross, Jessie Elizabeth Earhart McGuire, Virginia Butler Earhart Ferguson, Carter Earhart, and Lyttleton Reese, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 40-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, Deceased.
No. 13,193. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by William Holabird and Joseph Willard Preston, as executors, it is ordered this 4th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Agnes Theodosia von Konowsky, Mary Edna Preston, Julia Starr Preston, Joseph Willard Preston, Jr., and Henry Grant Preston, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

Alex. H. Bell, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Denney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. FANNIE E. CARTER, Nichols ave., Anacostia, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No 13,173. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Gustavo L. Roxer, Jr., late of Austria, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. F. WALTER BRANDENBURG, Fendall Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,133. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Robt. E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary Helen Rowland, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. ROBERT E. MATTINGLY, 472 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,167. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

A. Coulter Wells, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Buchanan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. MARY WEAVER, 1518 Que st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,154. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Hallam & Hallam, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Evalyn Doughty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. CAVOUR O. BOHRER, 113 C st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,906. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

P. J. Ryan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert Georgii, Deceased.
No. 13,162. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ignatius Nau, it is ordered this 2d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Max Georgii and Herrmann Georgii, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

George Francis Williams, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Maria W. Richards, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of September, 1905. CHARLES H. RICHARDS, 35 Hillside ave., Montclair, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,089. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Legal Notices.

M. A. Mess, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ottilie Aumann, Deceased.
No. 13,169. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Frank A. B. Wünnenberg, it is ordered this second day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Christian Aumann (a brother), Ottilie Aumann (a niece), and Walburga Aumann (a stepsister), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and New Yorker Staatszeitung once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t

Sheehy & Sheehy, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Thomas Murphy, Deceased.
No. 8356. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Catherine J. Murphy, it is ordered this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Murphy, Edward Murphy, and Thomas Murphy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t

F. P. Sheehy, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Michael Burke, Deceased.
Administration, No. 11,704.

Upon consideration of the report herein filed by Charles J. Springmann, executor of the last will and testament of Michael Burke, deceased, showing that he has sold at public auction to John W. Weitzel for twenty-five hundred ($2,500) dollars cash the real estate mentioned and described in the proceedings had in the above entitled matter, namely, lot numbered fourteen (14) in square numbered five hundred (500), improved by premises No. 495 L street southwest, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 4th day of November, 1905. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 40-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Millan & Smith, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Frank Waters et al., Complainants, v. Lavinia Waters et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,667. Docket 57.

Upon consideration of the report of W. W. Millan, trustee, herein filed, showing that he has sold the south forty-five (45) feet of original lot seventeen (17) in square eight hundred and fifty-nine (859) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles Specht, for four thousand five hundred dollars ($4,500), it is, this 28th day of September, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905. Provided copy of this order be published once in each of three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

O. B. Glason, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maine, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen J. Thompson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. HOSEA H. CARY, East Pittston, Me. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,186. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

John B. Larner, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,293.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law [Seal] Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.
sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Legal Notices.

McKenney & Flannery, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Caroline A. Baker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. NATHAN C. TWINING, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Dept. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,079. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Michael J. Keane, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Equity Court.
Mary C. Deery, Complainant, v. John T. Neumeyer et al., Defendants.
In Equity, No. 25,617.

Michael J. Keane, the trustee in the above entitled cause, having reported a sale at public auction of part of lot ten (10), in square five hundred and twelve (512), as more fully described in the bill of complaint filed herein, to R. Harrison Johnson, for the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty ($2,250) dollars, it is this 22d day of September, 1905, ordered that the said sale be confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 22d day of October, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Re- [Seal] porter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-3t

L. Cabell Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Wilson Gregory, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of September, 1905. FRANCES G. GREGORY, 2510 M st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,948. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Chas. L. Frailey, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Andrew Wylie, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. HORACE WYLIE, 1205 Vermont ave. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,174. Admn. [Seal.] 39-3t

Robert E. Mattingly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Margaret C. Mooney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1905. BETTIE LE PREUX, 1501 9th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,127. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Holding an Equity Court.

Terrence J. McMahon v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Charles Carter, Deceased.

Equity No. 25,554.

The object of this suit is to perfect the title of the complainant to lot numbered thirty-seven (37) in John M. Graham's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and fifty-two (252) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, as said subdivision is recorded in Liber H. D. C., at folio 184½, in the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. Upon motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, it is, this 27th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Charles Carter, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day of November, 1905; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published once a week for four (4) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said return date, it appearing to the court, upon good cause shown, based upon the bill and affidavit filed herein, that further publication is unnecessary. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 39-4t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Mary E. Letts, Deceased.

No. 13,143. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament and codicil of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by The Washington Loan and Trust Company, it is ordered this 27th day of September, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Mary E. Letts, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. [Seal] Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 39-3t

Philip Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Minnesota, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adelaide M. Shedd, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. FREDERICK G. STUTZ, 48 W. 3d st., St. Paul, Minn. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,151. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

W. C. Martin, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Reuben Taylor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of September, 1905. W. J. HOWARD, 100 Mass. ave. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,751. Administration. [Seal.] 39-3t

Legal Notices.

FOURTH INSERTION.

[Filed September 18, 1905.]

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 3 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. [Seal] A true copy. Test: J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-6t

SIXTH INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Gilbert J. Osterman et al. v. Robert E. Poole et al.

No. 25,518. Equity.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to subloits 108 to 114, inclusive, square 104, Washington, D. C. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Robert E. Poole, Susan Erwin, and Ann Council, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Martin Casner, of Martin Kershnor, of Margaret Freeman, of Charles W. Goldsborough, and of Charles Henry Goldsborough, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month for the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clk. au 11,18,25; sept. 8,22; oct. 13,27

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 42

Published by

THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY

Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - OCTOBER 20, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 657
COURT OF APPEALS OF NEW YORK:
Edmund Wright, respondent, v. Edward Hart, appellant 658
Notes of Interest 663
Legal Notices 666

DECISIONS BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Perjury; False Statement in Application for Civil Service Examination.

In Johnson v. United States, the appellant was convicted of perjury alleged to have consisted in making a false statement in an application to the Civil Service Commission for examination and appointment in the postal service. It appeared that Johnson had been employed in the Postoffice Department and had been discharged; but in his application he stated that he had never been separated from the Government service. The question involved was whether the oath administered to Johnson was authorized by any law of the United States. The Court of Appeals holds, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, that the law requiring applicants for examination to state under oath their legal residence included other statements required by the civil service regulations. The judgment of the trial court is therefore affirmed.

Police Regulations—Firing Revolver Within City Limits.

In District of Columbia v. Lewis, a judgment of the Police Court of the District was reversed. The defendant in error, a police officer, was charged with having, while off duty, fired his revolver within the city limits without a permit from the Superintendent of Police and in violation of the police regulations. The Police Court sustained a motion to quash the information on the ground that the regulation on which it was based was void, as being an unreasonable and illegal delegation of power. The Court of Appeals, however, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, upholds the validity of the regulation, and remands the case to the Police Court for trial.

MR. E. RICHARD SHIPP, for some years a well-known member of the bar of this District, has removed to Douglas, Wyo., where he will engage in the practice of his profession. Mr. Shipp is a lawyer of ability, and has achieved success as a teacher of law, having been identified with several of our best law schools. He has many friends in this District, who while they regret his removal from our midst, wish him abundant success in his new field, and are confident he will have it.

Constitutionality of Act Regulating Sales of Merchandise in Bulk.

We report in this issue an important and interesting decision of the Court of Appeals of New York, in the case of Wright v. Hart, in which the so-called vendor and vendee law of that State is declared unconstitutional. This law provides that in case of the sale of any part or the whole of a stock of merchandise, made otherwise than in the regular course of trade, the seller must, at least five days before it occurs, give notice to his creditors of the proposed sale. The case before the court was one in which the vendor sold his stock of clothing, store fixtures, and lease without, as was alleged, complying with the provisions of the law. The plaintiff, as trustee in bankruptcy, brought suit to recover the stock and the money value of the part which had been disposed of. On behalf of the defendant it was contended that the law was unconstitutional as violating both the Federal and State constitutions by interfering with the right of contract; that it interfered with the right of a man to acquire property as he chose, and that it discriminated between classes, in that it was confined in its operation to those engaged in mercantile pursuits and did not affect bankers, farmers, or other classes of people. The court declared against the validity of the law, but only by a close margin, the vote being four to three. The dissenting opinions will be reported in our next issue.

A similar statute for this District, enacted by Congress on April 28, 1904, has been the subject of much discussion by the members of the bar, and this decision of the Court of Appeals of New York will be read with interest. We are indebted to the courtesy of the New York Law Journal for the privilege of laying it before our readers.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of New York.

EDMUND WRIGHT, AS TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY OF W. C. LOFTUS & CO., BANKRUPT, RESPONDENT,

v.

EDWARD HART, APPELLANT.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW—SALES OF MERCHANDISE IN BULK—CHAPTER 528, LAWS OF 1902, HELD INVALID.

Chapter 528 of the Laws of 1902, which declares fraudulent and void as against creditors the sale of an entire stock of merchandise in bulk unless the various provisions of the statute are complied with, is unconstitutional because—

1. It deprives the vendor and the vendee of liberty and property without due process of law, by interfering with their power to contract; and
2. It deprives them of the equal protection of the laws, in that the provisions of the act are aimed at merchants only, and do not affect any other class of the community.

Decided October 3, 1905.

APPEAL from an order of the Appellate Division, First Department, affirming an interlocutory judgment of the special term overruling a demurrer to the complaint.

In November, 1903, a corporation, known as W. C. Loftus & Co., engaged in the retail clothing and tailoring business in the city of New York, sold to the defendant its entire stock, fixtures, and lease for a consideration of $22,953.86. Within a few days thereafter a petition in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings was filed against it, and the plaintiff was elected trustee thereunder. At the time of the sale referred to chapter 528 of the laws of 1902 was in force, and it provided that: "Section 1. A sale of any portion of a stock of merchandise other than in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business, or the sale of an entire stock of merchandise in bulk, shall be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the seller, unless the seller and purchaser shall at least five days before the sale make a full and detailed inventory showing the quantity, and, so far as possible, with the exercise of reasonable diligence, the cost price to the seller of each article to be included in the sale, and unless such purchaser shall at least five days before the sale, in good faith, make full explicit inquiry of the seller as to the name and place of residence or place of business of each and every creditor of the seller and the amount owing each creditor, and unless the purchaser shall at least five days before the sale in good faith notify or cause to be notified personally or by registered mail each of the seller's creditors of whom the purchaser has knowledge, or can with the exercise of reasonable diligence acquire knowledge of such proposed sale and of the stated cost price of merchandise to be sold, and of the price proposed to be paid therefor by the purchaser. The seller shall at least five days before such sales file a truthful answer in writing of each and all of said inquiries."

The plaintiff, as trustee in bankruptcy of the selling corporation, has brought this action to set aside the sale on the ground that it was made without complying with any of the provisions of the statute. The purchasing defendant interposes the demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action because the statute is unconstitutional. This claim of unconstitutionality is based (1) upon article 1, section 1, of our State constitution, which provides that "no member of this State shall be . . . deprived of any rights or privileges secured to any citizen thereof, unless by the law of the land or the judgment of his peers;" (2) upon article 1, section 6, of our State constitution, which provides that no person shall "be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," and (3) upon article 1 of the fourteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution, which provides that "no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Mr. Louis Marshall for appellant.

Mr. Abram I. Elkus for respondent.

WERNER, J.—Before proceeding to a critical view of the challenged statute it may be profitable to make a few pertinent though trite observations on the nature, construction, and effect of written constitutions. A written constitution is the fundamental expression of the sovereign will. Under our form of government that sovereign will resides in the people. A written constitution is not only the direct and basic expression of the sovereign will, but is the absolute rule of action and decision for all departments and offices of government in respect to all matters covered by it, and must control as it is written until it shall be changed by the authority that established it. It is true, as was said by Judge Cooley, that "the weaknesses of a written constitution are that it establishes iron rules which, when found inconvenient, are difficult of change; that it is often construed on technical principles of verbal criticism rather than in the light of great principles, and that it is likely to invade the domain of ordinary legislation instead of being restricted to fundamental rules." The logical corollary of the proposition that the constitution is the supreme law of the land is that the power to legislate is a purely delegated one, derived from the constitution and controlled by it. In the case at bar we are concerned with no squibbles of verbiage or technicalities of construction, but with the broad question whether an act of our legislature is repugnant to the "iron rule" of our Federal and State constitutions that no citizen shall be deprived of "life, liberty, or property," or be denied the "equal protection of the laws."

In the course of judicial interpretation, the words "liberty" and "property" as used in the constitutions, have naturally and properly been given their most comprehensive signification, so that they embrace every form and phase of individual right that is not necessarily taken away by some valid law for the general good. "The term 'liberty,' as protected by the constitution, is not cramped into a mere freedom from physical restraint of the person of the citizen, as by incarceration, but it is deemed to embrace the right of man to be free in the enjoyment of the faculties with which he has been endowed by his Creator, subject only to such restraints as are necessary for the common welfare" (People, &c., v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377). "All laws, therefore, which impair or trammel these rights, which limit one in his choice of a trade or profession or confine him to work or live in a specified locality or exclude him from his own house, or restrain his otherwise lawful movements (except as such laws may be passed in the exercise by the legislature of the police power), are infringments upon his fundamental rights of liberty, which are under constitutional protection" (In re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98). "'Liberty' . . . includes the right to acquire property, and that means and includes the right to make and enforce contracts" (State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578). The right to use, buy, and sell property is protected by the constitution, and "when the law annihiliates the value of property and strips it of its attributes by which alone it is distinguished as property, the owner is deprived of it according to the plainest interpretation and certainly within the constitutional provision intended expressly to shield personal rights from the exercise of arbitrary power" (Wynehamer v. People, &c., 13 N. Y. 378, 398; People ex rel. Mark. S. Instn. v. Otis, 90 N. Y. 48).

Digitized by Google

Let us now analyze the statute under scrutiny. Every sale (a) "of any portion of a stock of merchandise, other than in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business, or (b) the sale of an entire stock of merchandise in bulk, shall be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the seller, unless (1) the seller and purchaser shall, at least five days before the sale, (2) make a full and detailed inventory (3) showing the quantity, and, so far as possible with the exercise of reasonable diligence, (4) the cost price to the seller of each article to be included in the sale, and unless (5) such purchaser shall, at least five days before the sale, in good faith, make full, explicit inquiry of the seller as to the (6) name and place of residence or place of business of each and every creditor of the seller, and (7) the amount owing each creditor, and unless (8) the purchaser shall, at least five days before the sale, in good faith, (9) notify or cause to be notified personally or by registered mail each of the seller's creditors of whom the purchaser has knowledge, or can with the exercise of reasonable diligence acquire knowledge, of such proposed sale, and (10) of the stated cost price of merchandise to be sold, and (11) of the price to be paid therefor by the purchaser. (12) The seller shall, at least five days before such sale, file a truthful answer in writing of each and all of said inquiries."

No one will have the temerity to suggest that this drastic and cumbersome statute is not in restraint of the rights of "liberty" and "property," as those terms have been judicially declared to have been used in the Federal and State constitutions. It is contended, however, that the restraint which it imposes upon these rights is justifiable under that shibboleth of legislatures and courts known as the police power. Far be it from us to deny the existence of that power or to attempt to define its extent. It will be our effort, rather, to show that the statute under consideration is, in some particulars, so thoroughly unrelated to the probable object of its enactment, and in others so cumbersome, burdensome, unreasonable, and unworkable, as to violate every one of the constitutional provisions under which it is challenged. The rights of "liberty" and "property," as we have seen, are sacred and substantial rights guaranteed by the Federal and State constitutions. Any law that interferes with the right to make and enforce contracts affects both the liberty and property of the citizen. The right to sell and purchase merchandise in bulk is no less under the protection of the constitution than the right to sell and buy in the smallest possible quantities. Any legislative interference with either of these rights, that is clearly forbidden as to the other, can only be justified on the ground of public necessity, which is but another way of saying that it is for the general welfare. Such interference should not only be based upon public necessity, but it should be conservative, reasonable, and well adapted to the end sought to be attained. Until the 11th day of April, 1902, it was just as lawful in this State to sell any portion of a stock of merchandise, or the whole of such stock in bulk, as to sell the same goods piece by piece at retail. By the statute which went into operation on that day the sale of any stock of merchandise in bulk, or of any considerable portion thereof, was made unlawful as against the creditors of the seller, unless both seller and purchaser should do many things that were clearly and substantially restrictive of the right of contract as it had theretofore been enjoyed in respect of such property. This criticism of the statute is sought to be answered by the plea that the law was designed to correct a great public evil; that it was aimed at a class of merchants who have engaged in the fraudulent practice of obtaining merchandise on credit for the purpose of making hasty and secret sales thereof in bulk and then decamping with, or otherwise disposing of, the proceeds at the expense of their creditors. It may be conceded that this was the ostensible purpose of the statute, and that the evil complained of was one of substantial reality and magnitude, for which an efficacious remedy was much to be desired. But that does not meet the argument against the constitutionality of the statute. The question still remains whether the legislature has not overstepped the limits of its power by practically placing an embargo upon all sales of merchandise in bulk, under the guise of a statute ostensibly designed to prevent frauds in such sales. Beginning with the title of the statute, we observe that its object is "to regulate the sale of merchandise in bulk." If we give to the term "merchandise" its ordinary business signification there is no escape from the conclusion that the statute applies to merchants alone as distinguished from manufacturers, farmers, bankers, the members of the several professions, mechanics, etc. Under this construction of the law the merchant is prohibited from doing that which is permitted to all other men. Merchants comprise a comparatively small number of the community at large and, therefore, this would seem to be class legislation which denies to those affected by it the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. If the term "merchandise" is given a somewhat more liberal interpretation, so as to include finished manufactured products, the stocks of jobbers and wholesale merchants, the statute is still open to the criticism that it denies the equal protection of the laws to all citizens, becauses it imposes upon certain classes, such as manufacturers, jobbers, and wholesale merchants, burdens that are destructive of their legitimate business. It is common knowledge that in this age of large enterprises many merchants purchase the whole products of mills and factories. In the case of the jobber or the wholesale merchant these products are again sold in bulk, or in large but varying quantities. If the manufacturer, jobber, or wholesale merchant sell their entire stocks in bulk, the statute applies without regard to the question whether the sale is according to long-established custom, or in the regular course of trade. If there is a sale in bulk of less than the whole, then the validity of the sale is made dependent to some extent upon the question whether it is in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business. What is the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of such a seller's business? The manufacturer may dispose of his entire output to a single purchaser during a single year, or a series of years. Again, he may dispose of it in parcels to several purchasers. And yet again he may be compelled to rely upon a general market with purchasers from different quarters in varying quantities. On the 1st of January of a given year he may know to a certainty just how much he will produce and just where it will go. At the beginning of the next year he may not know what the morrow will bring forth. This is as true of the jobber and the wholesale merchant as of the manufacturer. And what is the net result? In the years when there is a single sale of the whole output, the statute applies without regard to the ordinary course of trade or the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business. In other years when the sales, although in bulk, are in smaller quantities, the application of the statute depends, not upon the honesty of the transaction, but upon the shadowy question whether it is in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual conduct of the seller's business. And all this is as applicable to the purchaser as to the seller, although the former may have not the remotest knowledge of the manner in which the business of the latter is carried on. There are other and more serious constitutional objections to this statute in so far as it may affect the manufacturer, the jobber, and the wholesale merchant, but as these objections militate against the statute in its relation to all classes of men, we shall consider them in their general bearing upon the "liberty" and "property" clauses of the two constitutions.

Digitized by Google

The statute, as we have seen, discriminates between the sales of entire stocks in bulk and sales of portions of such stocks. But it does not differentiate between sales that are honestly made and sales that are made with intent to defraud. The sale of an entire stock is declared to be fraudulent and void as against the seller's creditors, no matter how solvent he may be, unless all the petty and harassing details of the statute are observed. The sale of a lesser quantity, however, is interdicted by no such sweeping fiat so long as it is made in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual conduct of the seller's business, although made with a fraudulent intent. But this is not all. Both seller and purchaser shall, at least five days before the sale, make a full and detailed inventory. One inventory is not enough. There must be two, or at least one joined in by both. And they must be made, not when the sale has been consummated, but five days before. Could anything be devised that would more effectually paralyze sales of merchandise in bulk? Some simple illustrations will clearly outline the pernicious possibilities of this unique provision. A is the owner of a stock of goods which he is willing to sell, and which B is ready to purchase at a price agreed upon. Each may think he is making a good bargain. A is anxious to sell at once so that he may use the proceeds in making another purchase of advantage. B wants to close the sale at once because he has an immediate and profitable market for the goods. If either has to wait five days or longer, and particularly for the purpose of making an inventory involving great labor and expense, he may prefer to drop the whole matter. Suppose, however, that the work of taking an inventory is commenced, and during its progress the market price rises or falls, or that either the seller or the purchaser discovers that he has made a poor bargain because the inventory discloses a greater or less value than was in the minds of the parties when the price was fixed. In such a case either the party may refuse to go on with the inventory or to file it if it is finished, and the result is that the person who may feel aggrieved has no remedy, because the statute imposes no penalty for failure to complete or file an inventory, and there can be no valid sale until both of these things are done. And what must such an inventory contain? First, the quantity. That is usually and of itself entirely sufficient in the case of a sale in bulk. Second, the cost price to the seller of each article to be included in the sale, although the purchaser, one of the parties who must file an inventory, may have no means of knowing anything about the cost price to the seller. It is true that the latter feature of the inventory is only made necessary in so far as it is possible with the exercise of reasonable diligence. But the seller may have full knowledge on the subject, which he may decide not to disclose. The purchaser may know nothing about it, but his bargain can be annihilated by the seller's refusal to exercise the "due diligence" by which the information could be disclosed. Then, again, a purchaser may have a market for goods which he is willing to purchase at a specified price. This market he would lose if compelled to file a long and detailed inventory containing the cost price to the seller. And the inventory must be filed. While the statute does not designate the place of filing, it would be of no value unless in some place where the inventory would become public property. Such an inventory, moreover, is not only unnecessarily burdensome, but practically prohibitory of such sales. Not only the quantity of the goods sold, but the cost price of each article must be given in detail. This requires a disclosure of the very secrets that make sales in bulk a business possibility, and entails upon the prospective contractors many details that in a given case may require weeks or months, and that neither may care to go into. In the case of a sale of the whole or any part of the stock of a great department store, for instance, the cost price to the seller of every paper of pins or fine-tooth comb would have to be inventoried, although the producing cause of the sale might be based upon considerations that would utterly fail if such infinitesimal matters had to be taken into account.

Digitized by Google

The next requirement of the statute has to do with the purchaser alone. At least five days before the sale he must make full, explicit inquiry of the seller as to the name and place of residence or business of each of the seller's creditors, and of the amount owing to him, and, having done this, he must then notify or cause to be notified each of such creditors, personally or by registered letter, of the proposed sale and the stated cost price of the merchandise, as well as the price to be paid by the purchaser. In other words, the purchaser, who is under no legal or moral obligation to the seller's creditors, is not only required to obtain from the seller all these details concerning his creditors, but he must send to each one, no matter how great their number or how remote their places of residence or business, all the detailed information that is to be included in the inventory. Thus the inventory may have to be duplicated by the hundreds or thousands and sent to creditors scattered over all portions of the globe. It is true that this obligation rests upon the purchaser only to the extent that it can be fulfilled in the exercise of reasonable diligence, but this qualification emphasizes rather than mitigates the senseless and arbitrary command of the statute. And, finally, the seller shall, at least five days before such sale, file a truthful answer in writing to each and all of said inquiries. There is no intimation as to the place of filing, or as to what will happen if there is no filing. Neither are we informed as to the effect upon the purchaser of the seller's failure to tell the truth or to file his written answers. In the midst of such a mass of detail it is refreshing to feel that this trifle is left to the imagination.

Let us again emphasize the assertion that we do not question the power of the legislature to enact reasonable laws for the prevention of fraud and the protection of creditors. That this right falls within the general scope of the police power no one will deny. But the police power only begins where the Constitution ends. Broad and comprehensive as the police power concededly is, and incapable of precise definition or exact demarkation as we know it to be, it is never difficult to determine that its limits have been transcended when it is clear that the sacred domain of the Constitution has been trespassed upon. And when the exercise of the police power clearly infringes upon vested Constitutional rights, courts should not concern themselves with the probable purposes for which it is exercised, or the evils which it was designed to correct. First the constitution and then the police power. The statute under consideration sweeps away the Constitutional rights of liberty and property of a limited class of our citizens who are entitled to the equal protection of the laws with all other citizens. It invades the right of liberty because it arbitrarily and unnecessarily denies the right of a specified class of citizens to contract for bargain and sell a particular kind of property. It violates the constitution in prohibiting all sales of merchandise in bulk, whether honest or dishonest, except upon conditions that are harsh, drastic, unreasonable, and unnecessary in so far as they do not tend to effectuate the objects for which such a statute may properly be enacted. It ignores the constitutional guaranty relating to property rights, because it so restricts the right of contract as to deprive property of its characteristics as such.

It is urged, however, that the impositions of this statute are more nominal than real since a seller has only to pay his debts in order to make his sale valid. The argument, so far from supporting the statute, really serves to disclose one of its most sweeping and unreasonable features. If the statute affected none but insolvent sellers, or related merely to debts due, or gave to purchase price creditors an equitable lien for their respective shares of the proceeds of a proposed sale, or if instead of interdicting in advance a sale in bulk, it had made some reasonable provision for impounding the proceeds of sale until the seller's legal obligations could be judicially ascertained, there might be some force in the suggestion. But what is the fact? The act embraces all sales of entire stocks of merchandise in bulk. It covers every sale of any part of a stock not made in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business. It requires notice to be given to all the seller's creditors, whether their debts are due or not, that a sale is contemplated. It requires this notice to be given five days in advance of a sale. It requires observance of every one of its details or payment of every creditor. What is the practical effect? A seller who is abundantly able to pay his debts is compelled by law to do so before he can dispose of a part of his possessions. He must pay his debts whether they are due or not. He must pay them whether they are in dispute or not. He must pay creditors who have no legal, equitable, or moral claim upon the particular property or its proceeds. And if he depends upon the proceeds of the particular sale to pay his debts, he must pay them at least five days before he gets the money. Thus an intending seller is under the necessity of practically obtaining the consent of his creditors before he can make a sale. He must pay a claim that may be in dispute, right or wrong, and he must take what equitably belongs to the creditor for purchase price and pay it to general creditors, or he can be "held up." This may not be a literal taking of property without due process of law, but it is an annihilation of its value, and a destruction of its attributes, so that while the owner is permitted to retain his property in name he is deprived of its essence and substance. Wynehamer v. People, etc., supra.

Digitized by Google

It is said that similar statutes, some of them much more drastic, have been adopted in twenty different States or jurisdictions. Twenty wrongs can never make one right. There is, moreover, a singular, not to say suspicious, coincidence in the time and substance of all this legislation. We are indebted to our brother Bartlett for the suggestion that more than half of these statutes were enacted in 1903 and 1904, and nearly all of them since 1900. Statutes that are passed pro bono publico rarely sweep the country with such irresistible momentum, while much fantastic legislation has resulted from organized crusades upon legislatures by the advocates and supporters of special classes. This statute "is evidently of that kind which has been so frequent of late, a kind which is meant to protect some class in the community against the fair, free, and full competition of some other class, the members of the former class thinking it impossible to hold their own against such competition, and, therefore, flying to the legislature to secure some enactment which shall operate favorably to them or unfavorably to their competitors." Peckham, J., in People, etc., v. Gilson, 109 N. Y. 389.

If we have succeeded in making our position plain it will be unnecessary to answer in detail that portion of Judge Vann's very learned and able opinion in which he illustrates the manifold purposes for which the police power has been exercised by legislatures and upheld by courts. The existence of the power is not denied. Its limits can not be accurately demarked. The well-beaten paths which it has pursued time out of mind contain no guide board to the new and untrodden field sought to be explored by this particular phase of paternal legislation. Therefore, old cases and old laws are of little help except as they expound general principles applicable to special conditions. In its final analysis the question is one of power in this particular case. We think that power has been transcended. "To justify the State in interposing its authority in behalf of the public it must appear, first, that the interests of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, require such interference, and second, that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose and not unduly oppressive upon individuals. The legislature may not, under the guise of protecting public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business, or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations" (Colon v. Lisk, 153 N. Y. 188; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 137). It can not be reiterated too often that the police power must be exercised within its proper sphere, and by appropriate methods. Whenever a statute arbitrarily strikes down private rights, invades personal freedom, or confiscates or destroys private property, it is repugnant to the constitution and should not be permitted to stand, no matter how laudable its purpose or beneficial its effect.

Owing to the length of this opinion we refrain from discussing the cases decided in other States upon similar statutes except to say that those which have been upheld in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Tennessee, and Washington are far less drastic than our own, in that they either except from their operation all sales by executors, administrators, receivers, etc., or provide that sales of merchandise in bulk shall only be presumptively void if the statutory requirements are not observed; or, as in Connecticut, that one day after the sale there shall be filed a descriptive writing duly signed and acknowledged. In Ohio and Utah, where such legislation was condemned by the courts, it was in some respects even more far-reaching and burdensome than here.

The judgment of the special term and appellate division should be reversed and judgment ordered sustaining defendant's demurrer, with costs in all the courts. Questions certified answered in the negative.

Haight, J.—I concur in the opinion of Werner, J. He has called attention to the defects in the statute in not specifying the place where the inquiries shall be filed. But in addition thereto the notice to creditors provided for means non-resident as well as resident creditors. The notice to creditors must be served either personally or by registered mail at least five days before the sale. The notice would be of no benefit unless it was received before the sale was completed and in time for the creditor to take action in reference thereto. The statute has, therefore, fixed the period of five days. If the notice s served personally it must be five days before sale. If by registered mail, the statute doubtless means the same thing; that is, the notice should be received at least five days before the sale. In other words, if the service is by registered mail, the posting must take place a sufficient time in advance so that the creditor may receive it at least five days before the sale is completed. Steinhard v. Bingham, 182 N. Y.—. In case of creditors so far removed as to be beyond the reach of the registered mail, personal service only would answer the requirements of the statute. Such a notice in many cases might be impossible, or if it could be given, it might involve not only so much time but so much expense as to render the purchase profitless and operate to defeat the sale. In case the sale is very large, as for instance, that of a large department store, weeks must elapse after the parties have made their agreement before they can complete the same. An inventory of every article must be made and the cost price of each article must be stated. This necessarily would consume considerable time. The inventory, no matter how extensive or bulky, must be duplicated for each creditor, for the statute could only be complied with by the serving of a copy of such inventory upon each creditor, containing the cost price of each article and the amount to be paid under the proposed agreement of purchase. This must be served personally or by registered mail five days before the sale. Again, what is the necessity of such a notice? It can have but one purpose. It gives to every creditor an inventory of every article proposed to be sold, the cost price thereof and the amount that the purchaser proposed to pay, so that any creditor or a combination of creditors may step in within the five days allowed by the statute and bid a greater sum for the goods offered and thus defeat the sale contemplated and avoid the contract made between the seller and the purchaser, although they both may have acted in good faith and without any intention of defrauding creditors. It is doubtless true that there have been many sales of the goods of merchants made for the purpose of defrauding creditors, and that a statute imposing reasonable restrictions upon such sales ought to be enacted. But I think that the statute under consideration imposes an unnecessary and an unreasonable restriction upon the power of persons to contract, and that merchants could not in many instances comply with its requirements, and that it, in effect, prohibits parties from contracting for the purchase and sale of a stock of goods even though both parties act in the best of faith and without any intention of defrauding creditors.

Digitized by Google

[Dissenting opinions in next issue.]

Fidelity Bonds—Conditions—Notice of Default—Scope of Bond.

In Fidelity and Casualty Co. of New York v. Bank of Timmonsville, decided by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, Fourth Circuit, in May, 1905, 139 Fed. 101, it was held that where a fidelity bond provided that any "willful misstatement" or suppression of fact by the employer in his statement or declaration concerning the employed, should render the bond void from the beginning, the phrase "willful misstatement" was intended to mean any material false statement made with knowledge of its falsity, voluntarily, and not inadvertantly, and hence an instruction that the bond was not avoided unless the misstatements were made "with intent to secure renewals of the bond" was erroneous.

It was further held that where a fidelity bond provided that any willful misstatement or suppression of fact by the employer concerning the employed should render the bond void, a mere belief on the part of the employer's president that it was immaterial whether the questions asked were answered truly or not did not render such answers immaterial.

It appeared that a bank cashier was given a leave of absence on August 17, 1901, which expired on August 22d. His failure to return did not arouse suspicion until August 26, when an examination of his books was made, which disclosed his defalcation. His sureties were then telegraphed, either on the 26th or 27th, whereupon each sent a representative, who participated in the examination of the books during the latter part of August, and on September 2 a formal notification of the cashier's flight and defalcation was sent to defendant surety company. It was held that whether defendant was given "immediate" notice of the defalcation, as required by the fidelity bond, was for the jury.

It was also decided that where a bank cashier's fidelity bond, given March 7, 1901, covered only acts and defaults committed during its currency and within twelve months next before the date of the discovery of the act or default on which the claim was based, it did not cover an alleged larceny of silver coin claimed to have been deposited May 19, 1900, but not found in the bank's vaults when the cashier absconded in August, 1901, there being no evidence as to when the same was taken.

Bankruptcy—Right to Set-off Damages for Tort Denied.

In the bankruptcy proceeding of In re Becker Bros., in the U. S. District Court for the Middle District of Pennsylvania (139 Fed. 366), it is held that Bankruptcy Act, July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 68a (30 Stat. 565), providing for a set-off of mutual debts or mutual credits, does not authorize the setting off against a claim of the landlord for rent under a lease to the bankrupt of an unliquidated claim for damages in favor of the bankrupt, sounding in tort, and arising independently of the contract of lease. The case was heard on exceptions by the bankrupt to the refusal of the referee to allow a claim for such damages by way of set-off to the claim of the landlord for rent. In overruling the exceptions, Archbald, district judge, said:

Attempt is made in this case to set off against a claim for rent, which has been duly proved, a counterclaim for damages against the landlord for negligently allowing water to come in upon the premises leased by the bankrupts, by which the bowling alleys which they had constructed there were injured. The referee has found in favor of the landlord on the merits, but he has also decided that the claim for damages is not, in any event, available as an offset, being unliquidated, and arising out of a tort, and, as the latter ruling effectually disposes of the case, and must unquestionably be sustained, it is not necessary to consider the other.

If the case were to go by the State law, it is clear that no such set-off or counter claim would be maintainable. It does not arise out of any duty imposed on the landlord by that relation, or the covenants of the lease, but is admittedly based on the larger obligation outside of that, by which, as it is said, he was bound to do or suffer no act by which the tenants should be injured or interfered with in the enjoyment of the premises demised. But it was expressly held in Groetzinger v. Latimer, 146 Pa. 628, 23 Atl. 393, following a number of preceding cases, that matters sounding in tort, and arising out of a different transaction, can not be used as a set-off against an unrelated claim. In that case, to make the analogy complete, the plaintiffs sued for rent; and the defendants put in a counter claim for damages sustained by reason of the unlawful seizure of their property on landlord's warrant, and the consequent interference with and injury to their business. But it was held that this, in effect, was a tort, which would form the subject of an action ex delicto, and could not, therefore, be brought in as a set-off.

The case is to be disposed of, however, by a reference to the bankruptcy act, and the question is as to what is there provided. By section 68 (act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 565, U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3450, it is declared:

"(a) In all cases of mutual debts or mutual credits between the estate of a bankrupt and a creditor the account shall be stated and one debt shall be set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid."

Also that:

"(b) A set-off or counter claim shall not be allowed in favor of any debtor of the bankrupt which is not provable against the estate."

Digitized by Google

The bankruptcy act of 1867 had a substantially similar provision, which was itself taken from the earlier English acts, under which it was decided that by "mutual credits" are meant such as must, in their nature, terminate in debts, or a debt be in the contemplation of the parties. Ross. v. Hart, 8 Taunt. 499, 2 Smith's Lead Cases, 309; Naoroji v. Bank of India, L. R. 3 C. P. 444; Libby v. Hopkins, 104 U. S. 303, 26 L. Ed. 769. It was accordingly held in the latter case that in a suit by an assignee in bankruptcy to recover money sent to the defendants by the bankrupt in trust to be applied to a specific purpose, a debt due by the bankrupt to the defendants could not be set off. It is true that in Booth v. Hutchinson, L. R., 15 Eq. 30, a tenant, from whom rent was due to the bankrupt estate, was held entitled to set off damages arising out of a breach of the lease. And in Peat v. Jones, 8 Q. B. Div. 147, and Jacob v. Kipping, 9 Q. B. Div. 113, in an action to recover the unpaid balance due on goods contracted to be sold and delivered by the bankrupt, damages accruing in the one case from the non-delivery of a part of the goods, and in the other from fraudulent representations made in the course of the sale, were allowed to come in. But these cases arose under the more recent English acts, in which the words "mutual dealings"—a much more comprehensive term than "mutual credits," appeared (although in Makehan v. Crow, 15 Com. Bench (N. S.) 47, a similar ruling was made under the prior law); and in Peat v. Jones, as well as in Jacob v. Kipping, it is pointed out that the damages sought to be set off grew directly out of a breach of the obligation involved in the contract of sale. That there was no intention of departing from the earlier construction by anything which is so decided is shown by Palmer v. Day (1895) 2 Q. B. 618, where it was said by Russell, C. J.:

"The section [of the English bankruptcy act relating to the subject of set-off], in its present shape, has been held applicable to all demands provable in bankruptcy, and so to include claims as well in respect of debts as of damages, liquidated or unliquidated, provided they arise out of contract. But whilst the right of set-off has been thus widely extended, it is still subject to the limitation that the 'dealings' must be such that, in the result, the account contemplated in the section can be taken in the way described. In other words, the dealings must be such as will end on each side in a money claim."

Consistently with this it was also held in Eberle Hotel v. Jonas, 12 Q. B. Div. 459, that where, in winding up proceedings, where the bankruptcy rule prevails, the liquidator of the company which is being wound up is entitled to a return of goods in specie, and has brought an action of detinue therefor, the defendants will not be allowed to assert a counterclaim for goods supplied, on the ground of mutual dealings.

These cases consider the question from the reverse standpoint from which it comes up here; that is to say, the right of set-off is not claimed in behalf of the estate, but against it. But that is not material. The principle is the same, and, by it, it is clear that, from whatever side considered, it can not be regarded as extending to a claim for damages, sounding in tort, and growing out of an entirely different and independent transaction. The right of action, no doubt, vested in the trustee, in the present instance, to recover the damages alleged to have been done to the bankrupts' property. Section 70 a (6), 30 Stat. 566 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3451). And the composition offered by the bankrupts having been accepted and confirmed, this right has now reverted to them again. Section 70b. So that no difficulty arises upon that score. The bankrupts would therefore unquestionably be entitled to have the claim for rent reduced in the way they ask, in relief of the composition which they are to pay, if only the counter claim which they set up could be entertained. But for the reasons stated, it can not be, and the action of the referee in rejecting it must therefore be sustained. The suggestion that, unless the set-off is allowed, the bankrupts will be without remedy, even if it afforded the basis for an argument, is met by the consideration, which has just been alluded to, that by the express provision of the act the bankrupts are reinvested by the composition with all their pre-existing rights, which they can enforce by action, the same as though bankruptcy had not intervened. Stone v. Jenkins, 176 Mass. 544, 57 N. E. 1002, 79 Am. St. Rep. 343; 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 568.

The exceptions are overruled, and the action of the referee, in refusing to reduce the rent by the set-off claimed, is confirmed, without prejudice, however, to the merits of the claim, which are not passed upon.

Contributory Negligence—Last Chance.

[Central Law Journal.]

The Supreme Court of New Hampshire, in the case of Yeaton v. Boston & M. R. R., 61 Atl. Rep. 522, recently rendered an interesting opinion in which the evidence tended to show that Yeaton drove toward the crossing without exercising care to ascertain whether a train was approaching until he was within 30 feet of the track. At that point he was traveling at the rate of 4 miles an hour, and the train, running at a speed of 40 miles an hour, was some 300 feet distant. The train occupied the farther one of of two tracks which crossed the highway. When a short distance from the crossing, the horse attempted to turn down the track, but Yeaton reined him about and urged him upon the crossing. The train struck the wagon in which Yeaton was riding, and killed him instantly. The fireman saw Yeaton from a time when the train was some 900 feet from the crossing until the moment of the collision. There was evidence tending to show that the speed of the train could have been slackened, and the collision averted, by the application of the brakes at the time when Yeaton attempted to cross the track. There was a conflict of testimony as to when the brakes were applied.

The court said: "The only position taken in support of the exceptions to the refusal to order a nonsuit or verdict to instruct as requested upon the question of liability is that Yeaton's attempt to cross the track in advance of the approaching train was negligence, which must prevent a recovery in this suit. In the discussion in Gahagan v. Railroad, 70 N. H. 441, 450; 50 Atl. Rep. 146, 151; 55 L. R. A. 426, it was said: "The plaintiff's negligent occupation of the track did not authorize the defendants to run upon and injure him, if by care they could have avoided it. . . . If the engineer knew, or ought to have known, that the plaintiff's negligence would place him upon the crossing when the train reached it, the engineer was equally bound to avoid the collision as if he saw the plaintiff actually on the track." These views were adopted as the basis of the decisions in Little v. Railroad, 72 N. H. 61, 62; 55 Atl. Rep. 190, and Parkinson v. Railway, 71 N. H. 28, 32; 51 Atl. Rep. 268. The sole ground of negligence in the defendants upon which the case was submitted to the jury was whether the defendants' servants in charge of the train, observing the deceased's proximity to the railroad, did all they ought to have done to prevent the collision, after they knew, or ought to have known, of his attempt to cross the track. If men of ordinary prudence in the position of the defendants' servants would have known that Yeaton's act would place him upon the crossing at the time the train would reach it unless they did something to check the speed of the train, and could and would have avoided the collision, the failure of the trainmen to act with ordinary prudence was the legal cause of the injury. Upon the only ground of negligence charged against the defendants, Yeaton's conduct in attempting to cross under the circumstances, whether prudent or otherwise, was immaterial. The defendants had no right to kill him for his mistake in judgment, even if the error was one that a prudent man would have avoided. The defendants are equally liable, whether the injury was wilfully or negligently inflicted. Felch v. Railroad, 66 N. H. 318, 320; 29 Atl. Rep. 557.

Digitized by Google

There was evidence that the trainmen could have slackened the speed of the train if they had acted when they knew, or ought to have known, of Yeaton's attempt to cross before it. Whether they could or ought to have done so was for the jury. The defendants were not injured by the submission of the question of the plaintiff's care in attempting to cross the track, even if there were no evidence upon which it could be found that a man of ordinary prudence would have made the attempt. The ruling required the jury to find a fact not material to the plaintiff's case to entitle her to a verdict. The defendants can not complain of the additional burden placed upon the plaintiff. If the negligence charged against the defendants had been failure to give the warning signals, or to maintain a flagman, or other prior fault, the question of Yeaton's care in attempting to cross would have been material; but, as it is not, it is useless to consider whether there was evidence upon which the act could be found careful. When both parties are present, and due care on the part of either at the time would have prevented the injury, the manner in which the dangerous situation was created is immaterial, except as one of the circumstances by which the requisite degree of care is to be determined. A plaintiff who, by care, can not escape from the danger his own negligence has created, can recover of one who, by care, could have prevented the injury, even if his inability to protect himself arises from his own prior negligence. Nashua Iron & Steel Co. v. Railroad, 62 N. H. 159, 164. It could be found that Yeaton did all a prudent man could do after he decided to cross. His inability to protect himself after such decision arises from his mistaken judgment that it was safe or best for him to make the attempt, for there is no evidence or suggestion that he intended to commit suicide. If his mistaken judgment was due to failure to carefully observe or weigh the evidence presented by the situation, and was negligence, such conclusion rendered him unable to protect himself, precisely as if he had been unable for any other reason to exercise the judgment of a prudent man. The defendants, knowing the situation, were required to exercise such care as prudent men in their situation, with the knowledge they had, would exercise. Wheeler v. Railway, 70 N. H. 607, 50 Atl. Rep. 166, 54 L. R. A. 955; Edgerly v. Railroad, 67 N. H. 312, 36 Atl. Rep. 558; Batchelder v. Railroad, 72 N. H. 528, 530, 57 Atl. Rep. 926. If their exercise of such care would have prevented the injury, their failure to so act is its sole legal cause.

Whether the expression, "the mental and physical pain suffered by him in consequence of the injury," as one of the elements proper for consideration in assessing the damages in an action where death results from the injury complained of (Pub. St. 1901, ch. 191, sec. 12), refers merely to mental pain resulting from the physical injury is not important. The items of damage mentioned are not exclusive, but additional, and are to be considered "in connection with other elements allowed by law." It is not contended that mental pain preceding a physical injury, when caused by a wrongful act or neglect which results in such physical injury, is not an element of damage allowed by law. The section is a redraft of the provision as to damages found in section 1, ch. 71, p. 454, Laws 1887, without intent to change the meaning. Commr's. Rep. P. S., pp. iii, 615. When the commissioners used the word "injury" in place of "wrongful act or neglect," found in the earlier statute, if they did not understand the terms were identical, the addition of the general clause quoted establishes that no change in meaning was intended or made. The deceased, by his own carelessness, found himself in a dangerous position near the track. Either prudently or carelessly he attempted to cross in front of the train. He can not recover for fright due to his own acts, whether careless or prudent. Recovery can be had only for injury resulting from the negligence charged against the defendants—the failure to slacken the speed of the train. If such negligence caused him any fright or mental suffering preceding the injury, such mental pain was properly considered on the question of damages. It appears to be conceded that there was evidence of mental pain preceding the injury. If the instructions, as applied to the facts, did not confine the attention of the jury to mental suffering chargeable to the defendant's fault, they might properly have been more definite in this respect. If the instructions were not as definite as they might have been, there was no request to make them more definite. The general objection that there could be no recovery for mental pain preceding the physical injury can not be sustained. This conclusion disposes of the exception to the argument of counsel upon this point.

Digitized by Google

The only remaining exception relied upon in the defendants' brief is to the statement made in argument by counsel that, when the firemen saw Yeaton, and was some 800 feet from the crossing, he ought to have warned the engineer; that he did not do so; and the argument from that fact that the fireman never notified the engineer. This suggestion did not misstate the evidence. There was evidence that the fireman saw Yeaton at least that distance from the crossing. What he ought to have done under the circumstances was an inference of fact to be found by the jury, as to which counsel could urge upon their attention his view as to the finding which should be made. The conduct of the fireman in one part of the transaction may have had some tendency to show what it was in another part. Whether the suggested inference should be drawn was for the jury.

Courts—Power of a Court to Act Upon Its Own Motion.

The extent to which the functions of the court are to be limited to those of an umpire between the parties is suggested by a recent Missouri decision holding that, irrespective of statute, the court, on its own motion, may set aside a verdict and order a new trial on the grounds of erroneous instruction, although no exceptions had been taken thereto. Nulton v. Croskey (1905), 85 S. W. Rep. 644.

The conception of the strict neutrality of the court seems to have been an early characteristic of the common law. The underlying idea was that the parties must learn the rules of the game at their peril and that it was their own concern if they threw away their chances. 2 Poll. & Mait. Hist. Eng. Law, 670; Pollock, 3 Col. Law Rev. 510.

Such a rule carried to its logical conclusion would tend to make of the court a mere figurehead and would lead to a miscarriage of justice unless somewhat modified. Accordingly it was early decided in England that whenever one had been convicted and the time in which he might make motion had elapsed, the court might grant a new trial of its own motion where it appeared that injustice would otherwise be done. King v. Gough (1781), Douglas, 791; Rex v. Atkinson (1784), 5 D. & E. 437, note. Likewise in civil cases the court might grant a new trial where the party aggrieved was disqualified to make the motion. Birt v. Barlow (1779), Douglas, 170.

The decided tendency of modern English decisions is away from the umpire theory and towards the position that the judge's function is to find out the truth. To this end he may call and examine witnesses not called by either party, and without his leave neither party has a right to cross-examine them. Coulson v. Disborough (1894), 2. Q. B. 316. But the same is not true of American development.

The principle followed here has been to restrict the exercise of the court's discretion lest private rights be impaired. It has been held that a judge may not set aside a verdict on his own motion unless rendered under circumstances making it legally void, such as misconduct of the jury. Lloyd v. Brinck (1871), 35 Tex. 1; nor rule out evidence which has gone to the jury without objection. Barker v. Blount (1879), 63 Ga. 423, semble.

Even under the limitations imposed by the umpire theory, however, the result reached in Nulton v. Croskey would seem proper. Where the court has contributed to the unlawful and unjust result under a mistaken view of the law, it is not only its right, but its duty to itself, to order a new trial. Wolmerstadt v. Jacobs (1883), 61 Iowa, 372. A fair umpire may not champion either side, therefore if he has prejudiced the rights of either side by active error on his part, he should be permitted to rectify such mistake.

The exercise of this power is not a matter of right which a party may demand, but rests in the court's discretion. Richmond v. Pogue (1865), 36 Mo. 313. A logical extension of this principle might justify the court's acting upon its own initiative in cases where a part of the court, for instance the jury, has been guilty of error to the detriment of one of the parties, as by rendering a verdict in direct violation of proper instructions, or one clearly insufficient, or one not responsive to the issues. Allen v. Wheeler (1880), 54 Iowa, 628; R. R. v. Cir. Judge (1896), 110 Mich. 173.—Columbia Law Review.

Principal and Agent—Burden of Proving Contract for Commissions.—In an action by an agent for commissions, the burden is upon him to prove an agreement for the commissions sought to be recovered. Warwick v. North American Inv. Co. of United States, (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 78.

Principal and Agent—Knowledge of Agent.—Knowledge of an agent's agent, who is not agent of the first principal, held not imputable to such principal. North British Mercantile Ins. Co. of London and Edinburgh v. Union Stock Yards Co. (Ky.), 87 S. W. Rep. 285.

The London Chronicle for January 11, 1871, narrates the following: "An attorney in Dublin having dined by an invitation with his client several days pending a suit, charged 6s. 8d. for each attendance, which was allowed by the master on taxing costs. In return for this the client returned the master attorney with a bill for his eating and drinking, which the attorney refusing to pay, the client brought his action and recovered the amount of his charge. But he did not exult long in his victory, for in a few days the attorney lodged an information against him before the commissioners of excise for retailing wine without a license; and not being able to controvert the fact, to avoid an increase of costs he submitted, by the advice of counsel, to pay the penalty, a great part of which went to the attorney as informer."

Digitized by Google

Master and Servant—Duty of Master Toward Safety of Servant.—It is the continuing duty of a master to use reasonable care to furnish his employees with a reasonably safe place to work, with reasonably safe appliances, and to use reasonable care to keep them in reasonably safe condition.—Lee v. St. Louis, M. & S. E. R. Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 12.

Master and Servant—Servant's Knowledge of Defects.—Knowledge actually acquired or to be imputed to an employee of a defective condition of the appliance furnished him by the master, without an appreciation of the danger caused by it, does not bar a recovery for injuries sustained by the employee caused by such condition. Peck v. Peck (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 248.

Carriers—Injury to Passenger Alighting During Journey.—A passenger may alight from his train at a switch track near an intermediate staton without forfeiting his status. Texas Midland R. R. v. Ellison (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 213.

Carriers—Injury to Passenger Boarding Train.—Undue prominence held not given to the character of duty required of a conductor by paragraphs of a charge in an action for injury to a passenger while boarding a train. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Copley (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 219.

Carriers—Jewelry as Baggage.—Jewelry carried in a woman's trunk for wear, may be found by a jury to be baggage. Hubbard v. Mobile & O. Ry. Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 52.

Bills and Notes—Burden of Showing Failure of Consideration.—In an action on a note given for the purchase price of machinery, the burden of showing failure of consideration was on defendant. Masterson v. F. W. Heitmann & Co. (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 227.

Brokers — Commission. — A custom which gives to the broker 5 per cent of the purchase price of land for assisting in its sale, irrespective of the amount, value or character of the services rendered, is unreasonable and void. Penland v. Ingle (N. Car.), 50 S. E. Rep. 850.

Carriers—Connecting Carrier's Negligence.—Where a carrier receives goods for transportation to a destination beyond its terminus, its common-law liability ends with delivery to the succeeding carrier. Hubbard v. Mobile & O. Ry. Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 52.

Corporations—Validity of Debts.—A corporation may assume payment of advancements made before the incorporation was effected. Pitman v. Chicago Joplin Lead and Zinc Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 10.

Master and Servant—Contributory Negligence.—In an action for injuriss to plaintiff by being thrown from defendant's log train, plaintiff held guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law in voluntarily taking an insecure position on the pilot of the engine. Burns v. Chronister Lumber Co. (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 163.

Municipal Corporations—Presumption that City Officials Perform Their Duty.—The presumption that city officers do their duty in respect to keeping sidewalks in repair is applicable only where there is no evidence on the subject.—Miller v. Town of Canton, (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 96.

Negligence—Injury to Licensee.—Consent of an owner of land to the use as a passageway of a path across his land may be inferred, where it has been used for some time continuously without objection.—Etheredge v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co. (Ga.), 50 S. E. Rep. 1003.

Negligence—Injury to Servant of Independent Contractor.—In an action for injuries to a servant of an independent contractor engaged in erecting a building for defendant near a private car track, evidence held to justify submission to the jury of the issue of defendant's negligence.—Sack v. St. Louis Car Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 79.

Corporations—Adopting Contract of Promoter.—A corporation is not liable for legal services rendered at the request of one of its promoters, unless after its organization it adopted the contract made by the promoter. Jones v. Smith (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 210.

Corporations—Sale of Stock.—A solvent corporation can not be placed in receivership to enable a stockholder, who has deposited his stock as collateral for a debt, to have an account of its assets. Huet v. Piedmont Springs Lumber Co. (N. Car.), 50 S. E. Rep. 846.

Principal and Agent—Authority of Agent to Execute Note.—A negotiable note in the hands of an agent, indorsed in blank by the principal, can not be regarded by a stranger having notice of agency as prima facie proof of title in the agent. Merchants & Manufacturers Nat. Bank v. Ohio Valley Furniture Co. (W. Va.), 50 S. E. Rep. 880.

Principal and Agent—Authority to Waive Provisions of Life Policy.—A principal is not bound by the acts of the agent beyond the scope of his authority, where the person dealing with the agent had notice of such limitation. Hutson v. Prudential Ins. Co. of America (Ga.), 50 S. E. Rep. 1000.

Digitized by Google

Naturally Dom Smart.

An Irishman with no education having found that he had a natural gift of gab, had become something of a pettifogger in a country "deestrict." One day he was engaged against a lawyer of education and learning, but little accustomed to the methods of the county pettifogger or county justice, which, to say the least, would scarcely have passed muster in a court of record, but at the same time were popular in the country districts where this blatherskite held sway with conscious pride to an admiring throng, which always gathered when there was a "case on." The Irishman had come up to the expectation of his admirers and had caused several laughs at his citified opponent's expense during the trial, and by the time he got to the jury was pretty well puffed up with his own importance. On the jury was another Irishman, who seemed to have taken great interest in the proceedings. He was seated in the front row of chairs, looking up into the face of his swelled-up fellow countryman, who now began his address as follows: "Gintlemen of the jury, it has not bin me fortchin to attind any ov the universities, or the hoigh schools, or the noight schools, or the business colleges, an' its little iducation thot oiv had at all—faith an' it is not aven a common school iducation"—"but ye'r naturally dom smart," broke in our Irish juryman, while a roar of laughter punctured his inflated compatriot. Being defeated, he wabbled around for a few moments and then fell down completely, while his elated opponent walked off with the verdict.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edward J. Adams, Jr., late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. WILLIAM F. ADAMS, 321 C. st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,192. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

E. H. Thomas and A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a District Court.

In re Extension of Nineteenth Street from Woodley Road to Baltimore Street.

No. 658. District Court.

Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress, approved March 3, 1905, entitled "An act for the extension of Nineteenth street from Woodley road to Baltimore street," have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the extension of said Nineteenth street from Woodley road to Baltimore street, in the District of Columbia, with a uniform width of fifty feet, as shown on a plat or map prepared by the said Commissioners and annexed to their said petition and marked "Exhibit D. C. No. 1;" and praying, also, that a jury of seven (7) judicious, disinterested men, not related to any person interested in these proceedings, and not in the service or employment of the District of Columbia or of the United States, be summoned by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia, to assess the damages each owner of land taken may sustain by reason of the extension of said Nineteenth and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purposes of such extension, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, as provided in the aforesaid act of Congress. It is, by the court, this 13th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered, that all persons having any interest in these proceedings be, and they are hereby, warned and required to appear in this court on or before the 30th day of October, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be summoned herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published once in The Washington Law Reporter and on six secular days in The Evening Star, The Washington Times, and The Washington Post, newspapers published in said District, before the said 30th day of October, A.D. 1905. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the said marshal, or his deputies, upon such owners of the land to be condemned herein as may be found by said marshal or his deputies, within the District of Columbia, before the said 30th day of October, A. D. 1905. By the Court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 42-1t

J. J. Darlington, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Annie E. Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 17th day of October, 1905. RICHARD HARRISON JOHNSON, 709 C st. S. W.; WILLIAM A. WIMSATT, 215 8th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,216. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Joseph H. Stewart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term of Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of Robert W. Brown, executor herein, reporting the sale of lot five (5) in A. H. Lee's recorded subdivision of lots numbered C and D in Elizabeth Morrison's subdivision of square numbered two hundred and eighty (280) to William A. Hedrick for the sum of eight hundred and thirty-five ($835.00) dollars, it is this 17th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court ordered that said sale be ratified, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905; this order to be published once a week in the Washington Law Reporter for three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal]
A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 42-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Little C. Osmun, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Harry G. Meem, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,184. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Celia E. V. Beall, Deceased.
No. 12,871. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Lizzie B. Gladman, it is ordered this 16th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to M. Elmer Carrier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 42-3t

A. A. Birney and G. E. Tralles, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
John W. Butterfield, Complainant, v. William L. Jones, Receiver, and Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,698.

The object of this suit is to establish and enforce an equitable lien in favor of the complainant upon a certain draft or warrant issued by the United States in settlement of the claim of the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., William L. Jones, receiver, for $5,000, which said sum has been appropriated by Congress to pay said claim, and for a receiver to take possession of said draft or warrant, and endorse and collect the same. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 20th day of October, A.D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William L. Jones and the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., a corporation, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said return day in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 42-3t

Legal Notices.

Isaac H. Ford, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alfred Ford, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 20th day of September, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1906. JOHN FORD, 312 2d st. S. E.; MARY M. FORD, 312 2d st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,163. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Thomas P. Woodward and Geo. R. Linkins, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William R. Woodward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1905. THOMAS P. WOODWARD, 507 E st. N. W.; GEO. R. LINKINS, 507 E st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,175. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notce That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta M. Martin, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of October, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MARTIN, 617 L st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,203. Administration. [Seal] 42-3

SECOND INSERTION.

Saml. Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Thomas Culhane, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of October, A. D. 1 06; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of October, 1905. BRIDGET M. CULHANE, 921 N. J. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,199. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Lyon & Lyon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louise Lansburgh, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. GUSTAVE LANSBURG, 1018 Vt. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,211. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Irvin B. Wright, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,195. Administration. 41-3t

---

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys,

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Brison Norris, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. MARY E. NORRIS, 501 H. st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,207. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

---

Eugene A. Jones, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Adolf Cluss, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of October, 1905. LILLIAN C. DAW, 2801 H st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,179. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

---

Bernard P. Mimmack, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Catalina Juliana Mason Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10 day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. CASSIE MASON MYERS JULIAN-JAMES, 1602 20th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,185. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

---

J. J. Waters, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Stanley Pearce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of October, 1905. GEORGE PIMPER, 3245 M st. N. W.; HENRY F. KUNKEL, 806 20th st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,062. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Legal Notices.

Albert E. Shoemaker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Richard Edwards, Deceased.
No. 13,213. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate and record of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Susan Edwards, it is ordered, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Sarah Wilkins, Alice Minor, and Garrit S. Edwards, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 41-3t

---

E. H. Thomas

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 48 and 52 Q street northeast, in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, being lots numbered one hundred and five (105) and one hundred and seven (107) in Francis A. Blundon's subdivision of lots in square numbered three, "West Eckington," as per plat recorded in liber county No. 11, folio 29, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, to Charles L. Selecman for the sum of seventy-five hundred ($7,500) dollars cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 6th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 6th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 41-3t

---

Mason N. Richardson, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Ira T. Bryant et al. v. Jerome A. Johnson et al.
No. 24,729. Equity Docket No.—

The object of this suit is to subject lot 36, sq. 194, in the District of Columbia, to the claim of complainants as judgment creditors, and to divest defendants of all title and interest thereof. A copy of this order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks prior to the return day hereto. On motion of the complainant, it is this 10th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Robert H. Bundy, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 41-3t

---

George F. Graham, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Columbus J. Eslin, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 8th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 9th day of October, 1905. BENJ. J. ESLIN, GEO. F. GRAHAM, by Geo. F. Graham, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,505. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

THIRD INSERTION.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 909 H street northeast, Washington. D. C., being lot twenty (20) in Moses Kelley's subdivision of square nine hundred and thirty-four (931), as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, in book W. B. M., page 353, to Paul Leverone for thirty-seven hundred and fifty ($3,750) dollars cash, less three (3) per cent brokerage commission, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 3d day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. [Seal] 40-3t

---

Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams,
Solicitors for Complainant

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Ernest L. Schmidt, Complainant, v. Ada G. Earhart Ross et al., Defendants. No. 25,522, Equity Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to sell certain property in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described as follows, and being, to wit: The lots 17, 18, 20, and 21, in Butler's subdivision of lots in square 226, also original lot 1 in square 252, together with the improvements thereon, and to distribute the proceeds among the parties to this cause in accordance with their respective rights and interests, and also to substitute a trustee pending any such sale. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitors, Barnard & Johnson and George Francis Williams, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Ada G. Earhart Ross, Jessie Elizabeth Earhart McGuire, Virginia Butler Earhart Ferguson, Carter Earhart, and Lyttleton Reese, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 40-3t

---

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, Deceased.
No. 13,193. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by William Holabird and Joseph Willard Preston, as executors, it is ordered this 4th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Agnes Theodosia von Konowsky, Mary Edna Preston, Julia Starr Preston, Joseph Willard Preston, Jr., and Henry Grant Preston, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 40-3t

---

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Legal Notices

Alex. H. Bell, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Denney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. FANNIE E. CARTER, Nichols ave., Anacostia, D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No 13,173. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

---

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Gustavo L. Roxer, Jr., late of Austria, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of August, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of September, 1905. F. WALTER BRANDENBURG, Fendall Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No.13,133. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

---

Robt. E. Mattingly, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Mary Helen Rowland, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. ROBERT E. MATTINGLY, 472 La. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,167. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

---

George Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New Jersey, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Maria W. Richards, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of September, 1905. CHARLES H. RICHARDS, 35 Hillside ave., Montclair, N. J. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,089. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

---

Francis H. Stephen, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George T. Morgan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of October, 1905. JAMES A. KEMP, Police Headquarters. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,200. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Sheehy & Sheehy, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Thomas Murphy, Deceased.
No. 3356. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Catherine J. Murphy, it is ordered this 3d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Murphy, Edward Murphy, and Thomas Murphy, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t

F. P. Sheehy, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Michael Burke, Deceased.
Administration, No. 11,704.

Upon consideration of the report herein filed by Charles J. Springmann, executor of the last will and testament of Michael Burke, deceased, showing that he has sold at public auction to John W. Weitzel for twenty-five hundred ($2.500) dollars cash the real estate mentioned and described in the proceedings had in the above entitled matter, namely, lot numbered fourteen (14) in square numbered five hundred (500), improved by premises No. 495 L street southwest, it is, by the court, this 3d day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 4th day of November, 1905. Provided this order be published once a week

[Seal] for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 40 3t

P. J. Ryan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert Georgii, Deceased.
No. 13,162. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ignatius Nau, it is ordered this 2d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Max Georgii and Herrmann Georgii, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days

[Seal] before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner. Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t

M. A. Mess, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Ottilie Aumann, Deceased.
No. 13,169. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Frank A. B. Wünnenberg, it is ordered this second day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Christian Aumann (a brother), Ottilie Aumann (a niece), and Walburga Aumann (a stepsister), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and New Yorker Staatszeitung once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return

[Seal] day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 40-3t

Legal Notices.

Hallam & Hallam, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Evalyn Doughty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 2d day of October, 1905. CAVOUR O. BOHRER, 113 C st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,906. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

A. Coulter Wells, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Buchanan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of September, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of September, 1905. MARY WEAVER, 1518 Que st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,154. Administration. [Seal.] 40-3t

FIFTH INSERTION.

[Filed September 18, 1905.]

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.
In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 3 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE

[Seal] W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. A true copy. Test: J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 38-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 43

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - OCTOBER 27, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 673
COURT OF APPEALS OF NEW YORK:
Edmund Wright, respondent, v. Edward Hart, appellant 674
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Stephen U. G. Johnson, appellant, v. The United States 679
Legal Notices 683

Hearing of Cases on the Appeal Calendar.

The cases on the appeal calendar of the Supreme Court of this District have been certified for trial to Criminal Court No. 2, before Mr. Justice Gould. The hearing of these cases, which include those coming up by appeal from justices of the peace and those removed by certiorari into the Supreme Court for trial, will begin on Wednesday, November 1, 1905, when the first ten cases on the calender will be called.

An important change has been made in the rules of the Supreme Court of the District, whereby cases removed into that court by certiorari, under section 8 of the Code, will be placed on the trial calendar, instead of on the appeal calendar as heretofore. The amendment of the rules, as promulgated by the court, is as follows:

"Ordered, that Rule 15 of the Common Law Rules of the court be, and it hereby is, amended by adding thereto an additional section, to read as follows:

"'Sec. 5. After plea filed and issue joined, and at least ten days before the term of the court at which the cause stands for trial, either party may give notice of trial and furnish the clerk with a note of issue, as prescribed in Common Law Rules of this court 35 and 34; thereupon the clerk shall enter the cause on the trial calendar.' "

Changes in the Clerk's Office of the Supreme Court of the District.

Several changes have been recently made in the clerk's office of the Supreme Court of the District. Mr. A. G. Buhrman, for some years clerk of Circuit Court No. 1, has been promoted to docket clerk on the law side of the court, to succeed Mr. William E. Williams, promoted to financial clerk. Mr. F. E. Cunningham, formerly clerk in Equity Court No. 1, is promoted to be docket clerk on the equity side of the court. Mr. Harry Bingham, formerly an assistant in the office of the United States attorney, and Mr. Wm. F. Lemon have been appointed as assistant clerks and assigned, respectively, to Circuit Court No. 1 and Equity Court No. 2. Mr. Harvey Given, for some time clerk of Criminal Court No. 2, has resigned, to accept a responsible position in the office of the United States attorney for this District, and has been succeeded in that court by Mr. S. McComas Hawkins.

MR. FREDERICK S. TYLER, for several years the crier of the Court of Appeals of this District, has resigned to enter the practice of the law. Mr. Tyler is a graduate of the Georgetown University Law School and a young man of decided ability. He will be associated in practice with former United States attorney Morgan H. Beach, with offices in the Colorado Building. Mr. Tyler made for himself a host of friends during his term of service in the Court of Appeals, who wish him much success. He will be succeeded as crier by Mr. Howard C. Riley, for some years a capable and efficient clerk in the office of the editor of THE LAW REPORTER. That he will discharge the duties of his new position with fidelity to the court and credit to himself may safely be predicted.

Assistant United States Attorney Harvey Given.

Mr. Harvey Given has been appointed by United States Attorney Baker as an assistant in his office and has entered upon the discharge of the duties of the position. Mr. Given has a long record of efficient service in the office of the United States attorney for this District and in the clerk's office of the Supreme Court of the District. Though only recently admitted to the bar, his exceptional qualifications for his new position are recognized by all. Mr. Given numbers among his friends practically the entire membership of the bar of this District, who welcome him most cordially as one of their number. They not only wish and expect him to succeed, but are confident that he will earn distinction in the discharge of his duties.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of New York.

EDMUND WRIGHT, AS TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY OF W. C. LOFTUS & CO., BANKRUPT, RESPONDENT,

v.

EDWARD HART, APPELLANT.

[For majority opinion, see ante, p. 658.]

VANN, J. (dissenting)—The only question presented by this appeal is whether the statute regulating the sale of merchandise in bulk (L. 1902, chap. 528) violates any provision of the State or Federal constitution. The object of the act was to suppress a widespread evil, well known to current history and condemned by repeated adjudications in this court and in all the leading courts of the State from time out of mind. That evil is the tendency and practice of merchants who are heavily in debt to make secret sales of their merchandise in bulk for the purpose of defrauding creditors. Common observation shows that when a dealer has reached a point in his business career where he can not go on owing to the claims of creditors, the temptation is strong and the practice common of making a fraudulent sale. Fraud works in secret, and the bargain is closed and the purchaser in possession before the creditors know anything about it. The evil is difficult for the courts to handle, because the evidence to uncover the furtive scheme must, as a rule, be drawn from hostile witnesses, usually relatives or intimate friends of the seller, who took part in the fraud and shared in the plunder. All those who have had to do with the investigation of such transactions realize how well these frauds are protected by the forms of law and how frequently they are defended by perjury. The form of the fraud varies with the skill of the perpetrator and his advisers, but the unvarying purpose is to enable the debtor to hold and enjoy property which equitably belongs to his creditors. Inadequacy of consideration, absconding with the proceeds of the sale and the preference of fictitious claims are familiar methods. Many other means of holding on to property and concealing the facts are resorted to, and it is not uncommon to see a dealer in possession of all that he had before he failed, and, acting under another name, carrying on the same business with the same stock, all unpaid for, in unblushing defiance of his creditors. Whatever the method of committing the fraud, its success depends on secrecy and perjury.

When a merchant owes more than he can pay he has no substantial equity in his stock of goods, and the claims of his creditors are superior to his own. The courts may not only prevent him from parting with his property, but may seize and sell it and apply the proceeds upon his debts. If an execution issued against his property is returned unsatisfied, he may be compelled to disclose under oath all his business transactions, tell what he has done with his estate, both real and personal, and the proceeds thereof, and if he still holds any property in the name of some one else, to divulge all the facts relating thereto (Code Civ. Pro., secs. 2432, 2463). He may be imprisoned on civil process and punished criminally for making a fraudulent disposition of his property, and any person who is a party or privy to the fraud may be punished in the same way (Code Civ. Pro., sec. 549; Penal Code, sec. 586). Interference with his liberty and propetty by such methods has never been successfully questioned as a violation of fundamental rights. Many restraints upon freedom of contract, some of which reach back to our colonial history, have passed without challenge, or, if challenged, have uniformly been sustained as valid. The Statute of Frauds, the act to prevent fraudulent conveyances, insolvent laws, the recording act, the prohibition of usury, lien laws, regulations in relation to chattel mortgages, conditional sales and preferences by corporations and in general assignments, show in how many ways and in what varied forms the legislature may properly restrain freedom of action in commercial transactions in order to promote the general welfare. Originally all parol contracts for the sale of personal property were valid and it was unnecessary to make delivery or payment wholly or in part. The recording act was unknown, and transfers in writing, whether absolute or conditional, did not have to be filed. Now, however, many statutes require business to be transacted in a certain way, and that constructive notice should be given in order to protect creditors and innocent purchasers. Such interference with liberty and such limitations upon the use of property, although arbitrary and inconvenient, have always been regarded as valid in order to prevent fraud and promote justice. While commerce is hampered to a limited extent in some ways, it is protected and promoted to a much greater extent in other ways. The inconvenience of the restraint is less than the evil done away with.

The statute now before us was passed for the same general purpose as the most of those mentioned. It is aimed at the same evil which is admitted to be both serious and common. It does not prohibit a sale of any kind, but it provides safeguards against secrecy, which is the bulwark of fraud. It simply requires that notice of what is to be done should be given in advance, personally or by mail, to those directly interested, who are frequently made the victims of fraudulent sales.

It regulates two kinds of sales: 1. A sale of any portion of a stock of merchandise other than in the ordinary course of trade in the regular and usual prosecution of the seller's business. 2. The sale of an entire stock of merchandise in bulk. We now have to deal with the latter only. Such a sale is declared fraudulent and void, not absolutely, but as against the creditors of the seller unless the statute is complied with. If the seller pays his debts the sale stands even if not made as required by the statute, but otherwise it falls unless at least five days before the date thereof both seller and purchaser unite in making a full and detailed inventory showing the quantity and, so far as reasonable diligence will permit, the cost price of each article. This burden is cast upon both seller and purchaser, but a further burden is placed on the purchaser, who is required, at least five days before the sale, in good faith, to make full and explicit inquiry of the seller as to his creditors and the amount owing to each and to notify them personally or by mail of the proposed sale, the cost price of the stock to be sold and the price proposed to be paid. At least five days before the sale the seller is commanded to file, where is not specified, but presumptively in the office where a chattel mortgage given by him should be filed, a truthful answer in writing to each inquiry made of him by the purchaser as above required. Except as thus specified the rules of evidence and the presumptions of law are left unchanged.

Digitized by Google

A recent amendment provides that a sale "will be presumed to be fraudulent and void as against the creditors of the seller" unless the statute is complied with, while the act governing the case now before us makes such a sale absolutely void as to creditors. L. 1904, ch. 569.

The statute is confined to merchants and dealers, as is apparent from the use of the expressions "a stock of merchandise" and "the "cost price to the seller." No sale is forbidden, but certain sales are regulated in order to prevent fraud. No restraint is placed upon sales made in the ordinary course of business, whether at wholesale or retail, for the statute applies only to unusual and extraordinary sales. There is no attempt to regulate sales generally, but merely those which experience shows are so frequently made a cover for fraud. There is no interference with the ordinary business of merchants, but when they sell their entire stock and go out of business, or sell any substantial portion thereof in an irregular and unusual way, notice to creditors is required so that they can protect themselves against fraud. No protection is afforded to strangers, but simply to those who have a strong equitable right to see that the sale is for a fair price and free from fraud. If the merchant pays his debts there can be no attack upon the sale, however made. The act is less drastic than one imposing a lien upon goods sold until the purchase price is paid, with the right to discharge the lien by sales in the ordinary course of business, which is clearly within the power of the legislature. The requirement of notice is less burdensome than the imposition of a lien.

While the statute in question disturbs freedom of contract, so does fixing the price of elevating grain (People, etc., v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113), the prohibition of options to buy or sell grain at a future time (Booth v. Illinois, 184 U. S. 425), and the annulment of all contracts for the sale of corporate stocks for future delivery, or on margin. Otis v. Parker, 187 U. S. 604. It interferes with the use of property, but so does a limitation upon the height of buildings (People ex rel. Kemp v. D'Oench, 111 N. Y. 359); the requirement that tenement houses shall be furnished with water (Health Dept. of N. Y. v. Rector, etc., Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32); forbidding the sale of stamped bottles (People, etc., v. Cannon, 139 N. Y. 32); or of lottery tickets issued in a State where lotteries are lawful (People, etc., v. Noelke, 94 N. Y. 137); or of game purchased in another State as lawful merchandise and brought into this State. People, etc., v. Bootman, 180 N. Y. 1. It interferes with liberty, but so does the act "to regulate barbering on Sunday" (People, etc., v. Havnor, 149 N. Y. 195; Petit v. Minnesota, 177 U. S. 164); the statute making it a misdemeanor to exhibit a child as a dancer in order to earn a living (People, etc., v. Ewer, 141 N. Y. 129); the exclusion of children not vaccinated from school (Matter of Viemeister, 179 N. Y. 235), and the compulsory vaccination of all the inhabitants of a community (Jacobson v. Massachusetts, 197 U. S. 358).

Twenty States, as well as the Federal government in the District of Columbia, have similar statutes, some with provisions more stringent than our own and all aimed at the suppression of an evil that is thus shown to be almost universal. California, Civil Code, sec. 3440, as amended March 10, 1903; Colorado, Laws 1903, chap. 110; Connecticut, Public Acts 1903, chap. 72; Delaware, Laws 1903, chap. 387; District of Columbia, U. S. Statutes at Large, chap. 1809; 58th Cong., April 28, 1904; Georgia, Laws 1903, No. 457; Idaho, Laws 1903, H. B. 18; Indiana, Acts 1903, chap. 153; Kentucky, Acts 1904, chap. 22; Louisiana, Acts 1896, No. 94; Maryland, Laws 1900, chap. 579; Massachusetts, Acts and Resolves 1903, chap. 415; Minnesota, General Laws 1899, chap. 291; Ohio, Laws 1902, H. B. 334; Oklahoma, Session Laws 1903, p. 249; Oregon, Billinger's Ann. Codes and Statutes, chap. 7; Tennessee, Acts 1901, chap. 133; Utah, Laws 1901, chap. 67; Virginia, Act approved January 2, 1904; Washington, Laws 1901, chap. 109; Wisconsin, Laws 1901, chap. 463.

A statute with the same object attained by a similar remedy has been held valid by the highest courts in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Tennessee, and Washington. J. P. Squires & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18; Walp v. Mooar, 76 Conn. 515; Neas v. Borches, 109 Tenn. 398; McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co., 30 Wash. 549. An act declaring such sales presumptively fraudulent was assumed to be valid by the courts of last resort in Wisconsin and Maryland. Fisher v. Herrmann, 118 Wis. 424; Hart v. Roney, 93 Md. 432.

On the other hand, a statute with more exacting conditions was held unconstitutional in Ohio (Miller v. Crawford, 70 U. S. 207), and a similar act met the same fate in Utah, where a violation of the statute was made a crime. Block v. Swartz, 27 Utah, 387. The weight of authority, thus far announced, is in favor of the validity of such legislation. The general grounds upon which it has been sustained are well illustrated by the following extract from the opinion of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts: "A purchaser, to be safe, has only to see that the vendor's creditors are provided for. The vendor may sell freely, without regard to the statute, if he pays his debts. The legislature, when contemplating this legislation, had occasion to consider and balance against each other the general right of property owners to make contracts and dispose of their property, and the general right of creditors to be paid, and to have reasonable opportunities secured to them for the collection of their debts. That this is within a class of legislation for which there is constitutional authority is too plain for question. The object of it is like that of our numerous statutory provisions which authorize attachments on mesne process, and establish courts with all the necessary machinery for the collection of debts. The statute requires of the vendor nothing that can not be done with reasonable effort. If he is unable or unwilling to pay his debts, it puts a substantial obstacle in his way when he wants to dispose of his stock of merchandise in bulk and to receive payment for himself. But, under such circumstances, the property in most cases ought not to be sold in bulk without first giving creditors an opportunity to consider what ought to be done with it." J. P. Squires & Co. v. Tellier, 185 Mass. 18, 20.

Digitized by Google

The question before us is one of power, not of policy. Courts may pass upon the power of the legislature, but not upon its policy. Statutes, whether wise or unwise, are equally binding upon us, provided no provision of either constitution is molested. According to the general rule, unless there is a plain conflict between a statute and the constitution, the statute stands, for every presumption is in its favor. The respect due to a coordinate branch of the government will not permit mere judicial doubt to undermine a statute, for there must be clear judicial conviction that it violates the constitution before the courts can set it aside. The legislature, with all the power of legislation there is, may pass any law upon any subject, unless it is expressly or impliedly forbidden by the supreme law of the State or of the United States. There is a power beneath the constitution, but not superior to it, unwritten, not fully defined, necessary, resting on the sovereignty of the State, which exists because the State can not exist without it, and which must be considered in connection with the constitution. That power, known as the police power, aims to promote the public welfare by compulsion and restraint, and it is under the exclusive control of the legislature. The executive department can exert it only as authorized by the legislature. The courts can neither exercise it nor prevent its exercise, but they can determine whether a statute is a constitutional use of the power. We can not overturn a statute because we do not like it, for our likes and dislikes affect us as citizens, not as judges. We greatly prefer the amended act to the original, because, although effective, it is not so harsh, but that has nothing to do with the validity of either.

Starting always with the presumption that the statute, although challenged, is valid, we study it in connection with the constitution to see whether there is such a conflict as to divest the legislature of jurisdiction. If purporting to be passed in the exercise of the police power, we endeavor to see, first, whether there was an evil to be remedied, and, second, whether the remedy prescribed is "calculated, intended, convenient, or appropriate" to suppress it and not designed to trespass upon personal rights "under the guise of a police regulation." If "the act has a fair, just, and reasonable relation to the general welfare," it may so regulate "the conduct of an individual and the use of property" as to "interfere to some extent with the freedom of the one and the enjoyment of the other." If it violates no express command of the constitution and tends "in a degree that is perceptible and clear towards the preservation of the lives, the health, the morals, or the welfare of the community, as those words have been used and construed in many cases heretofore decided," and is not passed "ostensibly in favor of the promotion of some such object, while really it is an evasion thereof and for a distinct and totally different purpose," it comes within the jurisdiction of the legislature and the courts are bound to sustain it. The police power can not be arbitrarily exercised so as to deprive the citizen of his liberty or property, "but a statute does not work such a deprivation in the constitutional sense, simply because it imposes burdens or abridges freedom of action, or regulates occupations, or subjects individuals or property to restraints in matters indifferent, except as they affect public interests or the rights of others. Legislation under the police power infringes the constitutional guaranty only when it is extended to subjects not within its scope and purview, as that power was defined and understood when the constitution was adopted."

Liberty under the constitution does not mean natural liberty, or the right to act as one pleases subject only to the laws of nature, for society can not exist on that basis. Constitutional liberty is the right to act without restraint upon person or property, except such as is necessary or expedient for the general advantage of the public. Matter of Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98; People, &c., v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377; People, &c., v. Arensberg, 105 N. Y. 123; People, &c., v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389; People, &c., v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1; Health Dept. of N. Y. v. Rector, &c., Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 32; Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27; Gas Co. v. Light Co., 115 U. S. 650.

The legislation under consideration was intended to suppress a deep seated evil, common in sales of a certain kind. The existence of the evil is admitted, and the right of the legislature to provide a remedy is also admitted, but it is insisted that the remedy provided is so unreasonable that it violates the primary guaranties of the constitution. The same claim was made when a maximum price was fixed for doing a certain kind of work, but it was rejected, because the work was done in a business affected with a public interest. People, &c., v. Budd, supra. The same position was taken when one State absolutely prohibited sales on margin and another options to buy or sell at a future time, contracts which were previously valid, but both provisions were sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, because they tended to prevent gambling. Booth v. Illinois, supra, and Otis v. Parker, supra. While many contracts of the kind prohibited were free from wrong, as so many were made for the purpose of gambling, all were swept away, the good and the bad alike. Is gambling a worse evil than fraud? Does it affect commerce more seriously? Is freedom of contract interfered with more by requiring notice of creditors before certain sales are made than by forbidding certain other sales altogether? The statute is intended to interfere only with those who buy and sell in bad faith toward the creditors of the vendor. It doubtless interferes with some who act in good faith, but so do the other statutes referred to. In order to prevent injustice and fraud, legislation for time out of mind has placed some restraint upon commercial transactions, and where the legislature has jurisdiction to act the method of suppressing the evil is wholly within its sound discretion.

Digitized by Google

The right to pass laws to prevent fraud being conceded, what principle is to guide us in drawing a line to separate the act before us from those considered in the cases cited? How can we delare this statute void and the others valid? It has no ulterior purpose. No attempt is made to protect some favored interest from injurious competition. Its object is not, as in the Gillson case, to interfere with a lawful business, but to prevent one man from keeping property which equitably belongs to others. It seeks to maintain justice, which is one of the leading features of the public welfare. The protection of creditors has always been a primary function in the administration of justice. Why should the constitution require courts to be maintained to punish fraud and yet deprive the legislature of power to prevent fraud by requiring notice to a class apt to be defrauded?

As it is known that dishonest merchants abuse freedom of contract by secretly selling out in such a way as to defeat the claims of creditors, may not the legislature surround the right with some safeguards, such as an inventory and notice thereof? When the end sought is within the domain of legislation and the form of the remedy proposed is fairly adapted to that end, the courts have no power to interfere. When jurisdiction exists, the details are within the exclusive control of the legislature. While a merchant, owing debts, has an absolute constitutional right to sell his stock of goods, he may properly be required to do something for the protection of his creditors, and what he shall do is for the legislature to prescribe. With power to act upon the subject it may pass a foolish statute or a wise one, and we can not overturn the one unless we can the other. It is only when there is a want of power to legislate that the courts can declare a statute void.

It is insisted, and the argument is not without force, that while the provisions of the act, so far as they relate to the vendor may be valid, the restraint upon the purchaser is so severe as to impinge on the right of liberty and property. What is required of the purchaser? To some extent he must look after the interests of creditors, if there are any. He must either see that they are paid or notify them in advance of what is to be sold, the price paid and to be paid, and must ask the seller who his creditors are. If there are no creditors the statute does not apply. If the inquiry, when carefully made, discloses no creditors and the purchaser knows of none, he may buy in safety without the inconvenience of inventory or notice. If there are creditors the risk is in proportion to the amount of their claims, and whether it is large or small, they have rights which need protection from a sale made in bad faith, and it is at such sales that the statute strikes. The purchaser may be buying property in which the seller has less real interest than his creditors, and it is reasonable to charge both seller and purchaser with the exercise of some care toward them in the interest of justice and the general welfare. The inconvenience to purchasers is an evil, as it hampers commerce to some extent, but the injury to commerce from fraudulent sales is a much greater evil, so that on the whole commerce is not harmed but helped. The legislature had the right to balance these evils and to promote the common good by trying to do away with the greater. The every-day business of the seller and buyer is not touched, for that is outsite of the statute, but when an extraordinary sale is made, such as can occur but few times in the life of a merchant, certain conditions and restraints are imposed, not to hamper business, but to prevent secret sales in bulk of property usually bought on credit and generally unpaid for when the sale is made. The remedy provided tends to furnish the protection needed by creditors without any interference whatever with ordinary business and without disturbing freedom of contract in the rare and irregular cases to which the act applies any more than was within the power of the legislature according to the principles laid down by repeated adjudications in this court and in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Purchasers who complain of the act as a violation of their constitutional rights are themselves protected by legislation equally drastic, for they could not purchase in safety were it not for the acts in relation to chattel mortgages and conditional sales. They might purchase and pay in good faith and yet have the property taken away from them under a lien they knew nothing about and which they could not discover. As the legislature passed these acts it can repeal them, and in that event purchasers, however careful, might not get a good title, while now, even with the act under consideration in full force, they can get a good title if they only take pains. They can not, therefore, consistently object to such a statute. They can not in fairness assert that interference with an unlimited right of contract is constitutional when it operates in their favor, but unconstitutional when it operates in favor of creditors and against themselves.

It is also claimed that an unreasonable burden is imposed upon a limited class of debtors for the benefit of a limited class consisting of their creditors. A statute which is uniform in its effect upon all persons to whom it applies is not invalid because it applies to a limited number. This act applies to all the people of the State who carry on a certain kind of business, which presents special temptations and opportunities for the commission of fraud. The classification is not arbitrary, but is founded on a "reasonable and just difference between the persons affected and all others." The difference is seen in the nature of a business conducted largely on credit, which, as shown by the records of our courts, furnishes peculiar facilities for the perpetration of a characteristic fraud. As was said by Mr. Justice Brewer in a late case: "It is within the undoubted power of the government to restrain some individuals from all contracts as well as all individuals from some contracts" (Frisbie v. U. S., 157 U. S. 160, 165), and by Mr. Justice Fields in an earlier case:

"Special burdens are often necessary for general benefits. . . . Regulations for these purposes may press with more or less weight upon one than upon another, but they are designed not to impose unequal or unnecessary restrictions upon any one, but to promote, with as little individual inconvenience as possible, the general good. Though, in many respects, necessarily special in their character, they do not furnish just ground of complaint if they operate alike upon all persons and property under the same circumstances and conditions" (Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 31). "The discriminations which are open to objection are those where persons engaged in the same business are subjected to different restrictions or are held entitled to different privileges under the same conditions" (Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 709). The constitution means "that no person or class of persons shall be denied the same protection of the laws which is enjoyed by other persons or other classes in the same place and under like circumstances." Missouri v. Lewis, 101 U. S. 22; Moore v. Missouri, 159 U. S. 673, 678.

Digitized by Google

I close my review by repeating as applicable generally to the case before us the words of the Supreme Court of the United States in a decision of great importance: "The power which the legislature has to promote the general welfare is very great, and the discretion which that department of the Government has, in the employment of means to that end, is very large. While both its power and its discretion must be so exercised as not to impair the fundamental rights of life, liberty, and property . . . yet in many cases of mere administration the responsibility is purely political, no appeal lying except to the ultimate tribunal of the public judgment, exercised either in the pressure of public opinion or by means of the suffrage." Powell v. Penn, 127 U. S. 678, 685, citing Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 370.

The judgment should be affirmed, with costs, and the question certified answered in the affirmative.

Cullen, Ch. J. (dissenting).—I concur entirely in the opinion of my brother Vann, but as the point has now been raised that the statute before us makes unlawful discrimination between sales of one kind of personal property and sales of other personal property, of sales by persons engaged in one character of business and those in another, and, therefore, violates the provision of the Federal Constitution guaranteeing equal protection of the laws, I desire to add a word.

Of course, absolutely arbitrary selection by the legislature in imposing a tax or in creating a crime can not be justified, and for this reason we refused to uphold the imposition of a transfer tax in the Pell case. 171 N. Y. 48. But if there be difference in circumstance which bears some reasonable relation to the classification made by a statute, then that statute must be upheld, however greatly we may doubt its wisdom. Ever since we adopted the Law of Merchant there has been a difference in the title acquired by a bona fide purchaser to different kinds of personal property. The purchaser of a watch or of a bond and mortgage must abide the title of his vendor, though he purchases in the best of good faith for a full consideration. But the purchaser of a railroad bond or a promissory note, if he acts in good faith, acquires title to the security, even though he buys it from a thief. The practical difference between the business of a merchant and that of a farmer is very apparent. A merchant obtains credit on the capital which he has in his business—that is to say, the excess in value of his stock in trade over his debts. He can not secure his creditors by a mortgage on his goods, for a chattel mortgage on a fluctuating stock is void as against the purchaser, and to uphold such a mortgage would destroy the very object for which the goods are sold to him, to wit, for sale to his customers. The case of a farmer is radically different. His capital is principally represented by his land, his stock, his implements, which are the subject of mortgage or lien, and any credit extended to him is accorded far more to his fixed capital than to his expected crops. It is unnecessary, however, to pursue the discussion.

Every business man will appreciate a score of distinctions between the way business is carried on by the one class and by the other. The doctrine contended for, that legislation must be exactly uniform, would be fatal to a large part of the statutory law of this State, which has never been challenged, and under which the community has lived for many years. Take as a single example the transfer tax law. Religious corporations are exempt from the tax, other charitable corporations not, as we have held; but more than that, a legacy or devise to a bishop is exempt, but there is no exemption in favor of any other clergyman or clerical. Our law abounds in similar distinctions, many of which we may think without justification, but the power of the legislature to make those distinctions has not been challenged. Without continuing the argument, however, it seems to me that the recent action of this court in the race course gambling case is conclusive. We have twice upheld, by a unanimous court, the validity of legislation which makes pool selling on horse races outside of the track a felony, punishable by imprisonment in State's prison for not more than two years, while the same act, if committed on the race grounds, is not a crime at all, but subjects the offender only to repayment of the money he has received on the bet. Be the distinction little or great between the conduct of business by merchants engaged in selling goods and that carried on by other owners of personal property, who, to use the judicial expression of the day, will have the temerity to deny that such difference is infinitely greater than that which obtains, either in moral obliquity or in injury to the community, between selling pools inside the fence which surrounds a race track and selling pools outside that fence?

Gray and Bartlett, JJ., concur with Werner and Haight, JJ.; Cullen, Ch. J. (in memorandum), and O'Brien, J., concur with Vann, J.

Judgment reversed, etc.

A minor child is held, in Roller v. Roller (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 893, to have no right of action against her father to recover damages for rape committed by him upon her.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

STEPHEN U. G. JOHNSON, APPELLANT, v. THE UNITED STATES.

PERJURY; FALSE STATEMENT IN APPLICATION FOR CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION.

1. The clause of the second section of the Civil Service act of January 16, 1883, requiring that "every application for examination shall contain among other things a statement under oath setting forth his or her actual bona fide residence," etc., is not to be construed as requiring a sworn statement as to the residence of the applicant only, but applies as well to other matters considered relevant and proper by the Civil Service Commission with the approval of the President.
2. A false statement by the applicant in his application for examination to the effect that he had not before been employed in the Government service, is perjury, within the meaning of sec. 5392 R. S., and punishable as provided therein.

No. 1541. Decided October, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Criminal Court, entered upon a verdict finding him guilty of perjury. Affirmed.

Mr. J. S. Easby-Smith for the United States.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellant, Stephen U. G. Johnson, has been adjudged guilty in the Supreme Court of the District of the crime of perjury and sentenced to imprisonment in jail for the period of eleven months and twenty-nine days.

The indictment charged that, desiring an appointment as letter carrier in the post-office of the city of Washington, the said Johnson, as required by law and the regulations of the Civil Service Commission, made an application to said commission for examination and entry upon the list of persons eligible for appointment to said position; that upon the form of application so required he wrote his answers to certain questions propounded therein and subscribed the same and made oath to the truth of his said answers before one Joseph R. Fague, a notary public for the District of Columbia; that a material fact to be disclosed in said application was whether the applicant had ever been employed in the civil service of the Government of the United States, and separated therefrom, and if so, whether he had resigned or been discharged therefrom; that to the questions whether the applicant had been separated from the Government civil service, and whether he had resigned or had been discharged, he answered "no;" that said statement was knowingly and wilfully false, because the applicant had, in fact, been in the Government civil service, and had been separated therefrom through discharge. A demurrer to the indictment was overruled and the same was tried before a jury, resulting in a verdict of guilty. The defendant then filed a motion in arrest of judgment on the following grounds:

1. That the indictment does not charge an offense under the laws of the United States. 2. That the indictment charges a violation of a pretended rule of the Civil Service Commission and not a law of the United States. 3. That there is no rule of the Civil Service Commission promulgated by the President of the United States which required the defendant to answer the particular questions set out in the indictment. This motion was overruled, and from the judgment entered on the verdict, and imposing sentence, the defendant has prosecuted this appeal.

It is well settled, as contended on behalf of the applicant, that a power conferred upon executive officers to make regulations in aid of the execution of a law, or for the better administration of affairs committed to them, does not extend to making a violation of one of those regulations a criminal offense. But the indictment did not charge the appellant with the offense of violating one of the civil service regulations relating to applications, but the commission of the offense of perjury in violation of section 5392 R. S., which reads as follows:

"Every person who, having taken an oath before a competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any case in which a law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered, that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly, or that any written testimony, declaration, or certificate is true, wilfully and contrary to such oath, states or subscribes any material matter which he does not believe to be true, is guilty of perjury, and shall be punished," etc. . . .

The perjury charged consisted in wilfully making a false answer under oath to one of the questions propounded in the application required by the civil service regulations. If there existed the power to make a regulation specifying the form of questions to be answered by the applicant, and to require oath to be made thereto, then the oath, when administered by an officer lawfully empowered, became an oath authorized by law, and any material statement falsely made became punishable as perjury under said section. U. S. v. Bailey, 9 Pet. 238; Caha v. U. S., 152 U. S. 211, 218; In re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 533.

The final contention is, that by a clause of the second section of the civil service act of January 16, 1883, the power to make a regulation requiring a sworn statement in an application is expressly limited to that relating to the residence of the applicant, wherefore the oath made to the statement set out in the indictment was not only not authorized by law, but was in plain excess of its provisions. If this contention were sound the conclusion would necessarily follow that the indictment is without foundation. Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466. But we can not accept this view of the meaning of the act. The clause referred to provides that "Every application for an examination shall contain among other things a statement under oath setting forth his or her actual bona fide residence at the time of making the application, as well as how long he or she has been a resident of such place."

An avowed purpose of the civil service act was to provide a fair apportionment of appointments to positions in the departments at the capital among the several States according to their population, and to effectuate this it was of prime importance that the residence of each applicant should be truly stated. This being a simple requirement of general application to all cases the Congress did not leave it to the discretion of those charged with the execution of the law. As it was apparent, however, that further detailed information would be requisite to enable them to fully and fairly perform the duties entrusted to them—information that would necessarily vary in its scope in respect of the many different qualifications required of applicants for distinct branches of Government service—the power to make inquiries relating thereto was almost of necessity left to their discretion. These were embraced in the "other things" mentioned in the clause aforesaid. It is true that the clause may not be happily constructed so as to show this intention with absolute certainty, but we think it clear that it must be interpreted as if, by transposition of words, it had been written as follows: Every application for an examination shall contain a statement, under oath, among other things setting forth his or her actual bona fide residence, etc. So read, the act itself required oath to be made not only to the inquiry in regard to residence, but also to others that might be considered relevant and proper by the civil service commission with the approval of the President. This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider the particular effect of the general authority to make regulations conferred by another clause of the same section.

Digitized by Google

The oath having been authorized by law there can be no doubt of the power of a notary public of the District of Columbia to administer it under the provisions of section 986, R. S. D. C., then in force. It is proper to say that the objection to the ihdictment on this last ground was practically abandoned on the argument.

There was no error in overruling the motion and entering judgment upon the verdict. The judgment must be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

An Act to Prevent Fraudulent Sale of Merchandise in the District of Columbia.

EDITOR WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER:

In view of your editorial in this week's issue, and the case of Wright v. Hart in the Court of Appeals of New York reported by you (Vol. 33, Wash. Law Rep. pp. 657 and 658), permit me to offer the following brief note of a case in this District and some other suggestions, together with some other cases, as being of interest. But in the first place, I would call attention to an able paper on the subject by Milton Strasburger, Esq., of the local bar (Vol. 32, Wash. Law Rep. 584).

The case referred to is that of Washington Tobacco Co. v. Mount et al., tried before a justice of the peace and now pending upon appeal in the Supreme Court of the District. The justice filed a written opinion too long to be reproduced, but in which three interesting points were developed. The suit was begun with an attachment on the ground that the defendant had fraudulently disposed of her goods to hinder and delay her creditors. The traversing affidavit set up the defendant's solvency and ability to pay her debts, and admitted the sale but failed to state that she had complied with the act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stats. at Large, 555), the so-called "sale of merchandise in bulk act," which provides that every person who shall bargain for or purchase any stock of goods in bulk shall demand and receive from the vendor at least five days before such purchase a written statement under oath containing the names and addresses of all the vendor's creditors, together with the amount due them, and it shall be the duty of the vendor to furnish such statement five days before such sale. That after having received from the vendor the statement mentioned, the vendor, at least five days before the sale, shall in good faith notify personally or by "wire" or by registered letter each of the creditors; and if these provisions are not complied with the sale as to all creditors of the vendor shall be conclusively presumed fraudulent and void.

It may be of interest to note that the word vendor, in the provision requiring notice to be given to creditors, and which is printed above in italics, should be vendee, and that while a court might construe it as reading vendee, if read as printed it is meaningless. The justice, to satisfy himself that it was not a misprint, obtained a certified copy of the act from the State Department, which shows the error to have been in the original act as signed by the President.

Two questions were made before the justice: First, the constitutionality of the act was attacked; and, second, its applicability to a case like the one under consideration was denied.

The justice said as to the first point: "This being an inferior court, I shall not take upon myself the office of declaring an act of Congress unconstitutional. It is enough to say that similar statutes have been upheld in many jurisdictions; and while the matter is not free from doubt, I do not feel justified in declaring the statute void." But the justice intimated a strong desire to have that question determined by a court of last resort. On the second point, the justice held that the mere sale of goods in bulk being conclusively presumed to be fraudulent, an attachment would lie unless the statute was complied with.

Final judgment having been rendered in the case, it was appealed, and it is hoped may reach the Court of Appeals. Messrs. Wolf & Rosenberg and Lloyd T. Everett appeared for the plaintiff and Messrs. Leckie, Fulton & Cox represented the defendant.

The following cases were developed by the researches of these industrious counsel and are believed to be practically all the cases on the subject:

In Block v. Schwartz, 65 L. R. A., 308 Utah, an act similar to ours held unconstitutional.

In McDaniels v. Connelly, 60 L. R. A., 947, Washington, the law was held constitutional. It was also held constitutional in the following cases: Neas v. Borches, 71 S. W. Rep., Tenn. 50; Squire v. Tellier, 69 N. E. Rep., Mass. 312.

In Fisher v. Herrman, 95 N. W. Rep. Wis. 392, the decision was against the creditor because the statute only provided for a presumption of fraud, not a conclusive presumption of fraud, and the presumption was rebutted. The same state of facts occurred in Hart v. Rooney, 93 Md. 432, and Boyd, J., lays great stress on the fact that the statute raised only a rebuttable and not a conclusive presumption of fraud.

Digitized by Google

Our statute raises a conclusive presumption, and apart from the cumbrous machinery of the law and the many difficulties of administering it, pointed out in the case of Wright v. Hart, supra, the New York Court of Appeals considered the statute objectionable on account of this conclusive presumption.

The writer is informed that one or two other justices of the peace have declined to consider the constitutional question, and that one of the justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has intimated an opinion that the law is constitutional.

The question is one of great interest and importance and should be speedily put beyond the realm of controversy.

A MEMBER OF THE BAR.

October 24, 1905.

The Bankruptcy Law.

[New York Law Journal.]

At a recent meeting of the American Bar Association there was submitted and adopted a unanimous report of the committee on Commercial Law disapproving the bill now pending before Congress for the repeal of the national Bankruptcy Law. In our opinion the action so taken is in harmony with a great preponderance of sentiment of the bar of this country. No one claims that the present act is perfect either in theory or detail; few are sanguine enough to suppose that any act could be framed that would not be open to some criticism and objection. There is, however, a very substantial concurrence in the view that the act was vastly improved by the amendments of 1903; that the situation is far better than to have no national law at all and that the existing act may be still further improved by amendment. Our contemporary, Law Notes, has the following editorial note on the subject, in which we entirely concur:

"It must be remembered that the act of 1898 was not passed with the sole purpose of relieving unfortunate debtors from the burden of their debts. The other and more weighty end in view was the establishment of a uniform system for the distribution of the assets of failing debtors. And in this lies the principal argument in favor of a continuance of the present law. Trade is universal. In commerce, no State lines exist. Therefore, the laws distinctly applicable to trade relations should be uniform, as in the case of the law respecting negotiable paper. With forty-five or more States and territories, each having separate and widely different statutes upon the subject of insolvency and assignments for the benefit of creditors, business can not be carried on with any degree of certainty and confidence. The effect of such a confusion of laws, commonly noticeable, is the restriction of credit and a resultant depression in trade. By far the greater proportion of the business of the country is transacted upon a credit basis, and it has been claimed that a majority of all commercial ventures end in failure. Merchants realize these facts, and a natural reluctance to extend credit even under favorable conditions is greatly enhanced if there be any uncertainty as to the future administration and division of the assets of the debtor in case of failure.

"Such uncertainty is bound to exist when the subject of bankruptcy is regulated solely by State enactments, which in some cases are extremely partial to the debtor. On the contrary, under a national bankruptcy law, these conditions of doubt and uncertainty do not exist. The creditor knows exactly what to expect if his debtor comes to grief, no matter in what commonwealth the latter may be located, and may extend credit as freely as he desires with supreme confidence in his ultimate equality with other creditors before the law. The mere statement of these propositions is a sufficient demonstration of a virtue in the national bankruptcy law far outweighing any objection which has been raised against it. The law should remain permanently in the Federal statute book."

It is to be hoped that members of the bar throughout the Union will bring the weight of their collective influence in favor of defeating the pending bill for a repeal. The occasion also seems opportune for proposing a few amendments to the act which seem most immediately desirable.

1. In his opinion in the Matter of Gilroy and Bloomfield (N. Y. Law Journal, October 3, 1905), Judge Holt remarked that "it is a serious defect in the bankrupt law that it contains no adequate provisions for criminal punishment for the fraudulent concealment of property in contemplation of bankruptcy." The criminal offenses created by section 29, in its present form, are very limited in their scope and apply substantially only to acts committed after the filing of the petition. Under the English Debtor's Act of 1869, which is employed in aid of the bankruptcy law, a long list of acts or omissions of a bankrupt constituting crime is given, many of which comprise acts committed within four months before the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings. There is no good reason why the application of our own Bankruptcy Act should not be similarly extended, nor, as far as we can see, why those who abet and connive at fraudulent bankruptcy, in the capacity of alleged creditors or otherwise, should not also be expressly charged with criminal liability.

2. There is no good reason why corporations should not be permitted to file voluntary petitions in bankruptcy, nor is there any satisfactory ground for the present distinction between the different kinds of corporations against which involuntary petitions may be filed. Under the law of 1867, any business, moneyed, or commercial corporation might become an involuntary bankrupt. It would probably be well to exempt from the operation of the bankruptcy act banks, insurance companies, and any other public or quasi-public companies that are accountable to or under the supervision of a public department or bureau. As to all forms of merely business corporations the law should be uniform.

3. It might be well to amplify the scope of section 14b withholding the discharge of a bankrupt if he has "obtained property on credit from any person upon materially false statements in writing made to such person for the purpose of obtaining such property on credit," by making it sufficient to deny a discharge if the bankrupt has obtained credit upon any false statement in writing (so as beyond doubt to comprise statements made to commercial agencies), and, also—specifically placing the burden of proof on him—if he fails satisfactorily to explain any difference in his financial condition between the time when he made the statement and the time when it appears he is insolvent.

Digitized by Google

4. It might also be well to further extend the concurrent jurisdiction of the Federal courts with the State courts in order that they may be open to the trustee for the collection of ordinary claims or debts and to suits against the trustee. See Collier on Bankruptcy, 5th ed., pp. 266-267.

Payment—Receipt—Duress.

In Earle v. Berry, decided by the Supreme Court of Rhode Island, in May, 1905, 61 Atl. 671, it was held that a mere threat to withhold payment of a debt, except on the giving of a receipt that the amount paid was all that was due, is not duress. The court said in part:

The discrimination between duress and such inequitable conduct as is charged by the plaintiff in this case is clearly made by Cooley, J., in Hackley v. Headley, 45 Mich. 569, 8 N. W. 511, where it is held that "refusal, on demand, to pay a debt that is due, thereby forcing the creditor to receipt in full for only a partial payment, does not constitute duress if the debtor has done nothing unlawful to cause the financial embarrassment which compelled him to submit to the extortion."

The opinion cites and analyzes the following cases: Astley v. Reynolds, 2 Str. 915; Smith v. Bromley, Doug. 696; Ashmole v. Wainwright, 2 Q. B., 837; Harmony v. Bingham, 12 N. Y. 99, 62 Am. Dec. 142; Scholey v. Mumford, 60 N. Y. 498; Chase v. Dwinal, 7 Me, 134, 20 Am. Dec. 352; Shaw v. Woodcock, 7 B. & C. 73; Nelson v. Suddarth, 1 Hen. & M. 350; White v. Heylman, 34 Pa. 142; Sasportas v. Jennings, 1 Bay, 470; Collins v. Westbury, 2 Bay, 211, 1 Am. Dec. 643; Crawford v. Cato, 22 Ga. 594; Chandler v. Sanger, 114 Mass. 364, 19 Am. Rep. 367; Spaids v. Barrett, 57 Ill. 289, 11 Am. Rep. 10; Bates v. Ins. Co., 3 Johns. Cas. 238; Beckwith v. Frisbie, 32 Vt. 559; Adams v. Reeves, 68 N. C. 134, 12 Am. Rep. 627; Briggs v. Lewiston, 29 Me. 472; Grim v. School District, 57 Pa. 433, 98 Am. Dec. 237; First National Bank v. Watkins, 21 Mich. 483; Skeate v. Beale, 11 Ad. & El. 983; Preston v. Boston, 12 Pick. 14; Wilcox v. Howland, 23 pick. 167, and continues:

"Many other cases might be cited, but it is wholly unnecessary. We have examined all to which our attention has been directed, and none is more favorable to the plaintiff's case than those above referred to. Some of them are much less so," citing Atlee v. Backhouse, 3 M. & W. 633; Hall v. Shultz, 4 Johns, 240, 4 Am. Dec. 270; Silliman v. United States, 101 U. S. 465, 25 L. ed. 987, and sums up the the case as follows: "In what did the alleged duress consist in the present case? Merely in this: That the debtors refused to pay on demand a debt already due, though the plaintiff was in great need of the money, and might be financially ruined in case he failed to obtain it. It is not pretended that Hackley and Mr. Gordon had done anything to bring Headly to the condition which made this money so important to him at this very time, or that they were in any manner responsible for his pecuniary embarrassment, except as they failed to pay this demand. The duress, then, is to be found exclusively in their failure to meet promptly their pecuniary obligation.

But this, according to the plaintiff's claim, would have constituted no duress whatever if he had not happened to be in pecuniary straits, and the validity of negotiations, according to this claim, must be determined, not by the defendant's conduct, but by the plaintiff's necessities. The same contract which would be valid if made with a man easy in his circumstances becomes invalid when the contracting party is pressed with the necessity of immediately meeting his bank paper. But this would be a most dangerous as well as a most unequal doctrine, and, if accepted, no one could well know when he would be safe in dealing on the ordinary terms of negotiation with a party who professed to be in great need."

In Silliman v. United States, supra, the owners of certain barges which were employed by the quartermaster's department claimed that they were forced by duress of their property to sign new charter parties at a reduced rate, but the court held that neither the forcible retention of the barges nor the refusal to pay the compensation agreed upon constituted duress. Harlan, J., says: "They yielded to the threat or demand of the department, solely because they required, or supposed they required, money for the conduct of their business or to meet their pecuniary obligations to others. . . . We are aware of no authority in the text books or in the adjudged cases to justify us in holding that the last charter parties were executed under duress. There is present no element of duress in the legal acceptation of that word. The hardships of particular cases should not induce the courts to disregard the long-settled rules of law."

Advice of a public prosecutor that a statutory offense has been committed, based upon a fair and full disclosure of the facts, is held, in Cooper v. Flemming (Tenn.), 68 L. R. A. 849, to protect the prosecuting witness from an action for malicious prosecution, although it is based upon an erroneous construction of the statute.

The liability of a master for injuries caused by a brakeman who wantonly and wilfully kicks a trespasser from a moving car is sustained in Dixon v. Northern Pacific R. Co. (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 895, unless entire absence of authority of brakemen to eject trespassers is shown.

The right to require a license to own, run, or manage a dental office, to be granted after examination as to fitness, is denied in State v. Brown (Wash.), 68 L. R. A. 889, where there is no intention of engaging in the actual practice of dentistry.

Digitized by Google

The right of a union depot company to grant to a transfer company the exclusive right to use a designated portion of its depot grounds for the purpose of standing thereon its hacks and vehicles, and of soliciting the patronage of incoming passengers, is sustained in State ex rel. Sheets v. Union Depot Co. (Ohio), 68 L. R. A. 792.

The right of an individual to challenge the corporate capacity of a foreign corporation as a defense to its right to recover is sustained in Myatt v. Ponca City Land & I. Co. (Okla.), 68 L. R. 810, where, in an action between him and the corporation, the latter attempts to acquire title to property vested in such individual.

An exception of a right of way, which will inure to the benefit of the heirs and assigns of the grantor, is held, in Dee v. King (Vt.), 68 L. R. A. 860, to be created by a clause in a deed of a strip of land "reserving the privilege of a pass . . . in my usual place of crossing," where the pass was used to reach other land of the grantor difficult of access by any other route.

That equity will refuse to impose a lien upon the property of a minor in favor of one who advances money at his request to redeem the property from a mortgage sale, is held in Burton v. Anthony (Or.), 68 L. R. A. 826, notwithstanding his agreement that the claim shall be secured by a lien on the property.

The right of a carriagemaker having in his possession a carriage belonging to a customer for repair and sale on the customer's account to insure the customer's interest therein by a policy taken in his own name is sustained in Johnston v. Charles Abresch Co. (Wis.), 68 L. R. A. 934.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

[Filed October 23, 1905, J. R. Young, Clerk.]

Carlisle & Johnson, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Louis P. Shoemaker, Trustee, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith. No. 25,621. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to the west half of lot seven (7) in Samuel Davidson's recorded subdivision of lots in square one hundred and sixty-three (163), fronting fifteen (15) feet on the north side of K street northwest, by depth of one hundred (100) feet eleven (11) inches, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant by his solicitors, Carlisle & Johnson, it is this 23d day of October, A. D., 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post at least once in the month of October and at least three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 42-3t

[Seal.]

John S. Alleman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding Probate Court.

Estate of Elizabeth C. Opperman, Deceased.

No. 13,221. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Albert F. Fox, it is ordered this 27th day October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachael A. Todd (nee Kulp), Hannah E. Coffee, and Hester R. Smith, of Doylestown, Pa.; Michal C. Kulp, of Lynchburg, Va.; Ida Dangler, of Atlantic City, N. J.; William C. Kuhn, of Philadelphia, Pa., and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 42-3t

[Seal]

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of LeRoy M. Taylor, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 14th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., Andrew Parker, Treasurer, by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. —. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

John Lewis Johnson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM A. FOY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,135. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James William Orme, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM B. ORME, 1623 28th st. N. W.; CHAS. B. BAILEY, 1424 Stoughton street. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,201. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Oscar Luckett, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
James Hyde v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Charles Carter.
No. 25,699. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to that parcel of land situated in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as and being lot numbered sixty-four (64) in A. D. Jessup's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and eighteen (218), as per plat recorded in liber R. L. H., folio 236, of the records of the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein, it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Oscar Luckett, it is this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Charles Carter, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter at least once in the month of October and three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. oct 27-nov 3,10,17

Legal Notices.

George F. Collins, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth A. Rawlings, Deceased.
No. 13,019. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by James S. Rawlings, it is ordered this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Elizabeth A. Rawlings, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

C. C. Clarke, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Robert Duncan Swingle, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. EMMA C. SWINGLE, 1443 Huntington Place. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,231. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

E. H. Thomas and A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding a District Court.
In the Matter of the Extension of M Street East of Bladensburg Road, in the District of Columbia. No. 649. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, pursuant to the provisions of an act of Congress approved March 3, 1905, entitled "An act for the extension of M street east of Bladensburg road, and for other purposes," have filed a petition in this court praying the condemnation of the land necessary for the extension of said M street east of Bladensburg road, in the District of Columbia, with a width of ninety feet, as shown on a plat or map prepared by the said Commissioners and annexed to their said petition, and marked "Exhibit D. C. No. 1;" and praying also that a jury of seven (7) judicious, disinterested men, not related to any person interested in these proceedings, and not in the service or employment of the District of Columbia or of the United States, be summoned by the United States marshal for the District of Columbia to assess the damages each owner of land taken may sustain by reason of the extension of said M street east of Bladensburg road and the condemnation of the land necessary for the purposes of such extension, and to assess the benefits resulting therefrom, as provided in the aforesaid act of Congress. It is, by the court, this 19th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered: That all persons having any interest in these proceedings be, and they are hereby, warned and required to appear in this court on or before the 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and to continue in attendance until the court shall have made its final order ratifying and confirming the award of damages and the assessment of benefits of the jury to be summoned herein; and it is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be published once in The Washington Law Reporter and on six secular days in The Evening Star, The Washington Times, and The Washington Post, newspapers published in said District, before the said 8th day of November, A. D. 1905. It is further ordered that a copy of this notice and order be served by the said marshal or his deputies upon such owners of the land to be condemned herein as may be found by the said marshal or his deputies within the District of Columbia before the said 8th day of November, A. D. 1905. By the court: ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 43-1t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Blair & Thom, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Equity.
In the Matter of the Change of Name of Dallas Corbin, Otherwise Known as Henry Corbin.
Equity, No. 25,751.

Upon consideration of the petition of Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, this day filed, praying that his name be changed to Henry Corbin, it is, this 13th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that notice in said case, in accordance with section 1299 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia, be published in the newspapers as follows: On the 13th day of October, 1905, Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, filed his petition in this court, stating that he had assumed the name of Henry Corbin by mistake; that he had acquired real estate; conducted business as an expressman, and had been for many years generally known as Henry Corbin; and the prayer of said petition is as follows: That this honorable court will pass an order changing your petitioner's name from Dallas Corbin to Henry Corbin and make Henry Corbin his legal name for all intents and purposes. That said notice in said form shall be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in [Seal] The Washington Post. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Attest: J. R. Young, Clerk, by W. E. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 43-3t

William C. Prentiss, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Kunigunda Fedarwisch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of October, 1905. JOHN T. BRANSON, 614 11th st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,177. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

James F. Bundy, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Allen B. Hamm, Deceased.
No. 13,209. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by James F. Bundy, it is ordered this 24th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mary Hamm, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Bee once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

Irving Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Washington Matthews, Deceased.
No. 13,208. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Caroline Matthews, it is ordered this 24th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alphons Matthews, Clement Matthews, Nicholas Matthews, and Maria Matthews, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 4th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted; provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said [Seal] return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

Legal Notices.

Maurice Kelly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Anna M. Rochester, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. WM. B. ROCHESTER, 1320 18th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,108. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

A. B. Keefer, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alice Healy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. DENNIS L. HEALEY, 1154 5th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,104. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 24 Defrees street, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot number seventy-six (76) in Shephard's recorded subdivision of square number six hundred and twenty-three (623), to Christian Loos, for the sum of two thousand ($2,000) dollars cash, less fifty ($50.00) dollars brokerage commission, it is by the court this 20th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 20th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 43-3t

E. L. Gies, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard F. Sorg, Complainant, v. Ollie A. Sorg et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,295.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 19th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Ollie A. Sorg, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40th) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once a week for three (3) consecutive weeks prior to said day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 43-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of October, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Boyd Taylor, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,144. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles F. Scott, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. MARTHA SCOTT, 1455 Binney st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,188. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

---

Ellwood P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Myers, Deceased.
No. 13,210. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ellwood P. Morey, executor, it is ordered this 26th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Herbert P. Myers, Fannie Hitch, Edward H. Myers, Mary M. Reynolds, Wellborn M. Reynolds, Herbert L. Reynolds, Dudley W. Reynolds, Homer V. Reynolds, Edward H. Reynolds, James M. Walker, Mary C. Walker, William M. Walker, Daniel McI. Walker, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 42-3t

---

SECOND INSERTION.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edward J. Adams, Jr., late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. WILLIAM F. ADAMS, 821 C. st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,192. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

---

J. J. Darlington, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Annie E. Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 17th day of October, 1905. RICHARD HARRISON JOHNSON, 709 C st. S. W.; WILLIAM A. WIMSATT, 215 8th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,216. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Legal Notices.

Joseph H. Stewart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term of Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of Robert W. Brown, executor herein, reporting the sale of lot five (5) in A. H. Lee's recorded subdivision of lots numbered C and D in Elizabeth Morrison's subdivision of square numbered two hundred and eighty (280) to William A. Hedrick for the sum of eight hundred and thirty-five ($835.00) dollars, it is this 17th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court ordered that said sale be ratified, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905; this order to be published once a week in the Washington Law Reporter for three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. 42-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Little C. Osman, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Harry G. Meem, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,184. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

---

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Celia E. V. Beall, Deceased.
No 12,871. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Lizzie B. Gladman, it is ordered this 16th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to M. Elmer Carrier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 42-3t

---

A. A. Birney and G. E. Tralles, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
John W. Butterfield, Complainant, v. William L. Jones, Receiver, and Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,698.

The object of this suit is to establish and enforce an equitable lien in favor of the complainant upon a certain draft or warrant issued by the United States in settlement of the claim of the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., William L. Jones, receiver, for $5,000, which said sum has been appropriated by Congress to pay said claim, and for a receiver to take possession of said draft or warrant, and endorse and collect the same. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 20th day of October, A.D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William L. Jones and the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., a corporation, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said return day in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 42-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Isaac H. Ford, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alfred Ford, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 20th day of September, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1906. JOHN FORD, 312 2d st. S. E.; MARY M. FORD. 312 2d st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,168. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Thomas P. Woodward and Geo. R. Linkins, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William R. Woodward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1905. THOMAS P. WOODWARD, 507 E. st. N. W.; GEO. R. LINKINS, 507 E st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,175. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notce That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta M. Martin, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of October, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MARTIN, 617 L st N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,203. Administration. [Seal] 42-3

THIRD INSERTION.

Saml. Maddox, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Thomas Culhane, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of October, A. D. 1 06; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of October, 1905. BRIDGET M. CULHANE, 921 N. J. ave. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,199. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Lyon & Lyon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louise Lansburgh, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. GUSTAVE LANSBURG, 1018 Vt. ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,211. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Irvin B. Wright, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. FRANK S. BRIGHT, 415 Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,195. Administration. 41-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys,

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Brison Norris, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 10th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. MARY E. NORRIS, 501 H. st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,207. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Eugene A. Jones, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Adolf Cluss, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of October, 1905. LILLIAN C. DAW, 2301 H st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,179. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Bernard P. Mimmack, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Catalina Juliana Mason Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10 day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of October, 1905. CASSIE MASON MYERS JULIAN-JAMES, 1602 20th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,185. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

J. J. Waters, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Stanley Pearce, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of October, 1905. GEORGE PIMPER, 3245 M st. N. W.; HENRY F. KUNKEL, 806 20th st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,062. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Albert E. Shoemaker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Richard Edwards, Deceased.
No. 13,213. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate and record of the last will and testament of said deceased, by Susan Edwards, it is ordered, this 12th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Sarah Wilkins, Alice Minor, and Garrit S. Edwards, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Wednesday, the 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.
[Seal]
Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 41-3t

E. H. Thomas

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 48 and 52 Q street northeast, in the county of Washington, District of Columbia, being lots numbered one hundred and five (105) and one hundred and seven (107) in Francis A. Blundon's subdivision of lots in square numbered three, "West Eckington," as per plat recorded in liber county No. 11, folio 29, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, to Charles L. Selecman for the sum of seventy-five hundred ($7,500) dollars cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 6th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 6th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy.
[Seal]
Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 41-3t

Mason N. Richardson, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Ira T. Bryant et al. v. Jerome A. Johnson et al.
No. 24,729. Equity Docket No.—

The object of this suit is to subject lot 36, sq. 194, in the District of Columbia, to the claim of complainants as judgment creditors, and to divest defendants of all title and interest thereof. A copy of this order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks prior to the return day hereto. On motion of the complainant, it is this 10th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Robert H. Bundy, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 41-3t
[Seal]

George F. Graham, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Columbus J. Eslin, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 8th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 9th day of October, 1905. BENJ. J. ESLIN, GEO. F. GRAHAM, by Geo. F. Graham, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,505. Administration. [Seal.] 41-3t

Legal Notices.

SIXTH INSERTION.

[Filed September 18, 1905.]

A. Leftwich Sinclair, Attorney for the District of Columbia

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term as a District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.
In the Matter of the Payment of Damages Resulting to Adjacent Property From Changes in the Grade of Streets, Avenues, and Alleys Authorized by the Act Approved February 28, 1903, Relating to the Construction of a Union Railroad Station in the District of Columbia. No. 671. District Court Docket, No. 2.

Notice is hereby given that we, the undersigned, having been designated and appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a special term as a United States District Court for the District of Columbia, as a commission to appraise the damages resulting to adjacent property from changes in the grade of streets, avenues, and alleys authorized by the act of Congress approved February 28, 1903, relating to the construction of a union railroad station in the District of Columbia, will meet at 2 o'clock p. m. on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1905, at the United States Court House (City Hall), in the District of Columbia, in a room to be assigned us by the United States marshal for said District, for the purpose of viewing the property affected by the changes in the grade of the following-named streets, avenues, and alleys, and hearing testimony in the matter of the damages resulting from said changes of grade, in accordance with the terms and provisions of the act of Congress approved April 22, 1904, entitled "An act to provide for payment of damages on account of changes due to construction of the Union Station, District of Columbia," to wit: "L" street northeast, between First and Third streets; Florida avenue northeast, between Second and Fifth streets; "N" street northeast, between First and North Capitol streets; the minor street and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-eight (748); and the alleys in square numbered seven hundred and forty-nine (749), and Second street, "K" street, and "L" street, surrounding the said square. Section 8 of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved April 22, 1904, provides "that the owner of any real property, damaged by the said change of grade, shall have the right within sixty (60) days after the date fixed for the meeting of said commission to file a petition with said commission, which shall be signed and sworn to, for an allowance of damages; and upon the failure of any such owner to thus present his claim within said period, his said right shall cease and determine." CHAS. A. BAKER, GEORGE W. MOSS, GEORGE SPRANSY, Commission to Appraise Damages. A true copy. Test: J. R. YOUNG, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 33-6t
[Seal]

SEVENTH INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington and W. C. Sullivan, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Gilbert J. Osterman et al. v. Robert E. Poole et al.
No. 25,518. Equity.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to sublots 108 to 114, inclusive, square 104, Washington, D. C. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Robert E. Poole, Susan Erwin, and Ann Council, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of Martin Casmer, of Martin Kershnor, of Margaret Freeman, of Charles W. Goldsborough, and of Charles Henry Goldsborough, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month for the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter. JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clk.
au 11,18,25; sept. 8,22; oct. 13,27

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 44

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - NOVEMBER 3, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 689
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
District of Columbia, plaintiff in error, v. Percy T. Lewis 691
SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Memorial Evangelical Lutheran Church, complainant, v. Northwestern National Insurance Company, defendant 692
Legal Notices 699

Memorial Meeting of the Bar.

The meeting of the bar of the District of Columbia, held on Friday afternoon, October 27, 1905, to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. William J. Miller and Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, was largely attended. Mr. Justice Gould presided and Mr. Charles W. Clagett acted as secretary. Resolutions in regard to the death of Mr. Miller were presented by Mr. Eugene Carusi in behalf of the committee, and addresses paying fitting tribute to his character as a man and lawyer were made by Mr. Carusi, Mr. Frank W. Hackett, Mr. T. Percy Myers, and Mr. Samuel R. Bond. The high regard entertained for Mr. Duvall by his brethren at the bar was beautifully expressed in the resolutions presented by Mr. R. Ross Perry, and in the addresses made by Mr. Perry, Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon, and Mr. Edward H. Thomas, the last named speaking especially for those who had been associated with Mr. Duvall in his work as corporation counsel. We hope at an early day to give place in our columns to a full report of the proceedings at the meeting, including the resolutions and addresses.

An adjourned meeting will be held on Friday afternoon, November 3, to take action respecting the death of the late Justice Andrew Wylie.

Fraud and Deceit—Sales of Land—Caveat Emptor.

In the case of Judd v. Walker, decided by the St. Louis Court of Appeals and reported in the Central Law Journal for October 27, 1905, the court held that where a vendor of land deliberately and falsely represents a tract of land as containing 178 acres, when in fact it contained only 153 acres, the vendee may recover of the vendor the value of the acres sold in excess of those actually received, and the doctrine of caveat emptor is no defense, even though the vendee saw the land. The opinion of the court is, in part, as follows:

1. There are cases which hold that where the parties go upon the land during negotiations and the seller points out the true boundaries thereof to the purchaser with the statement of the number of acres contained therein, and upon this statement of the acreage the purchaser relies and purchases the land, no action of deceit can be maintained by the injured party on account thereof. The reason assigned in these cases seems to be twofold; first, that parties ought not to rely on such statements, and second, that the parties were upon the land and the means of information were equally open to both, therefore the rule caveat emptor applies, as the true number of acres could be ascertained by ordinary vigilance on the part of the purchaser. This doctrine is announced in the following cases: Gordon v. Parmalee, 2 Allen (Mass.), 212; Mooney v. Miller, 102 Mass. 217; Credle v. Swindell, 63 N. Car. 305.

The Kansas City Court of Appeals, in the case of Mires v. Summerville, 85 Mo. App. 183, followed the Massachusetts case of Gordon v. Parmalee, supra, and applied the same rule to the case there in decision. In that case as reported, however, it does not appear that the seller pointed out the true boundaries of the land, and this seems to be the principal fact upon which the judgments were predicated in the cases above cited. In fact, the Kansas City Court of Appeals, in the case mentioned, carried the doctrine of caveat emptor to its extreme limit if not beyond it, and we are confronted with their adjudications in the present controversy. After much careful and painstaking investigation, we are satisfied that the law is quite generally established throughout those jurisdictions where the common law obtains, to the effect that false statements and representations made by the vendor, positively as of his own knowledge as to the number of acres in a certain tract of land when the tract is being negotiated by the acre, are not regarded as expressions of opinion, but on the contrary are considered statements of fact, and as such constitute fraud. This is certainly the doctrine of our supreme court. McGhee v. Bell, 170 Mo. 121 (see, also, dissenting opinion, 170 Mo. 150–151); Buford v. Caldwell, 3 Mo. 335; Hitchcock v. Baughan, 44 Mo. App. 42; Brooking v. Shinn, 25 Mo. App. 277; Leicher v. Keeney, 98 Mo. App. 394; Starkweather v. Benjamin, 32 Mich. 305; Dunn v. White's Admr., 63 Mo. 181; Foster v. Kennedy, 38 Ala. 359; Beardsley v. Duntley, 69 N. Y. 577; Coon v. Atwell, 46 N. H. 510;

Digitized by Google

Whitney v. Allaire, 1 N. Y. 305; Clark v. Baird, 9 N. Y. 183; Weatherford v. Fishback, 4 Ill. 170; Griswold v. Gebbie, 126 Pa. St. 353; Hill v. Browser, 76 N. Car. 124.

This view has become almost universally recognized and adopted by the courts throughout the country. The generally accepted doctrine on the subject is thus announced in the 14 Amer. and Eng. Ency. of Law, 2d ed. 45: "Statements as to Boundaries and Acreage.—There are some cases in which it has been held or said that a false statement as to the boundaries of a tract of land, or as to the number of acres which it contains, will not support an action of deceit, but they base the rule on the ground that such statements ought not to be relied upon, and not on the ground that they are expressions of opinion. Statements as to such matters, if made by a person positively, and as of his own knowledge, are statements of fact, and have often been held to constitute fraud."

In fact, the rule announced above is the same which applies in cases of fraud and deceit generally and is to the effect that the party owning the property or article, is presumed to know the facts. No one has prevented him from knowing them and one dealing with him has the right to rely upon the positive statements and representations of fact pertaining thereto, even though the means of knowledge were specially open to him, provided the representations were relied upon and were sufficient to and did actually induce action, for the law will not hear the guilty party say, "You were yourself guilty of negligence;" or, "You ought not to have trusted me." Bigelow on Frauds, 523–524; Kerr on Frauds (2d ed.), 40–42; Cottrill v. Krum, 100 Mo. 397; Barker v. Scudder, 56 Mo. 272; Carter v. Black, 46 Mo. 384; Buford v. Caldwell, 3 Mo. 477; Smithers v. Bircher, 2 Mo. App. 499.

2. This case reeks with fraud. The evidence shows conclusively that Walker made positive representations to Bourland as to the number of acres in the tract from the inception of the trade up to the time of drawing the contract, at which time he suggested that as he was not sure of the exact number of acres in excess of ninety, they would call the irregular tract 90 acres in round numbers, leaving the impression that in the interim, prior to the making of the deed, he would ascertain the true acreage. Bourland relied upon what he said and trusted to him to make good his representations. Walker himself drew the deed for 178 acres, and procured his principal's signature thereto by giving to him an obligation of indemnity as mentioned, and collected the cash for the full number of acres as represented by him in the first instance, knowing at the time that he was then and there perpetrating a heinous fraud upon the purchaser. It would seem that in a case of such gross deception a recovery should be had without much difficulty. The respondent contends, however, that inasmuch as Bourland went upon the land twice and viewed the same, the parties were then upon an equal footing, and means of knowledge being open to him, the rule of caveat emptor applies; that it was the purchaser's duty to use his senses and vigilance and ascertain for himself the true facts, and not having done so, a recovery is precluded. The cases of Mires v. Summerville, Mooney v. Miller, Gordon v. Parmalee, and Credle v. Swindell, supra, are cited and relied upon as supporting this contention. Chancellor Kent says:

"The common law affords to every one reasonable protection against fraud in dealing, but it does not go to the romantic length of giving indemnity against the consequences of indolence and folly, or a careless indifference to the ordinary and accessible means of information. It reconciles the claims of convenience with the duties of good faith, to every extent compatible with the interests of commerce. This it does by requiring the purchaser to apply his attention to those particulars which may be supposed within the reach of his observation and judgment; and the vendor to communicate those particulars and defects which can not be supposed to be immediately within the reach of such attention. If the purchaser be wanting of attention to these points, where attention would have been sufficient to protect him from surprise or imposition, the maxim, caveat emptor, ought to apply." 2 Kent's Comm. (14th ed.), 484–485.

The true test of the application of the rule caveat emptor, is the liability of the defect complained of to the observation and judgment of one exercising ordinary and usual business attention, care, and circumspection; that is, such care and attention as is usually exercised by ordinarily prudent men in like business affairs. The law requires this much and no more. It does not require nor expect the purchaser to exercise a degree of care and prudence greater than business men ordinarily exercise in like transactions. The rule is a reasonable one and its chief purpose is to require men to see and know such things as are open and patent to their senses upon penalty. It is where the defect complained of is open and patent to the senses of one exercising ordinary business care and attention only that the rule of caveat emptor applies. 2 Kent's Comm. (14th ed.), 479–484; Weatherford v. Fishback, 4 Ill. 170; Starkweather v. Benjamin, 32 Mich. 305. The rule mentioned has been carried to its full extent in this State. Citing Morse v. Rathburn, 49 Mo. 91; McFarland v. Carver, 34 Mo. 195; Langdon v. Green, 49 Mo. 163.

Each of these cases, and in fact all of the well-considered cases, treat of the rule as one resting upon reason and applying only where the matters complained of were equally open to the senses of the parties and liable to discovery by the exercise of ordinary business capacity, and, in fact, it is said the principle is not applicable at all where there is a positive misrepresentation of a fact essential and material to the subject in question, and proper diligence has been used by the purchaser in the course of the transaction, and proper diligence is only such diligence as is usually employed by prudent men in like affairs. Kerr on Frauds (2d ed.), 42, 14 Amer. and Eng. Ency. Law (2d ed.), 119. On the other hand, in Stebbins v. Eddie, 4 Mason, 414 and 420, Judge Story says: "Where the sale is fair and the parties are equally innocent, there is little of any hardship and much convenience in holding to the rule of caveat emptor." We might add here that the general doctrine laid down in the books as elementary is that the doctrine of notice and means of knowledge has no application where distinct "means of knowledge easily within reach" employed in some of the cases ought not to be construed to require the purchaser to seek out and employ a surveyor for the purpose of verifying a fact positively asserted by the seller.

Digitized by Google

A land owner is held, in Kansas City N. W. R Co. v. Schwake (Kan.), 68 L. R. A. 673, to have no right to recover damages for injury to lateral support of his property until the earth is so much disturbed that it slides or falls, since the actionable wrong for impairment to lateral support is not the excavation, but the act of allowing the land to fall. An elaborate note to this case reviews all the other authorities on liability for removal of lateral or subjacent support of land in its natural condition.

Failure to make payment for articles delivered under a contract for the manufacture of articles, during a series of years, to be delivered in instalments when ordered, and to be paid for as delivered, is held, in Ross Meehan Foundry Co. v. Royer Wheel Co. (Tenn.), 68 L. R. A. 829, to entitle the manufacturer to declare the contract rescinded, and decline to make further deliveries under it.

That a railroad company may be found negligent in running a heavy freight train up grade at double its schedule speed when no necessity is shown therefor, and where, by reason of dryness of the season, and heavy wind, and proximity of inflammable buildings, there is great danger of setting fire to buildings, is declared in Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Fritts (Va.), 68 L. R. A. 864.

For the purpose of determining which clause of the statute of limitations is applicable, it is held, in Fowlkes v. Lea (Miss.), 68 L. R. A. 925, that a recital of the consideration in a conveyance of real estate creates a contract in writing, although the vendee makes no express promise to pay. The question of recital of money consideration in a deed as contractual is considered in a note to this case.

A statute defining the practice of medicine so as to include every method of treating disease when done for gain, and requiring practitioners to obtain a license from a board composed exclusively of doctors of medicine, is held, in Territory v. Newman (N. M.), 68 L. R. A. 783, not to be unconstitutional as class legislation.

The running of the statutes of limitations against a right of action by a corporation to recover fraudulent profits made by its promoters is held, in Pietsch v. Milbrath (Wis.), 68 L. R. A. 945, not to be prevented by the fact that they are in control of the corporation, so as to prevent anyone from obtaining knowledge of the facts.

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, PLAINTIFF IN ERROR,
v.
PERCY T. LEWIS.

POLICE REGULATIONS; DISCHARGE OF FIREARMS WITHIN CITY LIMITS.

1. Section 5 of the Police Regulations promulgated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, prohibiting the discharge of firearms within the city limits "without a special permit therefor from the major and superintendent of police," held valid.
2. A judgment of the Police Court quashing an information charging a violation of the regulation, on the ground of the invalidity of the regulation, reversed.

No. 1575. Decided October 17, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Reversed.

Mr. E. H. Thomas and Mr. James Francis Smith for the plaintiff in error.

Mr. W. J. Lambert and Mr. D. W. Baker for the defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

An information in the Police Court charged the defendant in error, Percy T. Lewis, with the violation of section 5 of the Police Regulations, which prohibits the discharge of firearms, etc., in the city of Washington "without a special permit therefor from the major and superintendent of police." To review the judgment quashing the information, on the ground of the invalidity of the regulation, this writ of error has been allowed.

It is not seriously denied that the subject-matter of the prohibition of the discharge of firearms in the city is one reasonably within the police powers conferred upon the municipal authorities, but it is contended that that power was not reasonably and legally exercised in the regulation aforesaid. The objection to its validity is founded on the clause which gives the superintendent of police the power to permit the discharge of firearms upon application, without defining the conditions of his exercise of discretion. The contention is that the clause in question is not only an attempt to delegate legislative powers to the superintendent of police, but also to commit the entire matter to his arbitrary discretion.

We are of the opinion that the Police Court erred in sustaining the objections to the information. The regulation itself contains the prohibition and delegates no such authority to the superintendent of police. Apprehending that special conditions might arise which could not reasonably be anticipated and provided for, under which it would be reasonable and expedient to permit the discharge of firearms and other explosives, special power of permission thereof to meet such contingencies was delegated to the municipal agent whose particular duty it is to look after the public security. The general power of regulation and prohibition included the power to determine under what conditions the prohibited act might be permitted, and this power of permission was an administrative function delegated to the superintendent of police to effectuate the purpose of the regulation. Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 48. In that case an ordinance of the city of Boston, which prohibited public speaking upon the common except by permission of the mayor, was upheld as a reasonable exercise of the public power conferred upon the municipality.

Digitized by Google

That the discretion committed to the superintendent of police in respect of granting permission to discharge firearms under certain conditions of necessity or expediency apparent to him, might, in instances, be arbitrarily exercised, does not render the regulation unreasonable and therefore invalid. Barnes v. D. C., 24 App. D. C. 459, 460.

It follows that the judgment must be reversed with costs and the cause remanded with direction to overrule the motion to quash the information and to proceed with the trial in a manner not inconsistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

MEMORIAL EVANGELICAL LUTHERAN CHURCH, COMPLAINANT,

v.

NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, DEFENDANT.

EQUITY; MISTAKE OF FACT; REFORMATION OF POLICY OF INSURANCE.

1. In all cases where a court of equity is asked to reform a written instrument because of a mistake of fact, it must appear that the mistake is mutual. A mistake on one side may be ground for rescinding but not for reforming a written agreement.
2. In a suit for the reformation of an agreement on the ground of mistake, before the relief prayed for can be granted the court must be satisfied by convincing evidence that a mistake has been made or an accident has occurred which has resulted in a written agreement different from that intended by the parties.
3. In a suit to reform a policy of fire insurance by striking therefrom a clause entitled "the reduced rate average clause" (which it appeared had been plainly stenciled on the face of the policy at the time it was delivered to the agent of the insured), and for the enforcement of the policy as thus reformed, upon the ground that this clause had been introduced into the policy by accident and mistake and contrary to the terms of the contract of insurance previously agreed upon, the answer of the defendant denied that the said clause had been inserted in the policy through mistake and accident. Held, upon a review of the evidence, that it failed to show that a mistake had been made, or that an accident occurred which resulted in an agreement different from that intended by the parties to it; and that the bill must be dismissed.

In Equity, No. 24,714. Decided October 24, 1905.

HEARING on a bill in equity to reform a policy of fire insurance. Bill dismissed.

Messrs. Ralston & Siddons for the complainant.

Messrs. Worthington, Heald & Frailey for the defendant.

Mr. Justice ANDERSON delivered the opinion of the Court:

This cause comes before the court on bill, answer, replication, and the testimony. The object of the bill is the reformation of the policy of fire insurance placed by the defendant company upon the church property of the complainant by striking therefrom a clause entitled "The Reduced Rate Average Clause," or what is commonly called the 80 per cent clause, and for the enforcement of the policy as thus reformed, upon the ground, as alleged in the bill, that this clause was introduced into the policy by accident and mistake and contrary to the terms of the contract of insurance previously agreed upon. The bill recites that on July 23, 1900, complainant, through its duly authorized agents, contracted with the defendant company for a policy of insurance on its said building, additions, etc., in the sum of $6,000 for a term of three years at a total premium of $30 to be paid and which was paid by the complainant to the defendant; that thereupon the defendant company issued to and delivered to the complainant its policy, a copy of which is set out in the bill. That on or about July 15, 1903, and shortly prior to the expiration of this policy, the complainant, being still the sole owner of this property and desiring to keep the same covered against loss by fire to the same extent and upon the same terms and conditions and for the same period of time, contracted with the defendant company to have said policy of insurance and all of its conditions continued in force for an additional period of three years from July 23, 1903 (the date of expiration of the former policy) to July 23, 1906; and that thereupon, on July 15, 1903, the defendant, "with the intent and design to carry into effect said contract of insurance," issued and delivered to the complainant the policy of insurance here in question and received from complainant the agreed premium of $30, a copy of which policy is annexed to the bill. It is further averred, in paragraph 6 of the bill, "that, although at the time of entering into its said agreement and contract with the defendant for the extension and renewal of said policy of insurance first hereinbefore set out, it was perfectly well understood by and between the agents of your complainant and the defendant that the said policy of insurance was to be kept in force upon the terms and conditions set out in said first-mentioned policy, yet nevertheless by accident and mistake, and without any new consideration to your complainant moving, there was inserted in said renewal policy a clause, commonly known as the 80 per cent clause, or the percentage coinsurance clause, the same being in the words following, to wit:

"'Reduced Rate Average Clause.—In consideration of the reduced rate at which this policy is written, it is expressly stipulated and made a condition of this contract that this company shall be liable for no greater proportion of any loss than the amount hereby insured bears to 80 per cent of the actual cash value of the property described herein at the time when such loss shall happen, nor for more than the proportion which this policy bears to the total insurance thereon; provided, however, that if the aggregate claim for any loss shall not exceed five (5) per cent of such actual cash value, no special inventory or appraisement of the undamaged property shall be required.

"'If this policy be divided into two or more items, the foregoing conditions shall apply to each item separately; or if two or more buildings or their contents be included in a single item, the application of the provision as to special inventory or appraisement shall be limited to each building and its contents.'

Digitized by Google

"By reason of which clause, it is alleged, the liability of the defendant company, in the event that the complainant should suffer a loss by fire less than 80 per cent of the actual cash value of said property, would be greatly diminished, and the security and protection afforded the complainant under the said first mentioned policy, and the contract and agreement for the renewal thereof correspondingly decreased."

It is further set out in the bill that it was and is the custom of the company in renewing its policies to issue a new policy identical with the one expired, excepting as to dates, instead of renewal receipts, and, so knowing from its previous dealings with the defendant company, complainant, upon receiving said policy and knowing it to be merely a renewal of the previous one, "and relying upon the contract and agreement aforesaid, . . . did not examine said policy and did not discover the presence of the 80 per cent clause until demand for payment of loss, when its attention was called thereto by defendant;" and that thereupon complainant demanded of defendant that the policy be reformed so as to express the real contract between the parties, but such demand was then and still is refused by defendant. Then follows the averment that the complainant would not have placed said insurance with defendant company, nor accepted its said policy, if it had known of the presence of this 80 per cent clause. The eighth and last paragraph of the bill then sets out that on January 29, 1904, said property was damaged by fire to the extent of $16,195.84, as ascertained by an appraisement wherein the actual cash or sound value of the property insured was fixed at $75,000; that the whole insurance upon the property was $20,000, divided among five different companies, of which the defendant company had $6,000; that none of the policies, except that of the defendant, had the 80 per clause; that upon settlement of the loss, the proportion of the defendant company—when its said policy is reformed as sought by this bill—is 30 per cent of the total loss, or $4,858.75, but that the defendant insists that it is liable only for such proportion of said loss of $16,195.84 as $6,000, the amount of its policy, bears to 80 per cent of $75,000, the actual cash value of said property, as provided in said 80 per cent clause; in other words, that it recognizes a liability for but 10 per cent of said loss, to wit, $1,619.58[1] instead of 30 per cent, or $4,858.75, a difference of $3,239.17.

The answer of the defendant denies, first, that the complainant contracted with the defendant that it should have the policy of July 23, 1900, and the conditions, provisions, and limitations thereof, continued in force for an additional period of three years; second, it denies that at the time of the issuance of the policy of July, 1903, it was understood between the respective agents of the parties to this suit that said insurance was to be kept in force upon the terms and conditions set out in the policy of July 23, 1900, and that the policy of July, 1903, should be identical as to terms and conditions with the policy of July, 1900, and also that the "reduced rate average clause" was inserted in said policy by mistake and accident, but asserts that the same was so inserted with the knowledge and consent of the complainant before the premium therefor was paid. It further denies that any step was taken or act done by it to deceive the complainant as to the true meaning and effect of said policy, but, on the contrary, that it was particular to fully inform the complainant, through complainant's agents, of the exact conditions of said policy and especially as to the reduced rate average clause. The other allegations of the bill not inconsistent with these denials are admitted.

It will be observed from this statement of the case that the issue joined between the parties is a clearly defined question of fact, namely, was this reduced rate average clause inserted in the policy through mistake and accident? If it were so inserted, within the recognized meaning of these terms, then it is the plain duty of the court to reform the policy by eliminating therefrom this clause, and to enforce the policy as thus reformed; otherwise to refuse the relief prayed.

As has been frequently announced by the courts and text writers, the annulling or reforming of an executed transaction is an exercise of supreme judicial power, and should be exercised with great caution.

It is fundamental that—"In all cases where a court of equity is asked to reform a written instrument, because of a mistake of fact, it must appear that the mistake is mutual." Eaton on Equity, p. 275, par. 117. This is the inflexible rule by which this class of cases is governed. In such a case, that is, where the mistake is mutual, it is a well established rule in equity that relief will be granted. Story, in his Commentaries on Equity Jurisprudence, thus states the rule:

"Equity interferes in cases of written agreements where there has been an innocent omission, or insertion, of a material stipulation, contrary to the intention of both parties, and under a mutual mistake. To allow it to prevail in such a case would be to work a surprise, or fraud, upon both parties, and certainly upon the one who is the sufferer. . . . A court of equity would be of little value if it could suppress only positive frauds and leave mutual mistakes, innocently made, to work intolerable mischiefs, contrary to the intention of the parties." Vol. 1 (first ed.), sec. 155.

In Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 577 et seq., cited in the brief of complainant's solicitor, the general doctrine is thus stated: "Decisions of undoubted authority hold that where an instrument that professes or is intended to carry into execution an agreement, which is in writing or parol, previously made between the parties, but which, by mistake of the draftsman, either as to fact or law, does not fulfill, or which violates, the manifest intention of the parties to the agreement, equity will correct the mistake so as to produce a conformity of the instrument to the agreement; the reason of the rule being that the execution of agreements fairly and legally made is one of the peculiar branches of equity jurisdiction, and if the instrument intended to execute the agreement be for any cause insufficient for that purpose, the agreement remains as much unexecuted as if the party had refused altogether to comply with his agreement; and a court of equity will, in the exercise of its acknowledged jurisdiction, afford relief in the one case as well as in the other, by compelling the delinquent party to perform his undertaking according to the terms of it and the manifest intention of the parties."

Digitized by Google

Kerr, in his work on the Law of Fraud and Mistake, at p. 418, states the rule in plain and simple language, as follows:

"If parties enter into an agreement, but there is an error in the reduction of the agreement to writing, so that the instrument fails, through some mistake of the draftsman, either in matter of law or of fact, to represent the real agreements of the parties, a court of equity will correct and reform the instrument, so as to make it conformable to the real intent of the parties." Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, p. 418, and cases cited.

"The principle upon which the court acts in correcting instruments is, that the parties are to be placed in the same situation as they would have stood in if the error to be corrected had not been committed. When a deed as drawn goes beyond the instructions and the intention of the parties, it will be rectified." Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, p. 419, and cases cited.

"A person, however, who seeks to rectify an instrument, on the ground of mistake, must be able to prove not only that there has been a mistake, but must be able to show exactly and precisely the form into which the deed ought to be brought in order that it may be set right according to what was really intended, and must be able to establish, in the clearest and most satisfactory manner that the alleged intention of the parties to which he desires to make it conformable, continued concurrently in the minds of all parties down to its execution. The evidence must be such as to leave no fair and reasonable doubt upon the mind that the deed does not embody the final intention of the parties." Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, p. 421, and cases cited.

"There can be no rectification, if mistake be not mutual or common to all parties to the instrument, or if one of the parties knew of the mistake at the time he executed the deed. Rectification can only be had where both parties have executed an instrument under a common mistake and have done what neither of them intended. A mistake on one side may be ground for rescinding, but not for correcting or rectifying an agreement." Kerr on Fraud and Mistake, p. 422, and cases cited.

The case of Dulany v. Rogers, 50 Md. 533, is also instructive upon this general subject:

"It is incumbent, however, upon the party seeking to reform an instrument to show, by conclusive proof, that it does not embody the final intention of the parties. Courts will not rectify it unless it was executed under a common mistake, both parties having done that which neither of them intended. A mistake on one side may be ground for rescinding, but not for reforming a written agreement."

It was conceded upon the oral argument, as it very properly is also in the brief of complainant's solicitor subsequently submitted for the consideration of the court, that before the relief prayed for can be granted the court must be satisfied by convincing evidence that a mistake has been made or an accident has occurred which has resulted in a written agreement different from that intended by the parties. This necessarily follows from the fact that the court must assume, in the first instance, that this policy constitutes the very contract that both parties intended to make, and, in the absence of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary, this assumption stands.

The undisputed facts as established by the proof in this case are:

First. That prior to the issuance and delivery of this policy nothing was said between the parties as to its terms, and therefore the averment in the bill, which is denied by the answer, that on or about July 15, 1903, and prior to the issuance of the policy in question, it was agreed between the parties that it was to be identical in its terms and conditions with the former policy is not sustained.

Second. That the policy when delivered contained the 80 per cent clause, being conspicuously stenciled on the margin of its first page.

Third. That the policy was first left with Rev. Dr. Butler in July, during the absence of his son, who, upon his return to the city found it in his office, and who, in turn, handed it to Mr. Ramey, a member of the church and an insurance broker, who had charge of the other insurance business of the church, for the purpose of inspecting it so as to verify its date.

Fourth. That Ramey had the policy on his desk for about a month, in the meantime paying the premium therefor to the defendant company's agent Lynch, and then without examining it, except as to its date, again returning it to Dr. Butler, jr., who placed it in his safe, where it remained until after the fire, and he was unable to say whether he opened and looked at the policy before the fire or not.

In addition to this undisputed evidence, Mr. Yoder, an agent of the company, testified in substance that in July he took the policy to Rev. Dr. Butler, who told him that his son was the proper person to receive it, and that thereupon he left it with Dr. Butler, requesting him to deliver it to his son upon the latter's return to the city; that thereafter he called several times to see Dr. Butler, jr., concerning the policy, but did not find him in until some weeks after the policy was issued; that the doctor, who then had the policy in his possession, asked him if there was any change in the rate, and that thereupon he told him what the rate was and offered to explain the 80 per cent coinsurance clause, but the doctor excused himself because he was busy, and said he would refer the matter to Mr. Ramey, as he understood the insurance business and would attend to it for them; and that this ended the witness' connection with the matter, as he thereupon turned it over to Mr. Lynch, who was also an agent of the company.

Mr. Lynch testified that about a month after the policy was issued, namely, about August 15th, he called on Mr. Ramey, who then had the policy; that he explained to him not only the rate of insurance, but also this 80 per cent coinsurance clause, and that thereupon Mr.

Digitized by Google

Ramey paid him the $30 insurance premium, and thus the matter was closed.

Rev. Dr. Butler, called in rebuttal, says he has no recollection of Yoder's call or of any conversation with him. While this item of evidence is not very important, it would seem reasonable that it occurred from the fact that when Dr. Butler, jr., returned home he found the policy in his office, which would seem to indicate that it had reached there in the manner suggested by Yoder.

Dr. Butler, jr., who was also called in rebuttal, testified that he had no recollection of Yoder's visit or of the conversation detailed by him, although he says that he can neither affirm nor deny Yoder's statement. The fact that the doctor did turn over the policy to Ramey, who paid the premium to Lynch, tends to support Yoder's statement in this regard.

Mr. Ramey, the last witness called by the complainant, testified in rebuttal that Lynch did call upon him in regard to this insurance; that he (Ramey) had the policy in his possession at the time, and that he paid the premium of $30 to Lynch, but he denies that Lynch explained to him its provisions and says that he did not know what they were until after the fire; that although the policy was on his desk for nearly a month he never examined it except to verify its date.

This is, in substance, the whole of the testimony.

Recalling the measure of proof necessary to justify the court to interfere in a case of this kind as conceded by complainant's counsel, and as announced in the several authorities already quoted, that the court must be satisfied by convincing evidence that a mistake has been made or an accident has occurred which has resulted in a written agreement different from that intended by the parties to it, it seems clear to my mind that the evidence in this case falls far short of such measure. The court is not to be simply satisfied that a mistake has been made, but it must be satisfied that such mistake was mutual, and has resulted in the issuance of a policy different from that intended, not by the complainant only, but by the defendant company as well. Even conceding that the complainant did not intend to accept a policy containing this 80 per cent coinsurance clause, and did not in fact know that it contained such clause, still, if such intention and want of knowledge was not common to both parties to the instrument, no equitable relief by way of reformation or rectification can be granted, the law being that rectification can only be had where both parties have executed an instrument under a common mistake and have done what neither of them intended. Kerr on the Law of Fraud and Mistake, already cited. The only thing the court could do in that state of case would be to rescind the contract; but no such relief is asked for here, nor could it be, under the circumstances of this case, without wholly releasing the defendant company from all liability to the complainant except for the return of the premium.

I do not want to be understood as holding that the mere retention of the policy by the agents of the complainant, without examining its contents, would estop it, after a loss occurred, from claiming that the policy was not what the complainant expected or intended it to be. This proposition is contended for by defendant's solicitors, but the cases cited by them do not, in my judgment, support the proposition to which they were cited. In the Bostwick v. Mutual Life Ins. Co. case, 116 Wis. 392, the party who was held to be estopped not only retained the policy but also retained along with it a letter addressed to him explaining the very question which afterwards came to be the subject of the suit. And in the New York Life Ins. Co. v. Fletcher case, 117 U. S. 534, the United States Supreme Court simply held that a party who signed a written application without even reading it and who thereafter accepted and retained a policy issued upon the faith of it, and having a copy of the application itself annexed, which he did not even then read, was estopped from saying that he did not intend to make the statements set forth in the application. It is sufficient for the purposes of this case that, even admitting that the insertion in the policy of the 80 per cent coinsurance clause was a mistake so far as the complainant is concerned, there is an absolute failure of proof that such mistake was mutual, or, in other words, that the terms of the policy are not what the defendant intended. In the course of the oral argument it was urged upon the court by complainant's solicitor that, in the absence of notice from the defendant company to the complainant that this policy contained this 80 per cent coinsurance clause, the court had the right to assume, in the light of the previous dealings between the parties, that the insertion of this clause in the policy was the result of an accident or mistake on the part of the company. It seems clear to my mind that this point can not be seriously pressed. Even could it be assumed from such a state of facts that this complainant was mistaken as to what the policy was, it certainly could not also be assumed that the defendant did not intend to do that which it unequivocally did. It is well settled that, in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation, a contract can not be avoided on the ground that one of the parties failed to apply his mind to its contents. Eaton on Equity, page 268. But above and beyond all this stands the indisputable fact that this 80 per cent clause was conspicuously stenciled on the margin of the first page of this policy. So prominently does it appear that, on opening the policy, the first thing to arrest the eye is this stenciled clause. So plain and conspicuous is it that it puts at rest all suggestions of fraud or deceit, and indicates clearly that the company intended, and intended openly, to make it one of the conditions of the contract, and, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the court is bound to assume that such was its intention.

The bill will accordingly be dismissed.

A resulting trust enforceable in equity is held, in Avery v. Stewart (N. C.), 68 L. R. A. 776, to arise where one person, at another's request, takes the title to real estate under an express agreement to hold it for, and convey it to, the latter upon the repayment of the purchase money.

Digitized by Google

The Motorist and the Law.

[Justice of the Peace.]

With the use, and unfortunately in too many cases the abuse, of motor cars upon the highway, the public has now become so familiar as to regard automobilism as an essential factor in the social life of the twentieth century. Though a single decade has not yet elapsed since the running of motor cars upon the public roads, freed from the necessarily prohibitive restrictions imposed by the highway acts upon traction engines and other locomotives, was for the first time legalized by statute in Great Britain, it is almost trite to assert that the motor car has become a power in the land. Of the great forces of nature, steam, electricity, and the like, it is not possible with any degree of accuracy in thought or language to predicate either good or evil. So far as at present understood by man, and so far as they are controlled by modern science to the purposes of man, they are beneficent or detrimental in their results according as they are wisely and moderately used on the one hand, or on the other abused, whether through ignorance, recklessness, negligence, or malice. The ultimate utility of the motor car in the service of mankind as by degrees it advances towards mechanical perfection can not now be reasonably doubted. Its use in the form of motor omnibus by the masses as well as the classes is clearly within the province of the near future if, indeed, it be not already an accomplished fact.

Notwithstanding, however, that the advantages accruing to the community from the adoption of this new means of transit and traction are so obvious, the experience of the last nine years, and more especially of the last two or three years, has demonstrated beyond dispute that a vast amount of inconvenience, mischief, injury, and suffering may be, has been, and continues to be engendered by the motor car in reckless, careless, or ignorant hands. This receives only too frequent and unhappy illustration in the columns of the daily press. We would, however, emphasize the point, which a moment's consideration renders clear, that the undoubted existence of this inconvenience and suffering is by do means necessarily incidental to the use of mechanically propelled vehicles on the highways. On the contrary, the use of a higher degree of caution on the part of the motor driver would certainly obviate the majority of so-called accidents. A catastrophe involving damage to property, injury to limb, or loss of life can not, from a legal point of view, properly be regarded as an accident if it be due to the slightest negligence or breach of the duty of care on the part of the person in charge of a motor car, much less if it be due to his recklessness or rashness. Damage or injury under any such circumstances ought to, and in fact does, involve both civil and criminal liability.

The press, in recently drawing public attention to the dangers and risks incurred by persons using the highways in many districts owing to the heedless or reckless driving of motor cars, has done good service.

The alertness and, as has been suggested, undue vigilance of the police in instituting prosecutions against motorists, and the alleged alacrity of a certain section of the magisterial bench to secure convictions, and the consequent imposition of fines in cases of motor offenses, have received such ventilation and comment in some of the daily papers as to have raised an agitation among a portion of the public against motor cars as an institution and motorists as a class. To object thus to the use of a motor car, because if improperly used it is capable of becoming a thing of terror and an engine of destruction, is to assume an attitude as logical as that of one who should object to the use of guns or knives because they may become weapons of murder. A motor car, like a carriage and pair, is in itself harmless enough; but if the carriage be driven in a crowded thoroughfare at the utmost speed which can be got out of the two horses it becomes to all intents as dangerous a vehicle, and as much an instrument of terror, as a motor car would be when driven without any consideration or regard for the safety of the persons in the thoroughfare. The gravamen of the indictment against the motorist as a class is that a large proportion of the individuals composing that class habitually drive their motor cars, whether intentionally or inadvertently, with a total disregard for the safety or comfort of other persons using the road. That such an evil exists and that active means should be taken to secure its immediate diminution or suppression can not be denied. The proper adjustment of the respective rights of persons owning and traveling in motor cars and of persons lawfully using the highways and public roads is the serious problem calling for solution. These two sections of the public each have definite legal rights, though there seems to be as yet a very indefinite conception of the nature of such rights.

A higher degree of consideration, the cultivation of a more perfect altruism than at present exists among the generality of mankind, would afford the most complete solution of the difficulty, and would tend to a reconciliation of the reciprocal rights of the motorist and the public to a reasonable user of the highway and the duties of reasonable forbearance on each side. The inculcation of such desirable qualities, however, belongs to the region of ethics, and is unfortunately beyond the province of an act of Parliament. But though it is not possible for legislation to ordain consideration for others and a wise discretion, yet indirectly the result of appropriate legislation may be to promote to some extent the exercise of such qualities by reason of the penalties attaching to acts attibutable to their non-exercise.

Now that a royal commission has been appointed to inquire into, and suggest remedies for, some of the existing evils connected with the use of motor cars on the highways, it may be opportune to offer to our readers some few comments upon the present state of the law regulating such user. The recent decisions upon the subject have received discussion in our columns from time to time, and it is not proposed here to recapitulate or refer to them.

There appears to be a somewhat widespread impression among the uninitiated that the rights and duties of a motorist are purely the creation of statute. It is, of course, true that the construction of motor cars, their use upon the highway, and their registration for purposes of identification have been regulated by statute and by regulations contained in orders issued by the local government board in pursuance of statutory authority. Particular requirements have been made, offenses created, and penalties imposed by legislation. Nevertheless in the main the impression is erroneous, and it must be clearly understood that the basis of the rights and duties of the motorist and the public with regard to the user of the highway is to be sought in principles of the common law and not in the provisions of any statute. Every individual member of the public has a legal right at common law to make a proper use of the highway as a pedestrian or with horses or vehicles for the purpose of quietly passing along the highway. On the other hand, he must not obstruct or in any way interfere with or imperil the safety of any other person in the lawful use of the highway. This, of course, must be taken as qualified by and subject to the rights vested in the local highway authorities for purposes of repair and otherwise. The right of each member of the public to the uninterrupted use of the highway has been prescribed by no statute. It is an inherent right, the existence and recognition of which is in all probability coeval with the existence of the highways themselves.

Digitized by Google

With respect to the vexed question of the speed limit of motor cars upon the public roads, we venture to affirm that if no statutory limits of speed had been imposed the rules of the common law, if effectively administered, would have afforded protection to the safety of the public. The rules of the common law, indeed, apply to motor cars as well as to every other mechanical contrivance which has yet been or which at any time in the future may be devised by the ingenuity and invention of man. Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, in his celebrated and authoritative Digest of the Criminal Law, has pointed out the imperative legal duty of using the necessary degree of care and caution in the performance of dangerous acts or in the use of things which are of a dangerous nature if used without such care and caution. Any, even the slightest, negligence or omission to take such a degree of care, if it causes injury to the person of another, involves criminal responsibility, and if it results in death amounts to manslaughter. The principles of the common law, especially when supplemented by the existing penal legislation as to driving to the danger of the public, would probably be found to insure as high a measure of security as any possible rules of statute law imposing any arbitrary limit of speed. Indeed, the necessity for and the advisability of the retention of the present speed limit for motor cars on the highway has recently been questioned in more than one quarter and has already become a matter for serious deliberation.

That a contract of sale of land in gross may be rescinded on the ground of a mutual and innocent mistake as to the quantity of land in the tract sold, resulting in a large excess or deficiency, no other ground for relief being shown, is denied in Newman v. Kay (W. Va.), 68 L. R. A. 908.

In the Matter of Clothes.

[New York Law Journal.]

We do not recall whether in "Sartor Resartus" the learned Herr Teufelsdrockh makes any reference to the matter of clothes worn by suitors in a court room—there are allusions to the official habilaments of judges and counsel. Two recent paragraphs, one in the Law Journal (London), and the other in the Westminster Gazette, bring up the subject as to parties themselves. The following note from the American Law Review for September-October, 1905 (39 Am. L. R., 770), collates such items:

Advice to the Plaintiff in a Breach of Promise Case in the Divorce Court, England, as to Dress. —In Provost v. Wood, the following letter was read: "The question of dress, to my mind, is most important. Go well dressed. You will not get much money if you do not let the court see that you have occasion to spend it. Do not go in colors, because if you appear to make a holiday of it you will get little sympathy. You are supposed to treat the event as one of the sad incidents of life. Black is not necessary. Deep black would, of course, be absurd. If you wear colors, let them be sober and unobtrusive. We must lunch together one day at the Troc. or somewhere. Will let you know."

"That letter," said Mr. Justice Darling, "was written from the common room of the Inner Temple, and I shall certainly consider whether I shall send it to the Benchers of the Inn after I have shown it to the president of the divorce court." Subsequently the learned judge said he observed, on looking at the law list, that the writer of the letter was at the time a student, and was called to the bar two years ago, otherwise he would have felt it his duty to take serious action.—The Law Journal.

The Westminster Gazette, commenting upon Mr. Justice Darling's strong comments, suggests that he can hardly have read Lord Brampton's Reminiscences. It was as Mr. Hawkins, Q. C., that the famous cross-examiner was consulted by a solicitor as to the costume his client—a pugilist charged with manslaughter—should wear at his trial. The future judge was diplomatic. "I advised, as was my duty," he records, "that he (the accused) should scrupulously regard the dignity of the bench, and show the greatest respect to the learned judge who presided; that he ought not to come in a disgraceful costume if he could help it, but appear as becomingly attired as possible." He adds: "I impressed upon the attorney that his client should abstain from any appearance of attempting to deceive the judge, but confess to having made the further suggestion that any costume other than that of the man when actually engaged in the fight might throw some difficulty in the way of a young and inexperienced country constable identifying him. The hint was taken. The prisoner turned up looking like a tame young curate. He was dressed completely in black, wore a long frock coat, and had his hair brushed carefully back, giving him quite a saintly appearance. The disguise had its effect on the jury, who found the prisoner 'not guilty.' What would Mr. Justice Darling say to this story, one wonders?"

With regard to the first of these episodes we confess that we are unable to perceive any legitimate ground upon which Mr. Justice Darling might have sent the letter to the Benchers of the Inn, or taken any other serious action, even if its writer had been an admitted and experienced practitioner. The language of Polonius to Laertes—

Digitized by Google

> "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
> But not expressed in fancy; rich, not gaudy,
> For the apparel oft proclaims the man"— is generally recognized as conveying as important a lesson of worldly wisdom as any other portion of that famous piece of parental admonition. In ordinary business and social intercourse, especially in large cities where people are obliged so judge each other to a large extent by appearances, the factor of dress is always a material one. When a suitor goes before a jury who are utter strangers to him it is entirely proper for his counsel to see to it that he does not offend sensibilities or excite prejudices by the form of his costume. Indeed, a trial lawyer might be remiss in duty if he did not make some suggestion to correct extreme slovenliness in a man or a loud peroxide tendency in a woman. Of course a member of the bar should not be privy to the assumption of a disguise, but we can see no reason why he may not properly confer with his client as to the style of dress which would be apt to place him in the most favorable light for obtaining the relief he claims.

The advice of Mr. Hawkins, Q. C., falls under a different category. A member of the bar is not justified in conniving with his client in a deception of the court or jury as to a matter of fact. It appears that in reality this was the aim, and that it was successfully accomplished. For a party to a criminal prosecution to disguise himself so that he can not be identified does not differ in principle from the state of facts disclosed in the case of Corley v. N. Y. H. R. Co. (12 App. Div. 409). It was therein shown that on the trial of an action for personal injuries to a child in which a large verdict had been recovered, the plaintiff in going to and from the witness stand had held one foot bent and off the floor and had used crutches, and had been lifted and helped along by his father, but that, nevertheless, for more than two weeks before the trial the plaintiff had entirely discarded his crutches in the house where he lived with his mother's consent, and that immediately after the trial the plaintiff, although rigidly secluded within doors, was permitted to play upon the roof of such house and even to climb upon a rear fire escape. The appellate division concluded that a theatrical display had been deliberately planned and carried out, inevitably tending to deceive the jury as to the plaintiff's physical condition, and that a new trial should therefore be granted.

In the latter case the court took occasion to say that the counsel for plaintiff was innocent of any complicity in the artifice employed. It certainly would have been reprehensible professional conduct to have connived at it, and, as above intimated, the connivance of Mr. Hawkins in his client's make-up for his trial, while not so bad in degree, was not very different in kind.

Buy your legal blanks from the Law Reporter Printing Company.

Ownership of Property in Case of Robbery.

The common-law definition of robbery as the felonious taking of money or goods of any value from the person of another, or in his presence, against his will, by violence or putting him in fear, leaves open the question whether the person from whom the property is taken must be the owner of it.

On the part of the defendant, it has often been claimed in such cases that the offense was not committed because the property was taken from someone other than the owner. In State v. Montgomery, 181 Mo. 19, 67 L. R. A. 343, 79 S. W. Rep. 693, the robbery of a clerk by compelling him to take money from a cash drawer was held to sustain a conviction, though the clerk had no personal interest in the money.

This case is clearly sustained by the authorities on the subject, which have been reviewed in the annotation of the case in 67 L. R. A. 343. The contention to the contrary is clearly one of those technicalities of strict construction which have sometimes found lodgment in the criminal law. To sustain it would be manifestly against the reason of the law, and constitute an obstruction to justice.

In some cases it has been held that the interest of the person robbed must be such as would entitle him to maintain an action for the property if taken out of his custody, but these cases, which were decided in Missouri, are overruled by the Montgomery case, and it seems to be now universally true that the ownership of the property by the person robbed is not an an essential element in the crime.—Case and Comment.

Humor of the Law.

Chister: "That case will prove a gilt-edged proposition."

Eckitty: "Of course with 'u' in it."

"But," said the lawyer, "your case seems hopeless. I don't see what I can do for you. You admit that you beat your wife."

"Yes," replied the defendant, "but my wife's testimony will discount that. She'd never admit that she was beaten.

"Mr. Attorney," said the judge, after sending the defendant to jail for six months, "how does it happen that this man was only fined in the court below?"

"Your Honor," he replied with dignity, "I was not his counsel in the lower court."

And, somehow, the other lawyers present seemed to feel that he had explained it.

Judge Swarts, of Norristown, Pa., in a recent case laid down the law relating to mothers-in-law as follows: "It should be distinctly understood that the husband is master of his own house. The wife has no right to invite or admit her mother or anyone else to the house against her husband's will. The wife can, however, go to see her mother whenever she wishes, so long as she does not go so often as to neglect her duties to her husband and her home. That sounds very nice and ethical and all that, but it will hardly carry conviction when opposed to practical experience."

Digitized by Google

Even in the days when he was a struggling young lawyer Chauncey Depew was gifted with a considerable deal of the self-confidence which in later years came to be known by many men. One of the first cases he had in court involved a somewhat complicated question of inheritance. But he gayly tackled it and prepared what he regarded as an unanswerable argument. He had proceeded for some time when he noticed that the judge seemed to lose interest. Lawyer Depew hesitated and said, "I beg pardon, but I hope your honor follows me." The judge shifted in his chair as he replied, "I have so far, but I'll say frankly that if I thought I could find my way out I'd quit right here."

At Willow Springs, Mo., several years ago, two lawyers were engaged in the trial of a case before a justice of the peace who held court over a livery stable, Col. Watts on one side, and on the other one who was familiarly known as "Buffalo Bill" Jones. It is said that if the wit which was exchanged between these two in the trial of cases in that section was written up, it would make interesting reading. Suffice it for this occasion that while Col. Watts was engaged in his argument a jackass in a livery stable below struck up a loud and lively tune, drowning out Col. Watts' voice, who stopped in the midst of his argument till the music died out below, and then turning to Jones, in a very impressive manner, Col. Watts inquired: "Mr. Jones, did you speak?"

That it is not criminal for a labor union to publish a statement that a merchant is unfair, and that its members will not work material sold by him, for the purpose of inducing the public to refrain from purchasing material from him for fear of incurring the ill will of the union, is held in State v. VanPelt (N. C.), 68 L. R. A. 760.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,
LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

A Reputable Attorney experienced in law and practice wishes to join with him an active, energetic young member of the bar who has capital and would like to engage in a lucrative and promising general law business on very equitable terms. Only serious communications answered. Trifling and curious replies not considered. Address Ex. U. S. Attorney, P. O. Box 7, Station A, Washington, D. C. 44-1t

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Benjamin Carter, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Florence H. Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. BENJ. CARTER, Bond Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,239. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Douglass & Douglass, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Samuel Rothert et al., Complainants, v. Susie Brice et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 25,457. Doc. 56.

Edgar B. Sherrill and John R. Shields, trustees, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, being parts of original lots numbered 2 and 3 in square numbered 69, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, beginning for the same at a point 5 feet east from the southwest corner of original lot numbered 2 in said square, and running thence north 100 feet; thence west 22 feet 6 inches; thence south 100 feet to the line of N street north, and thence east 22 feet 6 inches to the beginning; being the same land included in lot numbered 190, in said square numbered 69, according to a subdivision made by John H. Rothert, and recorded in book No. 28, page 126, in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, to Albert Marshall for the sum of one thousand five hundred seventy-five dollars ($1,575), it is by the court, this 27th day of October, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 28th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine McGuinn, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. HENRY P. BLAIR, Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,191. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Thos. Walker, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. WALTER G. BRADLEY, New York Mills, N. Y. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,782. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Elizabeth Sutton and William H. Fearson v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of George Mason and Others. No. 25,700. Equity Docket No 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainants' title in fee simple, by adverse possession, in and to the north 20 ft. front on 19th st. by the full depth thereof, of original lot 12, in sq. 106, in Washington, D. C., improved by premises No. 913, 19th st. N. W. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of George Mason, of William Mason, of A. E. Grimes, and of Elizabeth Hooe, all deceased. On motion of the complainants, by W. Spencer Armstrong, their solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in the Washing-[Seal.] ton Law Reporter and in the Washington Times. By the court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

nov 3-10; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al. In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 55 feet of lot 1, in square 397, with the improvements thereon, to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $9,750; lot 2, in square 556, with the improvements thereon, to Mary A. Martin, for the sum of $1,275; and sublot 70, in square 445, to Tillotson E. Brown, for the sum $1,124.12, it is, this 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that said sales be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of November, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adolphe Berger, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,228. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Nathaniel E. Thompson, otherwise known as Elbridge N. Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 20th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 2d day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer; by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,528. Adm. [Seal.] 44-3t

Legal Notices.

Ralston & Siddons, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Joseph H. Byram, S. Norris Thorn, Trustees of the Home Building Association, of the District of Columbia, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, and Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay. Equity No. 25,653.

Process having been duly issued against the defendants herein and returned "Not to be found," although diligent efforts have been made to find them, it is, this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the unknown heirs, devisees, and representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainants to part of lot two hundred and nine (209) in square twelve hundred and fifty-nine (1259) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northwest corner thereof and running thence south 122 feet 3 inches to the south line of said lot; thence east 31 feet 1 inch; thence north 10 feet (the width of the alley hereinafter reserved); thence east 2 feet 2 inches; thence north 20 feet, more or less, to the south line of lot conveyed to Jared Nichols; thence west 25 feet; thence north 90 feet to line of West street, and thence west 8 feet 3 inches, more or less, to the place of beginning; with the right to use a 10-foot alley running along and over the south part of lots 209 and 210 to give an outlet on Montgomery street. THOS.
[Seal.] H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

---

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

D. H. Roland Drury v. Minnie Fuller and Others. No. 25,650 Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainant's title in fee simple by adverse possession in and to lot 17, in Emily Fuller's subdivision of lots in square 60, in Washington, D. C., as said subdivision is recorded in the surveyor's office in Book H. D. C., page 40. The defendants to this suit are Minnie Fuller (if living), and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Minnie Fuller (if deceased), of Andrew Schoifield, of Robert Lockie, of Ruth Fuller, of Calhoun Clark, and of Sarah F. Fitzgerald. On motion of complainant, by W. Spencer Armstrong, his solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that said defendant Minnie Fuller cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the other defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three successive weeks during the first month, and thereafter twice a month for two months, in The Wash-
[Seal] ington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

nov 3-10-17; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edwin S. Houston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,667. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Jos. D. Sullivan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Plant, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate Given under my hand this 1st day of November, 1905. ARTHUR G. PLANT, care of Traders National Bank. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,249. Admn. [Seal.] 44-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

John Lewis Johnson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM A. FOY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,135. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James William Orme, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM B. ORME, 1623 28th st. N. W.; CHAS. B. BAILEY, 1424 Stoughton street. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,201. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

[Filed October 23, 1905, J. R. Young, Clerk.]

Carlisle & Johnson, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Louis P. Shoemaker, Trustee, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith. No. 25,621. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to the west half of lot seven (7) in Samuel Davidson's recorded subdivision of lots in square one hundred and sixty-three (163), fronting fifteen (15) feet on the north side of K street northwest, by depth of one hundred (100) feet eleven (11) inches, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant by his solicitors, Carlisle & Johnson, it is this 23d day of October, A. D., 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post at least once in the month of October and at least three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 43-4t
[Seal.]

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of LeRoy M. Taylor, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 14th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., Andrew Parker, Treasurer, by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. ——. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Robert S. Hume and A. S. Worthington, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Special Term for Probate Business.
In the Matter of the Estate of Ellen O'Brien, Deceased.
No. 10,958. Administration Doc. 29.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to trial of the issues in this case, relating to the validity of the paper writing dated the 10th day of June, A. D. 1902, purporting to be the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, has been returned as to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of said Ellen O'Brien, deceased, "not to be found," it is thereupon by the court this 5th day of October, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this cause be, and they hereby are, set down for trial in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, and that the substance of the issues and the date fixed for the trial, as shown in the margin of this order, be published for three months, once a month during the said period in The Washington Law Reporter, twice a week for not less than four weeks and twice a month for the remainder of the said period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

MARGIN:

This is to give notice to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, that, whereas a certain paper writing, bearing date of the 10th day of June, 1902, has been presented for probate and record in this court as the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, and the validity thereof is contested by certain of the parties in interest, issues have been framed and set for trial by jury in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, presenting the questions whether the said Ellen O'Brien was, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, of sound and disposing mind and capable of making a valid deed or contract; whether said paper writing, or the execution thereof, was procured from her by undue influence, fraud, and circumvention. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.
[Seal]
oct. 6; nov. 3; dec. 1.

John S. Alleman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth C. Opperman, Deceased.
No. 13,221. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Albert F. Fox, it is ordered this 27th day October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachael A. Todd (nee Kulp), Hannah E. Caffee, and Hester R. Smith, of Doylestown, Pa.; Michal C. Kulp, of Lynchburg, Va.; Ida Dangler, of Atlantic City, N. J.; William C. Kuhn, of Philadelphia, Pa., and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t
[Seal]

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Blair & Thom, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Equity.
In the Matter of the Change of Name of Dallas Corbin, Otherwise Known as Henry Corbin.
Equity, No. 25,751.

Upon consideration of the petition of Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, this day filed, praying that his name be changed to Henry Corbin, it is, this 18th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that notice in said case, in accordance with section 1299 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia, be published in the newspapers as follows: On the 18th day of October, 1905, Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, filed his petition in this court, stating that he had assumed the name of Henry Corbin by mistake; that he had acquired real estate; conducted business as an expressman, and had been for many years generally known as Henry Corbin; and the prayer of said petition is as follows: That this honorable court will pass an order changing your petitioner's name from Dallas Corbin to Henry Corbin and make Henry Corbin his legal name for all intents and purposes. That said notice in said form shall be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Post. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Attest: J. R. Young, Clerk, by W. E. Williams, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 43-3t

---

William C. Prentiss, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Kunigunda Fedarwisch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of October, 1905. JOHN T. BRANSON, 614 11th st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,177. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

---

James F. Bundy, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Allen B. Hamm, Deceased.
No. 13,209. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by James F. Bundy, it is ordered this 24th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mary Hamm, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Bee once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

---

Irving Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Washington Matthews, Deceased.
No. 13,208. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Caroline Matthews, it is ordered this 21th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alphous Matthews, Clement Matthews, Nicholas Matthews, and Maria Matthews, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 4th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted; provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

Legal Notices.

Maurice Kelly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Anna M. Rochester, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. WM. B. ROCHESTER, 1320 18th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,108. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

---

A. B. Keefer, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alice Healy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. DENNIS L. HEALEY, 1154 5th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,104. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

---

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 24 Defrees street, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot number seventy-six (76) in Shephard's recorded subdivision of square number six hundred and twenty-three (623), to Christian Loos, for the sum of two thousand ($2,000) dollars cash, less fifty ($50.00) dollars brokerage commission, it is by the court this 20th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 20th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 43-3t

---

E. L. Gies, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard F. Sorg, Complainant, v. Ollie A. Sorg et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,295.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 19th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Ollie A. Sorg, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40th) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once a week for three (3) consecutive weeks prior to said day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 43-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Boyd Taylor, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,144. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles F. Scott, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. MARTHA SCOTT, 1455 Binney st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,188. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Oscar Luckett, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
James Hyde v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Charles Carter.
No. 25,699. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to that parcel of land situated in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as and being lot numbered sixty-four (64) in A. D. Jessup's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and eighteen (218), as per plat recorded in liber R. L. H., folio 236, of the records of the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein, it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Oscar Luckett, it is this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Charles Carter, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter at least once in the month of October and three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. oct 27-nov 3,10,17

George F. Collins, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth A. Rawlings, Deceased.
No. 13,019. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by James S. Rawlings, it is ordered this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Elizabeth A. Rawlings, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 43-3t

C. C. Clarke, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Robert Duncan Swingle, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. EMMA C. SWINGLE, 1443 Huntington Place. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,231. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Legal Notices.

Ellwood P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Myers, Deceased.
No. 13,210. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ellwood P. Morey, executor, it is ordered this 26th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Herbert P. Myers, Fannie Hitch, Edward H. Myers, Mary M. Reynolds, Wellborn M. Reynolds, Herbert L. Reynolds, Dudley W. Reynolds, Homer V. Reynolds, Edward H. Reynolds, James M. Walker, Mary C. Walker, William M. Walker, Daniel McI. Walker, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 43-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edward J. Adams, Jr., late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. WILLIAM F. ADAMS, 321 C. st. N. W. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,192. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

Joseph H. Stewart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term of Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of Robert W. Brown, executor herein, reporting the sale of lot five (5) in A. H. Lee's recorded subdivision of lots numbered C and D in Elizabeth Morrison's subdivision of square numbered two hundred and eighty (280) to William A. Hedrick for the sum of eight hundred and thirty-five ($835.00) dollars, it is this 17th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court ordered that said sale be ratified, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1905; this order to be published once a week in the Washington Law Reporter for three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 42-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Celia E. V. Beall, Deceased.
No. 12,871. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Lizzie B. Gladman, it is ordered this 16th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to M. Elmer Carrier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: M. J. Griffith, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 42-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Isaac H. Ford, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Alfred Ford, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 20th day of September, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1906. JOHN FORD, 312 2d st. S. E.; MARY M. FORD, 312 2d st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,163. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Thomas P. Woodward and Geo. R. Linkins, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William R. Woodward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 13th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 13th day of October, 1905. THOMAS P. WOODWARD, 507 E st. N. W.; GEO. R. LINKINS, 507 E st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,175. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notce That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Augusta M. Martin, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of October, 1905. BENJAMIN F. MARTIN, 617 L st N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,203. Administration. [Seal] 42-3

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Little C. Osmun, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Harry G. Meem, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,181. Administration. [Seal.] 42-3t

J. J. Darlington, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Annie E. Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 17th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 17th day of October, 1905. RICHARD HARRISON JOHNSON, 709 C st. S. W.; WILLIAM A. WIMSATT, 215 8th st. S. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,216. Adm. [Seal.] 42-3t

Legal Notices.

A. A. Birney and G. E. Tralles, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

John W. Butterfield, Complainant, v. William L. Jones, Receiver, and Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,693.

The object of this suit is to establish and enforce an equitable lien in favor of the complainant upon a certain draft or warrant issued by the United States in settlement of the claim of the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., William L. Jones, receiver, for $5,000, which said sum has been appropriated by Congress to pay said claim, and for a receiver to take possession of said draft or warrant, and endorse and collect the same. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 20th day of October, A.D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William L. Jones and the Eureka Insurance Company of Pittsburg, Pa., a corporation, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said return day in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 42-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,298.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]

sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 45

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - NOVEMBER 10, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 705
In Memoriam—Andrew Brown Duvall 707
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Henry F. Iglehart and Mary D. Polk, appellants, v. J. Howard Iglehart, executor of the last will and testament of Annie I. Andrews, appellee... 711
Legal Notices 714

THIS WEEK'S DECISIONS OF THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Liens; Judgments and Decrees; Equitable Interests; Construction of Sections 1214 and 499, Code D. C.; Priority.

In Ohio National Bank v. Berlin, the appeal was from a decree of the court below dismissing a bill to subject the equitable interest of a judgment debtor to the lien of a judgment. The construction of two important sections of the Code of this District was involved. The plaintiff's judgment was recovered May 13, 1901, and it was contended by the plaintiff that the judgment became a lien upon the equitable estate of the judgment debtor by virtue of section 1214 of the Code, which went into effect from and after January 1, 1902. That section makes judgments at law and money decrees in equity liens upon equitable as well as legal interests of the judgment debtor; and it was contended that the lien thus given operated in favor of all judgments then in existence as well as those thereafter rendered. This contention is denied by the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, which holds that this provision of the Code has no retrospective operation, but is limited to future judgments.

Another question involved was as to the construction of section 499 of the Code, relating to the time when deeds take effect. The bill was filed May 13, 1902, and on May 26, 1902, there was filed for record in the office of the recorder of deeds an assignment by the judgment debtor to one Green of his interest in the property sought to be reached and subjected to satisfaction of the judgment. The court holds that by the filing of the bill the judgment creditor acquired a lien on the property which was superior to the right acquired by Green, whose assignment was recorded subsequently thereto.

Attachment and Garnishment; Trust Company; Questions as to Ownership of Safe Deposit Box.

In Washington Loan and Trust Company v. Susquehanna Coal Company, the appeal was from an order of the court below requiring the appellant, a trust company, as garnishee, to answer certain special interrogatories by which it was sought to ascertain whether it had in its safe deposit vaults a box in the name of a person other than defendant, but to whom it was alleged the defendant had fraudulently assigned his property. The Court of Appeals affirms the ruling of the trial court, holding that safe deposit companies were not exempt from the operation of the attachment statute, and was bound to answer the question. The opinion is by Mr. Justice McComas.

Benefit Societies; Failure to Pay Assessment; Reinstatement.

In Supreme Commandery United Order of Golden Cross v. Bernard, the appeal was from a judgment in an action on a benefit certificate issued by the appellant. It appeared that the member failed to pay an assessment, and thereby became disconnected from the order, but with the right of reinstatement within thirty days after such disconnection upon payment of the assessment and a fine. Before such payment, however, the member died. The court holds, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, that this right of reinstatement on payment of the assessment and fine within the thirty days was personal to the member, and did not survive to his legal representatives. It therefore reverses the judgment of the court below in favor of the plaintiff.

Libel; Damages for Mental Suffering; Evidence.

In Washington Times Company v. Downey, the appeal was from a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for libel. It was objected by the appellant that no recovery could be had for mental suffering, but the court denies this contention, holding that such suffering, shown to be the natural and direct result of the publication of the libel, constitutes an element of recoverable damage. The trial court also admitted evidence by the plaintiff to the effect that she had no parents living, and was dependent upon her own exertions; and this was urged by the appellant as error. The ruling of the trial court is, however, affirmed by the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard.

Digitized by Google

Opening of Minor Street; Assessment for Benefits.

In Brandenburg v. District of Columbia, the appeal called in question the validity of the proceedings by which Newport Place, in this city, was opened as a minor street, on the grounds of the unconstitutionality of the act of Congress under which the proceedings were had, and of irregularity in the proceedings. The court, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, holds the act in question to be constitutional, and that the proceedings were substantially regular.

In Martin v. District of Columbia, the same questions were involved, and also the additional question whether the appellant, as holder of a note secured by deed of trust of the property involved in the Brandenburg case, was entitled to notice of the proceedings which resulted in the taking of part of the property and the assessment of benefits against the residue. It appeared that he had become holder of the note while the proceedings were pending. The court, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, holds that he was not entitled to such notice.

Seventy-third Rule; Affidavit of Defense.

In Dobbins v. Thomas, the appeal was from a judgment for plaintiff rendered under the 73d Rule. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, reverses the judgment, holding that the affidavit of defense was sufficient to entitle defendant to a trial of the issues in regular cause. Another contention of the appellant was that, being a married woman at the time of the alleged contract, which was that of an exchange of houses and their contents, she could not be held liable thereon. The court denies this contention, holding that the contract alleged was one clearly within the power of the defendant, though a married woman, to make, and must be deemed to have been made with reference to her separate estate, no contrary intent being expressed.

Bonds, Action On; Principal and Surety; Set-off; Sufficiency of Pleas.

In McGuire v. Gerstley, the trial court sustained a demurrer to the defendants' pleas, and the defendants electing to stand upon their pleas, entered judgment for plaintiffs. The action was on a bond given by two of the defendants as partners, with the other defendants as sureties thereon. The pleas of the defendants, which were principally by way of set-off or recoupment, are held by the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, to be substantially defective, and the judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

In Clark v. Gerstley, the appeal was from a judgment for plaintiff against one of the sureties on the same bond, entered after a demurrer to defendant's pleas had been sustained. One plea filed by this defendant claimed a discharge of the liability of the sureties by a failure of plaintiffs to give notice of default in payment by the principals, and by an extension of the time of payment. This plea is likewise held substantially defective, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard.

Wills; Bequest to Cemetery Company.

In Iglehart v. Iglehart, the suit was to construe a will by the provisions of which a devise or bequest was made to a cemetery company chartered by another State, and which by its charter was given the right to take such devises or bequests. The validity of the provision is sustained by the Court of Appeals in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, reported in this issue.

Action Against Husband and Wife; Directing Verdict.

In Rheam v. Martin, the action was in assumpsit against husband and wife to recover for work done and materials furnished in the erection of a house for defendants. The trial court rendered a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, but the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, holds that the jury should have been instructed to return a verdict in favor of both defendants.

Police Regulations; Storage of Gasoline.

In Cahill v. District of Columbia, it was sought to review a judgment of the Police Court convicting the defendant for a violation of the police regulation prohibiting the storage and keeping of gasoline for sale without a permit. The plaintiffs in error were the proprietors of an automobile garage, and stored gasoline in an underground tank. It was contended in their behalf that the regulation in question was void; but the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Justice McComas, sustains its validity, and affirms the judgment of the Police Court.

Criminal Procedure; Defective Indictment.

In United States v. Johnson a judgment of the trial court, sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment on the ground that the indictment was not sufficiently definite, is affirmed, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell.

Digitized by Google

In Memoriam.

ANDREW BROWN DUVALL.

A meeting of the bar of the District of Columbia was held on the afternoon of October 27, 1905, to take appropriate action on the death of Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, Mr. William John Miller, and the late Justice Andrew Wylie. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Hugh T. Taggart, president of the Bar Association, and Mr. Charles W. Clagett acted as secretary. In taking the chair Mr. Taggart spoke briefly, paying a deserved tribute to each of the deceased.

Mr. Justice Gould, of the Supreme Court of the District, was chosen as chairman of the meeting, and in taking the chair spoke as follows:

Remarks of Mr. Justice Gould.

Brethren of the bar, the object of this meeting has already been stated by the president of the Bar Association. I do not suppose it is expected that the presiding officer make any remarks, as that office is to be performed by other gentlemen. This has occurred to me, however, as I face this audience. I have a picture, taken in 1897 I think, of the then members of the bar, or a very large number of them, and last evening I happened, without having this meeting in my mind, to look at that picture as it hangs on my library wall and I was impressed, very deeply impressed, with the large number of those whose pictures formed a part of that group making up at that time the members of the bar who have passed beyond the "great divide" and are no longer among us. And Mr. Worthington remaked to me as I sat beside him just now that in his case, after his long experience at the bar, the number of those whose memory he now most cherishes is greater than the number of the actual practitioners at the bar today. And it is fit and proper that as these men who have borne their part honorably and well in discharging the important duties of lawyers in this community pass away, the bar should gather together and express, through formal action, what is in the hearts of every one of us towards those members whose memory we honor in the form of permanent resolutions.

The following committee was appointed to prepare resolutions in respect of the death of Mr. Duvall: Mr. R. Ross Perry, Mr. Joseph J. Darlington, Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon, Mr. Aldis B. Browne, Mr. Benj. F. Leighton, Mr. Leon Tobriner, Mr. Sidney T. Thomas, Mr. Edward H. Thomas, and Mr. A. Leftwich Sinclair. The report of the committee was presented by Mr. R. Ross Perry as follows:

Mr. PERRY: Mr. Chairman, I am instructed by the committee of which I am a member to submit the following resolutions:

The members of the bar of the Court of Appeals and of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, assembled together for the purpose of giving expression to their deep regret and sorrow for the loss they have sustained in the death of Andrew Brown Duvall, have adopted and passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, we have heard with sincere sorrow of the sudden death of Andrew Brown Duvall, for many years an eminent and honored practitioner at our bar, and in all the relations of life equally eminent and worthy; and, whereas, we desire to place upon record our profound sense of the loss that has thus come to us and to the community in which we live, and a testimonial of our affectionate veneration for our deceased brother's memory;

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That in the death of Andrew Brown Duvall our bar has been deprived of one of its chief ornaments—a lawyer profoundly versed in the science of the law and skilled in its practice, a wise and upright counselor, and a zealous and earnest advocate; and that we shall ever hold in reverential remembrance his great legal attainments and manly qualities, his high sense of honor and sturdy integrity, his love of truth and justice, his fidelity to duty, his spotless purity of character, his courteous and dignified demeanor, and his admirable bearing as a member of the bar, as a citizen, and as a man.

Resolved, That the memory of Andrew Brown Duvall deserves to be cherished, not only for his legal attainments and learning and his sterling qualities as a citizen, but also by reason of the faithful and efficient services which he rendered the community as corporation counsel. He was appointed to this onerous and responsible position on June 1, 1899, and administered the affairs of the office with tireless energy, signal success, and unbroken fidelity until September 12, 1905, when he passed away; and while occupying the office he impressed upon the affairs of the District of Columbia imperishable marks of his learning, thoroughness, industry, and wisdom.

Resolved, further, That these resolutions be presented to the Court of Appeals, and to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, with the request that they be spread upon their minutes, as a tribute of respect to the memory of our lamented brother; and that a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased, to whom, in their deep bereavement and inconsolable loss, we tender our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and condolence.

J. J. DARLINGTON.

Address of Mr. R. Ross Perry.

Thousands of years ago, and almost the very first utterance of human poesy, were these words of Homer:

"Even as are the generations of leaves, such are those likewise of men. The leaves that be the wind scattereth on the earth, and the forest buddeth and putteth forth more again, when the season of spring is at hand. So of the generations of men. One springeth, and another passeth away."

It would seem that if the generations of men are but as the generations of leaves, human life should excite no regret when it ends; but yet if we consider more carefully the words of the poet, no such conclusion can be drawn from them. It is true that the leaves come in the spring and flourish in the summer, and in the winter they fall; but is not to be forgotten that this summer's leaves have been the life of the oak for this year, and that the generations of the falling leaves, successively, year after year, have perpetuated for centuries the magnificent strength and beauty of the oak. And so is this fleeting human life of ours; the generations of men are as the generations of leaves; but let it never be forgotten that the men who live today, if thay do live but a summer, express and maintain in that summer the life of the race; and it is these failing, feeble, weak generations of men, century after century, and age after age, who have built up the tremendous heritage of the human race. So we do well, when among these generations of today, one of the men who has helped to sustain the honor and the integrity and the veracity of the human race—those things that make this life and its truth and its wholesomeness and its very existence during the time he lived in it—we do well, I say, when one of those men passes away, to give to his life the dignity not of a summer, but to give to it the dignity, in a sense, of eternity, because the qualities that have made it what it was, are not the qualities of time, but are the qualities of eternity. The world lives by the honor, the integrity, the veracity, by the courage, by the self-sacrifice, of these feeble men who preserve its life from year to year. One of such men has just gone from us, and it is of such a man that these resolutions speak.

Digitized by Google

We all knew Mr. Duvall in his professional life. I doubt whether all of us have paused to think carefully of that exact phase of professional life with which his last years were so conversant. While he was acting as legal adviser to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, he had questions come before him, very numerous, very difficult questions, requiring the highest professional ability to deal with, questions often requiring courage in his management of them and his response to them; and only those of us, perhaps, who reflect upon it, and who appreciate what were the qualities required, and what the courage necessary was, can properly estimate his legal ability and his strength of character. In so far as the mere intellectual aspect of it was concerned, it was quick, vivacious, intelligent. In so far as the courage with which he advocated his conclusions was concerned, we all know that there was never any lacking of it. In so far as his appreciation was concerned of those qualities which demand of the man who undertakes to act as an advocate for another the utmost self-surrender, the utmost driving of self in work for that other, in order that in no point of duty he may fall away. I say in so far as those qualities were concerned, we all know he possessed them in a supereminent degree. When it came to the mere skill of the advocate, the clearness of his conceptions, the words in which he clothed his thought, the closeness of his logic, the vigor with which he drove his blows home, these we all appreciate.

But, Mr. Chairman, it is not that of which I want to speak more particularly today. There are at our bar, and at other bars, many men who possess this mere intellectual ability—if I may seem in any wise to belittle anything intellectual. There was something in Mr. Duvall, and not simply in his professional life, but in his general life as a citizen of this community, which touched something far deeper than that. I think we all will agree, no matter in what relation of life we knew Mr. Duvall, that he was a good man. Now, it is a very simple thing to say that a man was a good man. There are some who use that word in a derisive sense. It has been said that hypocrisy is the homage which vice pays to virtue; but that is a very unworthy way in which to express a great thought. I do not care what a man may be, he may be a mere man of the world, he may be a man who goes through life giving as little attention as possible to the great things of it which go beyond life; but whoever he may be, let him be as trivial in his thoughts and actions as you please, let him be so superficial that he does not appreciate the great verities of life, nevertheless that man, as well as the deepest and strongest man, knows what it is to be a good man. And although he be not one himself, he reverences a man who is good. I do not care how soiled a man's life may be, he reverences a clean man. He can not help it. Now, the great thing in the example of Andrew B. Duvall was that he went through life from boyhood—and I knew him as a small boy until he died the other day—an honest man, a truthful man, a clean man; in one word, he went through life a good man; and we all today here, we all today know it, and above all it is that in his character which we reverence, which we now pay our tribute to.

There remains a supreme phase of character, of which I ought to speak a word; and yet it is too sacred for a word to be said about it except in the most general way, and that is his domestic life. You would expect from a good, clean man, just the domestic life that he had. You would expect that there should be about his home a fragrant savor, a wholesome atmosphere of refinement, of gentleness, and of love; and there it was.

He was a man who spoke no slander; no, nor listened to it. He was a man who told no questionable stories. His tongue was as clean as his heart. And it must be that to that bereaved home, where consolation can not come, in one sense, yet it must be that some consolation can come, when his wife and his sons and his daughters know that such things are said of him as I have said today. And if consolation can further come, it must come from the fact that he was a Christian, and the Christian's God is the God of the fatherless and of the widow.

Address of Mr. J. Holdsworth Gordon.

Mr. Chairman, I have been accorded the privilege of seconding these resolutions, and I am glad to have the opportunity of saying a few heartfelt words of tribute to one whose memory I hold in tender recollection. I think I may say that I have known our friend as long, almost, as anyone in this room. We were boys together, and friends, and the years that have intervened have only added to the friendship and made it stronger. It seems almost impossible for me to believe that nearly forty years ago Duvall and I were college mates at Columbian, when it stood on the hill at the head of Fourteenth street. We were members also of the same Greek letter fraternity, the good old Sigma Chi, and many a time have we sat side by side at the festive board with our associates. Such relations could only bring us close together; and I learned to know him and esteem him. There is no truer test of a man's reputation and his character than the opinion that is entertained for him by his college mates, and, tested by that rule, Duvall was wanting in nothing. As a student he was honest, conscientious, and true. He was honored and beloved by his associates; and he received, as he merited, the esteem of the faculty.

Digitized by Google

As he was as a boy, so he grew up as a man, upright, conscientious. He was a good citizen. As a member of this bar, he stood high. In the presentation of his cases he was always fair, and he enjoyed the confidence of the court. Of pleasing manners, he was forceful with the jury.

Dying, he has left behind him an example that all, young and old, may well emulate; a good citizen, a faithful public officer, a kind husband, a loving father, a sincere friend; and he has left for his children and his family that grandest of all legacies, an honored name and an unsullied reputation.

To me, Mr. Chairman, his death came with peculiar force, for he was one of the few left of those who started out with me in the race of life. One by one they have fallen away; and when I look around me and see how few are the faces of those who commenced at this bar with me I can but remember that I am no longer a young man; no longer one of the younger members of this bar, but that any day the summons may come to me to join the band of those who have passed away, and with whom some of the happiest days of my life were spent.

As he lived, so he died; at peace with the whole world. Oh, what a beautiful death! Do you remember how it was, with the bright sky above him, the grand old ocean around and beneath him? "Rocked in the cradle of the deep, he laid him down in peace to sleep." Ah, Mr. Chairman, knowing him as we all knew him who were intimate with him, we could almost imagine his death merely a transition from this world, with its bright sunshine, to the world beyond, bright with the smile of his Father's face; and we could almost think of him bidding farewell in the words of the poet:

"Life you and I have been long together,
Through cloudy and through pleasant weather;
'Tis sad to part, when friends are dear,
May cause, perhaps, a sigh, a tear;
Then steal out of sight,
Take thine own time.
Give little warning,
Say not, Good Night,
But in some better clime,
Bid me, Good Morning."

I move, sir, the adoption of the resolutions.

Address of Mr. Edward H. Thomas.

Mr. CHAIRMAN: The members of the bar will, I believe, approve of my action as the close official associate and friend of our deceased brother, in speaking of these resolutions, which attest his worth as a citizen, his learning and skill as a lawyer, his high sense of honor, his fidelity to duty, his courteous and dignified demeanor, his spotless purity of character, and his love of truth and justice. Resolutions which, of necessity, find that the product of this work, learning, honor, and fidelity was the successful administration of the complicated and important duties of his public office, and eminent success in all departments of the law.

With the duties of the office of attorney for the District of Columbia, city solicitor, or corporation counsel, as successively called, I have within the past four years become somewhat familiar. I have nearly all that time watched with appreciation the treatment of men and officials by Mr. Duvall, and his disposition of problems of law and human conduct brought before him, more particularly in the privacy of his office. Of his ability as an advocate and trial lawyer, it is unnecessary for me to speak. I never knew him to hesitate in the line of duty. What was the law and equity and right of the matter was his constant objective inquiry, and what were the best interests for the citizen and the District the ultimate aim of his decision, without regard to personal interests and aside from selfish ends.

His course of conduct never varied in the slightest degree, because criticism would be the inevitable result of an intended decision, unfavorable to the disappointed urgency of some friend, fellow citizen, lawyer, or official anticipating a different outcome of some case or matter submitted for opinion.

On reflection I find that a thought can, with great propriety, and of necessity, I think, be added to the resolutions, that shall represent his incomparable patience—patience coupled with a certain quiet and persistent firmness against changing his conclusions. These conclusions were the result of sound logic, a disposition opposed to undue haste, and a wide legal knowledge.

No opponent ever trampled on him at the bar, nor attempted to do so without meeting worthy opposition; and yet as I came to know him better and to profit by his accumulated wisdom, I learned that he preferred peace to strife; I found that he loved his friends and had a warm, kind heart for his brethren at the bar. One grew to appreciate that he was in reality that rare example of humanity—a just man. If asked to state what was his most striking characteristic, I would say in reply, his love of truth and justice.

May I not refer, then, to his cordial relations with his superior officers, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who have spread their testimonial on the District records, and said of him, that "his judgment, always rendered after careful consideration, was based upon experience and legal knowledge acquired during many years of active and successful practice before the courts, and was so accurate that the Commissioners relied upon it with perfect confidence? . . . In his hands the interests of the District were safe-guarded to the last degree. Not only was he a faithful public servant, but as a man he possessed those virtues which are worthy of emulation, and which endeared him to all with whom he was brought in contact. The Commissioners feel that in paying this tribute to his memory they are discharging a debt of appreciation which the community owes to the counsel who represented them so honestly and so ably before the courts."

The heads of the various departments and the employees of the District were his friends. Witness their sorrow at his death, evidenced by the large assembly present at their meeting in his memory. To those of us who represented his immediate staff and were his constant associates his death is a personal loss. Where can we find such intimate knowledge of the intricacies of statutory law, orders, and practice concerning our municipal government, which he possessed and which we need to know every day?

Digitized by Google

Where and from whom will we get the same gentle and considerate treatment of our negligence, joint and several, of omission and commission, in the tasks set before us. Were it necessary to do so, we might attempt to raise a challenge, without echo or response, to our inquiry whether any personal in official life or out of official life has ever heard him excuse himself of any default or mistake by charging it to any of us, though we were or some of us were alone responsible. He always, in such cases, cheerfully accepted responsibility for mistakes he did not make. Before judges and courts, before commissioners and heads of departments, the mistakes of his subordinates, without word of blame, were assumed by him. Nothing but praise and good words for us came from his kind heart, unknown in its full generosity, except by those who had a right to know.

The resolutions speak of his courteous and dignified demeanor. These are true words. Andrew B. Duvall was one of the gentlemen of the bar and never enjoyed the atmosphere of commercialism which environs the bar at the present day.

In the trial of causes, in his treatment and consideration of the court and fellow members of the bar, he always maintained a knightly spirit and courteous demeanor.

He has left behind him for us and for his son, a fellow member of our bar, who inherits his father's spirit, that good name which is better than great riches, for he knew justice and taught her precepts by his daily life.

Address of Mr. A. Leftwich Sinclair.

The Hon. Andrew Brown Duvall, whom we mourn, was my friend; and while I realize that no eulogy of mine can add glory to the lustre of his name, I should be doing great injustice to my feelings did I not put into the record of these proceedings a slight and humble tribute of respect to his memory.

My acquaintance with Mr. Duvall began on the fifth day of October, 1891, and it soon ripened into a friendship which, I am pleased to state, waxed warmer and stronger as it grew older. I can remember well the day I met him. I was introduced to him by my friend Mr. J. J. Darlington, at whose request Mr. Duvall kindly took me into his office, on the date mentioned, as a law student; and it was my good fortune to remain in association with him continuously thereafter until he passed away, nearly fourteen years. I passed many pleasant, profitable moments with him during that time. He freely advised with me and never seemed to weary in placing his time at my disposal or in opening his rich treasure house of learning for my benefit.

I can subscribe to everything contained in the resolutions that have been offered and can bear testimony to the traits of character in my deceased friend and associate of which others have so eloquently spoken. All that can be said of the ablest and best I am prepared to say of him. He was a scholar; he was an able lawyer; he was an honorable and useful citizen; he was a noble-hearted, just man.

That which most impressed me in my long acquaintance and association with Mr. Duvall was his unremitting faithfulness to every duty, his thoroughness, his industry, his capacity for work, his love of rectitude, his noble fidelity in friendship, and his wide range of information.

Every subject Mr. Duvall touched he became master of. His researches were untiring. Not content with scratching the crust merely he penetrated the strata and foundation. The opinions written by him while corporation counsel—and he wrote a great many important ones—evidenced a remarkable grasp of the subjects he was considering, and were characterized by that purity of style and clearness of thought which marked whatever he wrote or spoke.

His instinct was quick and remarkably correct, and he was disposed to rely with a great deal of confidence upon the impression which the first view of a subject made on his mind, but he was always ready to correct the first impression if, upon further examination, he found grounds for change.

Mr. Duvall disliked ostentation, and was averse to the acts and displays to which men very often resort to achieve reputation. He did not belong to the skyrocket class. In his habits and feelings he was the most unassuming of men. There was nothing artificial in his conduct, manners, or opinions; all was easy, quiet, and natural. I never knew him to be excited or angry; he always kept his emotions within easy control; he was not revengeful in his nature. Hate and resentment found no resting place in his heart. During my long and intimate association with Mr. Duvall, I never knew him to utter a cruel or unkind word about anybody. He was kind and considerate, incapable of malice or ill-will and patient almost to a fault.

"His life was gentle, and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up
And say to all the world, 'This was a man.'"

Socially, Mr. Duvall's warm-hearted, bright, cheerful, and affectionate disposition endeared him to those who knew him well. He was a kind and true friend and a genial companion. His views of life were exalted; and a slight acquaintance with him soon disclosed that he was actuated by a high sense of duty, and that he was possessed of an integrity of character coupled with no austerity. He was, to my mind, a typical Christian gentleman. He realized that he was to pass through this way but once, and his aim seemed to be to be helpful to his fellow-travelers.

A living example of purity and devotion to duty, when the summons came to appear before the bar of that highest tribunal it found him not unprepared. All who knew him knew he was ready, in proper person, to enter an appearance there.

"So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan that moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon; but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that draws the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

HENRY F. IGLEHART AND MARY D. POLK, APPELLANTS,

v.

J. HOWARD IGLEHART, EXECUTOR OF THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF ANNIE E. I. ANDREWS, APPELLEE.

WILLS; BEQUEST TO ERECT MONUMENT; DEVISE TO CEMETERY COMPANY; COMITY; CONVERSION; TRUSTS.

1. A bequest by a testatrix, who left no husband or children, of the sum of $5,000, being about one-half her entire estate, to be expended for the erection of a monument at the grave of her husband, is valid.
2. Section 669, Code D. C., providing that cemetery companies incorporated under its laws may take and hold real estate and personal property, and use the income thereof for the care of cemetery lots, monuments, etc., the right of a corporation under the laws of New York, which by its charter is given similar powers, to take a devise of land in this District for such purposes, will, upon principles of comity, be recognized and upheld.
3. A devise of real estate to the Greenwood Cemetery, New York, if real estate in this District, in trust for the use of decedent's brother for life, and on his death to be converted into money and the proceeds to be invested, the income therefrom to be used by the cemetery company, as trustees, in trust for keeping a lot in perpetual good order, held valid.
4. The express direction to sell, though the time of sale was not immediate, operated to convert the property into personalty from the death of the testatrix.
5. Equity will not allow a trust to fail for want of a trustee, but will, if necessary, appoint a trustee to carry it into effect.

No. 1593.

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 24,938, in suit to construe a will. Affirmed.

Mr. Andrew Wilson, Mr. N. W. Barksdale, and Mr. W. C. Balderston for the appellants.

Mr. W. V. R. Berry, Mr. B. S. Minor, Mr. T. L. Jeffords, Mr. C. H. Stanley, and Mr. H. B. Rowland for the appellee.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree holding valid the last will and testament of Annie E. I. Andrews, and its provisions making certain devises and bequests to the Greenwood Cemetery Company of New York.

The record discloses that the deceased, a resident of the District of Columbia, died in 1903, leaving a will dated March 19, 1903. The amount of the estate was something over $10,000, of which $3,000 was in real estate situate in the District, and the balance personalty. The will having been duly probated, the executor filed this bill for its construction. The heirs contend that clauses one, ten, and twelve are invalid. The first clause devised and bequeathed to the Greenwood Cemetery Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., as trustees, the real property which consisted of a house and lot. This was to be held in trust for the use of decedent's brother and his wife during their life, or the life of either of them, provided that they kept the property in repair and paid the taxes on it. At their death, or upon their failure to comply with the recited condition, the property was to be sold and the proceeds invested in United States securities, the income therefrom to be used by the cemetery company, as trustees, for the purpose of keeping the Andrews' lot in perpetual good order. The tenth clause derected that $5,000 be taken from the estate to be expended for a monument at the grave of her husband, E. L. Andrews, in Greenwood Cemetery. The twelfth clause directed that the residue of her property, after payment of legacies, debts, and the like, be converted into cash and invested in United States securities, and the income therefrom be used by the cemetery company, as trustees, as an additional fund for the preservation and care of the lot before referred to. The case was heard by stipulation upon the pleadings and an agreed statement of facts. The admitted facts do not require to be set forth as, in our opinion, they do not affect the decision at which we have arrived.

The assigned errors are three in number and relate respectively to the validity of the devise of the real estate to the cemetery company, the validity of the residuary bequest, and the validity of the provision for the erection of the monument.

The latter will be first passed upon. There seems to be no question that the decedent's husband was buried in Greenwood Cemetery, and no trouble arises in locating the lot. There is no trouble in carrying out the provision of the will providing for the erection of the monument and no difficulty in upholding the clause relating to it and separating it from the other provisions attacked. The deceased was admittedly of sound mind, left no husband or children surviving her, and was under no legal obligation to leave her property for the support of her relatives. It may be conceded, as claimed, that the amount is greater than ordinarily expended for such a purpose by those in the same station of life as decedent without warranting us in holding that the provision should be overthrown. The court below was not in error in upholding it, and we agree with the conclusion of the learned justice in upholding it and with the reasons adduced by him.

The question of the validity of the bequest of the real estate presents a more serious question. It is contended with much force that the conveyance, or attempted conveyance, of the real estate to the trustee creates a perpetuity, and is, therefore, void. If there were no exceptions to the general provisions of the law applicable to the subject we would be compelled to hold that the devise was unquestionably void, but there are exceptions, and the question ultimately to be decided is whether this devise falls within the exceptions or of any of them.

It is urged on behalf of the Greenwood Cemetery Company that the bequest is valid because it is for a charitable use. At least many of the cases referred to by it are cases where such bequests have been sustained as being for charitable uses. We think, however, that the bequest can not be upheld on such ground, for the weight of authorities is that bequests for the care of burial lots are void as creating perpetuities, for such uses are not charitable. Bates v. Bates, 134 Mass. 110, and many English cases there cited.

The ground upon which the bequest must be sustained, if upon any, is that the laws of the

Digitized by Google

District of Columbia provide that cemetery companies incorporated under its laws can take and hold real estate and personal property, and use the income thereof for the care of cemetery lots, monuments, etc.; and though it is contended by appellants that as the Greenwood Cemetery Company is not incorporated under the District laws, this exception contained in section 669 of the Code does not apply, yet it is admitted that the laws of the State of New York, under which the Greenwood Cemetery Company is incorporated, permit it to take real and personal property for the purpose of using the income for the care of cemetery lots, renewal of monuments, etc. It will be seen, therefore, that the policy of the law of the District of Columbia, where the deceased was domiciled, makes a clear exception to the common law, and also to the statutory law of the District, so far as cemetery companies incorporated under the laws of the District are concerned; and that the laws of the State of New York, where the proceeds of the real estate are designed to be taken, and where the trustee has its legal abode, permits the trustee to take and hold real and personal property, and creates the same exception. It scarcely seems possible that Congress intended to be so narrow as would be the case if it intended, in permitting cemeteries incorporated under the laws of the District to take and hold property for the purpose specified, to refuse to recognize a like right in similar companies incorporated under the laws of the various States where a like privilege was granted. We think rather that Congress considered that it was necessary to specify companies organized in the District in order that they could acquire and hold property for the purpose specified, and believed it unnecessary to provide that such companies, incorporated under the laws of the States in which they were given like privileges, could take real and personal property situated in the District, and which was to be taken out of the District and administered elsewhere. It is fair to presume that Congress knew of and recognized the rule now well established and generally followed that, "while the laws of the testator's domicile govern as to the formal requisites essential to the validity of the will, the capacity of the testator and the construction of the instrument, the validity of particular bequests depends (unless expressly prohibited by the law of the testator's domicile) upon the law of the domicile of the legatee." Congregational Unitarian Society v. Hale, 29 Appl. Div. (N. Y.) 396.

The rule of comity permitting a foreign corporation to acquire and hold lands by devise is now generally recognized, provided their charters permit them so to do, and no prohibition is found in the laws or public policy of the domestic State. Am. & Eng. Encly. Law, vol. 13, page 856, 2d ed. The public policy of the District of Columbia permits in express terms, as shown by express legislation, its cemetary corporations to receive such bequests. The State of New York permits the Greenwood Cemetery Company to hold such bequests as the one in question. It seems to us that it follows from the general law of comity prevailing among the various States of the Union, that we should recognize and uphold the right of this appellee to receive the bequests provided by the will. While there is some conflict in the decisions of the courts of the various States, we think that the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, which are controlling upon us, favor this doctrine of comity. Christian v. Yount, 101 U. S. 352. In the light of the decision in that case, it can not be successfully contended that something which the District of Columbia permits to its own corporations is so far against its public policy that it will not permit persons domiciled within its territory to devise their property to be used for the same purpose by a foreign corporation authorized by its own charter to receive and administer such bequests. But the position of the appellee is, we think, much stronger, for we have treated the property devised by the first clause of the will as real property. It appears that the will expressly directs that the real estate shall be sold upon the death of the life tenants, and perhaps sooner. The proceeds are to be invested in personal property. The authorities are quite well agreed that such express direction of sale, though the time of sale is not immediate, operates to convert the property into personalty from the death of the testator. Hope v. Brewer, 136 N. Y. 126; Reiff & Brinkley v. Strite, 54 Md. 298. It is unnecessary to multiply authorities upon this point. The real estate being once converted into personalty, it matters even less, than in the case of real estate, to the District of Columbia whether such property goes into the hands of a foreign corporation to be held in trust as a perpetuity, or whether it be put to other uses. The District of Columbia, and its residents, are more interested in having the right of foreign cemetery companies to take property, real and personal, situate in the District, for the purpose of the care of cemetery lots, and the maintenance and care of monuments erected thereon, recognized, than other States or their residents can be, for the reason that so many of the people domiciled in the District come from other localities, or are the descendants of those who came from such localities, and, while passing their lives here, expect upon death to be laid in cemeteries located outside the District and which are not incorporated under its laws. In considering the policy of the laws of the District we think this fact should not be lost sight of, and in interpreting its laws we must bear in mind that they are enacted by Congress, which represents all sections of our common country. The law of comity should therefore be recognized even more broadly here than elsewhere, in all questions like the one under consideration.

Irrespective, however, of the peculiar conditions which here exist, we think the weight of authority upholds the decision of the lower court; and, while we were much impressed by the full and careful presentation of appellants' counsel, we do not find sufficient cause for holding that any error was committed in upholding clauses 1 and 12 of the will.

We do not think it necessary to here pass upon the question whether the Greenwood Cemetery Company has power under its charter to act as trustee in the District of Columbia for property here located, and no power to convert the real estate into personalty, for the reason that equity will not allow the trust to fail for want of a trustee, but will, if necessary, appoint a trustee to carry it into effect.

Digitized by Google

There being no reversible error committed by the court below, it follows that the decree appealed from should be affirmed, with costs. And it is so ordered.

WE are privileged to give in this issue the resolutions respecting the recent death of Mr. Andrew B. Duvall adopted at the meeting of the bar held on October 27, together with the addresses paying tribute to his memory made on that occasion. Rarely have more graceful and beautiful, and at the same time well-deserved, eulogies been uttered, and we are assured our readers will join with us in thanking the Bar Association for the privilege of enabling us to preserve them in permanent form. The resolutions and addresses on the death of Mr. William John Miller will be printed in full in an early issue of THE LAW REPORTER.

An adjourned meeting of the bar was held on Friday, November 3, 1905, to take action respecting the death of Justice Andrew Wylie. Resolutions were adopted and addresses made by several members of the bar, which will be given in full in our columns hereafter.

Bills and Notes—Transactions with Decedent.—Where, in an action by an administrator on a note, there is no evidence as to the transaction in which the note was given, except the evidence of the maker, incompetent under the statute, judgment must be rendered for plaintiff. Union Trust Co. v. Morgans (Mich.), 103 N. W. Rep. 568.

Bills and Notes—Negotiability.—Where a note payable to order is assigned without indorsement, its negotiable character is destroyed. Cornish v. Woolverton (Mont.), 81 Pac. Rep. 4.

Master and Servant—Safe Place to Work.—A stevedore held not liable for the death of a servant caused by the defectiveness of the hatch of a vessel, over which such stevedore had no control, for failure to furnish deceased with proper appliances and a safe place to work. Hyde v. Booth (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 337.

Master and Servant—Failure to Warn Servant of Defects.—A master held not negligent in failing to warn a workman of defects in the floor of an unused room which the workman was ordered to clean. O'Keefe v. John P. Squire Co. (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 340.

Master and Servant—Fellow Servants.—The fact that the negligence of a fellow servant concurs with the master in causing injury to a servant does not exempt the master from liability for his negligence. Merrill v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. (Utah), 81 Pac. Rep. 85.

Banks and Banking—Fraud of Officer.—In suit by a bank depositor against the bank and its president to establish the equitable title of the bank to certain shares of railroad stock, contention of president that judgment was unfair and inequitable held untenable. Dundon v. McDonald (Cal.), 80 Pac. Rep. 1034.

Bankruptcy—Proceeds of Life Insurance.—Exemption of policies of life insurance under Bakruptcy Act, ch. 541, sec. 6, where exempt from execution by the State law, held not qualified by proviso in section 70a of that act. Holden v. Stratton, U. S. S. C., 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656.

Bankruptcy—Assignment of Future Wages.—An assignment of wages to be earned in the future to secure a debt can not be enforced against a debtor, after his discharge in bankruptcy, as to wages thereafter earned by him. Leitch v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. (Minn.), 103 N. W. Rep. 704.

Bankruptcy—Effect of Discharge.—A judgment against an insolvent, after he is adjudged a bankrupt and before his final discharge, on a provable claim, held canceled by such discharge. Cavanaugh v. Fenley (Minn.), 103 N. W. Rep. 711.

Negligence—Evidence of Other Negligent Acts.—Where, in an action for injuries, the negligent acts relied on are alleged, plaintiff can not recover on proof of other negligent acts, causing the injury. Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Bruley (Ill.), 74 N. E. Rep. 441.

Partnership—Administrator of Deceased Partner.—Where administrator of deceased partner misapplies the funds in payment of debts of the firm, he and the other partners are liable for the misappropriation. Hibberd v. Hubbard (Pa.), 60 Atl. Rep. 911.

Nuisance—Abatement of Public Nuisance.—To confer jurisdiction in equity to abate a public nuisance, plaintiff must have suffered special damages, incapable of being measured. George v. Peckham (Neb.), 103 N. W. Rep. 664.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Alexander B. Hagner, in His Own Right, and as Executor, et al., Complainants, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants. No. 25,589. Equity Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of said lot at the northeast corner of lot 9, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, ——Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, Junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov 10, 17, 24; dec 2, 9; jan 5, 12.

Ellwood O. Wagenhorst, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Sherman McCallum, Rebecca Alexander, Complainants, v. Mary A. Ellis, Susan E. Hedian, the Unknown Heirs at Law of Susan Decatur, Defendants. Equity No. 25,785.

The object of this suit is to establish the titles by adverse possession of the complainants to the south 35 feet of original lot 18 of square 198 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitor, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to her, will be proceeded with as in case of default. And, it is, by the court, further ordered, this 7th day of November, A. D, 1905, that the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to them, will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order, before the appearance days named for the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, and for the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, respectively, shall be published once a week for four successive weeks, and twice a month for three successive months, in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov. 10, 17, 24; dec. 1.

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Legal Notices.

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John A. Barber, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 3d day of November, 1905. J. WILLIAM HENRY, 1319 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,255. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

---

George C. Gertman, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The Atkinson and Ballard Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Benjamin Stoddert et al., Defendants.

Equity. No. 25,714. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree perfecting and establishing of record the complete title of the complainant to lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Lloyd P. Pumphrey's subdivision of certain lots in square numbered sixty (60), in the city of Washington, in said District, as described in the bill of complaint. On motion of the complainant, by George C. Gertman, its solicitor, it is by the court, this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs and devisees of Benjamin Stoddert; George Scott, executor, and in his own right; Jonathan Scholfield (of Issacker), executor, and in his own right; Mahlon Scholfield; Benjamin Waters, trustee, and in his own right; Sarah Talbot, Ann Dobey, John Balderson, Eliza Cowen, Lucretia Edmonston, John Woods, Rachael A. Levering, Joseph Scholfield, Hannah Scholfield, Sarah Scholfield, Lewis Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Mahlon); Elizabeth Hopkins, Rachael Hodge, Ann Scholfield, Thomas Scholfield, Andrew Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Issacker); Martha Stanton, James Stanton, Jane Anderson, Sarah Anderson, Mary Anderson, William Elliott, Joseph Elliott, Sarah Elliott, Margaret Elliott, Maria Elliott, Thomas Elliott, Mary Elliott, James Evans, (of Jonathan); John Evans (of Theophilus); George Evans, Cadwallader Evans, Oliver Evans (of Oliver); John Lampley, Elizabeth Lampley, Eliza W. Evans, Rachel Evans, Leah Evans, Thomas Evans, Evan Evans, Jesse Evans, Oliver Evans (of Joseph); Abner Evans, George Evans, Joseph Evans, Joseph Ball, William Brackin, Adeline Brackin, Elizabeth Brackin, Margaret Brackin, and Minnie Johnson, or if either or all of them be dead, then the unknown heirs and devisees of any or all of the above-named defendants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in November and three times weekly in December, 1905, prior to said return day, good cause having been shown by the bill and affidavit filed herein, to the satisfaction of the court, that further or longer publication is unnecessary. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov. 10; dec. 1, 8, 15

Andrew B. Duvall, E. H. Thomas, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Snowden W. Robinson, Complainant, v. Alvira Robinson, Sewell R. Duley et al., Defendants.

Equity No. 25,770. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to appoint a new trustee for the estate of James S. Robinson, deceased. On motion of the complainant, it is this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, Mary A. Collins and Mary Edna Collins, infant, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal.]

45-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

J. H. Lichliter, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of John W. Smith, Deceased.
No. 13,238. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Emma J. Smith, widow of said deceased, it is ordered, this 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Leander Smith, Della Bell Smith, Dessa Bell Smith, Etta Alma Smith (infant), Lotus Mae Smith (infant), La Fayette P. Ripley, Leffingwell D. Ripley, Frank N. Ripley, Elizabeth J. Ripley, Edna (or Etna) V. Harwood, Grace Kaufer, Ida B. Berger, and Arthur S. Thompson, all non-residents of the District of Columbia, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 45-3t

B. H. Loucks, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Court of Equity.
In the Matter of Composite Brick Manufacturing Co., a Corporation. Equity. No. ——.

It appearing to the court that a petition has been filed herein praying that the Composite Brick Manufacturing Company, a corporation, organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, be dissolved as provided by section 768 of the Code of the said District and for other relief, it is, this 7th day of November, ordered that notice of this application be given to all persons concerned and requiring all persons concerned to appear in this court and show cause, if any they have, on the 11th day of December, 1905, why the said corporation should not be dissolved, a receiver appointed to take charge of the assets of said corporation, and for general relief. It is further ordered that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post once a week for three successive weeks, the first insertion to be not less than one month before said return day. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to all stockholders, bondholders, and creditors whose names appear in said petition thirty days before said return day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

Berry & Minor, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker, Complainants, v. Henry W. Bartol, E. Welsh Ashford, and Erwin Cyrus Brainerd, Respondents. Equity, No. 25,746.

The object of this suit is to substitute trustees in the place and stead of E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin Cyrus Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), under a deed of trust dated September 13, 1900, and recorded in liber 2520 at page 118 of the land records of the District of Columbia, from William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker and wife to E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin C. Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), trustees, conveying lot 50 in Frank L. Hanvey's subdivision of lot 8 in block 34, "Columbia Heights," in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitors, Berry & Minor, and it appearing to the court that the summons issued herein against the respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, has been returned "not to be found," and the non-residence of the said respondent having been proved to the satisfaction of the court, it is, this 8th day of November, 1905, ordered that the said respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph E. McDonald, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. JESSIE C. McDONALD, Colorado Building, Wash., D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,236. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Alexander B. Hagner, Complainant, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants.
No. 25,588, Eq. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainant's title to parts of lots 9 and 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of lot 13 at a point in the south line of north H street, distant 25 feet 8½ inches west from the northeast corner of lot 13, running thence west on said south line of H street 40 feet 8½ inches; thence south 183 feet; thence east 65 feet 7 inches; thence north 50 feet; thence west 25 feet 8½ inches; thence north 133 feet to the place of beginning. And beginning for said part of lot 9 at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence south 51 feet 6 inches; thence west 20 feet; thence north 51 feet 6 inches; thence east 20 feet, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainant, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following-named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing, (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]
nov 10-17-24; dec 2-9; jan 5-12

Samuel Maddox, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Hattie Hicks et al., Complainants, v. Margaret R. Trotter et al., Defendants. Equity No. 23,164.

Upon consideration of the report of H. Prescott Gatley, trustee, herein filed, it is this 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be, and he is herby, authorized and directed to sell to Florence A. DeLong lot 20 of Daniel Birtwell's subdivision of lot 10, block 13, Rosedale and Isherwood, for the sum of $860, cash; and that said sale, so made, shall be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Susana Griswold, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 27th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 8th day of November, 1905. GEORGE PRINCE, by Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,496. Admn. [Seal.] 45-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the States of Illinois and Georgia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 7th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM HOLABIRD, Monodnock Block, Chicago, Ill.; JOSEPH WILLARD PRESTON, 407 Equitable Building, Atlanta, Ga. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,193. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

The Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. John B. Wight et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,122.

Charles S. Shreve, Jr., and William F. Hall, trustees, having reported to the court that they have received a private offer to purchase lots, viz: All of lots D, E, F, G, H, and I, in Gideon L. Walker's subdivision of lots in square numbered one hundred and seventy-two (172), as per plat recorded in liber R. W., folio 128, surveyor's office, D. C., more fully described in the original order of sale herein, from John M. Clapp, for the sum of ninety-five hundred dollars ($9,500), all cash, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said offer be accepted and said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 9th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice.

A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. nov 10, 17, 24

Harry G. Kimball, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Alice M. Peck, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Appelona Whitehair, Deceased, et al., Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,782.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to lot numbered twenty (20) in Babcock's subdivision of original lots eight (8), nine (9), and ten (10) in square one hundred and three (103) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Harry G. Kimball, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Appelona Whitehair, deceased, and the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Justinian Mayberry, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice.

True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. nov 10-17, dec 8-15, jan 19-19

Legal Notices.

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Caldwell Poor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. ELLA POOR, care of R. Ross Perry & Son. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,224. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

Wm. E. Harvey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration d.b.n. on the estate of Daniel A. Connelly, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM B. KING, 728 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 1179. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Benjamin Carter, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Florence H. Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. BENJ. CARTER, Bond Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,229. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine McGuinn, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. HENRY P. BLAIR, Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,191. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Thos. Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. WALTER G. BRADLEY, New York Mills, N. Y. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,762. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al.
In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 55 feet of lot 1, in square 397, with the improvements thereon, to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $9,750; lot 2, in square 556, with the improvements thereon, to Mary A. Martin, for the sum of $1,275; and sublot 70, in square 445, to Tillotson E. Brown, for the sum $1,124.12, it is, this 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that said sales be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of November, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adolphe Berger, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,228. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

---

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Nathaniel E. Thompson, otherwise known as Elbridge N. Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 20th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 2d day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer; by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,523. Adm. [Seal.] 44-3t

---

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Elizabeth Sutton and William H. Fearson v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of George Mason and Others. No. 25,700. Equity Docket No 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainants' title in fee simple, by adverse possession, in and to the north 20 ft. front on 19th st. by the full depth thereof, of original lot 12, in sq. 106, in Washington, D. C., improved by premises No. 913, 19th st. N. W. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of George Mason, of William Mason, of A. E. Grimes, and of Elizabeth Hooe, all deceased. On motion of the complainants, by W. Spencer Armstrong, their solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in the Washington Law Reporter and in the Washington Times. By the court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.]

nov 3-10; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

Legal Notices.

Douglass & Douglass, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Samuel Rothert et al., Complainants, v. Susie Brice et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 25,487. Doc. 56.

Edgar B. Sherrill and John R. Shields, trustees, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, being parts of original lots numbered 2 and 3 in square numbered 69, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, beginning for the same at a point 5 feet east from the southwest corner of original lot numbered 2 in said square, and running thence north 100 feet; thence west 22 feet 6 inches; thence south 100 feet to the line of N street north, and thence east 22 feet 6 inches to the beginning; being the same land included in lot numbered 190, in said square numbered 69, according to a subdivision made by John H. Rothert, and recorded in book No. 28, page 126, in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, to Albert Marshall for the sum of one thousand five hundred seventy-five dollars ($1,575), it is by the court, this 27th day of October, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 28th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

---

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

D. H. Roland Drury v. Minnie Fuller and Others.
No. 25,650 Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainant's title in fee simple by adverse possession in and to lot 17, in Emily Fuller's subdivision of lots in square 60, in Washington, D. C., as said subdivision is recorded in the surveyor's office in Book H. D. C., page 40. The defendants to this suit are Minnie Fuller (if living), and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Minnie Fuller (if deceased), of Andrew Schoifield, of Robert Leckie, of Ruth Fuller, of Calhoun Clark, and of Sarah F. Fitzgerald. On motion of complainant, by W. Spencer Armstrong, his solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that said defendant Minnie Fuller cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the other defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three successive weeks during the first month, and thereafter twice a month for two months, in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]

nov 3-10-17; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edwin S. Houston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,067. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

---

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid forat more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Jos. D. Sullivan, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Plant, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of November, 1905. ARTHUR G. PLANT, care of Traders National Bank. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,249. Admn. [Seal.] 44-3t

Ralston & Siddons, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Joseph H. Byram, S. Norris Thorn, Trustees of the Home Building Association, of the District of Columbia, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, and Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay. Equity No. 25,658.

Process having been duly issued against the defendants herein and returned "Not to be found," although diligent efforts have been made to find them, it is, this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the unknown heirs, devisees, and representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainants to part of lot two hundred and nine (209) in square twelve hundred and fifty-nine (1259) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northwest corner thereof and running thence south 122 feet 8 inches to the south line of said lot; thence east 31 feet 1 inch; thence north 10 feet (the width of the alley hereinafter reserved); thence east 2 feet 2 inches; thence north 20 feet, more or less, to the south line of lot conveyed to Jared Nichols; thence west 25 feet; thence north 90 feet to line of West street, and thence west 8 feet 3 inches, more or less, to the place of beginning; with the right to use a 10-foot alley running along and over the south part of lots 209 and 210 to give an outlet on Montgomery street. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 44-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

[Filed October 23, 1905, J. R. Young, Clerk.]
Carlisle & Johnson, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Louis P. Shoemaker, Trustee, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith. No. 25,621. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to the west half of lot seven (7) in Samuel Davidson's recorded subdivision of lots in square one hundred and sixty-three (163), fronting fifteen (15) feet on the north side of K street northwest, by depth of one hundred (100) feet eleven (11) inches, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant by his solicitors, Carlisle & Johnson, it is this 23d day of October, A. D., 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post at least once in the month of October and at least three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 43-4t

Legal Notices.

John Lewis Johnson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen M. Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM A. FOY, Columbian Bldg. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,135. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of James William Orme, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 23d day of October, 1905. WILLIAM B. ORME, 1623 28th st. N. W.; CHAS. B. BAILEY, 1424 Stoughton street. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,201. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of LeRoy M. Taylor, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 14th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., Andrew Parker, Treasurer, by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. ——. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

John S. Alleman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth C. Opperman, Deceased.
No. 13,221. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Albert F. Fox, it is ordered this 27th day October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachael A. Todd (nee Kulp), Hannah E. Caffey, and Hester R. Smith, of Doylestown, Pa.; Michal C. Kulp, of Lynchburg, Va.; Ida Dangler, of Atlantic City, N. J.; William C. Kuhn, of Philadelphia, Pa., and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 43-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Blair & Thom, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Equity.
In the Matter of the Change of Name of Dallas Corbin, Otherwise Known as Henry Corbin.
Equity, No. 25,751.

Upon consideration of the petition of Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, this day filed, praying that his name be changed to Henry Corbin, it is, this 18th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that notice in said case, in accordance with section 1299 of the Code of Laws of the District of Columbia, be published in the newspapers as follows: On the 13th day of October, 1905, Dallas Corbin, commonly and generally known as Henry Corbin, filed his petition in this court, stating that he had assumed the name of Henry Corbin by mistake; that he had acquired real estate; conducted business as an expressman, and had been for many years generally known as Henry Corbin; and the prayer of said petition is as follows: That this honorable court will pass an order changing your petitioner's name from Dallas Corbin to Henry Corbin and make Henry Corbin his legal name for all intents and purposes. That said notice in said form shall be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Post. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Attest: J. R. Young, Clerk, by W. E. Williams, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 43-3t

William C. Prentiss, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Kunigunda Fedarwisch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of October, 1905. JOHN T. BRANSON, 614 11th st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,177. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

James F. Bundy, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Allen B. Hamm, Deceased.
No. 13,209. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by James F. Bundy, it is ordered this 24th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Mary Hamm, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Bee once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 43-3t

Irving Williamson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Washington Matthews, Deceased.
No. 13,208. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Caroline Matthews, it is ordered this 24th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Alphons Matthews, Clement Matthews, Nicholas Matthews, and Maria Matthews, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 4th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted; provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 43-3t

Legal Notices.

Maurice Kelly, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Anna M. Rochester, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. WM. B. ROCHESTER, 1320 18th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,108. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

A. B. Keefer, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alice Healy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 25th day of October, 1905. DENNIS L. HEALEY, 1154 5th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,104. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 24 Defrees street, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot number seventy-six (76) in Shephard's recorded subdivision of square number six hundred and twenty-three (623), to Christian Loos, for the sum of two thousand ($2,000) dollars cash, less fifty ($50.00) dollars brokerage commission, it is by the court this 20th day of October, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 20th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 43-3t

E. L. Gies, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard F. Sorg, Complainant, v. Ollie A. Sorg et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,295.

The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 19th day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Ollie A. Sorg, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40th) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once a week for three (3) consecutive weeks prior to said day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 43-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Samuel Jackson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of October, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Boyd Taylor, Asst. Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,144. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Cole & Donaldson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Charles F. Scott, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. MARTHA SCOTT, 1455 Binney st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,188. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Oscar Luckett, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
James Hyde v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Charles Carter.
No. 25,699. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to that parcel of land situated in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as and being lot numbered sixty-four (64) in A. D. Jessup's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and eighteen (218), as per plat recorded in liber R. L. H., folio 236, of the records of the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein, it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Oscar Luckett, it is this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Charles Carter, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter at least once in the month of October and three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. oct 27-nov 3,10,17

George F. Collins, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Elizabeth A. Rawlings, Deceased.
No. 13,019. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by James S. Rawlings, it is ordered this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs and next of kin of said Elizabeth A. Rawlings, deceased, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said re-
[Seal] turn day. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

C. C. Clarke, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Robert Duncan Swingle, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 23d day of October, 1905. EMMA C. SWINGLE, 1443 Huntington Place. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,231. Administration. [Seal.] 43-3t

Legal Notices.

Ellwood P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Myers, Deceased.
No. 13,210. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Ellwood P. Morey, executor, it is ordered this 26th day of October, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Herbert P. Myers, Fannie Hitch, Edward H. Myers, Mary M. Reynolds, Wellborn M. Reynolds, Herbert L. Reynolds, Dudley W. Reynolds, Homer V. Reynolds, Edward H. Reynolds, James M. Walker, Mary C. Walker, William M. Walker, Daniel McI. Walker, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 30th day of November, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to [Seal] be not less than thirty days before said return day. ASHLEY M. GOULD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 43-3t

FIFTH INSERTION.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,298.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law [Seal] Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.
sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 46

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - NOVEMBER 17, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 721
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Supreme Commandery United Order of the Golden Cross, appellant, v. Richard Bernard, et al., executors, etc. 722
The Ohio National Bank of Washington, appellant, v. Henry S. Berlin et al. 726
Legal Notices 730

Conditional Sales—Remedy of Vendor on Refusal of Vendee to Accept Goods.

In the case of Callahan v. Kahlert, on hearing during the present week in Criminal Court No. 2, an important ruling was made by Mr. Justice Gould respecting the remedy to be pursued by the vendor, in cases of conditional sales, where the vendee refuses to accept the goods. It appeared that the defendant entered into an agreement to purchase of the plaintiff a cash register for $265, agreeing to pay for the same in instalments of $25 monthly or cash with a discount. A day or two after making the contract the defendant, for reasons of his own, countermanded the order; but the plaintiff, nevertheless, tendered delivery of the cash register, and on refusal by the defendant to accept it, sued to recover the purchase price. In granting a motion by the defendant for the direction of a verdict in his favor, Mr. Justice Gould held that the plaintiff could not maintain an action to recover the contract price, but that his remedy, if any, was for damages for breach of the contract. He further held that under no circumstances could the plaintiff sue for the contract price until the time for payment of the instalments had expired. Mr. James B. Archer, jr., appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Leon Tobriner for the defendant.

Appeals From Justices of the Peace—Right of Appellant to Dismiss Appeal.

An interesting question of practice was decided during the present week by Mr. Justice Gould, holding Criminal Court No. 2, now engaged in the trial of cases on the appeal calendar. In the case of Agnes Grant against James L. Karrick, the defendant appealed from the judgment of the justice of the peace in favor of the plaintiff; and the question presented was as to right of the appellant to dismiss his appeal. In disposing of the matter Mr. Justice Gould stated that the question was one that had never before been decided in this jurisdiction. He held that, under the provisions of the Code of this District regulating the practice on appeals from justices of the peace, the appellee acquires rights which the appellant should not be allowed to divest by a dismissal of the appeal, and his right to do so was denied. Messrs. Millan & Smith appeared for the appellant, and Messrs. Roland & McReynolds for the appellee.

The Present System of Transferring Stock.

A question of considerable interest to lawyers, and especially to bankers and stockholders, was raised by Judge Kennedy, of the Court of Common Pleas, Pittsburg, Pa., recently, in litigation growing out of the failure of the Enterprise National Bank, wherein he questioned the validity of the system, so widely in use at present, of transferring stock by absolute power of attorney. The court was hearing an application for an injunction to restrain the defendants from disposing of or in any wise incumbering a certain certificate of stock which, it was alleged, the complainant had deposited with the bank as collateral for a loan and which had been feloniously taken from the bank and placed in the custody of defendant. It was strongly urged upon the court that the stock had been legally transferred to defendant, and authorities were cited in support of the contention; and it was stated to be the common and almost universal practice for lawyers and others having an irrevocable power of attorney from the original holders to bring stock to banks for sale, such transfers being everywhere accepted and regarded as legal. Judge Kennedy, however, said several times: "I was not aware until this recent flareup that this was the common practice of stock brokers and business men, and I am not convinced that it is sanctioned by the Supreme Court. Such an action is not an actual transfer, having only the power of attorney authorizing the transfer. In my opinion the stock must actually be transferred to another name in the books of the company."

Digitized by Google

A somewhat similar question was presented to the Court of Appeals of this District in the case of National Safe Deposit, Savings and Loan Co. v. Gray, 26 Wash. Law. Rep. 179. In that case it appeared that a stock certificate indorsed by the owner in blank to secure a loan of $500 by a third party, had been pledged to the defendant by such third party to secure a loan made to him at the time, and also as security for a pre-existing indebtedness. It further appeared that the defendant had no notice of any equities existing between the owner and such third party. In holding that the owner had the right to redeem the certificate on payment to defendant of the amount actually loaned at the time it received the pledge, two points were decided by the Court of Appeals, as follows:

1st. That a party in possession of a stock certificate with a written transfer and power of attorney indorsed in blank thereon by the party named as owner on the face of the certificate, may pledge the same for a loan of money made him at the time, where the pledgee takes without notice of any equities existing between the pledger and the owner of the certificate.

2d. In such case the right of the pledgee is based upon the doctrine of equitable estoppel; and the owner is entitled to redeem on payment of the money loaned when the pledge was made, notwithstanding the pledge was also made to cover a pre-existing indebtedness from the pledger to the pledgee, unless the pledgee shows that he changed his position to his prejudice in relation to such pre-existing debts on the faith that the pledger was the real owner of the certificate.

Powers—Duty of Purchaser from Life Tenant.—Where by deed or will the life tenant is invested with power to sell for the purpose of reinvesting the proceeds, the obligation does not devolve on the purchaser to see that the investment is in fact made, where there is no participation by the purchaser in an unauthorized sale. Whitfield v. Burke (Miss.), 38 So. Rep. 550.

Master and Servant—Voluntarily Undertaking Dangerous Work—The injury of a servant while attempting without orders to replace a belt on moving shafting held due solely to his own negligence, which precluded his recovery from the master. Johnson v. Bridgeport Deoxidized Bronze & Metal Co., U. S. C. C. D. Conn. 135 Fed. Rep. 216.

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia

SUPREME COMMANDERY UNITED ORDER OF THE GOLDEN CROSS, APPELLANT, v. RICHARD BERNARD ET AL., EXECUTORS, ETC.

FRATERNAL BENEFICIAL ASSOCIATIONS; DISCONNECTION FOR NON-PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS; REINSTATEMENT; WAIVER.

1. Where the by-laws of a fraternal beneficial association and the contract entered between it and its members provide that forfeiture and disconnection shall follow the non-payment of an assessment, the member failing to pay an assessment within the stipulated time must suffer the penalty.
2. The right given by the by-laws of a fraternal beneficial association to a member who has become disconnected therefrom by his failure to pay an assessment within the time prescribed to be reinstated upon payment of the assessment and such fine as the by-laws may provide, is a right personal to the member, and does not survive to his legal representatives.
3. Where at the time of his death a member of a fraternal beneficial association was disconnected therefrom by reason of his failure to pay an assessment within the time prescribed, the tender by his legal representatives, within the thirty days during which, under the by-laws, the member might have reinstated himself upon payment of the assessment and a fine, of the amount of the assessment was not sufficient to entitle the beneficiary to recover.
4. Held, that the evidence was insufficient to show a waiver by the association of terms of the contract as embodied in the certificate.

No. 1544. Decided November 8, 1904.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at law, No. 46,254, entered upon the verdict of a jury in an action on a benefit certificate. Reversed.

Mr. Andrew Wilson and Mr. N. W. Barksdale for the appellant.

Mr. I. Q. H. Alward and Mr. A. D. Bernard for the appellees.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This appeal is by the defendant from a verdict against it by a jury in a suit at law on a benefit certificate issued by it to Joseph Trainor, a member of Halcyon Commandery, a local lodge of the appellant, made payable on its face to Catharine W. Trainor, his wife, and now claimed by the appellees, as his executors, who are also the assignees of the executor and of the next of kin of Catharine W. Trainor.

One of the objects of the order, as disclosed by the record, was to establish a benefit fund from which an agreed sum was to be paid, on the death of a beneficiary member of the order who had complied with all the lawful requirements, to the beneficiary's family, or to be disposed of as such beneficiary might direct. The certificate was issued in January, 1890, and all of the monthly assessments were paid by the beneficiary down to the one due November 1, 1902, which was payable within thirty days thereafter. Trainor, failing to make this payment, became disconnected from the order, but with the right to reinstatement within thirty days after such disconnection by the simple payment of the assessment and such fine as the commandery might by by-laws provide. Before such payment, and on December 2, 1902,

Digitized by Google

Trainor died. His executors, on December 19, 1902, tendered the proper officer the sum of $6.60, the amount due for the November and December assessments, but appellant's officer refused to receive the same.

The record further discloses that Trainor's wife, the beneficiary named in the original certificate, died some time prior to the 13th day of November, 1900, and that Trainor surrendered the benefit certificate and directed that a new certificate be issued to him, naming as beneficiary his late wife's brother, J. Marion Duncan, who was stated to be the executor of his last will and testament. The appellant neglected or refused to comply with Trainor's request, and no change was made in the certificate. It appears, however, that Trainor, in February, 1901, duly executed a will, which was, after his death, duly admitted to probate, wherein he named the appellees as his executors. Trainor also left a letter of instructions to his executors directing them what disposition to make of the proceeds of the benefit certificate in question. The executor of his wife's will duly assigned any right that he might have as such executor in the said benefit certificate, and an assignment of a like interest was made by the next of kin of said deceased wife in and to the proceeds of said benefit certificate.

To the amended declaration a demurrer was filed, and, being overruled, exception was noted and six pleas interposed, to which issue was joined.

Upon the trial of the case, the facts above set forth were shown, and, in addition thereto, it appeared from the testimony of James S. Sharpe, who testified that he was a member of Halcyon Commandery, of Washington, D. C., and the United Order of the Golden Cross, that one W. S. Stetson was the keeper of records of Halcyon Commandery at the time of Joseph Trainor's death, and that he was then dead. He identified the signature of Stetson on the benefit certificate; also on the reverse side in the alleged application for change of beneficiary, and a letter dated December 19, 1902, written to the plaintiffs.

It also appeared from his testimony that Trainor frequently failed to pay his assessments until after he was disconnected, and that he never made formal application for reinstatement or passed a medical examination, these not being required by the by-laws, but he was reinstated by simply paying the assessment. At the close of the testimony, the court submitted the case to the jury, having refused defendant's prayers and granted those submitted by plaintiffs. The jury returned a verdict for the amount of the certificate less the November and December assessments.

Many errors are assigned, among them the incapacity of the plaintiffs to maintain the suit; others are based upon the admission of the Stetson letter above referred to and of certain oral statements made by him, upon admitting into evidence Trainor's letter of instruction to his executors; their written application for the reinstatement of Trainor after his death and the tender of the unpaid assessments by them; the application of Trainor for change of beneficiary; the refusal to grant certain prayers of the defendant, including one for direction of a verdict, and the grant of plaintiff's first prayer.

While we are of the opinion that the executors are competent to maintain the suit, if the right to reinstatement after disconnection was not personal to Trainor, in view of the decision of this court in Berkley v. Harper, 3 Appl. D. C., 308, wherein the charter and by-laws of this appellant were before this court; and while we believe that the error, if any, in the admission of the evidence was not a material error, provided this suit could be maintained, we have reached the conclusion that a correct determination of this appeal can be best reached by considering at the outset certain vital questions raised by the appellant's exceptions to the court's refusal to charge, as requested in its fifth prayer, and its charge, as requested in the appellees' first prayer.

These prayers are as follows:

Appellant's fifth prayer:

"The jury is instructed that if they find that Joseph Trainor was a member of the order and was disconnected for non-payment of dues or assessments, and failed to reinstate himself in thirty days as provided by the by-laws of the order, then they are instructed that the right of reinstatement does not accrue to his personal representatives, and that this tender of assessments by his personal representatives will not entitle his beneficiary to recover.

Appellees' first prayer:

"The plaintiffs pray the court to instruct the jury that if they believe from the evidence that Joseph Trainor, deceased, was the insured under the policy of insurance or benefit certificate offered in evidence in this case, and they shall further find that the said Joseph Trainor in his lifetime designated the plaintiffs Richard Bernard and Alfred D. Bernard executors, the beneficiaries under said policy or benefit certificate by a paper writing offered in evidence as a letter of instructions, wherein the said fund is specially designated and ordered distributed; and shall further find that the sole personal representatives and next of kin as well as the executor of Katherine W. Trainor, the deceased wife of the said Joseph Trainor, assigned all their right, title and interest in said benefit certificate to the plaintiffs, then their verdict shall be for the plaintiffs, provided they shall further find that at the time of the death of the said Joseph Trainor, there was a custom of the local commandery of the defendant to give the member an additional thirty days in which to pay his assessment, and shall further find that during said thirty days' extension, the said assessments then due and payable were tendered to the defendant through its proper local financial secretary."

The crux of the entire case is whether the right to reinstatement after disconnection was personal to Trainor or survived to those who legally represented him.

It appears from the record, as we have stated, that Trainor became ipso facto disconnected from the order by his failure to pay the assessment payable not later than midnight of November 30, 1902. By-law 17, Sec. 3, of the order provides that "A member who fails to pay this '(the monthly)' assessment before midnight of the last day of the month in which it becomes due and payable, shall, ipso facto, stand disconnected from his commandery and from the order, without sentence by the commandery." Section 6 provides: . . . "The disconnection or expulsion of any member shall work an immediate forfeiture of all claims of said disconnected or expelled member and of the beneficiary under his benefit certificate to any participation in the benefit fund." The benefit certificate issued to Trainor also provides that "the suspension, disconnection or expulsion of said member shall work an immediate forfeiture of all claims of said member on the benefit fund of this order, and also a forfeiture of the claims of the beneficiaries named in this certificate."

Digitized by Google

The parties, therefore, contracted expressly that a disconnection should follow failure to pay any assessment within a given time, and that such disconnection should work a forfeiture. That it is competent to so contract is established by a long line of authorities. Trainor having failed to pay the November assessment was disconnected and so remained at the time of his death. The authorities are quite in accord that, where the by-laws of a fraternal and beneficial society, and the contract entered into between the member and the society provide that forfeiture and disconnection follow the non-payment of an assessment, the member failing to pay within the stipulated time must suffer the penalty. Bacon on Benefit Societies, Sec. 385; Borgraefe v. Knights of Honor, 22 Mo. App. 127; Rood v. Railway Asso., 31 F. R. 62; McDonald v. Mutual Benefit Asso., 29 Hun, 87.

While it is competent for the party for whose benefit the conditions of forfeiture and disconnection are incorporated into the contract, as evidenced by their by-laws and benefit certificate, to waive them, we search the record in vain in this case for any evidence showing that there had at any time been a waiver of the terms of the contract as embodied in the benefit certificate and the by-laws as to disconnection and forfeiture. No where does it appear that the local officers of the commandery have waived or ever attempted to waive the provisions of the contract relative to disconnections, and much less is it shown that the appellant ever gave such authority to the local officers or agents, or had any knowledge that they exercised it. The rule as to the waiver of conditions contained in contracts, and especially of conditions in insurance policies, is authoritatively laid down by the United States Supreme Court in Northern Assurance Co. v. Grand View Building Asso., 183 U. S., 308, where it is stated, after an exhaustive review of the cases in the Federal, State and English courts on the subject, "that where the waiver relied on is an act of an agent, it must be shown, either that the agent had express authority from the company to make the waiver, or that the company subsequently, with knowledge of the facts, ratified the action of the agent." The receipt of overdue assessments, which are paid within the time provided for and prescribed by the by-laws, is not evidence of a waiver of the disconnection, where a party has the absolute right, as in this case, to pay the overdue assessments within thirty days after his disconnection, nor is a failure on the part of the collecting officer or other agent of the local commandery, though as collecting agent he may act for the supreme commandery, to notify the supreme commandery of the disconnection of the member where that disconnection has been overcome by the payment of the overdue assessment. The evidence in this case goes only to the extent of showing that notices of disconnections were not sent to the supreme commandery by the officer of Trainor's commandery upon whom the duty devolved until the 10th of the month following any such disconnection which arose from the failure to pay the assessment on or before midnight of the last day of the preceding month, but that Trainor and other members repeatedly paid, or had paid for them, these overdue assessments, and that their names were not forwarded as having been disconnected. Admitting all this to be true, it does not, in our opinion, amount to a waiver, even had it been authorized by or known to the supreme commandery. If an earlier notice was required by any rule or regulation of the supreme commandery, it would amount to nothing, for the disconnection followed the failure to pay the assessment, and notice thereof to the supreme commandery made it no more effectual. These disconnections generally amounted to nothing and evidently had no terrors for the members of Halcyon Commandery, and probably not for the members of other commanderies, the reason for this being, as stated, that the disconnected member could be reinstated at any time within thirty days from the date of his disconnection by simply paying the overdue assessment and any fine that the commandery might by by-law fix. No medical examination was required, nor was it necessary to make any formal application for restoration. By-law 12, Sec. 3, provides for this:

"Persons who have been members of the order, but are disconnected for the non-payment of dues or assessments, desiring again to obtain membership, can do so within thirty days after their disconnection on payment of the arrears for which they were disconnected and such a fine as the commandery may by by-laws provide."

Therefore, every member who had not been disconnected for more than thirty days had the absolute right, at the meetings of the commandery held on the 10th day of each month, to pay his overdue assessment, and the collecting agent for the commandery, in accepting such payments, exercised no discretion, but was compelled to receive them, and in receiving them, he did not waive the prior disconnection of a member. The disconnection ended simply by the payment of the overdue assessment. The payment, ipso facto, worked a restoration to membership as automatically as a failure to pay the assessment at the last hour of grace worked a disconnection. Trainor was disconnected at the hour of his death, though he then had an absolute right to reinstatement by simply paying the overdue assessment, and, this being the fact, it brings us to the real question to be determined, i. e., whether that right survived. If this question be answered in the negative, the court below was in error in refusing the appellant's fifth prayer and in granting appellees' first prayer.

While there is some conflict of authority on this point, the weight of authority is to the effect that such right of reinstatement does not survive, but, in these fraternal and beneficial orders, is personal to the members. The penalty of disconnection is probably the most effective aid to enforce the payment of assessments. The payment of these assessments is absolutely essential to the existence of the order. As was said in Modern Woodmen of America v. Tevis, 117 F. R. 369, "Fraternal insurance is temporary insurance—insurance from the maturity of one assessment to the maturity of another—and stipulations to insure promptitude in the payment of the assessments constitutes both the substance and essence of contracts for it." It will be pertinent to refer to a few of the cases sustaining the proposition that this right of reinstatement does not survive to the representative of the deceased member. Yoe v. Howard Benevolent Asso., 63 Md. 86, the opinion in which was written by the late chief justice of this court, says:

Digitized by Google

"The obligation to pay the death assessment is personal to the member, and it must, according to the laws of the article referred to, be paid in his lifetime, for if he died before payment, no representative of his is authorized to pay for him, in order to entitle the intended beneficiary to receive the mortuary aid from the association. The payment is to be made by the member as such, and in case of his default he ceases to be a member, and he forfeits all claim upon the association. The member failing in his lifetime to make payment, and the thirty days having expired before his death, and no one being authorized to make it after his death, to hold the association liable, notwithstanding no payment of the assessment had been made, would be to disregard the mutuality of members, as well as do violence to the terms and plain intent of the article of the association which we have quoted. The thirty days' grace was for his convenience and accommodation, and though he had the full period of thirty days within which he could make the payment, yet if he thought proper to delay it to the last hour of that period, the delay was at his own risk, and not that of the association. Here the full thirty days had expired without payment, and the party died two days thereafter, and that being the case, he was not a member when he died, having by his default lost his membership and all the benefits appertaining thereto."

Carlson v. Supreme Council, 115 Cal. 466, is a case very similar to the one now under consideration. The insured failed to pay a certain assessment, and for such failure, under the by-laws, stood suspended. He had the right, as in this case, to be reinstated within a certain time by payment of past-due assessments. He died before the expiration of the time when, if living, he could have paid the assessments and been reinstated. The beneficiary tendered the assessments due the association, but they were refused upon the ground that a dead man could not be reinstated. It was urged that, as the insured died within the time within which he was entitled to pay the back assessments and be restored to membership, this right of reinstatement passed to his legal representative, notwithstanding his disconnection. The court, however, held that the forfeiture took place as soon as there was failure to pay the assessment, and that, though, had he survived, he would have had the right to pay the arrears within sixty days, such payment would not have defeated the forfeiture, but merely have ended it, and that this option was personal to himself. The opinion quotes from Niblack on Benefit Societies, section 299, to the effect that:

"When a member has been suspended for non-payment of an assessment and he has neglected during his lifetime to secure his reinstatement in accordance with the terms of his certificate by paying arrearages while in good health and within a certain time, his restoration to membership can not be effected after his death by payment by another person, within the time limit, of the sum due from him at the time of his death."

To the same effect are the cases of Supreme Lodge v. Jones, 69 N. E., 718, and Maginnis v. Aid Asso., 43 La. Ann. 1136.

The case of Dennis v. Mass. Benefit Asso., 120 N. Y. 496, cited by the appellees in support of their contention that the right to reinstatement survives, is not in point, and may be reconciled with the cases holding to the contrary. The opinion in that case expressly states:

"If the certificate in question had provided without qualification that for a failure to pay the assessment within thirty days after the mailing of a notice thereof by the defendant it should lapse and be void, its invalidity would be established without dispute."

Furthermore, the facts are quite different from those in the case at bar.

We conclude that the right to reinstatement was personal to Trainor and did not survive to his legal representatives, and that therefore there was error in the judgment rendered by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the premises, and that the judgment should be reversed with costs and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. And it is so ordered.

Bankruptcy—Extension of Time for Application for Discharge.—A bankrupt held not entitled to an extension of time for the filing of an application for a discharge within the court's discretion, under bankruptcy act, chapter 541, section 14. In re Lewin, U. S. D. C. (W. D. Tex.) 135 Fed. Rep. 252.

Railroads—Failure to Give Warning at Crossing.—The presumption that the servants of a railroad performed their duty of ringing the bell and sounding the whistle at a crossing does not obtain, where there is evidence that such duty was not performed. Roberts v. Wabash R. Co., Mo., 87 S. W. Rep. 601.

Cancellation of Instruments—Basis of Equitable Relief.—A federal court of equity has jurisdiction of a suit for the cancellation of a promissory note alleged to have been obtained from complainant by fraud, the remedy at law not being plain, adequate, and complete. Manning v. Berdan, U. S. C. C., D. (N. J.), 135 Fed. Rep 159.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

THE OHIO NATIONAL BANK OF WASHINGTON, APPELLANT,

v.

HENRY S. BERLIN ET AL.

JUDGMENTS AND DECREES, LIEN OF, ON EQUITABLE INTERESTS; SEC. 1214, CODE D. C., CONSTRUED; DEEDS; DEFECTIVE ACKNOWLEDGMENT; CREDITORS' BILL; LIEN ACQUIRED BY; PRIORITY OVER UNRECORDED DEED.

1. Section 1214, Code D. C., providing that judgments, etc., shall be a lien upon the equitable as well as the legal interests of the defendants bound thereby from the date when the same shall be rendered, operates only in favor of judgments and decrees rendered after the going into effect of the Code; and does not operate in favor of judgments and decrees in existence at the time the Code went into effect.
2. A certificate of acknowledgment of a deed is fatally defective under section 499, Code D. C., as originally enacted, where it does not appear that the grantor was personally known to the officer, or that his identity had been proved by the oath of credible witnesses, and where the instrument is not identified by the recital of its date; and under such circumstances the instrument is not entitled to record, and its record is of no effect as constructive notice.
3. The filing of a bill in equity to reach an equitable interest of a judgment debtor and subject it to the satisfaction of the judgment, gives the judgment creditor a lien on the property sought to be reached by the bill.
4. Under such circumstances, the judgment creditor is a "creditor" within the meaning of section 499, Code D. C., providing that as to creditors, etc., a deed shall take effect only from the time of its delivery for record, and is entitled to priority over a grantee or assignee from the judgment debtor whose deed, although dated prior to the filing of the bill in equity, was not filed for record until thirteen days thereafter, and after service of process had on the judgment debtor.

No. 1597. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in Equity, No. 23,318, dismissing a bill to subject an equitable interest to the lien of a judgment at law. Reversed.

Mr. Thomas C. Taylor and Mr. Jesse C. Adkins for the appellant.

Mr. C. F. Carusi for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the court.

1. The appellant appeals from a decree dismissing its bill filed to subject the equitable interest of Henry S. Berlin in certain lands to the lien of a judgment. The original bill was filed May 13, 1902, and on October 29, 1902, a supplemental bill was filed making one George A. Green a party defendant, as the holder of an assignment of the interest aforesaid of Henry S. Berlin, unrecorded at the time of filing the original bill.

From bill and answers, together with a stipulation reciting certain facts as agreed upon, on which the cause was submitted, the following facts appear:

(1) On May 13, 1901, the Ohio National Bank recovered a judgment against Henry S. Berlin and Armat Stoddart, in the Supreme Court of the District, for the sum of $426, with certain interest thereon, and costs of protest, besides costs of suit. Execution issued thereon January 29, 1902, was returned March 31, 1902, nulla bona, and the judgment remains unsatisfied.

(2) The will of William Berlin dated January 5, 1899, and probated about September 25, 1901, vests an interest in the lands of the testator in defendant, Henry S. Berlin. Said lands were subject to a deed in trust executed by said testator October 29, 1891, to secure the payment of a note, part of which remains unpaid. The deed in trust remaining in force, the trustees therein are made parties defendant; but no attack is made upon the validity of the indebtedness, to the extent that it remains unpaid.

(3) The sealed instrument under which George A. Green claims bears date May 8, 1902. It purports to convey to him all of the interest of Henry S. Berlin, under the will of William Berlin, for a consideration of $900. The acknowledgment of this instrument reads as follows:

"District of Columbia, ss:

On this eighth day of May in the year of our Lord, 1902, before me, the subscriber, a notary public in and for the District aforesaid, personally appeared Henry S. Berlin, of Washington, District of Columbia, and made oath in due form of law that the above is his act and signature, and that he has a perfect right to sell, and by this act he has sold the same to George A. Green. HELEN E. PARKER,

(Notarial seal.) Notary Public."

(4) This assignment was filed for record in the office of the recorder of deeds for the District of Columbia, and recorded on May 26, 1902, at 10.50 o'clock a. m.

2. The first contention of the appellant is that its judgment became a lien upon the equitable estate of the judgment debtor, Henry S. Berlin, by virtue of section 1214 of the Code, which went into effect from and after January 1, 1902. So much of that section as is important is here recited: "Every final judgment at common law and every unconditional final decree in equity for the payment of money from the date when the same shall be rendered . . . shall be a lien on all the freehold and leasehold estates, legal and equitable, of the defendants bound by such judgment, decree, . . . in any lands, tenements, or hereditaments in the District, whether such estates be in possession or be reversions or remainders, vested or contingent; but such liens on equitable interest shall be enforced by a bill in equity."

(1) The contention of the appellant does not go to the extent of claiming that the lien given by this section relates back to and operates from the date of a judgment rendered prior to its enactment. And clearly it does not. It is the universally accepted rule in the interpretation of statutes, that they operate prospectively, in the absence of a contrary intention either expressed or necessarily to be implied.

(2) The question remaining, then, is, whether the lien operates, from and after the passage of the Code, in favor of all judgments then in existence, as well as in favor of those thereafter rendered. The literal meaning of the words "from the date when the same shall be rendered," limits the lien to future judgments. To hold that they give a lien to prior judgments from the date of the enactment, is contrary to the grammatical construction and the plain, natural import of the words. There is no other language in the section warranting an inference that those words were intended to have any other than their literal and natural meaning.

Digitized by Google

"To get at the thought or meaning expressed in a statute, a contract, or a constitution, the first resort, in all cases, is to the natural signification of the words, in the order of grammatical arrangement in which the framers of the instrument have placed them. If the words convey a definite meaning which involves no absurdity, then that meaning, apparent on the face of the instrument, must be accepted, and neither the courts nor the legislature have the right to add to it or take from it. Lake Co. v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670.

Practically the only ground upon which the argument for going beyond the letter of the statute rests is the want of any apparent reason why the legislature should have made a distinction between future judgments and existing ones. Undoubtedly, the lien given by the statute might wisely and justly have been extended to both classes of judgments, but the courts have no power to interpolate words necessary to accomplish that end. They have nothing to do with the motives actuating the legislature.

To a like argument in a case of great hardship, the Supreme Court of the United States, in an early case, made the following reply: "This, it must be admitted, when we consider the mischief which the law was probably intended to remedy, is a somewhat technical construction of the act; and cases may be found where courts have construed a statute most liberally to effectuate the remedy; but where the language of the act is explicit, there is great danger in departing from the words used to give an effect to the law which may be supposed to have been designed by the legislature. Where the language of the act is not clear, and is of doubtful construction, a court may well look at every part of the statute—at its title, and the mischief intended to be remedied in carrying it into effect. But it is not for the court to say, where the language of the statute is clear, that it shall be so construed as to embrace cases, because no good reason can be assigned why they were excluded from its provisions.

"We are unable to say why the benefits of this statute were given to those who held under deeds proved by the subscribing witnesses and withheld from those whose deeds were proved by the acknowledgment of the grantor. In most cases, if not in all, proof by acknowledgment would be deemed more satisfactory than by witnesses, but the legislature having made a distinction between the cases, whether it was intentional or not, reasonable or unreasonable, the courts are bound by the clearly expressed language of the act." Denn v. Reid, 10 Peters, 524, 527. The distinction above referred to consisted in clearly stating the one kind of proof without naming the others. In construing an important statute in a recent case, the same court said: "The primary and general rule of statutory construction is that the intent of the lawmaker is to be found in the language that he has used. He is presumed to know the meaning of words and the rules of grammar. The courts have no function of legislation and simply seek to ascertain the will of the legislator. It is true there are cases in which the letter of the statute is not deemed controlling, but the cases are few and exceptional, and only arise when there are cogent reasons for believing that the letter does not fully and accurately disclose the intent. No mere omission, no mere failure to provide for contingencies, which it may seem wise to have been specifically provided for, justify any judicial addition to the letter of the statute." U. S. v. Goldenberg, 168 U. S. 95, 102.

The appellant's contention is supported by a decision of the Supreme Court of Texas giving interpretation to a statute closely resembling ours, in which it was held that the lien applied to prior as well as to subsequent judgments, the majority of the court declaring that the words "shall be" should be interpreted as if reading "shall have been."

Without pausing to consider the peculiar conditions in that State arising from former legislation relating to judgment liens, and the operation of stay-laws enacted during and immediately after the war between the States, as affording grounds for this construction, it is sufficient to say that if it was justified by those conditions, they do not prevail here; and that, if the letter of the statute was not followed because it would result in a discrimination between the two classes of judgments, then the rule of construction is opposed to that laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the cases above cited. In another case relied on by the appellant, there is considerable difference between the statute construed and our section 1214. Woods v. Mains, 1 Green (Iowa), 275, 292.

3. The next question to be considered is as to the operation of section 499 upon the rights of the parties. As enacted January 1, 1902, it reads as follows: "Sec. 499. When deeds to take effect.—Any deed conveying real property in the District, or interest therein, or declaring or limiting any use or trust thereof, executed and acknowledged and certified as aforesaid and delivered to the person in whose favor the same is executed, shall be held to take effect and pass the title in the property conveyed to said person from the date of the acknowledgment, provided the same be recorded within three months from said date, except that as to creditors and subsequent bona fide purchasers and mortgagees without notice of said deed, and others interested in said property, it shall only take effect from the time of its delivery to the recorder of deeds to be recorded."

This section controls the operation of the deed in this case, though by amendment of June 30, 1902, it has been materially altered.

(1) Since the submission of the case, the appellant, by motion for leave to file a supplemental brief, has, for the first time, raised the question of the sufficiency of the proof of the acknowledgment of the execution of the deed to Green to entitle the same to be recorded. The character of this certificate, however, had not been overlooked. Possibly, though we are not to be understood as so deciding, the recital of the acknowledgment hereinbefore copied may answer as a certificate, though omitting the formal words, "do hereby certify" as recited in the statutory form. Code, section 498. Likewise, the omission of the formal statement that the grantor acknowledged "the same to be his act and deed," and of the notary public to attest the certificate formally as given under her hand and seal, may be passed. The certificate is, however, fatally defective for the following material omissions: It does not appear that the grantor was personally known to the officer or that his identity had been proved by the oath of credible witnesses; nor was the instrument identified by the recital of its date. The record of the instrument, therefore, was unauthorized and of no effect as constructive notice. Lynch v. Murphy, 161 U. S. 247, 253. Its effect as notice, however, is of no significance in the present case.

Digitized by Google

To go further and undertake to determine the effect of this want of acknowledgment and of effective record, upon the passage of title to Green, would involve the determination whether the word "creditors," as used in section 499, embraces all creditors, whether prior or subsequent to the execution of the unacknowledged and unrecorded deed, or those whose claims were contracted after the execution of the instrument, with or without actual knowledge of its contents; or only those creditors who may have acquired some recognizable lien thereafter, with or without such actual knowledge; and also whether, through failure of acknowledgment and record, it even took effect as to the grantor. These are questions concerning which there has been much contrariety of decision in the States whose statutes have in view the same general object; and, under the circumstances, we prefer to pass them and rest our decision on another ground, sufficient for all the purposes of this case, upon which we have had the benefit of oral, as well as printed argument.

(2) In the consideration of this point, the necessary facts are these: The bill to obtain satisfaction of the judgment and of the equitable interest of the judgment debtor was filed May 13, 1902. The deed conveying that interest to the defendant Green, of which complainant had no notice, was executed and delivered May 8, 1902. The actual recordation of this deed, though ineffectual in law, did not take place until May 26, 1902, after the service of process upon Henry S. Berlin, the maker thereof.

Execution upon complainant's judgment could not be levied upon the equitable estate of the judgment debtor, and had been returned nulla bona, prior to filing of the bill. The only remedy for the satisfaction of the judgment was, therefore, in equity. Morsell v. Bank, 91 U. S. 357. Even the liens now given upon such interests to judgments rendered since January 1, 1902, by section 1214, can only be enforced by bill in equity. No execution could be had at law, because the courts of law refused recognition to such interests. To supply this defect, or rather inadequacy, of the legal remedy, the remedy in equity was devised by way of an equitable execution. Freedman's Sav. & Tr. Co. v. Earle, 110 U. S. 710. A concise history of the origin and development of the equitable remedy is given in the opinion of Mr. Justice Matthews in that case, who says (p. 717): "The filing of the bill, in cases of equitable execution, is the beginning of executing it." This beginning of execution, as he says (p. 717), by "the filing of a bill by an execution creditor to subject the equity of the debtor in his lifetime, created a lien and gave him a legal preference." And this lien, he further says (p. 720), "is given by the court in the exercise of its jurisdiction to entertain the bill and to grant the relief prayed for."

The filing of the bill necessarily gives the judgment creditor the same right of preference by way of this special lien as is acquired by the levy of an execution upon the legal estate of the judgment debtor. The doctrine of the case cited has frequently been applied in this court. Gottschalk Co. v. Live Oak Distillery Co., 7 App. D. C. 169, 174: 23 Wash. Law Rep. 795; Fulton v. Fletcher, 12 App. D. C. 1, 21: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 52; Babington v. Washington Brewery Co., 13 App. D. C. 527, 531: 27 Wash. Law Rep. 22; May v. Bryan, 17 App. D. C. 392, 393: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 618. In Fulton v. Fletcher, supra, it was said: "The court did not err in charging the jury that the plaintiff acquired a lien upon the property described in the bill. It was an equitable interest that could not be reached by execution, and the filing of the bill was the commencement of the lien." And in May v. Bryan, supra, it was said: "The filing of the bill, and the notification issued for appearance thereto, created a lien on the equitable estate or assets of the judgment debtor, described in the bill and the amendments thereto; and no subsequent disposition of the estate or of those assets could displace or defeat that lien."

None of the foregoing cases involved the particular question here raised between the plaintiff in such a proceeding and an assignee or grantee of the equitable interest under a conveyance thereof, whether made after or before (but without registration) the filing of the bill. But they do affirm the creation of a special lien thereby; and the holder thereof is a creditor within the meaning of section 499 under even the most limited construction that has ever been given by any court to a similar statute. Without citing the conflicting decisions under such statutes, it may be said that they are divided into three classes. The first class embraces all ordinary creditors within the comprehension of the statute. Another excludes all but creditors whose claims arose between the date of the conveyance and its regular filing for record. The third excludes all save those who, before the filing for record, have acquired or fastened a lien upon the property. The judgment creditor having brought himself within this most limited class of creditors is entitled to the enforcement of his judgment by a decree for the sale of the equitable interest described in the bill as against the right of the defendant Green, who did not undertake to record his conveyance until after the bill had been filed.

For the error pointed out, the decree will be reversed with costs and the cause remanded, with directions to enter a final decree for the complainant in accordance with the prayers of his bill.

Reversed.

Legal blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Digitized by Google

Strike—Conspiracy—Picketing.

The Supreme Court of Indiana held, in the case of the Karges Furniture Company v. Amalgamated Wood Workers' Local Union, No. 131, et al., that an action can not be maintained under the law of Indiana against an unincorporated association not professing nor assuming to act as a corporation, but only against the individuals composing it; that a combination of persons to act in concert is not necessarily an unlawful conspiracy; that proof that 600 members of a labor union by majority vote inaugurated a strike, and in concert attempted by persuasion, but peaceably, to induce all the workmen at plaintiff's factory to quit work, and that certain individuals, part of whom were members of the union, used violence and abuse to induce non-union men to stop working for the plaintiff, but were discountenanced in so doing by the union as a body, and that plaintiff's business thereby suffered loss, did not establish a conspiracy by members of the union to do an unlawful act, and that peaceable picketing by strikers was not unlawful.

Sale—Sample—Acceptance.

In the case of Kupfer v. Michigan Clothing Company, recently decided by the Supreme Court of Michigan, it appeared that the defendant ordered cloth of the plaintiffs at different times, and that a portion of the goods made up were returned by its customers as unsatisfactory on account of the poor quality of the cloth. The defendant returned the cloth on hand to the plaintiff without examination. The cloth was ordered from samples. The court held that if the cloth ordered conformed in quality to the samples from which it was ordered it was the defendant's duty to accept it; that the defendant could not establish his right to refuse acceptance merely by showing that other goods received under similar orders were unsatisfactory, and that the defendant's act in ordering the cloth reshipped to it after returning the goods to the plaintiff amounted to an acceptance.

Contract — Nonperformance — Recovery of Consideration—Rescission.—In Timmerman v. Stanley, decided by the Supreme Court of Georgia in August, 1905 (51 S. E., 760), the general rule was laid down that where one party asserts the right to rescind a contract for nonperformance by the other of his covenant, the party seeking rescission must restore or tender back to the other party what has been received from him, so as to restore the parties to the condition in which they were before the contract was made.

It was held, however, that this rule has no application to a case where one agrees to teach another a certain thing, and, after beginning the course of instruction, refuses to proceed further, whereupon the other party treats the contract as rescinded, and brings suit to recover the amount which he has paid under the agreement. The court said in part:

It is contended, in the brief of counsel for the defendant in error, that there can be no recovery of the amount paid, because, in order to rescind the contract, the plaintiff must restore the status, and must tender back to the defendant what he has received from him, and that this can not be done in the present case (Civ. Code 1895, sec. 3712). This is a general rule where one party to the contract has received goods, money or other thing of value, which is capable of being returned to the other party. But in a contract like that involved in the present case, where a person agrees to teach another a certain thing, or to qualify him for a certain position, if he gives the student some instruction and then refuses to complete his contract, there would be no possible way by which such instruction as he had given could be returned or tendered back to him; nor is the other party required to estimate value for what has been done and tender such amount. He can not hold on to the amount paid, refuse to proceed with the contract, and defend against an action to recover the price paid on the ground that the plaintiff had not tendered back to him his instruction, and could not restore him to the status quo. He can not by his own conduct place himself in a situation where restoration is impossible, repudiate the contract and set up this situation as a defense to a suit for the amount paid. If he abandons the contract, he should not complain that the other party is willing to treat it as rescinded.

Corporations—Rights of Attaching Creditors of Foreign Corporation.—A receiver of a foreign corporation, appointed in another State, cannot defeat an attachment or garnishment levied by a resident creditor on assets within this State before the receiver acquires possession. Choctaw Coal & Mining Co. v. Williams-Echols Dry Goods Co. (Ark.), 87 S. W. Rep. 632.

Railroads—Injury to Person on Track.—Persons walking in the middle of a railroad track on a dark night, taking no precaution for their safety, can not throw upon the trainmen the entire duty of securing the same. White v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., La., 38 So. Rep. 574.

Master and Servant—Safe Appliances.—A painter, whose duty it is, according to the custom of the trade, to inspect scaffolds, need only exercise ordinary care in such inspection. George Weidemann Brewing Co. v. Wood (Ky.), 87 S. W. Rep. 772.

Master and Servant—Wrongful Death of Brakeman.—In an action against a railroad for the death of a brakeman, deceased held entitled to rely on assurance of warning of danger given him by superintendent of freight train. Edgar v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 911.

Mechanics' Liens—Property Subject.—Where labor and materials were furnished under a single contract for the improvement of three houses, each separate lot held liable for the entire debt. Guarantee Savings, Loan and Invest. Co. v. Cash (Tex.), 87 S. W. Rep. 749.

Digitized by Google

Bills and Notes—Bona Fide Holders.—Negotiable notes, acquired in good faith for value before maturity, are not vitiated in the hands of the holder by subsequent information of their infirmity.—Hillard v. Taylor, (La.) 38 So. Rep. 594.

Bills and Notes—Negotiability.—A provision that, if the interest be not paid semiannually, it shall become principal and bear the same rate of interest, does not make the note non-negotiable. Brown v. Vossen (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 577.

Adverse Possession—Land Purchased at Tax Sale by Wife.—A wife purchasing land at a tax sale in possession of her husband as tenant for life held not entitled to acquire a title by adverse possession. Blair v. Johnson (Ill.), 74 N. E. Rep. 747.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,
LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Jno. Ridout, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Frank J. Dieudonne, Plaintiff, v. Liquid Carbonic Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,944.

The object of this suit is to recover damages for breach of contract, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before the return day of this order. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. [Seal] 46-3t

Legal Notices.

Wm. Herbert Smith, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert H. Montgomery, Deceased.
No. 13,217. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia A. Montgomery, it is ordered this 13th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachel Elliot, Susan Oakes, Anne Montgomery, and Sarah E. Rogers, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 18th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

Lancaster & Smith, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Frazier, Deceased.
No. 13,256. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Laura C. Frazier, it is ordered this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Frazier, Ephraim Frazier, and Harry Frazier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 18th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 917 O street northwest, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered nine (9) in Samuel Redfern's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-six (366), to the Deaconess Board of the District Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Baltimore Conference, a body corporate, of which said executor is one of the trustees, for sixty-five hundred ($6,500) dollars net, all cash, it is, by the court, this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Jno. Ridout, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Henry H. Meyer, Plaintiff v. The Standard Stone Manufacturing Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,935.

The object of this suit is to recover an amount due to plaintiff from defendant on open account and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before the return day of this order. [Seal] By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Mary E. Letts, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,143. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Lorenzo A. Bailey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Michael Flaherty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of November, 1905. BRIDGET FLAHERTY, 1300 Del. ave, S.W., City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,280. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
In re Estate of Susan Perry, Deceased.
No. 10,180. Administration.

It appearing to the court that John T. Wood, executor, has reported a bid of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) each for lots 1, 2, and 3, in block 7, section 3, in Burrville, District of Columbia, from William B. Johnson, it is this 16th day of November, 1905, ordered that the sale of said lots to William B Johnson at the above price be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 16th day of December, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three [Seal] successive weeks before said last-named day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Harry G. Kimball, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c.t.a. on the estate of Howard Markward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. GEORGE H. MARKWARD, 609 G st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,268. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Robinson White, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Charles White, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of November, 1905. JANE M. WHITE, care of Robinson White; CHAS. WHITE, Jr., 418 O st. S. W.; JENNIE W. FUGITT, 109 11th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13271. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Legal Notices.

B. F. Louchs, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Estate of Ephraim A. Greenough, Deceased.
No. 12,110.

Charles F. Nesbit, surviving executor of the last will and testament of Ephraim A. Greenough, deceased, having reported to the court the sale of sublot No. 16 in square No 78., improved by house No. 328 Massachusetts avenue n. e., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles E. Rice for the sum of five thousand five hundred and forty-five dollars ($5,545), subject to a deed of trust for five thousand dollars and sixty-two dollars and fifty cents interest thereon, it is, this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown to the court on or before the 11th day of December, 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published in the [Seal] Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

William D. Hoover, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Aaron Stern, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 5th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,394. Adm. [Seal.] 46-3t

Wilson & Barksdale, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Kate Ross, Deceased.
Probate No. 13244.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of Kate Ross and for letters testamentary, by Frank E. Gibson, as executor, it is this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that John W. Ross, Charles Riddle, Richard Anderson, William Anderson, Mary E. Denny, —— Smith, and the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Kate Ross, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Thursday, the 14th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks [Seal] before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Carl Hugo Ziemann, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 26th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 13th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, AUGUST DAETZ, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,314. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Charles C. Walter, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 8th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 14th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, LIZZIE M. WALTER, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,223. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

---

William G. Henderson, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Mary A. M. Smith, Deceased.

Administration. No. 12,145.

Henry Calver, executor, having reported to the court the sale of a certain piece of property belonging to the estate of the decedent, said piece of property being known as premises No. 1248 23d st. N. W., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and being lot D, in square 36, as designated in the ground plat or plan of the said city, together with improvements thereon, to James B. Wimer, for six hundred dollars ($600); it is, by this court, ordered and decreed that the sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 11th day of December, 1905; provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. [Seal] 46-3t

---

SECOND INSERTION.

T. Percy Myers, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John A. Barber, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 3d day of November, 1905. J. WILLIAM HENRY, 1319 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,255. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

---

Andrew B. Duvall, E. H. Thomas, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Snowden W. Robinson, Complainant, v. Alvira Robinson, Sewell R. Duley et al., Defendants.

Equity No. 25,770. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to appoint a new trustee for the estate of James S. Robinson, deceased. On motion of the complainant, it is this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, Mary A. Collins and Mary Edna Collins, infant, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 45-3t

Legal Notices.

Ellwood O. Wagenhorst, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Sherman McCallum, Rebecca Alexander, Complainants, v. Mary A. Ellis, Susan E. Hedian, the Unknown Heirs at Law of Susan Decatur, Defendants. Equity No. 25,785.

The object of this suit is to establish the titles by adverse possession of the complainants to the south 35 feet of original lot 18 of square 198 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitor, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to her, will be proceeded with as in case of default. And, it is, by the court, further ordered, this 7th day of November, A. D, 1905, that the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to them, will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order, before the appearance days named for the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, and for the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, respectively, shall be published once a week for four successive weeks, and twice a month for three successive months, in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10, 17, 24; dec. 1.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Alexander B. Hagner, in His Own Right, and as Executor, et al., Complainants, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants. No. 25,589. Equity Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of said lot at the northeast corner of lot 9, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —Brown, — Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov 10, 17, 24; dec 2, 9; jan 5, 12.

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

J. H. Lichliter, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of John W. Smith, Deceased.
No. 18,238. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Emma J. Smith, widow of said deceased, it is ordered, this 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Leander Smith, Della Bell Smith, Dessa Bell Smith, Etta Alma Smith (infant), Lotus Mae Smith (infant), La Fayette P. Ripley, Leffingwell D. Ripley, Frank N. Ripley, Elizabeth J. Ripley, Edna (or Etna) V. Harwood, Grace Kaufer, Ida B. Berger, and Arthur S. Thompson, all non-residents of the District of Columbia, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 45-3t

B. H. Loucks, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Court of Equity.
In the Matter of Composite Brick Manufacturing Co., a Corporation. Equity. No. —.

It appearing to the court that a petition has been filed herein praying that the Composite Brick Manufacturing Company, a corporation, organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, be dissolved as provided by section 768 of the Code of the said District and for other relief, it is, this 7th day of November, ordered that notice of this application be given to all persons concerned and requiring all persons concerned to appear in this court and show cause, if any they have, on the 11th day of December, 1905, why the said corporation should not be dissolved, a receiver appointed to take charge of the assets of said corporation, and for general relief. It is further ordered that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post once a week for three successive weeks, the first insertion to be not less than one month before said return day. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to all stockholders, bondholders, and creditors whose names appear in said petition thirty days before said return day. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

Berry & Minor, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker, Complainants, v. Henry W. Bartol, E. Welsh Ashford, and Erwin Cyrus Brainerd, Respondents. Equity, No. 25,746.

The object of this suit is to substitute trustees in the place and stead of E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin Cyrus Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), under a deed of trust dated September 13, 1900, and recorded in liber 2520 at page 118 of the land records of the District of Columbia, from William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker and wife to E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin C. Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), trustees, conveying lot 50 in Frank L. Hanvey's subdivision of lot 8 in block 34, "Columbia Heights," in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitors, Berry & Minor, and it appearing to the court that the summons issued herein against the respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, has been returned "not to be found," and the non-residence of the said respondent having been proved to the satisfaction of the court, it is, this 8th day of November, 1905, ordered that the said respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph E. McDonald, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. JESSIE C. McDONALD, Colorado Building, Wash., D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 18,236. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

Samuel Maddox, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Hattie Hicks et al., Complainants, v. Margaret R. Trotter et al., Defendants. Equity No. 23,164.

Upon consideration of the report of H. Prescott Gatley, trustee, herein filed, it is this 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be, and he is herby, authorized and directed to sell to Florence A. DeLong lot 20 of Daniel Birtwell's subdivision of lot 10, block 13, Rosedale and Isherwood, for the sum of $860, cash; and that said sale, so made, shall be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

George C. Gertman, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
The Atkinson and Ballard Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Benjamin Stoddert et al., Defendants.
Equity. No. 25,714. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree perfecting and establishing of record the complete title of the complainant to lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Lloyd P. Pumphrey's subdivision of certain lots in square numbered sixty (60), in the city of Washington, in said District, as described in the bill of complaint. On motion of the complainant, by George C. Gertman, its solicitor, it is by the court, this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs and devisees of Benjamin Stoddert; George Scott, executor, and in his own right; Jonathan Scholfield (of Issacker), executor, and in his own right; Mahlon Scholfield; Benjamin Waters, trustee, and in his own right; Sarah Talbot, Ann Dobey, John Balderson, Eliza Cowen, Lucretia Edmonston, John Woods, Rachael A. Levering, Joseph Scholfield, Hannah Scholfield, Sarah Scholfield, Lewis Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Mahlon); Elizabeth Hopkins, Rachael Hodge, Ann Scholfield, Thomas Scholfield, Andrew Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Issacker); Martha Stanton, James Stanton, Jane Anderson, Sarah Anderson, Mary Anderson, William Elliott, Joseph Elliott, Sarah Elliott, Margaret Elliott, Maria Elliott, Thomas Elliott, Mary Elliott, James Evans, (of Jonathan); John Evans (of Theophilus); George Evans, Cadwallader Evans, Oliver Evans (of Oliver); John Lampley, Elizabeth Lampley, Eliza W. Evans, Rachel Evans, Leah Evans, Thomas Evans, Evan Evans, Jesse Evans, Oliver Evans (of Joseph); Abner Evans, George Evans, Joseph Evans, Joseph Ball, William Brackin, Adeline Brackin, Elizabeth Brackin, Margaret Brackin, and Minnie Johnson, or if either or all of them be dead, then the unknown heirs and devisees of any or all of the above-named defendants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in November and three times weekly in December, 1905, prior to said return day, good cause having been shown by the bill and affidavit filed herein, to the satisfaction of the court, that further or longer publication is unnecessary. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10; dec. 1, 8, 15

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Caldwell Poor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. ELLA POOR, care of R. Ross Perry & Son. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,224. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

Wm. E. Harvey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration d.b.n. on the estate of Daniel A. Connelly, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM B. KING, 728 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 1179. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

The Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. John B. Wight et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,122.

Charles S. Shreve, Jr., and William F. Hall, trustees, having reported to the court that they have received a private offer to purchase lots, viz: All of lots D, E, F, G, H, and I, in Gideon L. Walker's subdivision of lots in square numbered one hundred and seventy-two (172), as per plat recorded in liber R. W., folio 126, surveyor's office, D. C., more fully described in the original order of sale herein, from John M. Clapp, for the sum of ninety-five hundred dollars ($9,500), all cash, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said offer be accepted and said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 9th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice.

A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. nov 10, 17, 24

Harry G. Kimball, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Alice M. Peck, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Appelona Whitehair, Deceased, et al., Defendants.

In Equity. No. 25,782.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to lot numbered twenty (20) in Babcock's subdivision of original lots eight (8), nine (9), and ten (10) in square one hundred and three (103) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Harry G. Kimball, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Appelona Whitehair, deceased, and the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Justinian Mayberry, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice.

True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. nov 10-17, dec 8-15, jan 12-19

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Susana Griswold, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 27th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 8th day of November, 1905. GEORGE PRINCE, by Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,496. Admn. [Seal.] 45-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the States of Illinois and Georgia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 7th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM HOLABIRD, Monodnock Block, Chicago, Ill.; JOSEPH WILLARD PRESTON, 407 Equitable Building, Atlanta, Ga. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,196. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Alexander B. Hagner, Complainant, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants.

No. 25,588, Eq. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainant's title to parts of lots 9 and 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of lot 13 at a point in the south line of north H street, distant 25 feet 3½ inches west from the northeast corner of lot 13, running thence west on said south line of H street 40 feet 3½ inches; thence south 183 feet; thence east 65 feet 7 inches; thence north 50 feet; thence west 25 feet 3½ inches; thence north 133 feet to the place of beginning. And beginning for said part of lot 9 at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence south 51 feet 6 inches; thence west 20 feet; thence north 51 feet 6 inches; thence east 20 feet, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainant, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following-named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing, (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

nov 10-17-24; dec 2-9; jan 5-12

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

THIRD INSERTION.

Benjamin Carter, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Florence H. Smith, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 26th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 26th day of October, 1905. BENJ. CARTER, Bond Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,239. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine McGuinn, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. HENRY P. BLAIR, Colorado Building. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,191. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

Thos. Walker, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Johnson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of October, 1905. WALTER G. BRADLEY, New York Mills, N. Y. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,782. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

D. H. Roland Drury v. Minnie Fuller and Others.

No. 25,650 Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainant's title in fee simple by adverse possession in and to lot 17, in Emily Fuller's subdivision of lots in square 60, in Washington, D. C., as said subdivision is recorded in the surveyor's office in Book H. D. C., page 40. The defendants to this suit are Minnie Fuller (if living), and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Minnie Fuller (if deceased), of Andrew Schoffield, of Robert Leckie, of Ruth Fuller, of Calhoun Clark, and of Sarah F. Fitzgerald. On motion of complainant, by W. Spencer Armstrong, his solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that said defendant Minnie Fuller cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the other defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three successive weeks during the first month, and thereafter twice a month for two months, in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov 3-10-17; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Adolphe Berger, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 23d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,228. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Nathaniel E. Thompson, otherwise known as Elbridge N. Thompson, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 20th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properiv vouched. Given under my hand this 2d day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer; by John B. Larner, Attorney. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,523. Adm. [Seal.] 44-3t

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Edwin S. Houston, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 25th day of July, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 30th day of October, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN & TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,067. Administration. [Seal.] 44-3t

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Elizabeth Sutton and William H. Fearson v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of George Mason and Others. No. 25,700. Equity Docket No 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainants' title in fee simple, by adverse possession, in and to the north 20 ft. front on 19th st. by the full depth thereof, of original lot 12, in sq. 106, in Washington, D. C., improved by premises No. 913 19th st. N. W. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of George Mason, of William Mason, of A. E. Grimes, and of Elizabeth Hooe, all deceased. On motion of the complainants, by W. Spencer Armstrong, their solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in the Washington Law Reporter and in the Washington Times. By the court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal.]

nov 3-10; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al.
In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 55 feet of lot 1, in square 397, with the improvements thereon, to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $9,750; lot 2, in square 556, with the improvements thereon, to Mary A. Martin, for the sum of $1,275; and subiot 70, in square 415, to Tillotson E. Brown, for the sum $1,124.12, it is, this 30th day of October, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that said sales be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of November, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

Douglass & Douglass, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Samuel Rothert et al., Complainants, v. Susie Brice et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 25,457. Doc. 56.

Edgar B. Sherrill and John R. Shields, trustees, having reported to the court the sale of the real estate mentioned and described in the bill of complaint filed in the above entitled cause, being parts of original lots numbered 2 and 3 in square numbered 69, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, beginning for the same at a point 5 feet east from the southwest corner of original lot numbered 2 in said square, and running thence north 100 feet; thence west 22 feet 6 inches; thence south 100 feet to the line of N street north, and thence east 22 feet 6 inches to the beginning; being the same land included in lot numbered 190, in said square numbered 69, according to a subdivision made by John H. Rothert, and recorded in book No. 28, page 126, in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, to Albert Marshall for the sum of one thousand five hundred seventy-five dollars ($1,575), it is by the court, this 27th day of October, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 28th day of November, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

Ralston & Siddons, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Joseph H. Byram, S. Norris Thorn, Trustees of the Home Building Association, of the District of Columbia, v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, and Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay. Equity No. 25,653.

Process having been duly issued against the defendants herein and returned "Not to be found," although diligent efforts have been made to find them, it is, this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the unknown heirs, devisees, and representatives of Susan Barclay, Peter Stuyvesant, Morris Robinson, Thomas Barclay, George Barclay, and Anthony Barclay, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, which is to be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainants to part of lot two hundred and nine (209) in square twelve hundred and fifty-nine (1259) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northwest corner thereof and running thence south 122 feet 8 inches to the south line of said lot; thence east 31 feet 1 inch; thence north 10 feet (the width of the alley hereinafter reserved); thence east 2 feet 2 inches; thence north 20 feet, more or less, to the south line of lot conveyed to Jared Nichols; thence west 25 feet; thence north 90 feet to line of West street, and thence west 8 feet 3 inches, more or less, to the place of beginning; with the right to use a 10-foot alley running along and over the south part of lots 209 and 210 to give an outlet on Montgomery street. THOS. [Seal.] H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 44-3t

Legal Notices.

Jos. D. Sullivan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of George H. Plant, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of November, 1905. ARTHUR G. PLANT, care of Traders National Bank. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,249. Admn. [Seal.] 44-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

Oscar Luckett, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

James Hyde v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Charles Carter.
No. 25,699. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to that parcel of land situated in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as and being lot numbered sixty-four (64) in A. D. Jessup's subdivision of lots in square numbered two hundred and eighteen (218), as per plat recorded in liber R. L. H., folio 236, of the records of the surveyor's office of the District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein, it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant, by his solicitor, Oscar Luckett, it is this 23d day of October, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Charles Carter, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter at least once in the month of October and three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. oct 27-nov 3,10,17

[Filed October 23, 1905, J. R. Young, Clerk.]

Carlisle & Johnson, Solicitors.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Louis P. Shoemaker, Trustee, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith. No. 25,621. In Equity.

The object of this suit is to establish the title of the complainant against the defendants by adverse possession to the west half of lot seven (7) in Samuel Davidson's recorded subdivision of lots in square one hundred and sixty-three (163), fronting fifteen (15) feet on the north side of K street northwest, by depth of one hundred (100) feet eleven (11) inches, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. It appearing to the court that the summons issued herein has been returned not to be found as to the said defendants, and it further appearing to the court that upon good cause shown by affidavit filed herein it is not necessary that this order should be published at least twice a month for a period of not less than three months. On motion of the complainant by his solicitors, Carlisle & Johnson, it is this 23d day of October. A. D., 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of John C. Roemele and William or William B. Smith cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided that this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and the Washington Post at least once in the month of October and at least three times in the month of November. THOS. H. ANDER- [Seal.] SON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. 43-4t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 47

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - NOVEMBER 24, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 737
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
The Washington Loan and Trust Company, Garnishee, appellant, v. Susquehanna Coal Company 738
Clarence A. Brandenburg, appellant, v. The District of Columbia 740
Thomas R. Martin, appellant, v. District of Columbia, appellee 742
Mary A. Dobbins, appellant, v. Frank H. Thomas 743
Legal Notices 746

THIS WEEK'S DECISIONS BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Seventy-third Rule; Affidavits of Defense.

In Potomac Laundry Company v. Miller, executrix, the appeal was from a judgment for the plaintiff in an action of assumpsit, rendered under the 73d rule for insufficiency of the affidavit of defense. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Justice McComas, applies the rule announced in the case of Lawrence v. Hammond, 22 Wash. Law Rep. 749, and in a number of subsequent cases, that while the rule, so far as it relates to the affidavit of the plaintiff, is to be strictly construed, it is to be broadly and liberally construed as regards the counter-affidavit of the defendant; and holds that, taking the two affidavits together, the defendant had stated grounds of defense sufficient, if true, to defeat the plaintiff's claim in whole or in part. The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for trial in regular course.

Alimony—Allowance of Pending Appeal.

In Lane v. Lane, the appeal was from an order of the court below adjudging the defendant in a proceeding for divorce to be in contempt for failure to pay alimony as directed, and committing him to custody until payment should be made. Pending the appeal the appellee applied to the lower court for an allowance of counsel fees, which that court denied for want of jurisdiction to grant the order; and thereupon a similar application was made to the Court of Appeals. That court, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, stated that the question of the court's power to make such an allowance was now clearly presented, and holding that the court has such power, the application was granted and an order passed requiring the appellant to pay a sum certain to the clerk of the court for the use of the appellee, and in event of his failure to do so that the appeal be dismissed.

Patents—Computing Scales—Suit for Infringement.

In Computing Scale Company of America v. The Automatic Scale Company, the appeal was from a decree of the court below dismissing a bill filed to enjoin the infringement of a patent. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, affirms the ruling of the court below, holding that the claims in suit were not infringed when limited, as they must be, by the prior state of the act, and that certain other claims were void for lack of patentable invention, as disclosed by the proceedings in the Patent Office and by the prior act.

Criminal Libel—Motion to Affirm Judgment Granted.

In Raymond v. United States, the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, grants a motion made on behalf of the United States to affirm the judgment of the court below, by which the appellant, who had been convicted of criminal libel, was sentenced to a term of five years in the penitentiary.

Call of Calendar in Circuit Court No. 2.

Mr. Chief Justice Clabaugh, sitting in Circuit Court No. 2, has caused to be issued the following notice: "There will be a preliminary call of the even-numbered cases on the trial calendar, beginning with No. 152 and ending with No. 300, in Circuit Court No. 2, Monday morning, November 27, 1905, at 10 o'clock. Cases in which there is no response will be continued for the term."

THE semi-annual examination of applicants for admission to the bar of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia will be held on Friday and Saturday, December 8 and 9, 1905. Those intending to take the examination should file their applications with assistant United States attorney Ralph Given, secretary of the examining committee, during the coming week.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY, GARNISHEE, APPELLANT,

v.

SUSQUEHANNA COAL COMPANY.

ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT; TRUST COMPANY; PROPERTY IN SAFE DEPOSIT BOX.

1. Property deposited by a defendant in a safe deposit box of a trust company is the defendant's property in the hands of and in charge of the trust company, within the meaning of the provisions of the Code relating to attachments, and by the terms of the Code the trust company is liable to be garnished therefor.
2. Where, in an action at law, the affidavits upon which an attachment before judgment was based alleged that the defendant had assigned his property to his son to defraud his creditors, and was about to dispose of and secrete other property with like intent, and that large sums of money and securities had recently been deposited by the defendant and his wife in a safe deposit box standing in his name or that of his wife or son in the vault of a trust company, the trust company, as garnishee, may be required in answer to interrogatories propounded by the attaching creditor, to disclose whether or not there is in its vaults and in its charge a safe deposit box standing in the name of either of the alleged fraudulent assignees, the wife and son of the defendant.
3. An order of the court below requiring the trust company to submit to an oral examination and to answer such interrogatories, affirmed.

No. 1554. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by garnishee from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at law, No. 47,502, requiring it to answer certain interrogatories. Affirmed.

Mr. A. S. Worthington and Mr. Chas. L. Frailey for the appellant.

Mr. F. D. McKenney, Mr. J. S. Flannery, and Mr. Wm. Hitz for the appellee.

Mr. Justice McCOMAS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This case is now before this court upon a special appeal allowed from an order of the court below requiring the Washington Loan and Trust Company, the appellant, to answer, as garnishee, certain interrogatories propounded to it by the Susquehanna Coal Company, the appellee, plaintiff below, in action at law against John Kennedy to recover from him $24,000 for coal sold and delivered.

With the declaration, affidavits supporting the claim and particulars of demand were filed. At the same time a writ of attachment was issued, based upon three affidavits which averred that Kennedy had disposed of and secreted and was about to dispose of and secrete his property in order to defraud his creditors. Several of these affidavits averred that Kennedy had a safe deposit box standing in his own name or that of his wife in the Washington Loan and Trust Company, upon which company asg arnishee said writ was served, and the garnishee was notified to appear.

Attached to the writ were five interrogatories to which the garnishee was required to make answer under oath. To the first and second interrogatories requiring the garnishee to make answer, whether or not it was indebted to the defendant Kennedy, or whether or not it had any goods, chattels, and credits of said defendant, the garnishee answered in the negative. To the three remaining interrogatories the garnishee, under advice of counsel, refused to make answer.

Two of the affidavits upon which the writ of attachment was based having stated that Kennedy had recently assigned all his property in his coal yard in Washington to his son with the purpose of defrauding his creditors, and is about to dispose of and secrete other property with like intent, and that large sums of money have been deposited recently by Kennedy and his wife in a safe deposit box standing in his name or his wife's, the box being in the vault of the Washington Loan and Trust Company; the three interrogatories which the garnishee refused to answer inquired concerning the safe deposit box, its holder, and its contents.

The three interrogatories required the garnishee to make answer whether or not it had in its possession or control any goods, chattels, or other property of the defendant's wife, or whether or not it had in its possession or under its control a safe deposit box belonging to the defendant or his wife, or such a safe deposit box standing in the name of the defendant or his wife or his son, and further information respecting the right of access to and the contents of such safe deposit box.

Upon the application of the appellee the court below required the garnishee to submit to an oral examination and to make full answer to each of the last three interrogatories. From this order of March 31, 1905, this court allowed this special appeal.

On behalf of the appellant it is urged that a trust company can not be compelled by attachment proceedings to disclose whether or not it has in its possession or under its control a safe deposit box belonging to a defendant in attachment proceedings; and if the attachment be based upon affidavits averring that the defendant's wife and son have aided the defendant in disposing of his property to defraud his creditors, and have thereafter deposited large sums of money in a safe deposit box standing in the name of the defendant or in the name of his wife or son, the trust company, as garnishee, can not be compelled to disclose either the name of the holder of such safe deposit box in its vault, or its knowledge, if any, of the contents of the safe deposit box.

If such use of attachment proceedings be sanctioned, it is said, such writs would be used to procure disclosures to aid other proceedings to get possession of the contents of such boxes and thus pervert the provisions of the Code relating to attachment.

A safe deposit box, it is urged, does not fall within the "goods, chattels, and credits" of the defendant which may be attached. The trust company has no right to open its customer's box, can not know its contents, and does not "have possession or under its control" any property of defendant which may be in the box, and these interrogatories, therefore, seek a vain thing, and also seek to violate the private and confidential relations existing between a safe deposit company and its customers.

Justice Sharswood in the case of Gregg v. Hilson, in the Supreme Court of Philadelphia, at nisi prius, held that under the Pennsylvania law of attachment such rented safe deposit boxes can not be the subject of attachment. "They are not a debt due to the defendant or a deposit of money made by him, or goods or chattels pawned, pledged, or demised." The contents of the safe are in the actual possession of the rentor of the safe. They have not been deposited with or demised to the company. I am asked to make an order upon the company to open the safe and file an inventory of its contents. This, I am of opinion, I have no power to do." Gregg v. Hilson, 8th Phila. Rep. 89.

Digitized by Google

We can not accept the view of Justice Sharswood. Under the Code attachment provisions take a wider range than the Pennsylvania statute at that period permitted. There is no uniformity in the statutes of the several States respecting attachment and garnishment. However, there are two comprehensive grounds common to every attachment system as to the general basis of a garnishee's liability. First, his liability ex contractu to the defendant; second, his possession when garnished of personal property of the defendant capable of being seized and sold on execution.

The Code of the District of Columbia liberally provides for reaching the debtor's goods, chattels, and credits by garnishment, and the several sections taken together define the possession of personal property which will make a third person liable as garnishee.

With the writ of attachment and garnishment in all cases the plaintiff may exhibit interrogatories to be served on any garnishee concerning any property of the defendant in his possession or charge, and the garnishee may be examined orally touching any property or credits of the defendant in his hands. Code D. C., sec. 447.

The plaintiff may exhibit interrogatories to be served upon any garnishee concerning any property of the defendant in his possession or charge. Ib. sec. 1089.

An attachment may be levied on credits of the defendant in the hands of a garnishee. Ib. sec. 456.

Property of a defendant in a safe deposit box of a trust company is either in the possession of the defendant or in the possession of the trust company.

If it is in the possesion of the defendant, under the Code, it appears liable to attachment and execution. If it is in the possession of the trust company, such company may be garnished therefor, as in possession of personal property of the defendant capable of being seized and sold on execution. A mere device to guard from intrusion the defendant's property in the vault of the trust company neither divests the defendant of his property nor releases the company from its charge of defendant's property. There is no magic in two keys, a master key and a customer's key, to put property belonging to a defendant in an attachment beyond the reach of creditors and the process of the courts.

If there were a doubt respecting the term "possession," there can be no doubt that property deposited by a defendant in a safe deposit box of a trust company is the defendant's property in the hands of and in charge of the trust company, and by the terms of the Code the trust company is liable to be garnished therefor.

We agree with the decision in United States v. Graff, 67 Barbour, 310. In the case before us the Washington Loan and Trust Company appealed from an order requiring it to answer the three interrogatories before mentioned respecting a safe deposit box. In the case in New York the Mercantile Trust Company appealed from an order directing the sheriff to break open the safe deposit box if necessary to get possession of certain contents thereof. That court held that "neither the safe nor the tin box constituted any portion of the defendant's dwelling, and they were not within the protection which the law affords to that against an officer acting under civil process. They were simply places of deposit and safe keeping for the defendant's property, which the sheriff may enter to make the seizure required by law, in the execution of the process in his hands. If that were not so, there would be nothing to prevent a failing or insolvent debtor from turning all his property into valuable securities or other articles requiring but little space for their custody, and then placing them in the hands of a safe deposit company for preservation, and defying all the efforts of his creditors to satisfy their debts by resorting to them. That would form an expedient for the success of fraudulent devices, which might render the laws of the State for the collection of debts entirely powerless. No such effect could be given to a deposit of that nature without at once defeating the object plainly designed to be secured by the law in rendering the debtor's property liable to the process issued in favor of his creditors in actions brought to recover their just debts. Against that, his dwelling alone is secured against the intrusive action of the officer. And, that in no sense, can be so far extended as to include either the safe or tin box in the custody of the Mercantile Trust Company, for the defendant. . . . If a certificate can not be obtained showig then property so held for the debtor, and it can not be seized under attachment or execution, then certainly the creditors are deprived of all ordinary means for applying it to the satisfaction of their debts. And an effectual mode would be at last discovered for enabling a debtor to withhold his property from his creditors. The law has not yet, and probably will not very soon, lend its aid to the success of such an expedient for the protection of a debtor's property against the clearly defined rights of his creditors." United States v. Graff, 67 Barbour, 310.

A statute in the State of Washington provides that when the garnishee has in his possession or under his control any personal property of the defendant liable to execution the court shall require the garnishee to deliver the same to the sheriff.

In Trobridge v. Spinning, 23 Washington, 69, 70, it appeared that Spinning had rented a box controlled by a master key and by Spinning's key, in the safety deposit vault of a bank, and the court held that inasmuch as the bank could put it in the power of Spinning to remove the contents of the box, and Spinning could not remove the contents of the box without the consent and cooperation of the bank, the latter as against the defendant had control of the contents of the box although it could not as garnishee answer specifically as to the contents of the box. The court could inquire into the contents of the box and determine what effects therein were liable to execution.

Digitized by Google

We find no good reason for exempting property of a defendant in a safe deposit vault from execution or attachment. The Code recites the classes of property which are exempt from execution and attachment. In this case before us the learned justice in the court below decided that the trust company alleged to have charge of the property of the defendant, Kennedy, in a box in the safe deposit vault was not exempt from liability to answer as garnishee the interrogatories whether or not it had in its possession or under its control a safe deposit box of the defendant.

The court below also decided that the trust company should further answer like interrogatories concerning property of the defendant's wife and son, and concerning a safe deposit box alleged to stand in the name of either of them. The Code (sec. 470) provides that when as in this case, the ground of the attachment is that the defendant has assigned or disposed of his property with intent to defraud his creditors, the attachment may be levied upon the property alleged to be so assigned in the hands of the alleged fraudulent assignee as a garnishee.

The appellee, the plaintiff below, in this attachment was entitled to the answer of the garnishee, the appellant, disclosing whether or not there was in its vaults and in its charge a safe deposit box standing in the name of either of the alleged fraudulent assignees, the wife or son of the defendant, Kennedy.

It is needless to recite here the provisions of the Code which afford this trust company protection from wrongful attachments and garnishments and which are likely to save it from frequent and vexatious inquisition.

The few decisions upon the question raised by this appeal suggest that heretofore such suits have been infrequent.

We perceive no injustice or injury done to the garnishee by the order appealed from. That order must be affirmed with costs, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

CLARENCE A. BRANDENBURG, APPELLANT,

v.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; OPENING OF ALLEYS; ASSESSMENT OF BENEFITS; IRREGULARITIES IN PROCEEDINGS.

1. The act of Congress of July 22, 1892, authorizing the Commissioners of the District to open and extend alleys, and the amendatory act of August 24, 1894, extending its provisions so as to authorize the opening of minor streets, and directing the apportionment of the amount awarded as damages, etc., against the lots or parcels of land benefited, are constitutional and valid.
2. Certain alleged irregularities in proceedings had under said acts for the opening of an alley or minor street held not such as to require the amendment of the assessment made against the lots of petitioner, and an order quashing a writ of certiorari to review the assessment affirmed.

No. 1586. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by petitioners from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 42,961, dismissing a petition for a writ of certiorari. Affirmed.

Mr. C. A. Brandenburg, Mr. E. C. Brandenburg, and Mr. F. W. Brandenburg for the appellant.

Mr. E. H. Thomas and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the appellee.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from the judgment of the court below overruling the motion of petitioner to quash the return of the respondent to the writ of certiorari, issued herein, and dismissing the petition.

It appears that appellant, at the time of the proceedings complained of, was, and still is, the owner in fee of certain lots known as 42 and 43 in square 69, in the District of Columbia.

By an act of Congress, approved July 22, 1892, the District Commissioners were authorized to open and extend alleys, and by an amendatory act, approved August 24, 1894, its terms were extended to authorize the opening of minor streets. Pursuant to the provisions of said acts, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, upon the request of the claimed owners of more than one-half of the land in the square, in February, 1898, applied in writing to the marshal of the District to summon a jury to condemn the land necessary for widening a thirty-foot alley in square 69 to a width of sixty feet, and to apportion the damages and assess the benefits thereof as provided for in said acts. The marshal summoned a jury of twelve disinterested citizens and notified the owners of the property to be affected, among whom is, this appellant, who is named as having been served with a copy of the notice, which specified the time and place of the meeting of the jury.

The jury, having subscribed and sworn to the oath required, proceeded to discharge the duties imposed upon them and duly certified their proceedings, which, in turn, were certified by the marshal and returned to the District Commissioners. The award and finding of the jury, so far as relates to the appellant's lots, shows that they assessed the value of the land taken at 25 cents per foot, amounting to $92 for sublot 42 and $75 for sublot 43. The jury charged against the parts of the two lots remaining as benefits at the rate of 50 cents per foot, or a total of $650 and $550, respectively, and deducting the sums allowed for the parts taken, found the amounts due to be, respectively, $558 and $475. Pursuant to the findings of the jury, the District assessor levied these amounts against the residue of the two lots.

The District of Columbia made a return to the writ of certiorari, and prayed that it be quashed and the petition denied. A hearing was had, which resulted, as stated, in a denial of appellant's motion to quash the appellee's return and for judgment quashing the taxes complained of, and dismissed the petition for the writ. This action of the court below is assigned as the error in the case. It is urged on behalf of appellant, 1st, that the act of Congress under which the proceedings were had is unconstitutional, and, 2d, that the proceedings had were not in accordance with law.

Digitized by Google

1. It is urged that the act is unconstitutional, because it provides for taking private property for public use without just compensation and without due process of law; because it provides for the apportionment of the total amount of damages awarded for the land condemned, with the expenses of the proceedings, among the lots in the square without regard to actual benefits; that it limits the area of assessment to the particular square without reference to benefits to adjacent squares, and without regard to the fact that actual benefits may not equal the total cost of the improvements; and, finally, that the law being general, no legislative consideration can be had in reference to the actual benefits of the area benefited in each particular proceeding taken.

It is conceded that in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Davidson v. Wight, 181 U. S. 371, Congress has the right to direct that all the expenses of an improvement may be assessed upon the property benefited, and may define the territorial district considered to be benefited. We are not prepared to say that Congress, having such right, may not pass a general act for opening or widening minor streets and alleys located within a single block, and declare that the property benefited shall be held to be the property within the block, and that the cost of the improvement shall be borne by the owners of such located property. Upon such a subject we think legislative consideration can be had, and that Congress exercised it in framing and passing the act complained of. It appears to us to be quite different from the case where tracts of land are to be taken for parks or other purposes, or from the opening of streets of considerable length, opening up a new section of a city. We must not lose sight of the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has spoken in no uncertain tone of the powers, both of a political and municipal nature, of Congress over the District of Columbia. U. S. v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196. In condemning private property for public purposes hardships will often follow, be the proceedings had either under a general statute or under a special act. We may admit that special acts for the purpose specified are fairer to and better for the property owner than general acts, but to declare a general act unconstitutional requires something more. In our opinion, the act under which this proceeding was had is not unconstitutional.

2. This conclusion requires us to consider whether the alleged irregularities in the proceeding were such as to require a ruling that the tax complained of should be annulled. Any objection based on the ground that the Commissioners of the District failed to certify that the preservation of peace, good order, and public morals required the widening of the alley, conceding that the passageway widened was an alley and not a minor street, is of no force, provided the owners of more than one-half of the real estate in the square signed the petition upon which they acted. It appears that the District assessor certified that the persons whose signatures were appended to the petition appeared to be the owners of 121,255 square feet, which were more than the one-half of the land within the square. If the contention of the appellant that the certificate is faulty in that it states that the persons signing "appear" to be the owners, etc., it would require, in order to make a certificate free from any criticism as to form, that an examination be made in all cases similar to this, as well as in this, not contemplated by the act in question or by any reasonable act. The objection is one which should be taken, if at any time, when the hearing is had before the jury. It appears that notice was given to the appellant of the time and place of the meeting, and, though the notice is objected to as insufficient, we think that it was sufficient to require the presence of the appellant if he desired to raise objections to the preliminary proceedings or to see that the damages and advantages to his property were properly passed upon. This is so at least as to technical objections, which could have then been cured. We think that the certificate of the assessor was sufficient both as to form and substance, and that the signatures to the petition were sufficient basis upon which to found his certificate. It is not to be presumed that he did not make proper examination of the official records in considering the petition, nor that he did not have sufficient proof before him that the parties signing had the legal title to the property for which they signed. While it may be that the appellant could have shown otherwise, and is injured because he did not do so at a proper time, we must consider that the tax payers of the District are entitled to have their interests guarded. While it is stated in appellant's brief that this proceeding was promptly taken, yet the record discloses nothing earlier in date than the filing of the amended petition, which was on June 3, 1904. Proceedings such as these should not only be promptly commenced but diligently prosecuted. Nevertheless, we do not question that all statutory requirements in proceedings of this nature must be observed, and that any failure to observe them can be availed of at almost any stage of the proceeding, but we have referred to what might be termed the equities and hardships of the case at bar because the appellant's argument, or brief, largely relates to them.

The objections that there is no finding by the jury of benefits, and that the assessment is in excess of the value of the lots and in excess of the benefits received, are not sufficiently shown to warrant a reversal. The jury having found the damages to the real estate to be the value of the respective parcels of land at the time of taking, proceeded, as the act required them to do, to apportion the amount of such damages as benefits to the remaining property—all this after having "entered upon said square" and after "having heard evidence introduced by the parties interested." The appellant having been served with due notice, had an opportunity to be heard on the subject of damages and benefits to his lots, and can not now be heard to insist that the taxes complained of should be annulled because the jury failed to make correct assessment and apportionment, whatever his rights may be to attack the constitutionality of the act and the preliminary steps leading up to such proceedings before the jury.

While on its face the allegations of the amended petition, especially as fortified by the brief, show a case of hardship, it is not such a one as we can recognize as vitiating the act under which the proceedings were taken or invalidating the proceeding itself.

Digitized by Google

We conclude that there was no error in the decision of the court below, and it should be affirmed, with costs. And it is so ordered.

THOMAS R. MARTIN, APPELLANT,

v.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, APPELLEE.

OPENING OF ALLEYS; NOTICE TO OWNERS OF LAND; HOLDER OF NOTE SECURED BY DEED OF TRUST NOT ENTITLED TO NOTICE.

1. Where, in a proceeding under the act of Congress of July 22, 1892, as amended by the act of August 24, 1894, for the opening of an alley or minor street, certain of the lots affected by the proceeding are incumbered by a deed of trust, the holder of the note secured by such deed of trust is not entitled to notice,—the act only requiring notice to be given to the proprietors of the land.
2. Whether in such case it is necessary that notice be given the trustees named in the deed of trust not decided.
3. A holder of the note, acquiring title to the same subsequent to the proceedings to open the alley, and after the matter of the proceedings had become a public record, can not, in an independent proceeding and in his own name, attack the special assessment against the lots covered by the deed of trust on the ground that no notice thereof had been given the then holder of the note.

No. 1585. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by petitioner from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at law, No. 46,982, dismissing a petition for a writ of certiorari. Affirmed.

Mr. C. A. Brandenburg, Mr. E. C. Brandenburg, and Mr. F. W. Brandenburg for the appellant.

Mr. E. H. Thomas and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the appellee.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

In the case of Brandenburg v. District of Columbia, decided at this term of the court, ante, p. 740, we have determined adversely to the appellant all the questions raised by this appeal, save whether Thomas R. Martin, the appellant, was entitled to notice of the proceedings referred to in Brandenburg v. District of Columbia, supra. Reference is made to that case for the facts relative to the proceedings under which parts of the lots referred to in the record in this case were taken, damages awarded for such taking, benefits to the remaining parts of the lots apportioned against them, and the damages deducted from the benefits, and the balance made a charge upon the lands remaining.

The additional facts disclosed by this record, so far as necessary to be considered, show that prior to the proceedings above referred to, Brandenburg, being the owner in fee of the lots in question, conveyed the same to certain persons, as trustees, upon the usual terms, to secure the payment to one Florence E. Edwards, guardian, of a certain promissory note of said Brandenburg, and the renewals thereof, for the sum of one thousand dollars, with interest, and payable to her three years after date. Such deed of trust was duly recorded among the land records of the District of Columbia. At the time when the proceedings referred to were taken, Florence E. Edwards was the owner and holder of the note. Later, but at what exact time does not appear, the appellant became the owner, for value, of the note, acquiring ownership from Edwards, the payee. The note was unpaid at the commencement of these proceedings in April, 1904. It will be seen by reference to the Brandenburg decision that the condemnation proceedings were had early in 1898.

The question to be determined herein, as stated by appellant, is whether he as the holder of the note, the payment of which is secured by the trust deed, has such an interest in the property as permits him to question in this proceeding the validity of the special assessment for opening Newport Place, the name given to the street as widened by the proceedings.

To put it exactly, the question is whether Martin, who became the owner of the note after the proceedings complained of were had, can attack, in an independent suit, and in his own name, the special assessment, because notice of the same was not given to the owner of the note at the time of the taking of the proceedings, or to the trustees named in the trust deed. We are of the opinion that he can not sustain this proceeding, for the reason that at the time the proceeding was had he was neither the owner of the property in question nor had any interest, of any name or nature, therein. After the proceedings were had he became the owner of the note. The matter of the proceedings had become a public record. We do not think that, conceding that the payee and holder of the note had a right to notice, he, as the now owner of it, can attack the proceedings in an independent proceeding brought by him and in his own name. We, however, do not think that the original payee of the note was entitled to notice of the proceedings, for the act says that notice shall be given to the proprietors of the land. A holder of a note, the payment of which is secured by a deed of trust, is no more the proprietor of the land referred to in such a deed than is the holder of a bond, secured by a mortgage upon property, the owner of that property, or part owner of it, were it a case where one mortgage was given to secure more than one bond. In the latter case it would be practically impossible to take any steps under the act in question when the owner of the property had executed a trust deed or mortgage to secure an issue of notes or bonds. If, under the act, or if upon any legal ground, notice is required to be given to any one when a deed of trust or mortgage is outstanding, such notice would, in our opinion, only have to be given to the trustee or trustees named in the deed of trust or mortgage, not to the holders of notes or bonds to secure the payment of which the deed of trust or mortgage was given. As this is not a proceeding brought by or in the name of the trustees named in the deed of trust, it is unnecessary to decide whether notice should have been given to them. No reason is set forth in the petition why any rights of the appellant can not be protected and enforced by the trustees of the deed of trust.

Digitized by Google

To hold that holders of notes, payment of which is secured by trust deeds, are entitled to notice of proceedings of this character disclosed by the petition herein would establish an unwise precedent.

The court below did not err in quashing the writ, and its decision should be affirmed with costs. And it is so ordered.

MARY A. DOBBINS, APPELLANT,
v.
FRANK H. THOMAS.

SEVENTY-THIRD RULE; AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE; MARRIED WOMEN; POWER TO CONTRACT; EXCHANGE OF LANDS; NECESSARIES.

1. It is the well-settled construction of the 73d rule that while the affidavit of the plaintiff, which would deprive the defendant of his right to trial by jury, is to be construed with some strictness, that of the defendant must be accorded a fairly liberal interpretation. All that is required is that the facts alleged shall be sufficient to indicate a substantial legal defense made in good faith.
2. An affidavit of defense held to contain a sufficiently distinct denial of the contract set up by the plaintiff's affidavit to entitle her to a trial of the issues in regular course.
3. Under sections 1155 and 1156, Code D. C., a married woman has power to make a contract to exchange real estate owned by her for that owned by the other party to the contract, and as part of the transaction to agree to purchase the personal property in the house received by her at an agreed price, upon which shall be credited the value of the personal property in the house exchanged by her, the balance to be paid in cash.
4. Sec. 1177, Code D. C., does not preclude a married woman from rendering herself liable for necessaries when contracted for independently of her husband and with reference to her separate estate; but merely provides that, in such cases, the husband shall not be relieved of any liability therefor that he may be under by virtue of the common law.

No. 1540. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at law, No. 47,377, entered under the 73rd rule of that court for insufficiency of affidavit of defense. Reversed.

Mr. Leo Simmons for the appellant.

Mr. R. Golden Donaldson for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the court.

This is an appeal from a judgment entered in an action of assumpsit under the 73d Rule of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The declaration of the plaintiff, Frank H. Thomas, in the general common counts, claimed of the defendant, Mary A. Dobbins, a married woman, the sum of $296.83. The bill of particulars accompanying the declaration recites a number of items of household furniture and supplies, to the aggregate value of $433.83, and gives a credit for similar articles received of the aggregate value of $137, leaving the balance above stated. It also recites that this is the amount due from the defendant "in connection with the trading or exchanging of a certain house on Highland avenue, Cleveland Park, D. C., and contents, belonging to Frank H. Thomas, for a certain house, No. 3200 Thirteenth street, N. W., this city, and contents, belonging to said Mary A. Dobbins."

The affidavit on which the motion for judgment was founded contains the formal averments required by the rule and further states substantially that on July 28, 1903, the plaintiff was the owner of an equity of redemption in the lot and improvements in Cleveland Park, together with certain contents as set forth in the bill of particulars, aforesaid. That on the same day, the defendant, a married woman, was the owner of the equity of redemption in the house No. 3200 Thirteenth street, N. W., aforesaid, together with certain furnishings, as recited in the credits given in said bill of particulars. That for sometime prior to June 28, 1903, the parties were engaged in negotiating an exchange of their respective properties. That an exchange was made on said date, and "as part and parcel of the same transaction," plaintiff "agreed to sell and deliver to said defendant the articles of personal property contained in his said house," as recited, and at the prices named in the bill of particulars. That "as part of the same transaction" defendant "agreed to, and did sell and deliver" to the plaintiff the said articles contained in her house at the prices named in said bill of particulars. That an adjustment was had upon said exchange of houses and personal property, and it was agreed that the amount fixed as the value of defendant's personal property, aforesaid, namely, $137, should be deducted from the price agreed to be paid plaintiff for his said property, namely, $433.83, and that the balance, namely, $296.83, should be paid by defendant in cash. That defendant has frequently admitted said indebtedness and though often demanded has refused to pay, etc.

Defendant filed the following affidavit in reply:

"I, Mary A. Dobbins, being first duly sworn according to law, say that I am the person named as defendant in the foregoing declaration in the suit of Frank H. Thomas against me, and known as law case 47377. That I have a good defense to said suit, which is as follows:

"1st. I did not purchase or exchange any goods or property with the said plaintiff, other than to exchange a certain dwelling house situated on the northwest corner of Thirteenth and Kenyon Streets, Columbia Heights, which house I exchanged for the property in which I now reside in Cleveland Park. That said exchange was made through a real estate agent, and affiant did not deal with the plaintiff, directly or indirectly, in any other matter other than the exchange of the real estate mentioned, nor did she authorize any one to do so.

"Affiant says that the goods taken in exchange, and mentioned in the bill of particulars as having been received from her in exchange for the goods charged against her, did not belong to her. That she had no dealings whatever with the plaintiff, and is not indebted to the plaintiff in any sum whatever.

"The defendant says further that the differences in the real estate were not adjusted by the price of the articles named and had no relation thereto. That the exchange of said real estate had nothing whatever to do with the personal property which is the basis of the plaintiff's action. That she does not owe him anything. That the plaintiff has never made any demand for such sum of her, nor did he ever render her any statement of account for the transaction referred to until the filing of this suit, and she was surprised to learn that he meant to make claim against her for the amount."

Digitized by Google

1. It is questionable if the plaintiff's supporting affidavit was itself sufficient to entitle him to the judgment entered. The declaration does not set out a contract of sale and express promise to pay the prices claimed for the articles in the bill of particulars, but consists of the ordinary common counts for goods sold and received, etc. The affidavit, on the other hand, sets up a specific contract of sale at agreed prices, and does not attempt to support the common counts. This question was not raised on the trial, and we need not decide it, because the judgment must be reversed on another ground, and it may not again recur.

2. It is the well-settled construction of the 73d rule that while the affidavit of the plaintiff, which would deprive the defendant of his right to trial by jury, is to be construed with some strictness, that of the defendant must be accorded a fairly liberal interpretation. Bailey v. D. C., 4 App. D. C. 356, 370 : 22 Wash. Law Rep. 735; Lawrence v. Hammond, 4 App. D. C. 467, 474: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 749; St. Clair v. Conlon, 12 App. D. C. 161, 163: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 165; Strauss v. Hensey, 7 App. D. C. 289, 294 : 23 Wash. Law Rep. 842. As was said by Chief Justice Alvey in the case last cited: "The court can not question or traverse the truth of the facts stated in the defendant's affidavit. These facts the court is bound, for the purpose of securing to the defendant the right of trial, to assume as true, and that, too, without reference to what the plaintiff may have stated in his affidavit. If the facts stated by the defendant, by any reasonable or fair construction, will constitute a defense to the action or claim of the plaintiff within the scope of the pleas pleaded, it is the absolute constitutional right of the defendant to have that regularly tried and determined in the due course of judicial determination. No rule, however beneficial it may be thought to be as means of preventing the use of sham or feigned defenses, or desirable for the expedition of business, can deprive the defendant of this right." All that is required is that the facts alleged shall be sufficient to indicate a substantial legal defense made in good faith. Cropley v. Vogeler, 2 App. D. C 28, 32: 22 Wash. Law Rep.; Pumphrey v. Bogan, 6 App. D. C., 499, 451: 24 Wash. Law Rep. 302; St. Clair v. Conlon, 12 App. D. C. 161, 163: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 165; Magruder v. Schley, 17 App. D. C. 227, 231: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 870; Brown v. Bank, 18 App. D. C., 598, 606: 29 Wash. Law Rep, 819; Brewing Co. v. Tobin, 19 App. D. C. 353, 356: 29 Wash. Law Rep. 841.

Tested by the foregoing principles the defendant's affidavit contains a sufficiently distinct denial of the contract set up in the plaintiff's affidavit to entitle her to a trial of the issues in regular course, and the court erred in entering the judgment on the motion of the plaintiff.

3. The contention upon which the appellant apparently rested her case in the court below, and which has been chiefly relied on in the argument, is that being a married woman at the time of the alleged contract, she can not be held liable thereon.

Section 1151 of the Code declares that all the property belonging to a woman at the time of her marriage and all that she may acquire thereafter by purchase, gift, grant, devise, bequest, descent, in the course of distribution, by her own skill, labor, or personal exertions, or as proceeds of a judgment at law, or a decree in equity, or in any other manner, shall be her own property as absolutely as if she were unmarried, shall be protected from the debts of the husband, and shall not in any way be liable for the payment thereof; provided that no acquisition passing from the husband shall be valid if made or granted in prejudice of the rights of his subsisting creditors.

Upon the face of the record, the property received by the plaintiff from the defendant belonged absolutely to her, and that delivered by him to her in exchange became her property also.

Section 1155 confers upon married women the power to engage in business, to make contracts, and provides that they may sue and be sued separately thereon as if they were unmarried. In case of judgments against them, execution may issue as if they were unmarried. And the husband is exempt from liability upon any contract made by his wife in her own name and upon her own responsibility. Section 1156 provides that: "Every contract made by a married woman which she has the power to make shall be deemed to be made with reference to her estate which is made her separate estate by this chapter, and also her equitable separate estate, if any she has, as a source of credit to the extent of her power over the same, unless the contrary intent is expressed in the contract."

The contract alleged was one clearly within the power of the defendant, though a married woman, to make. It must be deemed to have been made with reference to her separate estate, there being no contrary intent expressed. She is therefore liable to be sued separately thereon, and in case of judgment against her, to have execution issue as if she were unmarried.

Notwithstanding these conclusions, it is further contended on behalf of the appellant that she is relieved from liability on the contract in question by the provisions of section 1177, which reads as follows:

"Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to relieve the husband from liability for the debts, contracts, or engagements which the wife may incur or enter into upon the credit of the husband, or as his agent, or for necessaries for herself or for his or their children; but as to all such cases his liability shall continue as at common law."

The court was right in denying this contention. There is nothing to indicate that the contract was entered into upon the credit of the husband or as his agent; indeed, the wife has denied entering into any contract at all. Nor was it made affirmatively to appear that the items of personal property claimed to have been sold and delivered to the wife were necessaries for herself or for his or their children. But she can not relieve herself of liability by hereafter showing that the articles were in fact necessaries. Section 1177 does not undertake to provide that she shall not render herself liable for necessaries when contracted for independently of her husband, but with reference to her separate estate; but merely that, in such cases, the husband shall not be relieved of any liability therefor that he may be under by virtue of the common law.

Digitized by Google

It does not substitute the common law liability of the husband for that of the wife, but retains it as an additional security for the benefit of the other contracting party.

For the error committed as hereinabove pointed out, in respect to the general sufficiency of the defendant's affidavit, the judgment will be reversed, with costs, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. It is so ordered. Reversed.

Life Insurance—Policy—Suicide.

A policy of life insurance provided that if the insured "die by his own hand or act, sane or insane, within three years from the date of issue of the certificate, then this agreement shall cease and be of no effect." Upon the trial of an action to recover the insurance under his policy it was shown that the holder killed himself. The Kentucky Court of Appeals held (Masonic Life Association of Western New York v. Pollard's Guardian) that the jury should have been instructed in substance that if he had mind enough to know that the act would probably result in his death, and if he inflicted it with that intention, it was his act in law, for which the company was not responsible. The court further held that the evidence showing him to be in his right mind; that he was in arrears as a collecting officer; that he had, shortly before his suicide, handed his insurance policy with a will to a friend, with the statement that if anything happened to him he desired it seen to that his children got those papers—in short, the proof showing that he shot himself while sane—there should have been an instruction to find for the insurance company.

Where the purchaser of property paid the consideration, but took the title in the name of a mortgagee, and applied for insurance thereon in the mortgagee's name, with the loss, if any, payable to himself as his interest might appear, the condition of the title being made known at the time the insurance was taken out, a condition of the policy, stipulating that it should be void if the interest of the assured should be other than unconditional and sole ownership, was waived. Loring et al. v. Dutchess Ins. Co. of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 81 P. (Cal.) 1025.

Bills and Notes—Rights of Endorsee after Maturity.—The endorsee of a check after maturity, with notice of defenses, is protected where he received it from a party who received it before maturity, and without knowledge. Symonds v. Riley (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 926.

Bank—Stockholders' Liability—Limitations.

The Supreme Court of the United States held, in the case of Rankin, Receiver, v. Barton, that a State statute of limitation can not be used to protect a stockholder of a failed national bank against liability on his stock. In this case an effort was made to enforce the individual liability requirement of the national banking laws in 1900, seven years after the suspension of the bank. The stockholder, Barton, pleaded the Kansas statute of limitations, which protects a debtor after three years, and the State Supreme Court sustained the plea, but its decision was reversed by the court of last resort at Washington.

Even in the days when he was a struggling young lawyer, Chauncey Depew was gifted with a considerable amount of self-confidence, which in later years came to be known by many men. One of the first cases he had in court involved a somewhat complicated question of inheritance. But he gaily tackled it and prepared what he regarded as an unanswerable argument. He had proceeded for some time when he noticed that the judge seemed to lose interest. Lawyer Depew hesitated and said, "I beg your pardon, but I hope your honor follows me." The judge shifted in his chair as he replied, "I have so far, but I'll say frankly that if I thought I could find my way out, I'd quit right here."

An agent of an insurance company clothed with authority to transact generally the company's business in a State and to collect the premiums, and grant permission to accept notes to himself in lieu of cash premium payments, the company looking to him instead of the policyholder, has authority to bind the company by accepting notes in lieu of cash payments of premiums, whether he paid the company or not. Mutual Life Ins. Co v. Abbey, 88 S. W. (Ark.) 950.

Lost Document—Secondary Evidence.—In Alabama Const. Co. v. Meador, decided by the Supreme Court of Alabama in April, 1905, 39 So. 217, it was held that evidence that plaintiff had left a letter with certain attorneys, that he had made diligent search for the letter on two different occasions, and that the attorneys had searched in the place where they kept their correspondence, etc., but without any proof by the attorneys with reference to the search made by them among their documents, or that the attorneys' evidence could not be produced, was insufficient to justify the introduction of secondary evidence as to contents.

Railroads—Effect of "M. C. B. Defect Card" on Car.—Placing a "M. C. B. defect card," noting defects forbidden by the safety appliance act, held not to relieve the railway company using it for responsibility. United States v. Southern Ry. Co., U. S. D. C., S. D. (Ill.) 135 Fed. Rep. 122.

Digitized by Google

Discharge of Employee for Disobedience of Reasonable Requirement.

In Costet v. Jeantet, decided by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, it is held that a master is justified in discharging an employee for disobedience to a reasonable requirement. It appeared that in his contract of employment the plaintiff had agreed that, when not engaged as traveling salesman, he would report at the defendant's store and assist in the work about the same. It also appeared, among other things, that the store was open every day at 7.30 in the morning; that all of the employees, except the bookkeeper, were there at 7.30 o'clock, and that the proprietors of the store were there at 7 o'clock. It was held, reversing a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, that the jury should have been instructed that a direction given to the plaintiff that he should attend at a certain hour, to wit, at 8 o'clock in the morning, was a reasonable requirement, and if they found as matter of fact that the plaintiff had disobeyed such direction the defendant was justified in discharging him.

Insurance—Loss—Referee—Waiver.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota held, in the recent case of O'Rouke v. The German Insurance Company of Freeport, Illinois, that in case a referee nominated by the insurer to adjust a fire loss arbitrarily and unfairly refuses to cooperate with his associate in selecting a third referee, and refuses further to act as a refeee, such conduct will constitute a waiver by the insurer of its right to have the loss adjusted by referees if it authorizes or approves, directly or indirectly, the action of its referee, and that where the insurer does not so authorize or approve the action of its refrree, but upon being advised thereof it refuses to agree to the selection of other referees, it thereby waives its right to an appraisal of the loss.

Bankruptcy—Preferences.—Grounds for reasonable belief in the present inability of a debtor to pay his debts in the course of business are not necessarily grounds for believing that he is insolvent, so as to require the creditor to surrender payments received as preferences. In re Pettingill & Co., U. S. D. C., D. (Mass.), 135 Fed. Rep. 218.

Bankruptcy—Provable Debts.—Liability of a bankrupt indorser of commercial paper which did not become absolute until after the filing of the petition held a provable debt. In re Philip Semmer Glass Co., U. S. C. C. of App., Second Circuit, 135 Fed. Rep. 77.

Partnership—Duties of Partners.—If a partner in the transaction of the partnership is guilty of concealment as to the other partners, and derives a benefit therefrom, he will be treated in equity as a trustee for the firm and may be compelled to account. McKinley v. Lynch (W. Va.), 51 S. E. Rep. 4.

Interest—Computation—Note.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals held, in the recent case of Hawkins et al. v. Merchants & Mechanics' Loan & Building Association, that the proper method of computing interest where there are partial payments upon a note is to compute the interest from the time it begins to run until the first payment; then subtract the payment and compute the interest on the remainder, and so on to the end; but that if the interest exceeds the pay ment, then it must be computed until such time as the payments exceed the interest then due. The court further held that in an action upon a note, while it is better pleading to set out the payments specifically, still a petition which set out that so much had been paid on the principal and that the interest was paid to a fixed date was good on demurrer.

Washington College of Law

1328 New York Avenue.

Reopens Monday, October 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

J. Paul Ernest, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Julia Fisher Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of November, 1905. JOSEPH A. McKELLIP, 1321 Park ave., Balto., Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,284. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Ernest L. Schmidt, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Richard W. Ryan, Deceased.
No. 13,263. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Edward B. Stumph, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of Richard W. Ryan (deceased), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 47-3t

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al.
In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 20 feet front of lot numbered 8 in square 417, improved by premises No. 1811 Eighth street N. W., to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $1,425, and sublot numbered 22 in square 417 to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $969, it is, this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that the said sales be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 22d day of December, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 47-3t

William D. Hoover, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Helen Morse Janin, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,500. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Roach & Watkins, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re the Estate of Rose Bray, Deceased.
No. 13,275.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Margaret Watkins, the executrix named in said will, it is ordered this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to James Boyle, Laurence Boyle, Rose Ellen Lunny, John Angier, William Bray, Richard Whitehead, Mary B. Clancy, Ann B. Smith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 22d day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. W. Clagett, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
Arthur Browning et al, Complainants, v. Sue E. Browning et al. Equity No. 28,912.

Upon consideration of the petition of Charles W. Clagett and D. W. Baker, trustees, filed herein on the 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, stating that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, under the original decree filed in this cause on the 26th day of May, 1903, is desirous of purchasing lots sixty-eight (68), sixty-nine (69), and seventy (70) in Frank T. Browning's subdivision of lots in square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367) as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in book 15, page 134, and lot numbered fifty-four (54) in the heirs of John Davidson's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367), as per plat recorded in liber N. K., folios 102 and 108, of the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, for the sum of twenty-two thousand five hundred ($22,500.00) dollars cash, free and clear of all incumbrances, provided that one-third (1/3) of the net proceeds of sale is set aside to Percival M. Brown, as trustee for Sue E. Browning, as required by said original decree, dated the 26th day of May, 1903, passed in the above entitled cause, it is this 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered, that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to purchase the real estate hereinabove described upon the terms above set out. It is this ordered: That Charles W. Clagett, D. W. Baker, and Percival M. Brown, trustees for sale herein, be and they are authorized and directed to accept said offer to purchase said real estate, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of December, 1905. Provided that notice of said sale and this decree be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three weeks prior to the said 18th day of December, 1905. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Richard A. Curtin, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William Santry, also known as William Sauntry, Deceased.
No. 13,273. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Annie Collins, it is ordered this 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ellen O'Brien, Jeremiah Driscoll, Patrick Santry, Michael Santry, Jeremiah Santry, Annie Santry, Annie Rawlette, Katie Carpenter, Margaret Carpenter, John Carpenter, Joseph Carpenter, May Carpenter, and Lily Carpenter, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal.] 47-3t

W. L. Pollard and M. N. Richardson, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Soloman H. Jones et al. v. Andrew J. Miller et al.
No. 25,108. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to remove cloud upon title lot 8, square 315, in city Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this —— day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Andrew J. Miller, Margaret V. Thompson, and Jessie McGlinchy, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 47-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ulrich Banf, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. AMELIA E. ZIMMERMAN, 628 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,290. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. PETER A. DRURY, 1432 Binney st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,266. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. Linkins, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles J. B. Schutz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. JOHN C. SCHUTZ, 1450 Howard ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,274. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Elizabeth McLaughlin, also known as Elizabeth A. McLaughlin.
No. 10,117. Adm. Docket, 28.

On consideration of the petition of Georgia Anne O'Neill, executrix, it is by the court, this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of lot twenty-one in Webb and Bradley, trustees' subdivision of square five hundred and twenty-eight (528) as per plat recorded in Liber B, folio 65, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, made by said executrix to Jeremiah Murphy, at and for the sum of $6,500, cash, subject to the payment to James F. Shea, of a broker's commission of three per cent (3%) on said amount, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 23d day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day.
[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 47-3t

Arthur Peter, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frederick L. Collins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. KATHARINE V. COLLINS, No. 1633 34th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,259. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Alonzo J. Eaton, Deceased.
No. 13,248. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, or for letters of administration on said estate, by Alonzo J. Eaton, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Bernard L. Eaton, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 4th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before
[Seal] said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 20th day of November, 1905. JAS. J. CAMPBELL, Room 712, Carnegie Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,277. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

Jos. H. Stewart, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, Deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the supplemental petition of the executor filed herein, and the same having been considered by the court, it is, this 22d day of November, 1905, by the court, ordered that said Frank Rollins, the alleged heir of Milly Cook, deceased, show cause on or before the 22d day of December, 1905, why the last will and testament of said deceased should not be admitted to probate and record. Provided that this order be published once a week in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record, a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., for [Seal] three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 47-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Wm. Herbert Smith, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert H. Montgomery, Deceased.
No. 13,217. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia A. Montgomery, it is ordered this 13th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachel Elliot, Susan Oakes, Anne Montgomery, and Sarah E. Rogers, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 18th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before
[Seal] said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Mary E. Letts, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,143. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Lorenzo A. Bailey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Michael Flaherty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of November, 1905. BRIDGET FLAHERTY, 1300 Del. ave, S.W., City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,280. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
In re Estate of Susan Perry, Deceased.
No. 10,180. Administration.

It appearing to the court that John T. Wood, executor, has reported a bid of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) each for lots 1, 2, and 3, in block 7, section 3, in Burrville, District of Columbia, from William B. Johnson, it is this 16th day of November, 1905, ordered that the sale of said lots to William B. Johnson at the above price be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 16th day of December, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three [Seal] successive weeks before said last-named day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Harry G. Kimball, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c.t.a. on the estate of Howard Markward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. GEORGE H. MARKWARD, 609 G st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,268. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Jno. Ridout, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Frank J. Dieudonne, Plaintiff, v. Liquid Carbonic Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,944.

The object of this suit is to recover damages for breach of contract, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once [Seal] a week for three successive weeks before the return day of this order. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. 46-3t

Legal Notices.

B. F. Louchs, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Estate of Ephraim A. Greenough, Deceased.
No. 12,110.

Charles F. Nesbit, surviving executor of the last will and testament of Ephraim A. Greenough, deceased, having reported to the court the sale of sublot No. 16 in square No. 781, improved by house No. 328 Massachusetts avenue n. e., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles E. Rice for the sum of five thousand five hundred and forty-five dollars ($5,545), subject to a deed of trust for five thousand dollars and sixty-two dollars and fifty cents interest thereon, it is, this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown to the court on or before the 11th day of December, 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published in the [Seal] Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Lancaster & Smith, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Frazier, Deceased.
No. 13,256. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Laura C. Frazier, it is ordered this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Frazier, Ephraim Frazier, and Harry Frazier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 18th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 917 O street northwest, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered nine (9) in Samuel Redfern's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-six (366), to the Deaconess Board of the District Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Baltimore Conference, a body corporate, of which said executor is one of the trustees, for sixty-five hundred ($6,500) dollars net, all cash, it is, by the court, this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Jno. Ridout, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Henry H. Meyer, Plaintiff v. The Standard Stone Manufacturing Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,935.

The object of this suit is to recover an amount due to plaintiff from defendant on open account and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive [Seal] weeks before the return day of this order. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Leon Tobriner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Charles C. Walter, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 8th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 14th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, LIZZIE M. WALTER, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,223. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

William D. Hoover, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Aaron Stern, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 5th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,394. Adm. [Seal.] 46-3t

Wilson & Barksdale, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Kate Ross, Deceased.
Probate No. 13244.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of Kate Ross and for letters testamentary, by Frank E. Gibson, as executor, it is this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that John W. Ross, Charles Riddle, Richard Anderson, William Anderson, Mary E. Denny, —— Smith, and the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Kate Ross, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Thursday, the 14th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks [Seal] before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Leon Tobriner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Carl Hugo Ziemann, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 26th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 13th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, AUGUST DAETZ, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,314. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Legal Notices.

William G. Henderson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Mary A. M. Smith, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,145.

Henry Calver, executor, having reported to the court the sale of a certain piece of property belonging to the estate of the decedent, said piece of property being known as premises No. 1248 23d st. N. W., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and being lot D, in square 36, as designated in the ground plat or plan of the said city, together with improvements thereon, to James B. Wimer, for six hundred dollars ($600); it is, by this court, ordered and decreed that the sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 11th day of December, 1905; provided that a copy of this order be published once a [Seal] week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Robinson White, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Charles White, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of November, 1905. JANE M. WHITE, care of Robinson White; CHAS. WHITE, Jr., 418 O st. S. W.; JENNIE W. FUGITT, 109 11th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13271. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

T. Percy Myers, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of John A. Barber, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 3d day of November, 1905. J. WILLIAM HENRY, 1319 F st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,255. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

J. H. Lichliter, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of John W. Smith, Deceased.
No. 13,238. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Emma J. Smith, widow of said deceased, it is ordered, this 8th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Leander Smith, Della Bell Smith, Dessa Bell Smith, Etta Alma Smith (infant), Lotus Mae Smith (infant), La Fayette P. Ripley, Leffingwell D. Ripley, Frank N. Ripley, Elizabeth J. Ripley, Edna (or Etna) V. Harwood, Grace Kaufer, Ida B. Berger, and Arthur S. Thompson, all non-residents of the District of Columbia, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WEN- [Seal] DELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 45-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Ellwood O. Wagenhorst, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Sherman McCallum, Rebecca Alexander, Complainants, v. Mary A. Ellis, Susan E. Hedian, the Unknown Heirs at Law of Susan Decatur, Defendants. Equity No. 25,785.

The object of this suit is to establish the titles by adverse possession of the complainants to the south 35 feet of original lot 18 of square 198 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitor, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to her, will be proceeded with as in case of default. And, it is, by the court, further ordered, this 7th day of November, A. D, 1905, that the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to them, will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order, before the appearance days named for the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, and for the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, respectively, shall be published once a week for four successive weeks, and twice a month for three successive months, in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10, 17, 24; dec. 1.

Berry & Minor, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker, Complainants, v. Henry W. Bartol, E. Welsh Ashford, and Erwin Cyrus Brainerd, Respondents. Equity, No. 25,746.

The object of this suit is to substitute trustees in the place and stead of E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin Cyrus Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), under a deed of trust dated September 13, 1900, and recorded in liber 2520 at page 118 of the land records of the District of Columbia, from William Peyton Tucker and Nathaniel Beverley Tucker and wife to E. Welsh Ashford and Erwin C. Baumgras (now Erwin Cyrus Brainerd), trustees, conveying lot 50 in Frank L. Hanvey's subdivision of lot 8 in block 34, "Columbia Heights," in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitors, Berry & Minor, and it appearing to the court that the summons issued herein against the respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, has been returned "not to be found," and the non-residence of the said respondent having been proved to the satisfaction of the court, it is, this 8th day of November, 1905, ordered that the said respondent, E. Welsh Ashford, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

---

Andrew B. Duvall, E. H. Thomas, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

Snowden W. Robinson, Complainant, v. Alvira Robinson, Sewell R. Duley et al., Defendants.

Equity No. 25,770. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to appoint a new trustee for the estate of James S. Robinson, deceased. On motion of the complainant, it is this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, Mary A. Collins and Mary Edna Collins, infant, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 45-3t

Legal Notices.

Frank S. Bright, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Joseph E. McDonald, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. JESSIE C. McDONALD, Colorado Building, Wash., D. C. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,286. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

---

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Alexander B. Hagner, in His Own Right, and as Executor, et al., Complainants, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants. No. 25,589. Equity Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of said lot at the northeast corner of lot 9, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, ——Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, Junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov 10, 17, 24; dec 2, 9; jan 5, 12.

Samuel Maddox, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Hattie Hicks et al., Complainants, v. Margaret R. Trotter et al., Defendants. Equity No. 23,164.

Upon consideration of the report of H. Prescott Gatley, trustee, herein filed, it is this 6th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be, and he is herby, authorized and directed to sell to Florence A. DeLong lot 20 of Daniel Birtwell's subdivision of lot 10, block 13, Rosedale and Isherwood, for the sum of $860, cash; and that said sale, so made, shall be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 45-3t

---

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

R. Ross Perry & Son, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of John Caldwell Poor, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of November, 1905. ELLA POOR, care of R. Ross Perry & Son. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 18,224. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

Wm. E. Harvey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration d.b.n. on the estate of Daniel A. Connelly, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM B. KING, 728 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 1179. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding an Equity Court.

The Springfield Fire and Marine Insurance Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. John B. Wight et al., Defendants. Equity No. 25,122.

Charles S. Shreve, Jr., and William F. Hall, trustees, having reported to the court that they have received a private offer to purchase lots, viz: All of lots D, E, F, G, H, and I, in Gideon L. Walker's subdivision of lots in square numbered one hundred and seventy-two (172), as per plat recorded in liber R. W., folio 126, surveyor's office, D. C., more fully described in the original order of sale herein, from John M. Clapp, for the sum of ninety-five hundred dollars ($9,500), all cash, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said offer be accepted and said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 9th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks prior to said last mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. [Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. nov 10, 17, 24

B. H. Loucks, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Court of Equity.

In the Matter of Composite Brick Manufacturing Co., a Corporation. Equity. No. ——.

It appearing to the court that a petition has been filed herein praying that the Composite Brick Manufacturing Company, a corporation, organized under the laws of the District of Columbia, be dissolved as provided by section 768 of the Code of the said District and for other relief, it is, this 7th day of November, ordered that notice of this application be given to all persons concerned and requiring all persons concerned to appear in this court and show cause, if any they have, on the 11th day of December, 1905, why the said corporation should not be dissolved, a receiver appointed to take charge of the assets of said corporation, and for general relief. It is further ordered that this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post once a week for three successive weeks, the first insertion to be not less than one month before said return day. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to all stockholders, bondholders, and creditors whose names appear in said petition thirty days before said return day. [Seal] THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 45-3t

Legal Notices.

Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Susana Griswold, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 27th day of November, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 8th day of November, 1905. GEORGE PRINCE, by Wolf & Rosenberg, Attorneys. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,496. Admn. [Seal.] 45-3t

Geo. Francis Williams, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the States of Illinois and Georgia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Hannah Lavinia Bartlett, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 7th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 7th day of November, 1905. WILLIAM HOLABIRD, Monodnock Block, Chicago, Ill.; JOSEPH WILLARD PRESTON, 407 Equitable Building, Atlanta, Ga. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 18,193. Administration. [Seal.] 45-3t

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Alexander B. Hagner, Complainant, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants.

No. 25,588, Eq. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainant's title to parts of lots 9 and 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of lot 13 at a point in the south line of north H street, distant 25 feet 3½ inches west from the northeast corner of lot 13, running thence west on said south line of H street 40 feet 3½ inches; thence south 183 feet; thence east 65 feet 7 inches; thence north 50 feet; thence west 25 feet 3½ inches; thence north 133 feet to the place of beginning. And beginning for said part of lot 9 at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence south 51 feet 6 inches; thence west 20 feet; thence north 51 feet 6 inches; thence east 20 feet, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainant, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following-named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing, (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. nov 10-17-24; dec 2-9; jan 5-12

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 48

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - DECEMBER 1, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 753
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
J. Charles McGuire et al, appellants, v. Louis Gerstley et al 754
John W. Clark, appellant, v. Louis Gerstley et al. 758
Frank S. Cahill et al, plaintiffs in error, v. District of Columbia 759
Legal Notices 762

Antecedent Debt as Consideration for Note—Negotiable Instruments Law.

Section 51 of the Negotiable Instruments Law of New York, which is identical in terms with section 1329 of the Code of this District, is as follows:

"Value is any consideration sufficient to support a simple contract. An antecedent or preexisting debt constitutes value, and is deemed such, whether the instrument is payable on demand or at a future time."

The New York Law Journal, in a recent issue, calls attention to a variant construction of this section made by the Supreme Court of New York. In Sutherland v. Mead, 80 App. Div. 103, it was held that the section should be construed to mean that, for an antecedent or preexisting debt to constitute value which will support an action against the accommodation makers or indorsers of a note which has been fraudulently diverted, the antecedent debt must have been canceled and discharged on the acceptance of the note.

In Roseman v. Mahoney, 86 App. Div. 377, it was held, construing the same section, that a note given as security for a preexisting debt is not enforcible in the hands of the creditor against an accommodation indorser thereof; that in order to be enforcible against the accommodation indorser it must appear that the note was taken in payment of the preexisting debt, or that the creditor extended the time for the payment thereof.

On the other hand, it was held in the case of Brewster v. Shrader, 26 Misc. 480 (special term), that the holder of a time note taken merely as collateral security for an antecedent debt may enforce it against an indorser in fraud of whose rights it had been diverted from the purpose for which it was made; that the former rule in that State had been changed by section 51 of the Negotiable Instruments Law; and that the new statutory rule includes negotiable instruments which have been given as collateral security merely.

Conduct of a Party as an Admission.

In Neece v. Neece, decided by the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia (51 S. E. 739), it appeared that the appellant, who claimed rights adverse to the widow and children of a deceased person, shortly after his decease produced an alleged will (probate of which was subsequently denied), and took possession of important documents relating to the title, and they were never afterwards returned by him or seen by any member of the decedent's family. The court held that such conduct on his part was significant with the effect of an admission; and in this connection the court said in part:

"In general, a party's conduct, so far as it indicates his own belief in the weakness of his cause, may be used against him as an admission, subject, of course, to any explanations he may be able to make removing that significance from his conduct. In particular, 'falsehood is a badge of fraud, and a case which is sought to be supported by means of deception may prima facie, until the contrary be shown, be taken to be a bad and dishonest case; and this applies equally to civil and criminal cases. . . . So, also, the attempt to suppress evidence by intimidating or removing witnesses is admissible, as having 'a tendency to show consciousness in him of title in the opponent.' Concealing or destroying evidential material is likewise admissible; in particular, the destruction (spoliation) of documents, as evidence of an admission that their contents are as alleged by the opponents'. (1 Greenleaf Ev., 16th Ed., p. 325, sec. 195)."

MR. GUS A. SCHULDT, for several years identified with the office of the corporation counsel of this District, has been appointed by the Commissioners as assistant to Mr. A. Leftwich Sinclair, who has special charge of condemnation proceedings on behalf of the District. The duties of Mr. Sinclair in this connection are most important and at the same time very exacting, and he will find in Mr. Schuldt a capable assistant. The vacancy in the office force of the corporation counsel caused by Mr. Schuldt's promotion has been filled by the appointment to the position of Mr. Wm. H. Wahly, a well-known young member of the bar of this District.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

J. CHARLES McGUIRE ET AL., APPELLANTS,
v.
LOUIS GERSTLEY ET AL.

PLEADING; SET-OFF; BONDS; PRINCIPAL AND SURETY; CONTEMPORANEOUS AGREEMENT; EVIDENCE; DAMAGES FOR TORT NOT BASIS OF SET-OFF; RECOUPMENT.

1. A plea of set-off must state facts which not only bring it within the privilege of set-off, but would also constitute a good cause of action if the party pleading were plaintiff in an action thereon; and while the technical formality and accuracy of a declaration may not be required, the plea must inform the plaintiff with reasonable certainty of the particulars of the demand he is called on to defend.
2. Where a bond recited that the principals were desirous of purchasing merchandise from the obligees, to be paid for in four months from the date of each purchase, and was conditioned merely for prompt payment therefor when and as the bills became due and payable, in an action thereon joint pleas of set-off filed by one of the principals and the sureties attempting to set up the breach of an agreement claimed to have been made between the obligees and the principals contemporaneously with the execution of the bond, held defective, and a demurrer thereto properly sustained.
3. In the absence of any allegation that an alleged agreement made between the principals and the obligees in a bond contemporaneously with its execution was to be incorporated into the bond or referred to therein as creating a dependence of one upon the other, and that it was omitted through mistake, accident, or inadvertence, parol evidence is not admissible to establish such agreement and the breach thereof so as to discharge the sureties on the bond from liability; and a demurrer to a plea setting up such agreement is properly sustained.
4. Damages for a mere tort can not be made the basis of a plea of set-off. Held, therefore, in an action on a bond given by a partnership to secure payment for merchandise purchased by it, that a plea by the sureties setting up that they had been damaged by the fact that the partnership had been terminated by the malicious persuasion of the obligees in the bond, was bad, whether regarded as pleaded by way of set-off or recoupment, and a demurrer thereto properly sustained.
5. Defenses by way of recoupment not immediately connected with or arising out of the same contract on which the plaintiff relies to maintain his action, are not permitted.

No. 1550. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by two of several defendants from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 47,367, entered upon demurrer to defendants' pleas, they having elected to stand upon their pleas. Affirmed.

Mr. L. A. Bailey for the appellants.

Mr. Simon Wolf, Mr. Myer Cohen, and Mr. Eugene A. Jones for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the court.

The appellees, Rosskam, Gerstley & Co., brought this action against John F. Monaghan, J. Charles McGuire, John W. Clark, and William McGuire, upon a bond executed by them, under seal, on September 11, 1903, and binding them to the plaintiffs in the sum of $5,000. The purpose and condition of the said bond read as follows:

"Whereas the above bounded John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire are desirous of purchasing merchandise from Rosskam, Gerstley and Company, now and from time to time hereafter, which the said John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire have bound and hereby bind themselves to pay for in four months after the date of each respective purchase.

"Now, therefore, the condition of the foregoing obligation is such, that if the said John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire shall strictly and faithfully pay or cause to be paid to said Rosskam, Gerstley and Company, for merchandise now and hereafter so purchased, the moneys due and to become due thereon when and as the same shall become due and payable, then this obligation shall be null and void; otherwise it shall remain in full force and virtue."

The declaration alleges that Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire purchased merchandise of the plaintiffs to the amount of $14,497.16, upon which a balance of $5,396.68 is due and unpaid. A statement of the account shows the various items of merchandise with dates of sales, commencing with September 24, 1903, and ending July 27, 1904, and also the items and dates of credit allowed.

Judgment by confession was entered against Monaghan January 27, 1905.

On February 6, 1905, J. Charles McGuire and William McGuire filed two joint pleas of set-off. The first of these alleges that plaintiffs are indebted to Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire in the sum of $10,000, for this, that on August 25, 1903, plaintiffs entered into a certain agreement with said Monaghan and McGuire, that if the latter would form a partnership to carry on the business of wholesale liquor dealers in the District of Columbia and deal in the merchandise to be furnished by plaintiffs, and would furnish plaintiffs with a bond in the sum of $5,000, with John W. Clark and William McGuire as sureties, conditioned for the payment of the indebtedness to that amount to be incurred by said Monaghan and McGuire, then plaintiffs would furnish Monaghan and McGuire, from time to time, when requested, "and at certain prices then specified and agreed upon by the parties to said agreement," and would allow them a continuous credit of $10,000; and that said Monaghan and McGuire should sell the same to their customers "upon such terms, as to time and otherwise, as the said Monaghan and McGuire should find and believe to be the best terms attainable, having in view the establishment and maintenance in said District of a demand for the plaintiffs' goods, and that the said Monaghan and McGuire would not be required to pay for said goods so sold to their customers, until they could make collections therefor from their said customers." And it was further understood that said Monaghan and McGuire would enter upon said business without capital other than the continuous credit aforesaid, and that, in order to perform their agreement, they would be compelled to make sales to their customers upon credit, in periods varying according to the circumstances aforesaid; that Monaghan and McGuire formed the said partnership, furnished the said bond, and began business as aforesaid; that at great labor and expense, they obtained about eighty customers, to whom they sold on credit the goods purchased from plaintiffs; that on December 10, 1903, the plaintiffs, with intent to destroy the business so established, and to sell goods directly to said customers drew upon them for $1,500, and wrongfully refused to furnish them any more goods at the prices agreed upon, but demanded a large increase thereof, and thereby forced them to abandon their business, which they had established at an expense of $10,000, and in which their profits were great. That they thereby destroyed the said business and violated the said agreement to the damage of each of said partners in the sum of $10,000, for which J. Charles McGuire claims judgment against the plaintiffs; and defendants are willing shall be set off against the plaintiffs' demand.

Digitized by Google

The second plea is substantially of the same effect.

William McGuire subsequently filed three additional pleas.

The first plea sets out, briefly, but substantially, the agreement with Monaghan and McGuire, as recited in the first and second pleas before stated, and that defendant subscribed the bond as surety for them in performance of said agreement. It then alleges that through the breach of the agreement by plaintiffs, Monaghan and McGuire were prevented from paying for the merchandise furnished them, and thereby defendant has been damaged in the sum of $5,000, which he pleads in set-off.

The second additional plea avers the making of the said agreement, in consideration of which defendant executed the bond, as in the first plea stated. It then further avers that afterwards, on to wit, December 11, 1903, plaintiffs, without the knowledge or consent of defendant, entered into another agreement with Monaghan and McGuire, by which the prices were changed to the prejudice of defendant, and then again refused to sell merchandise to Monaghan and McGuire, whereby defendant was discharged from all liability on said bond.

The third additional plea avers that all of the merchandise described in the bill of particulars was purchased under the terms of certain agreements not under seal, entered into from time to time before and since September 11, 1903, and not under or according to the terms of the obligation sued on, wherefore defendant has been discharged.

Defendant then filed three additional pleas.

The first of these (numbered 4) alleges the general agreement between plaintiffs and Monaghan and McGuire, and then adds that plaintiffs agreed to sell them goods "at, and for certain prices specified in a letter dated August 25, 1903, and sent by the plaintiffs to said Monaghan, and the plaintiffs then represented to this defendant that the said agreement was applicable to all merchandise to be purchased under said writing obligatory, which said letter was so sent and said representations were so made and caused to be made by the plaintiffs with the intent on their part thereby to induce this defendant to execute said writing obligatory, and this defendant, believing said representations to be true, and relying thereon, did set his seal," etc. That thereupon, Monaghan and McGuire purchased merchandise amounting to $14,477.16 and no more, of which sum $10,617.55 was for merchandise purchased at the prices aforesaid, and the remainder, $3,859.61 was for merchandise purchased at prices greatly exceeding the same, under another agreement made about December 11, 1903, without this defendant's knowledge or consent. That Monaghan and McGuire have received the sum of $9,100.48 on said first named amount leaving due under said bond the sum of $1,517.07 and no more.

The next additional plea (numbered 5) sets out the general agreement as before, but adds thereto that it was agreed that the merchandise sold should never exceed $10,000. That plaintiffs failed to perform that condition, or any other, and permitted the indebtedness of Monaghan and McGuire to exceed the said sum, whereby defendant has been discharged of his liability under said bond.

The last additional plea reads as follows:

6. And this defendant William McGuire, for a further plea to the said declaration, says that he ought not to be charged with the said debt by virtue of the said supposed writing obligatory, because he says that on or about the date thereof, to wit, September 11, 1903, the defendants John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire entered into a copartnership agreement between themselves to engage in the liquor business under the firm name of Monaghan and McGuire, and to deal in the goods of the plaintiffs, and during the year 1903 the said Monaghan and McGuire established said business and dealt in said goods with great profit to themselves and to the plaintiffs; that said writing obligatory was delivered to the plaintiffs for the purpose of establishing and maintaining the credit of said Monaghan and McGuire with the plaintiffs, and of maintaining said business; but on or about the 12th day of January, 1904, the plaintiffs, well knowing the premises, and with the intent to secure to themselves the customers and business which had been before that time obtained and established by said Monaghan and McGuire, and to sell directly to such customers, and thus increase the profits of the plaintiffs, wrongfully enticed and induced the said Monaghan to withdraw from said copartnership and to enter the employ of the plaintiffs, and as agent of the plaintiffs to sell their goods to said customers; and thereupon the said Monaghan, yielding to said enticement and inducement, did withdraw from said copartnership and did enter the employ of the plaintiffs as and for the purposes aforesaid, and thereby the business of said copartnership was wholly destroyed, and said Monaghan and McGuire by reason thereof became and were unable to pay the plaintiffs for the merchandise referred to in said writing obligatory; all which the enticement and inducement by the plaintiffs and their employment of said Monaghan as aforesaid were without the consent or knowledge of this defendant, who was thereby wholly discharged of and from all liability under or by reason of said supposed writing obligatory.

Demurrers were sustained to each of the foregoing pleas, and defendants, J. Charles McGuire and William McGuire, electing to stand upon said pleas, judgment was entered against them for $5,000 on February 24, 1905. From this they have jointly appealed.

1. The court did not err in sustaining plaintiffs' demurrer to the joint pleas of set-off filed by J. Charles McGuire and William McGuire, principal and surety, respectively.

Digitized by Google

The plea of set-off is in the nature of a cross action by the defendant, who, it is declared in the code, "shall be deemed to have brought an action at the time of filing such plea against the plaintiff for the matters mentioned in the plea." When such plea has been filed, the plaintiff may not discontinue his action without the defendant's consent, and, whether he undertakes to maintain his claim or not, "the defendant shall be entitled to a trial of, and judgment upon, his claim." Sec. 1565; Samaha v. Samaha, 18 App. D. C. 76: 29 Wash. Law Rep. 176.

It follows, necessarily, that the plea must state facts which not only bring it within the privilege of set-off, but would also constitute a good cause of action if the party pleading were the plaintiff in the prosecution of a suit therefor. And while the technical formality and accuracy of a declaration may not be required, the plea must, nevertheless, inform the plaintiff, with reasonable certainty, of the particulars of the demand which he is called upon to defend. Crawford v. Simonton, 7 Post. (Ala.) 110, 126; O'Brien v. Anniston Pipe Works, 93 Ala. 582, 584; Garrett v. Love, 89 N. C. 205, 207; Waterman on Set-off, secs. 646, 648; Ency. Pl. & Pr. 751, 752.

The two pleas fail under the application of this test. Without reference to the general vagueness of allegation, it is sufficient to say that they are notably defective in respect of the agreement claimed to have been made between the plaintiffs and Monaghan and McGuire for the sale of merchandise, and of the manner in which that agreement was violated to the injury of them and their sureties. If there was an agreement between the plaintiffs and the principals, of which the contract of the sureties formed a part, and the breach of which occasioned recoverable damage, it was incumbent upon them to set out the terms of the same and the acts of breach with reasonable certainty. What has been said applies also to the first and fourth separate pleas of set-off by William McGuire, the surety.

2. The errors assigned on the striking out of the second, third, and fifth separate special pleas of the surety, William McGuire, can be considered together, as they rest upon substantially the same ground. As general defenses to the action against the surety, they substantially repeat the allegations of the pleas of set-off that have been considered. The fourth plea goes a little further in respect of the agreement made for the sale of merchandise than the others, by alleging that it was contained in a certain letter, which, however, is not set out, nor are its contents in respect of terms, prices, etc., alleged. The fifth plea omits the reference to the letter, but adds another item of the general agreement which it alleges the violation of, namely, that plaintiffs would never permit the indebtedness of Monaghan and McGuire to exceed $10,000.

It is questionable if these pleas were sufficiently certain and definite; but assuming that they do state an agreement between the plaintiffs and the principals in the bond, and a breach of that agreement by the plaintiffs, we are of opinion that the court did not err in sustaining the demurrer to each of them.

The sureties, Clark and William McGuire, had no connection with the business of Monaghan and McGuire. One feature of the negotiations, and the alleged agreement between them and plaintiffs, was that they should furnish the surety bond. Clark and William McGuire brought themselves solely under obligation by executing the bond. This recites that Monaghan and McGuire are desirous of purchasing merchandise from plaintiffs, "now and from time to time hereafter," which they "have bound and hereby bind themselves to pay for in four months after the date of each respective purchase;" and the condition is that if the said Monaghan and McGuire "shall strictly and faithfully pay or cause to be paid to" plaintiffs, "for merchandise now and hereafter purchased, the moneys due and to become due thereon when and as the same shall become due and payable, then this obligation shall be null and void; otherwise," etc. This bond neither incorporates nor refers to the alleged contemporaneous agreement between the principals and the obligees relating to the prices of the merchandise, or the gross amount of sales that might be made upon credit. Contemplating that the credits might exceed $5,000 the sureties expressly limited their liability to that amount. Having fixed this limit, the bond recites what may have been a special stipulation of a general agreement with the principals, and which was of apparent importance to the sureties, namely, that each separate sale of merchandise shall be upon a credit of four months. The bond is, therefore, upon its face, complete in itself, and has no relation to, or dependence upon, a general contemporaneous agreement with the principals relating to the business to be carried on between them and the obligees. It is not pretended that by the agreement the principals were bound to deal exclusively with the plaintiffs, and it is reasonable (in fact, a different arrangement would seem extraordinary) that in commencing a business to continue indefinitely future prices would be regulated by a varying market, and amounts of sales by the needs of a probably increasing volume of business. The bond does not provide for or against such contingencies, either expressly or by inference, but confines itself to a limitation of the amount of the surety's liability and the credits to be given on each sale. In the absence of any agreement with the surety to the contrary, the law imposes no restriction upon arrangements between principals and obligees that may affect the terms and volume of their continuing business. Domestic S. M. Co. v. Webster, 47 Iowa, 357, 361; Amicable Life Ins. Co. v. Sedgwick, 110 Mass. 163, 166. Both of those cases were actions upon surety bonds, and are directly in point. See, also, Stuts v. Strayer, 60 Ohio St. 384, 387; U. S. Glass Co. v. Matthews, 61 U. S. App. 542, 547. The bond, not being by any of its terms dependent upon the agreement between the principals and obligees, the relation between them must depend for its establishment upon parol evidence. In the absence of any allegation that the agreement was to be incorporated in the bond, or referred to therein as creating a dependence of one upon the other, and that it was omitted through mistake, accident, or fraud, such evidence is inadmissible. Domestic S. M. Co. v. Webster, 47 Iowa, 357, 361; Seitz v. Brewer's Refrigerating Co., 141 U. S. 510, 517; Purity Ice Co. v. Hawley Furnace Co., 22 App. D. C. 573, 591: 31 Wash. Law Rep. 742; Knight v. Walker Co., 23 App. D. C. 519, 524: 32 Wash. Law Rep. 327; Newman v. Baker, 10 App. D. C. 187, 194: 25 Wash. Law Rep. 170.

Digitized by Google

It is to be remembered, moreover, that the bond is not merely silent in respect of the alleged contemporaneous agreement, but expressly incorporates one of its stipulations, of obvious importance to the risk assumed by the sureties, namely, that fixing the credit periods.

It is hardly necessary to remark that there is no allegation in the pleas that the bond was not to take effect as an obligation, except upon the performance of a definite, precedent condition, as in Burke v. Dulany, 153 U. S. 228; and Donaldson v. Uhfelder, 21 App. D. C. 489; 31 Wash. Law Rep. 428.

3. The sixth special plea of the surety, William McGuire, heretofore recited, must be separately considered.

This plea is not technically one of set-off within the form prescribed by the Code (Sec. 1564), but rather of recoupment, although it has been argued in both aspects.

(1) Treating it as a plea of set-off and assuming that a valid claim for damages comes within the definition of "an indebtedness of the plaintiff to the principal," which the surety might set off under the provisions of section 1568, it is, nevertheless, substantially defective. If it were made the ground of an original action by the other partner, J. Charles McGuire, it would be subject to demurrer, because it does not appear that the partnership with Monaghan, who, it is alleged, terminated it under the malicious persuasion of the plaintiffs, was one for any specified term of duration. No action would lie against Monaghan for terminating a partnership at will. Karrick v. Hahneman, 168 U. S. 328, 335. The motives prompting him in so doing, therefore, are immaterial.

It has been held that if one maliciously interferes in a contract with two parties, and induces one of them to break that contract to the injury of the other, the party injured can maintain an action against the wrongdoer. Angle v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 151 U. S. 1, 13; Leonard v. Abner-Drury Brew. Co., 25 App. D. C. 161, 175: 33 Wash. Law Rep. 211. If, however, the conditions were such that the aggrieved partner might have a cause of action against the plaintiffs, it would not be maintainable by him or his surety by way of set-off under the Code. Section 1563 thereof provides that: "Mutual debts and claims, under contract between the parties to a common law action, or between any of the several defendants and the plaintiff, . . . may be set off against each other by plea in bar, whether said debts or claims be of the same or a different nature or degree, and whether the claims be for liquidated debts or unliquidated damages for breach of contract; and if either debt be in the form of a penalty of a bond the exact sum to be set-off shall be stated in the plea."

Liberal as this section is in permitting set off, it embraces matters of contract only; and while unliquidated damages for a breach of the contract relating to the sale or warranty of the goods could be set off in an action by the vendors for their value, no damages for a mere tort, as is the case in this plea, can be so pleaded. Matters of mere tort are clearly not within the statute.

Assuming, but without intending to intimate an opinion, that the surety has a right of action for malicious interference in the matter of the partnership contract of his principal, whether that principal has or has not a similar right, it necessarily falls within the same rule of exclusion.

(2) On the other hand, regarding the plea as one of recoupment at common law, independent of any statute, it is likewise bad. The rule which permits the introduction of evidence in defense of actions upon contracts, in mitigation, diminution, or extinction of damages, has been liberally expounded by the courts of common law generally, without the sanction of statutes, through the natural desire to avoid circuity and multiplicity of actions. But no one of these, so far as we are advised, has ever permitted defenses by way of recoupment that were not immediately connected with, or had not arisen out of the same contract or suit on which the plaintiff relied to maintain his action. See Van Buren v. Digges, 11 How. 460, 475; Winder v. Caldwell, 14 How. 434, 443 (both cases arising in the District of Columbia); Dushane v. Benedict, 120 U. S. 630, and cases therein reviewed; R. R. Co. v. Car Co., 5 App. D. C. 524, 529: 23 Wash. Law Rep. 241; Tyler v. Messenger Co., 17 App. D. C. 85, 90: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 710.

(3) We have not deemed it important to consider the objection that one of the sureties could not maintain a separate cross action for the damage done to both by the same wrongful act, because the cosurety has filed a similar plea, and the practical result is the same as if they had joined in one.

The judgment must be affirmed with costs, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Insurance—Change of Location—Transfer of Policy—Increased Premium.

In Cooper v. German-American Ins. Co. of New York, decided by the Supreme Court of Minnesota, in October, 1905 (104 N. W. 687), the following is the syllabus by the court:

"The duly authorized agent of a fire insurance company, having power to consent to the removal of the location of insured property and to transfer the policy, may by oral agreement consent to such removal and make such transfer, and if such agreement is made the policy does not become void, but continues in force. The fact that the rate of insurance is greater at the new location does not relieve the obligations of the company under the policy, provided the insured agrees and holds himself in readiness to pay the additional premium. The duty is upon the agent to ascertain what the increased rate is and make demand upon the insured therefor."

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

JOHN W. CLARK, APPELLANT,

v.

LOUIS GERSTLEY ET AL.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY; NOTICE OF DEFAULT OF PRINCIPAL; DISCHARGE OF SURETY BY EXTENSION OF TIME OF PAYMENT.

1. Failure by the obligees in a bond given by a partnership, conditioned for payment for merchandise purchased within four months from the date of each purchase, to notify the sureties of the fact of nonpayment, will not discharge the sureties, where the bond contains no requirement that such notice be given.
2. Mere delay in enforcing the obligation of the principals will not discharge the sureties.
3. A binding contract between the creditor and the principal debtor, without the surety's knowledge or consent, for the extension of the time of payment, will discharge the surety; but the extension of credit must not only be upon a valuable consideration, but for a fixed and definite time.
4. A plea that a surety on a bond has been discharged by an extension of the time of payment must show that the extension of payment has been agreed upon, in a way binding upon the principal, for a fixed and certain period; and a plea alleging merely that, without the surety's knowledge or consent, the plaintiff "extended the time of payment for a valuable consideration," is insufficient.

No. 1569. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by one of several defendants from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at law, No. 47,367, entered upon demurrer to defendant's pleas, he having elected to stand thereon. Affirmed.

Mr. M. J. Keane and Mr. L. A. Bailey for the appellant.

Mr. Simon Wolf, Mr. Myer Cohen, and Mr. Eugene A. Jones for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellant, John W. Clark, was joined as one of the sureties of Monaghan and McGuire, in the general action upon the surety bond, as has been recited in the statement of the appealed case of McGuire v. Gerstley et al., No. 1550, ante, p. 754. His special pleas were not disposed of at the same time with those of his codefendants, but were postponed to April 7, 1905. On that date plaintiff's demurrers were sustained to each of his seven pleas, and judgment for $5,000 entered against him.

His appeal has been prosecuted separately, and was submitted immediately after the other.

The first six pleas are identical with those of his cosurety, William McGuire, and the demurrers thereto were properly sustained for the reasons that have been given in the opinion delivered in No. 1550, ante, p. 754.

The only questions for further consideration arise on the demurrer to the seventh plea, which was also sustained.

This plea reads as follows:

"7. And for a further plea this defendant says that he ought not to be charged with the said debt by virtue of the said supposed writing obligatory because he says: that by the terms of the said writing obligatory the said John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire agreed to and with the plaintiffs and this defendant that they the said John F. Monaghan and J. Charles McGuire would pay to the plaintiffs, for the goods and merchandise purchased from the said plaintiffs in four months after the date of each respective purchase, yet, notwithstanding said agreement, the said John F. Monaghan, and J. Charles McGuire did not pay for the said goods in the said time agreed upon, nor did the plaintiffs require them to pay for the same, but on the contrary extended the time of payment for a valuable consideration, in which the said Monaghan and McGuire had to pay for the said goods and merchandise; that the said plaintiffs never notified this defendant of the failure of the said Monaghan and McGuire to pay for the said goods and merchandise as the same became due and payable under the terms of the said writing obligatory, neither did the plaintiffs notify this defendant that they extended the time of payment of said goods and merchandise beyond the said term of four months, as agreed upon in said writing obligatory; that by reason of the failure of the plaintiffs to notify this defendant that the said Monaghan and McGuire did not pay for the said goods and merchandise in four months from the date of each purchase, and by reason of the extension of credit given to the said Monaghan and McGuire without the knowledge or consent of this defendant, all of which facts became known to this defendant after the filing of this suit, this defendant was wholly relieved and discharged from all liability under and by virtue of said supposed writing obligatory."

1. So much of this plea as claims a discharge of the liability of the sureties for the want of notice by the plaintiffs of the failure of Monaghan and McGuire to make prompt payments upon the expiration of the credit, provided for each separate sale, is undoubtedly bad. The contract evidenced by the bond contains no requirement that such notice shall be given; and its omission, together with a mere delay in enforcing the obligation of the principals, worked no discharge of the sureties. Sprigg v. Bank, 12 Wheat, 201, 207; Lake v. Thomas, 84 Md. 608, 623.

2. The plea also undertakes to set up the defense of discharge by reason of an agreement with the principals extending the time of payment.

Undoubtedly, the contract of a surety is a strict one, and he has the right to stand upon the very terms of his undertaking. Any material change in the contract for which one has become surety, whether prejudicial to him or not, or the entry into a binding contract with his principal for the extension of the time of payment, without the surety's knowledge and consent, will work the discharge of his liability. Rees v. U. S., 9 Wall. 13, 21; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 528, 537; Coughran v. Bigelow, 164 U. S. 301, 310; Walker v. Washington Title Ins. Co., 19 App. D. C. 575, 588: 30 Wash. Law Rep. 355.

The extension of credit must not only be upon a valuable consideration, but for a fixed and definite period. 1 Brandt, Suretyship & Guar., sec. 378; Hayes v. Wills, 34 Md. 512, 515; Jenkins v. Clarkson, 7 Ohio, 72, 75; Thompson v. Robinson, 34 Ark. 44, 52; Woolfolk v. Plant, 46 Ga. 422, 426; Morgan v. Thompson, 60 Iowa, 280, 283.

The nature of the unauthorized agreement

Digitized by Google

for an extension of the time of payment must be alleged in the defensive pleas with sufficient certainty to show that it comes within the rule above stated. It has been held that the simple averment that an extension has been made upon a valuable consideration, as in the foregoing plea, is but a statement of a legal conclusion, and is insufficient without the facts showing how the consideration arose. Winne v. Colorado Springs Co., 3 Colo. 155, 158; Palmer v. White, 65 N. J. L. 69, 70.

However this may be as a general rule applicable to all cases, it is well settled that the plea must at least show that the extension of payment has been agreed upon, in a way binding upon the principal, for a fixed and certain period. Menefee v. Clark, 35 Ind. 304, 306; Chrisman v. Perrine, 67 Ind. 586, 587; McCormick Harvesting Co., 9 N. D. 482, 484; Glickhouf v. Hirschhorn, 73 Ill. 579, 575; Prather v. Young, 67 Md. 480, 482.

Tested by these principles the plea is defective. All that is averred is, that without the defendant's knowledge and consent the plaintiffs "extended the time of payment for a valuable consideration."

For these reasons the court did not err in sustaining the demurrer to this plea also, and the judgment will be affirmed with costs.

Affirmed.

FRANK S. CAHILL ET AL., PLAINTIFFS IN ERROR,

v.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

POLICE REGULATIONS; STORAGE OF GASOLINE, ETC.; EVIDENCE.

1. Section 3 of article 3 of the Police Regulations of this District, prohibiting the storage or keeping for sale of inflammable oils, etc., without license, and prescribing the conditions under which such license shall be granted, held valid.
2. The evidence in a prosecution in the Police Court upon an information charging the plaintiffs in error, proprietors of an automobile garage, with having in store and keeping for sale gasoline without having first obtained a license held sufficient to support a finding that defendants were guilty, and the judgment affirmed.

No. 1595. Decided November 8, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Police Court of the District of Columbia. Affirmed.

Mr. W. S. Duvall for the plaintiffs in error.

Mr. E. H. Thomas and Mr. F. H. Stephens for the defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McCOMAS delivered the opinion of the Court:

In the Police Court, Middleton and Cahill, plaintiffs in error, were convicted upon an information which charged them with having in store and keeping for sale gasoline without having first obtained a license.

This case comes to this court upon a writ of error to the Police Court to review its judgment.

At the trial the proof was that Middleton and Cahill maintained an automobile establishment at 1319 L street northwest, in Washington, where automobiles are received for storage; that on July 6, 1905, the fire marshal and the building inspector found on the premises a five-gallon can filled with gasoline and a like can nearly filled with gasoline; that nearby there was an underground tank of unknown location and dimensions; that pipes leading from the tank had a spigot located in the doorway of the garage, and the spigot, when turned on, yielded less than a gill of gasoline; that one of the plaintiffs in error admitted that the gasoline was drawn from the buried tank to refill the five-gallon cans mentioned, and from these cans the tanks of the automobiles stored in the building were filled; that the plaintiffs in error had no license to store gasoline in the underground tank, although they had a permit to conduct an automobile storage house, and had made application in due form for a permit to store gasoline in a fifty-gallon tank, which application had been approved by the fire marshal and the chief engineer of the District of Columbia, but no such permit had been issued.

It is contended that the third section of the second article of the Police Regulations of the District of Columbia, upon which the information in this case rests, is void, because by it the Commissioners of the District delegate to the inspector of buildings and to the chief engineer of the fire department powers delegated by Congress to the Commissioners, because it authorizes prohibition instead of regulation, because it omits rules to govern the inspector and chief engineer in recommending or refusing to recommend the issue of a license to store or keep for sale gasoline, and because it seeks to regulate the sale under authority from Congress to regulate the storage only.

The third section of the second article of the Police Regulations, the validity of which is denied, is as follows:

"Sec. 3. No person shall store or keep for sale in the District of Columbia any inflammable oil or fluid composed wholly or in part of petroleum or any of its products, or any other highly inflammable fluid, without an annual license therefor as provided in this article. Every person desiring such license shall make application therefor in writing to the fire marshal of the District of Columbia, stating the place, building, or part of building in which the applicant desires to store or keep such articles or any of them; and the said application shall be referred to the inspector of buildings and the chief engineer of the fire department, who shall examine the place or building described in the application, and transmit the said application, with their recommendation in the case in writing thereon, to the assessor of said District, who shall, if said officials so recommend, issue the license, unless otherwise ordered by the Commissioners."

In District of Columbia v. Weston, 23 App. D. C. 363, this court held that this section was a valid police regulation as made by the Commissioners of the District, saying, "It is not a delegation of their authority to commit to the expert agents named the duty of ascertaining and reporting information important to the exercise of their power to issue a license. . . . Applicants for license have no cause to complain that another agent is directed to issue the license if the former agents, upon inquiry into and report upon the necessary conditions, so recommend, and the Commissioners do not order otherwise." District of Columbia v.

Digitized by Google

Weston, 23 App. D. C. 366; 32 Wash. Law Rep. 284.

True, section 3 has been amended since by striking out "Commissioners of the District of Columbia" as the officials to whom application for license shall be addressed, and now provides that "every person desiring such license shall make application therefor in writing to the fire marshal of the District of Columbia," etc. This amendment does not affect the ruling in Weston's case, wherein it was also said "that in the execution of the powers conferred upon the Commissioners generally they may appoint executive agents, charged with the performance of ministerial duties under their general supervision and control, where there has been no express authorization thereof." District of Columbia v. Weston, 23 App. D. C. 366; United States ex rel. Kerr v. Ross, 5 App. D. C. 241.

It is further urged that while Congress gave power to the Commissioners to regulate the storage of gasoline, under the third section it is possible for either the Commissioners or their subordinates to prohibit the storage of gasoline. The purpose of the section is to regulate such storage by license, and it provides a mode of application for such license, a reference of such application to appropriate subordinates, who shall make recommendation thereon to another subordinate, who shall, upon a favorable recommendation, issue a license, unless otherwise ordered by the Commissioners.

The officers authorized to examine may report unfavorably upon the application, either because the building is of a character prohibited by other sections of article 2 of Police Regulations, or because the application states a desire to store a maximum quantity of gasoline, by the same regulations forbidden to be stored in the place or building described in the application for license, or the same subordinate may report favorably, and the assessor may desire to issue the license, but the Commissioners, because of certain reasonable restrictions in this article 2, may order otherwise.

If it were not possible to refuse license to those applicants who failed to fulfill reasonable requirements imposed for safety to life and property, it would not be possible to regulate by a license system the storing and keeping of gasoline.

Nor does section 3, when read in connection with other sections of article 2, fail to provide rules sufficient to guide and control the discretion of the fire marshal and the chief engineer, presumed to have knowledge of the proper methods for the safe storage of gasoline, in reporting upon applications for license.

There is no merit in the objection that Congress authorized the Commissioners to regulate the storage of gasoline only, but the third section regulates the sale of gasoline. Congress authorized the Commissioners to regulate the storage of all gasoline, whether stored for private use or public use, or stored or kept for sale to others. The storage for commercial use is the principal use of gasoline, and, therefore, this police regulation properly provides supervision of gasoline stored or kept for sale.

It is said that section 3 is so inconsistent with section 1 and section 5 as to be void for unreasonableness; that section 1 prohibits the storing of gasoline in any place except the interior of a building, while section 5 prohibits the storage of gasoline in any building whatever, and requires the tank containing it to be 6 feet outside and away from the nearest wall of any building, and therefore gasoline can not be stored at any place.

Now, section 1 prohibits only storage on the surface of any yard, avenue, street, etc., while section 5 permits storage underground outside of any buildings. This section permits storage in a tank of iron or steel to contain a maximum of fifty gallons of fluid that will flash at a temperature below 120 degrees. To limit the quantity of an explosive fluid to be stored to fifty gallons, and to require it to be stored outside of buildings in a tank buried underground is reasonable.

Sundry objections to revocation of license provided in section 5 are irrelevant here. The case now before this court is upon an information charging the plaintiffs in error with storing gasoline without a license.

Passing over several immaterial assignments of error, there remains the objection that there was not sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction upon the information in the court below.

From all the evidence it appears that the court below found that the plaintiffs in error were licensed keepers of a garage, where automobiles were cared for and filled and refilled with gasoline for pay, and that the plaintiffs in error filled the tanks of the automobiles from the five-gallon cans, and that these cans were in turn filled from the tank buried in adjacent ground wherein the gasoline had been stored. These and the other circumstances in evidence appear to have convinced the court, trying the case without a jury, that the gasoline in the plaintiffs' garage was stored and kept for sale to the persons whose automobiles were in the care of the plaintiffs in error, who did not have license to store and keep gasoline for such purpose.

The court below was justified in finding the plaintiff in error guilty. The judgment below will be affirmed with costs; and it is so ordered.

Master and Servant—Telegraph Operator Fellow Servant of Members of Train Crew—Negligence—Res Ipsa Loquitur—Rules—Meeting Orders.

In Northern Pacific Railway v. Dixon, decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, eighth circuit, in August, 1905, 139 Fed. 737, the following is the syllabus by the court:

"A local telegraph operator, whose duty it is to gather and give information to the train dispatcher relative to the arrival of a train at his station, to enable the dispatcher to formulate orders for the movement of other trains, is a fellow servant of the train operatives in giving such information, so that the master is not liable to them for injuries caused by an erroneous order of the dispatcher, induced by false information given by the local operator.

"The doctrine res ipsa loquitur is inapplicable to negligence cases arising between master and servant, because the possible causes of accidents during service are many, for some of which the master, and for others of which the servant, is responsible, and the happening of an accident does not indicate to which class its cause belongs. The burden in such cases is always on him who alleges that the master was guilty of casual negligence to establish that fact. A finding that an accident happened and that the servant injured was not at fault does not sustain this burden, because the accident may have been unavoidable, or may have resulted from the negligence of fellow servants or from other causes for which the master is not liable.

Digitized by Google

"The rules of a railroad company that meeting orders must not be sent for delivery to trains of superior right at the points of execution if this can be avoided, and that there should be, if possible, at least one telegraph office between those at which opposing trains meet, do not constitute a peremptory prohibition and command, but except cases in which an ordinarily prudent man would deem it reasonably safe, in the light of the knowledge which the dispatcher has, to send a meeting order for delivery to a train of superior right at the point of execution, or to send meeting orders to opposing trains at points between which there is no telegraph station, and there is no other practical way to reasonably operate the railroad.

"The movement of freight trains by telegraphic orders, based on information relative to the location of the trains upon a railroad gathered and telegraphed by local operators or station agents to the train dispatcher, is a rational, careful, and approved method of operating a railroad. It is not a lack of ordinary care for a train dispatcher to believe, rely, and act upon such information, although it shows that an extra freight train has not reached a given station several hours after it was due to pass it."

Escrows—Deeds—Delivery After Grantor's Death.

In Keyes v. Meyers, decided by the Supreme Court of California in October, 1905 (82 Pac. 304), it was held that where the owner of land signed and acknowledged a deed and delivered it to a third person, with instructions to deliver it to the grantee on the grantor's death, but it was expressly agreed that, in case either the grantor or his wife repaid to the grantee certain advancements, they should be entitled to a surrender of the deed, the grantor did not part with all his dominion over the deed, and there was therefore no valid delivery thereof sufficient to pass title to the grantee.

Escrows—Failure to Deliver—Rights of Party Performing—Contracts for Conveyance—Execution—Breach—Damages.

In Naylor v. Stene, decided by the Supreme Court of Minnesota in October, 1905 (104 N. W. 685), the following is the syllabus by the court:

"A contract to sell land, deposited in escrow, takes effect according to its terms upon the performance of the agreed conditions by the grantee therein named, although not in fact physically delierved to him.

"A party who signs and delivers an instrument is bound by the obligations it contains, although it is not executed by all the parties for whose signatures it was prepared, where there is no testimony on his part of intention not to be bound thereby until it is signed by others, brought home to the obligee therein, no express agreement to such effect, and no loss of remedy, by way of indemnity or contribution, by failure of other parties to execute the instrument.

"Where the owner of an undivided half interest in land deposits a contract not signed by the owner of the other undivided half, to sell the whole land to a third person, in escrow, to be delivered to the grantee upon the payment of a certain sum, and thereafter acquires the title to the whole, the grantee named in that contract upon the payment of such sum becomes entitled to his rights thereunder, although the person holding it in escrow refuses to deliver it; and where such vendor has sold the premises to other persons, who were innocent purchasers for value, he is liable to the vendee in damages for breach of the contract."

Accident Insurance—Burden of Proving False Statements in Application.—In an action on an employer's indemnity policy, the burden is on defendant to show the falsity of any statements in the application. Goldman v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, Wis., 104 N. W. Rep. 80.

Accord and Satisfaction—Written Receipt.—When an agreement is fully executed to discharge a debt by the payment of a smaller sum, and such discharge is evidenced by a written receipt for the lesser sum in satisfaction of the greater, there is a valid and irrevocable discharge of the debt. Dreyfus & Co. v. Roberts (Ark.), 87 S. W. Rep. 641.

Bankruptcy—Bona Fide Purchaser of Note.—One who loaned money to the wife of a bankrupt to pay a mortgage on the bankrupt homestead, and received as security a note payable by the bankrupt to his wife, held a purchaser of the note in good faith for a present fair consideration, within Bankr. act, July 1, 1898, ch. 541, sec. 67e, 30 Stat. 564 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, p. 3449).—Clarke v. Sherman, Iowa, 103 N. W. Rep. 982.

Carriers—Duty to Stop at Stations.—A passenger with means of ascertaining whether a train will deliver him at his destination held bound to avail himself of his opportunity to enter the right conveyance.—Texas & P. Ry. Co. v. Bell, Tex., 87 S. W. Rep. 730.

Master and Servant—Contract Releasing Railroad from Liability for Negligence.—Sleeping car porter's contract releasing railroads from liability for injuries to him held a complete defense to an action against a railroad company for injuries to him, without regard to whether the railroad's negligence was gross or slight. Chicago R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Hamler (Ill.), 74 N. E. Rep. 705.

Master and Servant—Contributory Negligence of Parent.—Where the death of an infant was caused by the negligence of his employer, the fact that the infant's father consented to the employment did not defeat his right to recover. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co. v. Tomlinson (Va.), 51 S. E. Rep. 362.

Digitized by Google

Washington COLLEGE OF LAW

1328 NEW YORK AVENUE

REOPENS MONDAY, OCTOBER 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,
LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

Stockholders' Meeting (Annual).

OFFICE OF PUEBLO MINING COMPANY,
Rooms 710-711 Colorado Building,
WASHINGTON, D. C., November 29, 1905.

To the Stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company.

Please take notice that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company will be held at the principal office of the company, in the city of Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, the 2d day of January, 1906, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of electing directors and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The stock transfer books of the company will be closed on Saturday, the 30th day of December, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m., and will remain closed until Wednesday, the 3d day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m.

[SEAL.] JNO. T. McCOY, Secretary.
48-3t

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Joseph Salomon, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Edward T. Farrar, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Thursday, the 21st day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. LUTHER H. POSEY, by Joseph Salomon, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,515. Admn. [Seal.] 48-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of George Washington, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. FRANK P. REESIDE, 1003 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,178. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Alexander B. Hagner et al. v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al. No. 25,569. Eq. Doc. 57.

ORDER.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, beginning for same at the northeast corner of said lot 13, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, ——Brown, —— Ives (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month during the ensuing month, and in The Washington Post twice a month for two months, good cause therefor having been shown.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. dec 1, 8, 15; jan 5, 12

Walter A. Johnston, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of James F. Peerce, Deceased.
No. 13,283.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of James F. Peerce and for letters testamentary, by Rebecca Delaney Hooe, as executrix, it is, this 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that Thomas Hunter, Peerce Hunter, and Mrs. Lulu Hersperger, heirs at law and next of kin of said James F. Peerce, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Friday, the 29th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star newspaper, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 48-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Hattie A. Mullican Byrnes et al., Complainants, v. Mary P. Brown et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 20,638. Docket 47.

Upon consideration of the report of A. A. Hoehling, jr., and Blair Lee, trustees, herein filed, wherein it appears that said trustees have received certain offers of purchase, at private sale, of lot Q, square 133, City of Washington, District of Columbia, among others, an offer of John T. Knott, of $1.07 per square foot; terms, one-third (⅓) cash, balance in one year, with interest at five per centum (5%) per annum, secured by deed of trust, it is, thereupon, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that sale of said lot to John T. Knott, at the above price, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Post and in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day.

[Seal] By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 48-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to give notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Lucippia A. Jones, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of November; A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of November, 1905. EDWIN D. JONES, 409 B st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,196. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

John Paul Earnest, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956. Docket No. 49.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 27th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Sue F. Chapman to purchase at private sale for twelve hundred dollars, lot 7, in block 8, of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lot be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 27th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 48-3t

Jesse E. Potbury, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Emma M. Cutting, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of November, 1905. HARRY O. CUTTING, 1818 4th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,300, Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

P. H. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William H. Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of November, 1905. MARY L. LEE, 1740 V st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,299. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen W. Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of November. 1905. DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 46 S st. N. W. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 Fifth st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,291. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

SECOND INSERTION.

J. Paul Earnest, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Julia Fisher Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of November, 1905. JOSEPH A. McKELLIP, 1321 Park ave., Balto., Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,284. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

George C. Gertman, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The Atkinson and Ballard Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Benjamin Stoddert et al., Defendants.
Equity. No. 25,714. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree perfecting and establishing of record the complete title of the complainant to lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Lloyd P. Pumphrey's subdivision of certain lots in square numbered sixty (60), in the city of Washington, in said District, as described in the bill of complaint. On motion of the complainant, by George C. Gertman, its solicitor, it is by the court, this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs and devisees of Benjamin Stoddert; George Scott, executor, and in his own right; Jonathan Scholfield (of Issacker), executor, and in his own right; Mahlon Scholfield; Benjamin Waters, trustee, and in his own right; Sarah Talbot, Ann Dobey, John Balderson, Eliza Cowen, Lucretia Edmonston, John Woods, Rachael A. Levering, Joseph Scholfield, Hannah Scholfield, Sarah Scholfield, Lewis Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Mahlon); Elizabeth Hopkins, Rachael Hodge, Ann Scholfield, Thomas Scholfield, Andrew Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Issacker); Martha Stanton, James Stanton, Jane Anderson, Sarah Anderson, Mary Anderson, William Elliott, Joseph Elliott, Sarah Elliott, Margaret Elliott, Maria Elliott, Thomas Elliott, Mary Elliott, James Evans, (of Jonathan); John Evans (of Theophilus); George Evans, Cadwallader Evans, Oliver Evans (of Oliver); John Lampley, Elizabeth Lampley, Eliza W. Evans, Rachel Evans, Leah Evans, Thomas Evans, Evan Evans, Jesse Evans, Oliver Evans (of Joseph); Abner Evans, George Evans, Joseph Evans, Joseph Ball, William Brackin, Adeline Brackin, Elizabeth Brackin, Margaret Brackin, and Minnie Johnson, or if either or all of them be dead, then the unknown heirs and devisees of any or all of the above-named defendants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in November and three times weekly in December, 1905, prior to said return day, good cause having been shown by the bill and affidavit filed herein, to the satisfaction of the court, that further or longer publication is unnecessary. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10; dec. 1, 8, 15

Jos. H. Stewart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, Deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the supplemental petition of the executor filed herein, and the same having been considered by the court, it is, this 22d day of November, 1905, by the court, ordered that said Frank Rollins, the alleged heir of Milly Cook, deceased, show cause on or before the 22d day of December, 1905, why the last will and testament of said deceased should not be admitted to probate and record. Provided that this order be published once a week in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record, a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., for three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 47-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Ernest L. Schmidt, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Richard W. Ryan, Deceased.
No. 13,263. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Edward B. Stumph, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of Richard W. Ryan (deceased), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 47-3t

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al.
In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 20 feet front of lot numbered 8 in square 417, improved by premises No. 1811 Eighth street N. W., to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $1,425, and sublot numbered 22 in square 417 to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $969, it is, this 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that the said sales be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 22d day of December, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 47-3t

William D. Hoover, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Helen Morse Janin, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,500. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Roach & Watkins, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re the Estate of Rose Bray, Deceased.
No. 13,275.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Margaret Watkins, the executrix named in said will, it is ordered this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to James Boyle, Laurence Boyle, Rose Ellen Lunny, John Angier, William Bray, Richard Whitehead, Mary B. Clancy, Ann B. Smith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 22d day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. [Seal] 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. W. Clagett, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding an Equity Court.
Arthur Browning et al, Complainants, v. Sue E. Browning et al. Equity No. 23,912.

Upon consideration of the petition of Charles W. Clagett and D. W. Baker, trustees, filed herein on the 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, stating that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, under the original decree filed in this cause on the 26th day of May, 1903, is desirous of purchasing lots sixty-eight (68), sixty-nine (69), and seventy (70) in Frank T. Browning's subdivision of lots in square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367) as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in book 15, page 134, and lot numbered fifty-four (54) in the heirs of John Davidson's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367), as per plat recorded in liber N. K., folios 102 and 103, of the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, for the sum of twenty-two thousand five hundred ($22,500.00) dollars cash, free and clear of all incumbrances, provided that one-third (1/3) of the net proceeds of sale is set aside to Percival M. Brown, as trustee for Sue E. Browning, as required by said original decree, dated the 26th day of May, 1903, passed in the above entitled cause, it is this 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered, that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to purchase the real estate hereinabove described upon the terms above set out. It is further ordered: That Charles W. Clagett, D. W. Baker, and Percival M. Brown, trustees for sale herein, be and they are authorized and directed to accept said offer to purchase said real estate, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of December, 1905. Provided that notice of said sale and this decree be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three weeks prior to the said 18th day of December, 1905. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Richard A. Curtin, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William Santry, also known as William Sauntry, Deceased.
No. 13,278. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Annie Collins, it is ordered this 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ellen O'Brien, Jeremiah Driscoll, Patrick Santry, Michael Santry, Jeremiah Santry, Annie Santry, Annie Rawlette, Katie Carpenter, Margaret Carpenter, John Carpenter, Joseph Carpenter, May Carpenter, and Lily Carpenter, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal.] 47-3t

W. L. Pollard and M. N. Richardson, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Soloman H. Jones et al. v. Andrew J. Miller et al.
No. 25,108. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to remove cloud upon title lot 8, square 315, in city Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this —— day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Andrew J. Miller, Margaret V. Thompson, and Jessie McGlinchy, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 47-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ulrich Banf, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. AMELIA E. ZIMMERMAN, 628 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,290. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. PETER A. DRURY, 1432 Binney st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,266. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. Lipkins, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles J. B. Schutz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. JOHN C. SCHUTZ, 1450 Howard ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,274. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Elizabeth McLaughlin, also known as Elizabeth A. McLaughlin.
No. 10,117. Adm. Docket, 28.

On consideration of the petition of Georgia Anne O'Neill, executrix, it is by the court, this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of lot twenty-one in Webb and Bradley, trustees' subdivision of square five hundred and twenty-eight (528) as per plat recorded in Liber B, folio 65, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, made by said executrix to Jeremiah Murphy, at and for the sum of $6,500, cash, subject to the payment to James F. Shea, of a broker's commission of three per cent (3%) on said amount, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 23d day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day.
[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 47-3t

Arthur Peter, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frederick L. Collins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. KATHARINE V. COLLINS, No. 1633 34th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,259. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Alonzo J. Eaton, Deceased.
No. 13,248. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, or for letters of administration on said estate, by Alonzo J. Eaton, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Bernard L. Eaton, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 4th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before
[Seal] said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 20th day of November, 1905. JAS. J. CAMPBELL, Room 712, Carnegie Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,277. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Wm. Herbert Smith, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Robert H. Montgomery, Deceased.
No. 13,217. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Julia A. Montgomery, it is ordered this 13th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Rachel Elliot, Susan Oakes, Anne Montgomery, and Sarah E. Rogers, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 18th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before
[Seal] said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

Leon Tobriner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters testamentary on the estate of Carl Hugo Ziemann, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 26th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 13th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, AUGUST DAETZ, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,314. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John B. Larner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Mary E. Letts, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of November, 1905. THE WASHINGTON LOAN AND TRUST CO., by Andrew Parker, Treasurer. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,143. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Lorenzo A. Bailey, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Michael Flaherty, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 16th day of November, A.D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 16th day of November, 1905. BRIDGET FLAHERTY, 1300 Del. ave, S.W., City. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,280. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Smith Thompson, Jr., Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
In re Estate of Susan Perry, Deceased.
No. 10,180. Administration.

It appearing to the court that John T. Wood, executor, has reported a bid of twenty-five dollars ($25.00) each for lots 1, 2, and 3, in block 7, section 3, in Burrville, District of Columbia, from William B. Johnson, it is this 16th day of November, 1905, ordered that the sale of said lots to William B. Johnson at the above price be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 16th day of December, 1905; provided a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three [Seal] successive weeks before said last-named day. By the court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Harry G. Kimball, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c.t.a. on the estate of Howard Markward, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. GEORGE H. MARKWARD, 609 G st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,268. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Jno. Ridout, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Frank J. Dieudonne, Plaintiff, v. Liquid Carbonic Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,944.

The object of this suit is to recover damages for breach of contract, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once [Seal] a week for three successive weeks before the return day of this order. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. 46-3t

Legal Notices.

B. F. Loucks, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Estate of Ephraim A. Greenough, Deceased.
No. 12,110.

Charles F. Nesbit, surviving executor of the last will and testament of Ephraim A. Greenough, deceased, having reported to the court the sale of sublot No. 16 in square No. 78:, improved by house No. 328 Massachusetts avenue n. e., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, to Charles E. Rice for the sum of five thousand five hundred and forty-five dollars ($5,545), subject to a deed of trust for five thousand dollars and sixty-two dollars and fifty cents interest thereon, it is, this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown to the court on or before the 11th day of December, 1905. Provided that a copy of this order be published in the [Seal] Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 46-3t

Lancaster & Smith, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William E. Frazier, Deceased.
No. 13,256. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Laura C. Frazier, it is ordered this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to John Frazier, Ephraim Frazier, and Harry Frazier, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 18th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Times, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 46-3t

Leon Tobriner, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, who were by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Charles C. Walter, deceased, have, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Friday, the 8th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under our hands this 14th day of November, 1905. LEON TOBRINER, LIZZIE M. WALTER, Executors, by Leon Tobriner, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,228. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Jno. Ridout, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Henry H. Meyer, Plaintiff v. The Standard Stone Manufacturing Company, Defendant.
At Law, No. 47,935.

The object of this suit is to recover an amount due to plaintiff from defendant on open account and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 27th day of October, 1905, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive [Seal] weeks before the return day of this order. By the Court: JOB BARNARD, Justice. A true copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk. 46-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Elizabeth Sutton and William H. Fearson v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of George Mason and Others. No. 25,700. Equity Docket No 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainants' title in fee simple, by adverse possession, in and to the north 20 ft. front on 19th st. by the full depth thereof, of original lot 12, in sq. 106, in Washington, D. C., improved by premises No. 913, 19th st. N. W. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of George Mason, of William Mason, of A. E. Grimes, and of Elizabeth Hooe, all deceased. On motion of the complainants, by W. Spencer Armstrong, their solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in the Washington Law Reporter and in the Washington Times. By the court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal.]

nov 3-10; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

William D. Hoover, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Aaron Stern, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Tuesday, the 5th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 10th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,394. Adm. [Seal.] 46-3t

Wilson & Barksdale, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Kate Ross, Deceased.
Probate No. 13244.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of Kate Ross and for letters testamentary, by Frank E. Gibson, as executor, it is this 10th day of November, 1905, ordered that John W. Ross, Charles Riddle, Richard Anderson, William Anderson, Mary E. Denny, —— Smith, and the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of said Kate Ross, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Thursday, the 14th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

[Seal]

46-3t

Robinson White, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia, respectively, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Charles White, late of the State of Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 10th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 10th day of November, 1905. JANE M. WHITE, care of Robinson White; CHAS. WHITE, Jr., 418 O st. S. W.; JENNIE W. FUGITT, 109 11th st. N. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13271. Administration. [Seal.] 46-3t

Legal Notices.

William G. Henderson, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Mary A. M. Smith, Deceased.
Administration. No. 12,145.

Henry Calver, executor, having reported to the court the sale of a certain piece of property belonging to the estate of the decedent, said piece of property being known as premises No. 1248 23d st. N. W., in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and being lot D, in square 36, as designated in the ground plat or plan of the said city, together with improvements thereon, to James B. Wimer, for six hundred dollars ($600); it is, by this court, ordered and decreed that the sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 11th day of December, 1905; provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

[Seal]

46-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor and trustee having reported that he has sold premises No. 917 O street northwest, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered nine (9) in Samuel Redfern's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-six (366), to the Deaconess Board of the District Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Baltimore Conference, a body corporate, of which said executor is one of the trustees, for sixty-five hundred ($6,500) dollars net, all cash, it is, by the court, this 15th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 15th day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

[Seal]

46-3t

Robert S. Hume and A. S. Worthington, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Special Term for Probate Business.
In the Matter of the Estate of Ellen O'Brien, Deceased.
No. 10,958. Administration Doc. 29.

It appearing to the court that the notification as to trial of the issues in this case, relating to the validity of the paper writing dated the 10th day of June, A. D. 1902, purporting to be the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, has been returned as to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of said Ellen O'Brien, deceased, "not to be found," it is thereupon by the court this 5th day of October, 1905, ordered that the issues heretofore framed in this cause be, and they hereby are, set down for trial in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, and that the substance of the issues and the date fixed for the trial, as shown in the margin of this order, be published for three months, once a month during the said period in The Washington Law Reporter, twice a week for not less than four weeks and twice a month for the remainder of the said period in The Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

MARGIN:

This is to give notice to John O'Brien, James V. O'Brien, Ann Fortune, and all unknown heirs at law, next of kin, alienees, and devisees of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, that, whereas a certain paper writing, bearing date of the 10th day of June, 1902, has been presented for probate and record in this court as the last will and testament of Ellen O'Brien, deceased, and the validity thereof is contested by certain of the parties in interest, issues have been framed and set for trial by jury in this court on the 17th day of January, A. D. 1906, presenting the questions whether the said Ellen O'Brien was, at the time of the execution of said paper writing, of sound and disposing mind and capable of making a valid deed or contract; whether said paper writing, or the execution thereof, was procured from her by undue influence, fraud, and circumvention. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills.

[Seal]

oct. 6; nov. 3; dec. 1.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

FOURTH INSERTION.

Ellwood O. Wagenhorst, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Sherman McCallum, Rebecca Alexander, Complainants, v. Mary A. Ellis, Susan E. Hedian, the Unknown Heirs at Law of Susan Decatur, Defendants. Equity No. 25,785.

The object of this suit is to establish the titles by adverse possession of the complainants to the south 35 feet of original lot 18 of square 198 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitor, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to her, will be proceeded with as in case of default. And, it is, by the court, further ordered, this 7th day of November, A. D, 1905, that the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to them, will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order, before the appearance days named for the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, and for the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, respectively, shall be published once a week for four successive weeks, and twice a month for three successive months, in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10, 17, 24; dec. 1.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Alexander B. Hagner, Complainant, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants.

No. 25,588, Eq. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainant's title to parts of lots 9 and 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of lot 13 at a point in the south line of north H street, distant 25 feet 3½ inches west from the northeast corner of lot 13, running thence west on said south line of H street 40 feet 3½ inches; thence south 183 feet; thence east 65 feet 7 inches; thence north 50 feet; thence west 25 feet 3½ inches; thence north 133 feet to the place of beginning. And beginning for said part of lot 9 at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence south 51 feet 6 inches; thence west 20 feet; thence north 51 feet 6 inches; thence east 20 feet, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainant, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following-named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing, (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]

nov 10-17-24; dec 1-9; jan 5-12

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid forat more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W

Legal Notices.

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

D. H. Roland Drury v. Minnie Fuller and Others.

No. 25,650 Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainant's title in fee simple by adverse possession in and to lot 17, in Emily Fuller's subdivision of lots in square 60, in Washington, D. C., as said subdivision is recorded in the surveyor's office in Book H. D. C., page 40. The defendants to this suit are Minnie Fuller (if living), and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Minnie Fuller (if deceased), of Andrew Schoilfield, of Robert Leckie, of Ruth Fuller, of Calhoun Clark, and of Sarah F. Fitzgerald. On motion of complainant, by W. Spencer Armstrong, his solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that said defendant Minnie Fuller cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the other defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three successive weeks during the first month, and thereafter twice a month for two months, in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]

nov 3-10-17; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

SIXTH INSERTION.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding an Equity Court.

Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,298.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet. thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Harlot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal]

sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 49

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - DECEMBER 8, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 769
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
The Washington Times Company, appellant, v. Johanna Downey 770
Potomac Laundry Company, appellant, v. Elizabeth J. Miller, executrix of James E. Miller, deceased 773
Albert Dowling, appellant, v. Thomas W. Buckey. 774
Elmore E. Bernsdorff, appellant, v. Lucy Eva Bernsdorff 775
United States, appellant, v. Stephen U. G. Johnson, alias Garnet S. Johnson, appellee 776
Legal Notices 778

THIS WEEK'S OPINIONS BY THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Unincorporated Joint Stock Company—Withdrawal of Shareholder—Insolvency of Company.

In Bradford v. National Benefit Association, the decision was of special interest to depositors in the defunct Capital Savings Bank, an unincorporated joint stock company which heretofore carried on a savings bank business in this District. The question involved was whether the appellant had withdrawn as a shareholder in the bank before the appellee opened its account as a depositor in the bank, so as to relieve himself from liability as a partner in the enterprise. The trial court held that there was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding that the appellant had not sufficiently followed up his attempt to withdraw as a shareholder, and that his conduct subsequently to the notice of his intention to withdraw was equivalent to an abandonment of such intention. The Court of Appeals affirms the judgment in an opinion by Mr. Justice McComas.

Wills; Bequest for Life; Right of Life Tenant to Principal.

In Payne et al. v. Robinson et al., the question was as to the construction of a bequest of $26,000, made by the will of Gen. William H. Payne to his son for life, and after his death to the son's wife. The court below directed the payment of the principal to the son, but the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, reverses this decree, and holds that the principal of the legacy should be retained and invested by the executors during the life of the son, to whom only the income should be paid.

Mandamus—Establishment of Post-Office.

In United States, ex rel. Romero et al. v. Cortelyou, Postmaster General, the appeal was from an order of the court below dismissing a petition for a writ of mandamus to compel the respondent to reestablish a post-office at the town of Las Vegas, New Mexico. It appeared that a post-office had been maintained there prior to March 31, 1903, when it was consolidated with that of East Las Vegas, the reason assigned being confusion in the delivery of mails caused by the similarity of names. By the terms of an act of Congress a post-office is required to be maintained at every county seat; and relying upon this statute the relators filed their petition for the writ. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Shepard, reverses the order appealed from, and holds that the petitioners were authorized to apply for the writ; that the duty imposed by the act of Congress was a plain ministerial duty, the exercise of which the courts could compel by mandamus.

Indian Tribes; Marriage of White Man with Indian Woman; Mandamus.

In U. S. ex rel. West v. Hitchcock, the relator claimed that by his marriage with an Indian woman he became "by adoption" a member of the Choctaw tribe, to which the woman belonged, and as such entitled to an allotment of land in Indian Territory. The Secretary of the Interior denied his application on the ground that the alleged adoption had never received his approval; and the relator sought by mandamus to compel the secretary to recognize the adoption. The trial court dismissed the petition, holding that it appeared from the answer of the respondent that the ruling involved the exercise of discretion on his part, which could not be controlled by mandamus; and its holding is affirmed by the Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell.

Wrongful Levy of Execution on Property of Third Person; Pleading; Sufficiency of Declaration.

In Malnati et al. v. Thomas, the action was for damages alleged to have been occasioned by the wrongful levy of an execution upon certain bricks, the property of the plaintiff, which were sold by the marshal and applied in payment of the judgment. The question raised by the appeal was one of pleading, i. e. whether under the declaration the appellee Thomas was entitled to recover for the value of the bricks so seized and sold. The trial court held that he was, and its ruling is affirmed, in an opinion by Mr. Justice McComas.

Digitized by Google

Criminal Law; Arson; Arrest of Judgment.

In Posey v. United States, the appellant was convicted under an indictment charging him, in three counts, with the statutory offense of arson, the charge being that he set fire to a house of which he was tenant, and to the furniture in the house owned by him and upon which he had a policy of insurance in the Potomac Fire Insurance Company, to the prejudice of the insurance company. The defendant contended that the counts of the indictment were inconsistent, and that the judgment should have been arrested for this reason. The Court of Appeals, in an opinion by Mr. Justice Duell, affirms the judgment, holding that the first count at least was good and sufficient to support the conviction, and declining to consider the question of the sufficiency or inconsistency of the other counts.

Patent Appeals Decided.

Per Mr. Chief Justice Shepard: No. 307, In re application of Thurston, reversed; No. 296, French v. Holcomb, affirmed; No. 309, In re application of Hawley, affirmed; No. 315, Leeberger v. Russell, reversed; No. 319, Bauer v. Crone, affirmed; No. 325, Laas v. Scott, reversed.

Per Mr. Justice McComas: No. 316, Rolfe v. Hoffman, reversed; No. 305, In re application of Hill, reversed as to claims 6 and 7, and affirmed as to all other claims.

Per Mr. Justice Duell: In re application of Schraubstadter, affirmed.

THE terms of the present justices of the peace for this District will expire on December 31, 1905, and thereafter, under the provisions of the Code, the number will be six instead of ten as provided for by the Code prior to its amendment. The death of Gen. Halbert E. Paine reduced the number to nine. The following gentlemen, all of whom are now serving as justices of the peace, have been nominated by the President for the term beginning January 1, 1906: Charles S. Bundy, Lewis I. O'Neal, Samuel C. Mills, Luke C. Stryder, Thomas H. Callan, and Robert H. Terrell.

Master and Servant—Procuring Discharge of Nonunion Man.—A representative of a labor union can not lawfully procure the discharge from employment of a nonunion employee on the sole ground that he is not a member of the union. Berry v. Donovan (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 603.

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

THE WASHINGTON TIMES COMPANY, APPELLANT,

v.

JOHANNA DOWNEY.

LIBEL; DAMAGES; MENTAL SUFFERING; EVIDENCE; PECUNIARY CONDITION OF PLAINTIFF.

1. A newspaper article containing charges which tend to bring the party referred to therein into contempt, ridicule, and disgrace is actionable per se.
2. Mental suffering, shown to be the natural and direct result of defamatory words spoken or published in writing or print, constitutes an element of recoverable damages.
3. Evidence that, as the result of the publication of a libel, the plaintiff was not able to work as before at her occupation as a laundress and had to obtain help in her work because of her weakened condition, held to justify an instruction authorizing the jury, in estimating damages, to include such as the plaintiff may have sustained in her occupation and calling as a laundress.
4. In an action for a libel, testimony of the plaintiff to the effect that she had no parents living, but was dependent on her own exertions, held properly admitted, when offered not for the purpose of showing her poverty in order to ask increased damages on that account, but as relevant to the charge that impaired capacity to labor was an item of the actual damages resulting from the injury.

No. 1547. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 45,732, entered upon the verdict of a jury in an action for libel. Affirmed.

Mr. W. J. Lambert and Mr. D. W. Baker for the appellant.

Mr. J. McD. Carrington and Mr. Hayden Johnson for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellee, as plaintiff below, began this action against the Washington Times Company to recover damages incurred through a libelous publication in the Evening Times, a newspaper printed and circulated by that company in the city of Washington on October 7, 1902.

The declaration sets out the defamatory and libelous article so published, which is entitled "Prayers Asked for Johanna's Removal. Queer Petition to Trinity Congregation Over Turmoil in a Laundry." Without reciting the article, which is lengthy, it is sufficient to say that it charges the said Johanna Downey with causing daily troubles for the past seventeen years in the Georgetown College laundry. Among other things, it charges that on one occasion she had been seen swinging out of a window in her night robe in a contest with another employee; that on another occasion, a few months before the publication, she had "cursed the boss like a sailor (meaning thereby that she had used abusive, profane, foul, and blasphemous language"); that she had thrown a cup of hot tea in the face of another employee. It also charged that she had been a favorite of the "boss," and has thereby been relieved of labor, and awarded better fare than others, etc. It is then added: "These are only a few items out of the daily occurrences for seventeen years." A note appended to the article asks that it be published by all fair-minded newspapers throughout the country, that people may understand that the employees, after seventeen years of turmoil, are justified in requesting the prayers of the congregation of Trinity Church for the removal of the plaintiff from said laundry. It is averred that by reason of said publication, so wickedly and maliciously made, the plaintiff has been greatly injured in her good name, fame, and credit, and brought into public scandal, ridicule, and disgrace amongst her neighbors and other good citizens, who have been led to suspect and believe that she has been guilty of the conduct falsely imputed to her, and have refused to have acquaintance and social intercourse with her, and that "the plaintiff, by means of the committing of the said several grievances by the defendant, its servants, agents, and employees as aforesaid, became dejected in mind and enfeebled in body, so as to be prevented from attending to her ordinary business, and is, by means of the premises, otherwise greatly injured and damnified" in the sum of $10,000.

Digitized by Google

To this declaration the defendant pleaded the general issue.

On the trial the plaintiff was asked to state what effect the publication had produced upon her physically and mentally. Defendant objected, on the grounds that no damages could be recovered for effect on physical and mental conditions through publication of the libel, and that there was no allegation claiming damages of that character. The objection was overruled and exception reserved.

Plaintiff then testified that "she was not able to work as before; that she lost her memory; that that morning she could not remember a thing; that her health left her and she did not know what to do, only to lie down and cry; that Dr. Gwynne attended her once for shock, although she had never had a physician before; that she had to get somebody to help her with her work on account of her physical condition, and that she has had to take medicine every day before meals for nervousness, and did not take it before the publication." On cross-examination she said that she had been absent "about two weeks, during which time she was attending her aunt, who was sick; that nobody talked to her about the article; that her friends did not believe it; that nobody refused to have any acquaintance or discourse with her on account of the article, and nobody that knew her believed it." She was then permitted to testify that her parents were dead, and that she was dependent upon her own efforts. This was objected to as immaterial, but the objection was overruled, with exception reserved.

Dr. Gwynne testified that he was called to see plaintiff immediately after the publication of the article and "found her very nervous and excitable, suffering from shock, and appeared to be weak and trembling;" that her nerves had affected her physical condition, but she did not have nervous prostration. He only prescribed for her once, and at the time gave her bromide to quiet her nervous system, this being the usual remedy.

Other testimony tended to show good health of plaintiff before the publication, and a bad condition of health immediately thereafter, and that medicine had been taken to quiet her nerves, etc.

The only evidence offered by the defendant tended to show that the article had been left in defendant's office by a "New York Sun man," after it had been refused by its manager, and that the publication was a mistake. At plaintiff's request the court gave the following instruction to the jury:

"The jury are instructed that in estimating the damages to be awarded the plaintiff, they should render the verdict for such sum as they believe from the evidence will fully and fairly compensate the plaintiff for the injuries suffered by her by reason of the publication by the defendant company of the libel complained of; including injuries, if any, done thereby to the plaintiff in her occupation and calling as a laundress, and her mental suffering and physical injuries incident thereto arising out of the statements and accusations contained in the said publication, and the tendency thereof to bring the plaintiff into disgrace and disrepute among those of her calling and her friends and acquaintances and the community in general."

Defendant objected to this instruction on the following grounds:

1. That no recovery could be had in actions for libel on account of physical injuries and mental suffering. 2. That there was no claim for such injuries in the declaration. 3. That there was no evidence on which to base damages for injury done to the plaintiff in her occupation and calling as a laundress.

The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,000 damages, and judgment was entered thereon, from which this appeal has been prosecuted.

The first assignment of error is founded on the exceptions taken to the admission of evidence tending to show mental suffering resulting from the publication complained of, as well as to the charge submitting the same as an element of damage to be considered by the jury.

1. The general proposition that mental suffering, shown to be the natural and direct result of defamatory words spoken or published in writing or print, constitutes an element of recoverable damages, seems to be supported by the great weight of authority. Markham v. Russell, 12 Allen, 573; Marble v. Chapin, 132 Mass. 225, 226; Rea v. Harrington, 55 Vt. 225, 226; McQueen v. Fulgham, 27 Tex. 463, 469; Turner v. Hearst, 115 Cal. 394, 399; 18 A. & E. Ency. L., p. 1083, and cases cited.

The leading case relied on by the appellant as maintaining the opposite view is that of Terwilliger v. Wands, 17 N. Y. 54, 59. That was an action for slanderous words spoken of a man, and it was held that he could not recover for injury to his health, and the mental anguish resulting therefrom. The spoken words, while tending to disgrace the plaintiff, did not charge him with the commission of any crime. We need not pause to discuss the distinction in this respect, which has generally been observed, between oral and written or printed words of defamation, or to consider whether some of the cases first cited may not be distinguished from Terwilliger v. Wands on that ground, because the point is unnecessary to the determination of the case at bar.

Digitized by Google

In a former case in this court, Mr. Chief Justice Alvey, who delivered the opinion, said: "Any and all publications, in writing or in print, imputing to another crime, or disgraceful, or fraudulent, or dishonest conduct, or which are injurious to the private character or credit of another, or which tend to render a party ridiculous or contemptible in the relations of private life, are libelous, and an action for damages is maintainable against the writer and publisher, unless the publication is embraced within that class of communications which are termed privileged communications, or unless the libeller can prove the truth of the libel." Gas Light Co. v. Lansden, 9 App. D. C. 508, 530: 24 Wash. Law Rep. 807; see, also, Bailey v. Holland, 7 App. D. C. 184, 189: 23 Wash. Law Rep. 813, and cases there cited.

In the last named case, it was said: "Where it does not appear that such statements or charges are true, or have been justifiably made, malice is presumed from their utterance. The malice consists in doing intentionally, and without justification, that which must work injury to another."

Whether any of the statements in the publication complained of amount to a charge of a commission of a criminal offense, though a trivial one, is immaterial, for, without doubt, they do contain charges tending to bring the plaintiff into contempt, ridicule, and disgrace. Consequently the publication is actionable per se. The plaintiff is, therefore, entitled to recover as general damages for injury to her feelings and the mental suffering which she endured as a natural result of the publication. Steamboat Co. v. Davis, 12 App. D. C. 306, 333: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 261. The charge in that case was substantially the same as that under consideration. See, also, Brooks v. Harrison, 91 N. Y. 83, 92, which limits the doctrine of the earlier case of Terwilliger v. Wands.

2. Another and distinct ground of exception to the charge is that it permitted the jury, in estimating the damages sustained by the plaintiff, to include such as she may have sustained "in her occupation and calling as a laundress."

It is true that the evidence did not show that the plaintiff had lost her employment, or that she had been deprived of her wages to any specified amount, but she did testify that she was not able to work as before, and that she had to obtain help in her work on account of her weakened condition. It was for the jury to say what weight should be given to this evidence in arriving at a fair and just estimate of the entire damage sustained.

3. The remaining assignment of error relates to the admission of the testimony of the plaintiff to the effect that she had no parents living and was dependent on her own exertions.

(1) Had this been an ordinary action for damages for injuries to person or property, the admission of the evidence over the defendant's objection would constitute reversible error. Such actions must be tried and verdicts found upon the facts constituting the cause of the action, uninfluenced by the social or pecuniary conditions of the respective parties. The peculiar character of actions for libel and slander, and the latitude of recovery permitted therein, have generally, however, been regarded as furnishing grounds for excepting them, to a certain extent, from the operation of this rule. The great weight of authority sustains the admissibility of such evidence, as regards the defendant, on the ground that the injurious effect of the defamatory words may reasonably depend largely upon the influence which the defendant may have in the community by reason of wealth and social position. Some authorities hold that evidence relating to the social and especially the pecuniary condition of the plaintiff, is inadmissible upon any ground, and these are strongly relied on by the appellant. Pool v. Devers, 30 Ala. 675; Reeves v. Winn, 97 N. C. 246.

On the other hand, a greater number hold that it is admissible to show the circumstances of the plaintiff, including not only her pecuniary condition, her family, and the like, but all the circumstances which give character to the slander and the injury occasioned thereby. Clement v. Maloney, 55 Mo. 352; Peltier v. Nict, 50 Ill. 511; Dixon v. Allen, 69 Cal. 528; Turner v. Hearst, 115 Cal. 394, 399; Larned v. Buffinton, 3 Mass. 546; Klumpf v. Dunn, 66 Pa. St. 141, 147; Barnes v. Campbell, 60 N. H. 27; Enos v. Enos, 135 N. Y. 609, 612; Press Pub. Co. v. McDonald, 63 Fed. (C. C. A.) 238, 243; Beelher v. Stenert, 2 Whart. 313; Enquirer Co. v. Johnston, 72 Fed. Rep. (C. C. A.) 443, 444. In several of the cases last cited, the plaintiff, to whom want of chastity had been imputed, was permitted to prove that she had young children. Discussing the admissibility of evidence of that fact, it was said by Showalter, C. J., in delivering the opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals: "The children were part of her environment. Her relation to them was such as might make the hurt to herself more acute and permanent, such as might render her more sensitive to, and more helpless against, the wrong done. This court can not hold that the fact objected to was improperly brought to light, especially in view of the particular character of the publication."

The foregoing reasoning is equally applicable to the facts of this case. Mental suffering being a recognized element of the damages recoverable, it was not error to let the jury be put in a situation to consider whether that mental suffering might not be more poignant as well as certain in the case of a single woman without parents to sustain and comfort her when charged with the disgraceful conduct.

(2) It appears from the recitals of the bill of exceptions that the fact of plaintiff's dependence upon her own exertions was not offered for the purpose of showing poverty in order to ask increased damages on that account, but as relevant to the charge that impaired capacity to labor was an item of the actual damages resulting from the injury. Moreover, the reasonable apprehension of loss of employment might have contributed in some degree to the mental suffering. Now the unquestioned fact, recited in the libelous article itself, that the plaintiff had been employed in a laundry for seventeen years, was sufficient to show that she must have been dependent upon her own labor, without any direct evidence to that effect.

In connection with plaintiff's disclaimer of a purpose to prove poverty as an independent fact for the consideration of the jury, it is to be observed that no evidence was offered to show that she had no property, or had accumulated no savings. Some of the cases heretofore cited go to the length of holding that the poverty, as well as the social condition of the plaintiff, may be proved, on the ground that the injurious consequences of the libel may readily be greater under some conditions than others. But, as we have seen, the admissibility of proof of poverty as an independent fact is not necessarily involved in this case. If it were we would not give it our approval.

Digitized by Google

There is nothing in the amount of the verdict to indicate that the jury were influenced by the poverty of the plaintiff to go beyond the limit of fair and reasonable damages enjoined by the court. If, after the express limitation of the purpose of the evidence, the defendant had any reason to apprehend that the jury might consider it for another, it ought to have asked a special instruction to that end; and this would, no doubt, have been granted.

For the reasons given, the judgment will be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered. Affirmed

---

THE POTOMAC LAUNDRY COMPANY, APPELLANT,

v.

ELIZABETH J. MILLER, EXECUTRIX OF JAMES E. MILLER, DECEASED.

SEVENTY-THIRD RULE; AFFIDAVIT OF DEFENSE; PLEADING.

1. An affidavit of defense held to state grounds that would, if true, defeat the claim of plaintiff in whole or in part; and a judgment under the 73d rule reversed.
2. A declaration in general assumpsit need not allege a promise to pay the amount sued for.

No. 1574. Decided November 20, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 47,122, entered under the 73d Rule, for insufficiency of the affidavit of defense. Reversed.

Mr. L. J. Mather and Mr. C. T. Hendler for the appellant.

Mr. W. C. Prentiss and Mr. George Francis Williams for the appellee.

Mr. Justice McCOMAS delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an appeal from a judgment rendered by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in a suit at law upon the money counts, with particulars of demand annexed, under the 73d rule of that court providing for a summary judgment.

Certain proceedings in this case, which terminated in a judgment, subsequently vacated, need not be considered. The discretion of the trial judge to grant motions and allow amendments disposes of many objections made to such proceedings in this case. For the rest, the appellee has not appealed and could not well do so. If the judgment vacated were a valid judgment in this cause, the judgment the appellee asks this court to affirm would be invalid.

This suit was instituted August 10, 1904, and at the same time the particulars of demand were filed containing many items, but no date except the head-line date, "Washington, March 17th, 1903." The items charged are classified as work done (1) "in boiler room;" (2) "materials used in boiler room," (3) and "work in old laundry building and addition."

The supporting affidavit avers that the total of the claim, $538.23, is due the plaintiff, whose testator, James E. Miller, in his lifetime, at the request of the Potomac Laundry Company, defendant below and appellant here, furnished work and provided workmen and did certain work in and about certain premises in Washington occupied and used by the defendant as a steam laundry.

The plea was the general issue. The affidavit of defense stated that the Potomac Laundry Company in May, 1902, carried on its business on premises owned by said James E. Miller, deceased, and paid $80 rental monthly. The company needed more land and an enlarged plant thereon, and Miller suggested that he owned the land east of the structure then used by the company, "and a contract was made between the said James E. Miller in his individual capacity and the said corporation, composed of Mooney, Ellsworth, and Miller, whereby it was definitely understood and agreed that the said Miller would make all the necessary improvements at his own cost and expense, for which he would ask, and which it was then and there agreed should be paid in the form of monthly rental, 8 per cent per annum on the total valuation of the ground and all the buildings erected thereon for the use and occupation of the said corporation, but nothing was then said about certain parts of said construction work—which might be deemed to be applicable only to the uses and for the purposes of the laundry—being paid for outright when completed for said laundry company; but it was distinctly understood at this meeting in May, and at all times subsequently when the matter of changes necessitating additional charges came up for discussion between them, that whatever additional cost was incurred by any change or alteration should be reimbursed to the said James E. Miller, as above indicated, viz: By paying him rental at the rate of 8 per cent per annum on the total cost of the said Miller's investment; and this was not only suggested by Mr. Miller, but was always agreed to by him, without demur or objection on his part, in the various conversations which took place between them—both on the 2d of May, 1902, when the contract was made, and at all subsequent conversations which took place between the date and the time of the occupancy of the new building in October of the same year; that after said contract was made, thereafter the said corporation's monthly rent to Miller was figured out on said basis, and the monthly amount of $140 agreed upon, which was embodied in a lease for five years, beginning January 1, 1903."

The affiant denies the justness of the claim now made and says "the defendant was not indebted to the Miller estate in the sum claimed."

Such is the material part of the affidavit of defense. The affidavit is vague and faulty. It fails to say distinctly that the debt claimed by the declaration and in the particulars of demand is the same debt or sum of money or part of the same sum which Miller agreed on May 2, 1902, to expend in enlarging the building and plant, and the same the defendant agreed to pay by paying an increased monthly rental, which was thereafter duly paid by the defendant. It is possible that the plaintiff here sues the defendant for other work and materials furnished by Miller at a time prior or subsequent to October, 1902, when defendant says the contract of May 2, 1902, on the part of Miller, to enlarge the building and plant was performed and the new lease for five years, at the increased rental, is alleged to have been entered into.

Digitized by Google

Here the deficiency of the bill of particulars of the plaintiff below produces uncertainty. The only date thereon is March 17, 1903. Apparently the charges for the work done by masons and carpenters "in boiler room" and the various charges for "materials used in boiler room" and for "work in old laundry building and addition" were due and owing on the date mentioned. Apparently the "work on old laundry building and addition" claimed in the particulars of demand is work embraced within the contract between Miller and the defendant on May 2, 1902, which work has to be paid for by the increase in rental averred in the defendant's affidavit, and the same work for which plaintiff sued; for the affidavit filed with the plaintiff's particulars of demand claims payment for materials furnished and workmen provided, and work done in and about certain premises occupied by the defendant as a steam laundry, as set forth in said particular.

If this defense should be supported by evidence it would defeat the action. It is right, therefore, in this instance that this action should proceed to trial and judgment. Taking the two affidavits together we conclude that the defendant has stated such grounds of defense as would, if true, be sufficient to defeat the plaintiff's claim in whole or part.

This court said in Brown v. Bank, 18 App. D. C. 605: 29 Wash. Law Rep. 819: "The rule deprives a party of its ordinary right of trial by jury and should be strictly interpreted as regards the affidavit of plaintiff, and broadly and liberally construed as regards the counter affidavit of the defendant." Lawrence v. Hammond, 4th App. D. C. 467: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 749. Gleason v. Hocke, 5th App. D. C. 1, 5: 22 Wash. Law Rep. 809.

"If there be nothing in the general statement of the facts of the defense to indicate or suggest evasion, or studied uncertainty of allegation or denial in matters susceptible of clear and precise statement; and if it appear by any reasonable or fair construction that the facts so generally stated would constitute a defense to the plaintiff, in whole or in part, the constitutional right of trial by jury must be accorded." St. Clair v. Conlon, 12th App. D. C. 161, 163: 26 Wash. Law Rep. 165; Magruder v. Schley, 17 App. D. C. 227, 231: 28 Wash. Law Rep. 870.

These settled propositions concerning the 73d rule apply to the case before us, and the judgment appealed from must be reversed.

As the case will be remanded for trial the appellant's exception to the declaration as insufficient, because it does not allege a promise to pay, must be disposed of. The declaration in this case is the common money counts, and these are in the form required by the 112th rule of the court below, and, of course, in the usual and approved form.

The appellant's argument confounds special assumpsit and general assumpsit. No promise is alleged in indebitatus assumpsit, or general assumpsit, which rests only on a legal liability springing out of a consideration received; and the difficulty clears away if it is kept in mind that in no case in which general assumpsit is brought does the plaintiff ground his claim upon a special agreement or promise. He proceeds exclusively upon the implied legal engagement or obligation of the defendant to pay the value of the services ordered or received by him. 2d Smith's L. C. 63, 64. 7th Amer. ed., H. & W.'s notes.

The judgment must be reversed with costs. This cause is remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion, and it is so ordered.

Reversed.

ALBERT DOWLING, APPELLANT,

v.

THOMAS W. BUCKEY.

APPEALS; CITATION; FAILURE TO SERVE; WAIVER.

The failure of the appellant to have a citation issued and served upon the appellee is waived by the latter where, upon notice given under the rules of the appellant's designation of the parts of the record to be included in the transcript, he expressly consents thereto, and the transcript is thereupon prepared and filed with the clerk of this court.

No. 1622. Decided November 24, 1905.

MOTION to dismiss an appeal for failure to issue or serve citation. Denied.

Mr. A. A. Lipscomb and Mr. W. M. Ellison for the appellant.

Mr. Joseph D. Wright and Mr. W. R. Andrews for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The appellee has moved to dismiss this appeal because no citation was issued and served as required by section 5, Rule 10, of this court.

It appears that citation was issued in due time after entry of the appeal in the court below, but had been returned unserved because of failure to pay the fee required therefor. If this were all that is shown by the record, the appeal would have to be dismissed. Chester v. Morgan, 11 App. D. C. 435, 439: 25 Wash. Law Rep. 767.

The appellee, was, however, informed of the prosecution of the appeal by notice given, under the rules, of appellant's designation of the parts of the record to be included in the transcript. To this designation he expressly consented, and the transcript prepared in accordance therewith was then obtained and filed with the clerk of this court. By this action the failure to serve the citation was waived, and the motion will, therefore, be denied.

Denied.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

ELMORE E. BERNSDORFF, APPELLANT,

v.

LUCY EVA BERNSDORFF.

APPEALS; DIVORCE; ALLOWANCE FOR COUNSEL FEES, ETC., PENDING APPEAL, DENIED,

An application for an order requiring the husband, appellant in a divorce proceeding, to pay to the appellee a sum for counsel fees and expenses, pending the appeal, denied, for the reason that there was no proof that appellee was herself unable to advance the money necessary for the purpose, without prejudice to its renewal on final hearing.

No. 1578. Decided November 15, 1905.

MOTION for counsel fees and expenses of printing brief. Denied.

Mr. Charles W. Stetson, for the appellee, for the motion.

Mr. C. F. Carusi, for the appellant, opposed.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

Pending this appeal the appellee prays for an order requiring the appellant to pay over a sum sufficient for her counsel fees and for printing a brief on her behalf.

As a reason for presenting the motion in this court, it is stated that two motions to the same effect were made in the trial court, but overruled without prejudice, because that court was of the opinion that the application should be made to this court. The power of the trial court to make an order for such a purpose in a divorce proceeding has been heretofore affirmed. Sparks v. Sparks, 25 App. D. C. 356. And this power, we think, continues after the taking of the appeal until, at least, the transcript shall have been lodged in the office of the clerk of this court under the rules governing in such cases. In a recent case in which it was intimated, though not expressly decided, that it is within the power of this court to grant such a motion, it was said that the better practice would be to make it in the trial court before the filing of the transcript. Morgan v. Morgan, 25 App. D. C. 389: 33 Wash. Law Rep. 409. For this there is ordinarily ample time between the entry of the notice of appeal and its completion by the filing of the transcript. The reason for the suggested practice is that the trial court, having a knowledge of all the facts, and having rendered its decree upon their consideration, is in a better position to exercise the necessary discretion than the appellate court, which may be called upon to act in advance of the hearing. The appellee, however, is not at fault in this respect, because she did make her application first to the trial court.

Assuming that this court has the power to entertain the pending application, we are constrained to deny it, for the present at least, because it is supported by no proof whatever that the applicant is unable to advance the necessary money for the purposes set forth therein.

The question, then, whether any allowance shall be made to the appellee for the expenses incurred in representing her interests will be considered and determined on the hearing of the appeal. The motion will, therefore, be now denied, without prejudice to its renewal and determination on a final hearing. It is so ordered.

JOHN HENRY LANE, APPELLANT,

v.

EMMA EUDORA LANE.

APPEALS; DIVORCE; ALLOWANCE FOR COUNSEL FEES, ETC., PENDING APPEAL.

1. This court has power, pending an appeal in a divorce proceeding, to require payment by the husband to the wife of a sum for counsel fees and expenses.
2. Such power will be exercised, however, only when the application is supported by proof that the applicant is in a destitute or needy condition, and that good reason exists why the relief could not be obtained in the trial court.
3. These reasons being shown to exist in the present case, the application granted.

No. 1614. Decided November 20, 1905.

MOTION for allowance of attorneys' fees and expenses pending appeal. Granted.

Mr. John E. McNally, for the appellee, for the motion.

Mr. Thos. J. Mackey, for the appellant, opposed.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

Pending the appeal in this case, the appellee moves for an order making an allowance of a sum reasonably sufficient to pay her attorneys' fees and expenses therein, to be paid by the appellant.

The facts presented differentiate this motion from others for the same purpose that have heretofore been denied.

It appears that on December 2, 1904, the appellee filed a bill against the appellant in the Supreme Court of the District, praying a legal separation. On January 27, she filed an application therein, supported by affidavits, for an order granting her alimony pendente lite and counsel fees. January 31 an order was passed allowing her twenty-five dollars per month as alimony. The appellant paid the same for three months and then made default.

On August 5, appellee filed a petition, alleging the non-payment of the said allowance for three months, and asking a rule on the appellant to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt for disobedience of the said order. Appellant, appearing, was adjudged to be in contempt and ordered into the custody of the marshal until he should pay said arrears of alimony, amounting to seventy-five dollars. From that order this appeal has been prosecuted.

After the transcript had been filed in this court, the appellee moved in the court below for an order to compel the payment of a sum of money to enable her to pay counsel fees on her appeal. This motion was denied for the want of jurisdiction. The motion now made is supported by affidavit showing that the appellee is in destitute circumstances, and that the appellant is in receipt of a salary of $100 per month as a Government clerk. The appellant admits the receipt of said salary, but says that it "is barely sufficient to meet the interest upon his debts and furnish him a decent support." He further alleges that he owns a lot in the city of Washington, upon which he owes purchase money in the sum of $2,100. It does not appear what is the value of the same. He also alleges that he owes a small sum for taxes, $100 on a life insurance loan, $46 secured by deed of trust on his furniture (value not stated), besides certain other debts amounting to about $370. He also denies that appellee is in destitute circumstances, but alleges that she is maintained in comfort through her services as housekeeper for another person.

Digitized by Google

We have, in former cases, intimated that this court has the power to entertain a motion of this kind, pending an appeal in a divorce proceeding, though it was not then necessary to actually decide the question. Morgan v. Morgan, 25 App. D. C. 389: 33 Wash. Law Rep. 409; Bernsdorff v. Bernsdorff (present term). Now that its determination is necessary, we have no doubt that the power to make such an order is incident to the appellate jurisdiction vested in this court. Prim v. Prim, 36 Fla. 676, 684; Clarkson v. Clarkson, 20 Mo. App. 94; Chaffee v. Chaffee, 14 Mich. 462; Disbrough v. Disbrough, 51 N. J. Eq. 306; Vanduzer v. Vanduzer, 70 Iowa, 614, 621; Lake v. Lake, 17 Nev. 230, 238; Krause v. Krause, 23 Wis. 354, 356; Wagner v. Wagner, 36 Minn. 239, 243.

This power is one, however, that will not be exercised unless the application for the order is supported by proofs tending to show that the applicant is in a destitute or needy condition, and that there exists a good reason why the relief could not be obtained in the trial court. Those reasons existing in the present case, the motion will be granted, and an order will be entered directing the appellant, within ten days, to pay to the clerk of this court, for delivery to the appellee, the sum of twenty-five dollars, to enable her to be represented by counsel on the hearing, and that in case of his default his appeal shall be dismissed with costs.

It is so ordered.

UNITED STATES, APPELLANT,
v.
STEPHEN U. G. JOHNSON, ALIAS GARNET S. JOHNSON, APPELLEE.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE; INDICTMENT; CERTAINTY.

1. Particularity and certainty are required in indictments, and the charge must be made directly, and not inferentially or by way of recital.
2. An indictment for a violation of Sec. 5479 R. S. held insufficient, and an order sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment affirmed.

No. 1542. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by United States from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding the Criminal Court, Criminal, No. 24,446, sustaining a motion in arrest of judgment. Affirmed.

Mr. J. S. Easby-Smith for the United States.

Mr. D. W. Baker, Mr. M. F. Mangan, and Mr. F. J. Hogan for the appellee.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This appeal is taken by the United States from an order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia sustaining a motion to arrest a judgment on a verdict rendered in the above-entitled cause.

The record discloses that the appellee Johnson was indicted and tried for an alleged violation of section 5479 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. The indictment contained two counts, the first of which is alone to be considered, for the reason that a verdict of not guilty was found as to the first count.

A demurrer to the indictment was filed before issue joined and overruled.

In passing, it may be noted that at the same term of the court at which the indictment now before us was found, another indictment against Johnson was found for perjury in the execution of the affidavit, the forgery of which is the basis for the indictment now under examination. The trial of that indictment resulted in Johnson's conviction, and upon appeal that conviction has been affirmed at the present term of this court (Johnson v. United States). It was admitted by counsel for appellant, upon the hearing of this appeal, that an affirmance of that judgment would preclude an additional sentence, should the court sustain the appeal herein.

An examination of the first count of the indictment discloses that it sets forth that Johnson was desirous of obtaining employment as a postal letter carrier in the Washington City Post Office Department and that to obtain such employment it was necessary, under the Civil Service Act of January 16, 1883, for him to make application in writing to the United States Civil Service Commission and be by said commission examined as to his qualifications in the premises; that it was required by the rules promulgated by the commission, pursuant to law, that Johnson, in the manner prescribed by the commission, and upon a blank form furnished, answer certain questions touching his qualifications; that the application as completed should be sworn to before a duly-qualified officer, whose certificate should be attached thereto, and then by Johnson forwarded and presented to the commission; that Johnson, having filled in the answers to the questions set forth on the blank form, executed the application in the manner prescribed, "and that the material questions and answers aforesaid had reference, among other things, to whether said Johnson had ever been employed in the Government civil service of the said United States, and to whether, if said Johnson had been employed in said service, said Johnson had been discharged from said service, or had resigned from said service."

The indictment further charges that Johnson, well knowing that he had been employed in said Government civil service and had been discharged from said civil service, did "unlawfully and knowingly falsely make and forge" the said application, "and did then and there present the same at the office of said United States Civil Service Commission . . . for the purpose of deceiving said commission . . . and for the purpose of defrauding the said United States." The application referred to is set out in full. An inspection discloses that it contains twenty questions, several of them subdivided, to all of which answers were made. The following were the ground upon which the motion for arrest of judgment was based:

Digitized by Google

"1. That the first count in said indictment on which said defendant was convicted does not charge an offense under the laws of the United States.

"2. That said count attempts to charge defendant with falsely making and forging a certain application, but that said indictment fails to state wherein said application was falsely made and forged.

"3. That said application alleged to have been falsely made and forged is not a declaration or statement required by any law of the United States to be made, and therefore, is not a declaration or statement within section 5479 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

"4. That there is no law or valid rule promulgated by the Civil Service Commission which required the certain facts set up in said indictment to be a part and parcel of said application."

It will be unnecessary to consider any of the grounds save the second, which was the one mainly discussed by counsel for the respective parties. The third and fourth grounds were not well taken, and the same objections were held bad in Johnson v. United States, decided at the present term of this court. If the first ground is intended to assert that forgery, when properly alleged, of an application for examination under the civil service law and valid rules is not an offense covered by section 5479 of the Revised Statutes, the objection is not well taken under the decisions in analogous cases. United States v. Curley, 130 F. R. 1; Johnson v. United States, supra. If, on the other hand, it means that no offense is charged because not properly set forth, then it is covered by the second ground upon which the motion was based.

That particularity and certainty are required in indictments is the well-settled rule of law applicable to the subject. "The indictment must be free from all ambiguity." Evans v. United States, 153 U. S. 584. Equally true is it that the charge must be made directly, and not inferentially, or by way of recital. United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483; Tyner v. United States, 23 App. D. C. 324.

Measured by these standards, we think the indictment was fatally defective. We have seen that the appellee was called upon to answer many questions, and if the offense alleged is considered to lie in a false answer to one or more of these questions the indictment, if good as to one false answer, is good as to all false answers. The mere statement of the indictment that one answer was false, which statement is a mere recital, does not free the indictment from ambiguity. That the forgery consisted in such alleged false answer is not directly charged, and at the best can only be spelled out. It is a mere inference. Reading the indictment in connection with the statute, one would as naturally infer that the name of the notary had been forged. Counsel for appellant admits that it is only by implication that the indictment charges that the recited answer was in fact false, and adds that "although the charge is indirect and inferential," the effect is sufficiently clear as to be unmistakable to the ordinary intelligence. We think that it would be an unsafe rule to lay down that an indictment is good or bad according to the degree of the intelligence of the indicted person or his attorney.

By reason of our decision sustaining the judgment in the other case against Johnson, the question to be here determined is of little or no importance to the parties to this case, and further discussion becomes unnecessary.

In conclusion, it may be said that the defect in the indictment was not cured by the verdict, for the reason that the demurrer to this count was overruled, which takes the case outside section 1025 of the Revised Statutes. Moore v. United States, 160 U. S. 268. It follows that there was no error by the court below in granting the motion in arrest of judgment, and therefore its decision should be affirmed. And it is so ordered.

Life Insurance—Assignment of Policy.—The assignor of a life policy was estopped to deny that the assignment was not valid because not indorsed on policy, as required by the terms thereof. Connecticut Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Tucker (R. I.), 61 Atl. Rep. 142.

Life Insurance — Effect of Incontestable Clause.—Insurer held precluded by an incontestable clause to defend a liability on the policy, after it had been in force two years, on the ground of misrepresentation and fraud. Williams v. St. Louis Life Ins. Co. (Mo.), 87 S. W. Rep. 499.

Master and Servant—Contributory Negligence Question for Jury.—In an action by a coal mine employee for injuries sustained while attempting to leave the elevator cage at the bottom of the mine, the question of his contributory negligence held for the jury. Illinois Third Vein Coal Co. v. Cioni (Ill.), 74 N. E. Rep. 751.

Master and Servant—Liability for Tort of Servant.—Vendor of a stove, sending his servants to set it up in the vendee's house, held responsible for their negligence. — Crandall v. Boutell, Minn., 103 N. W. Rep. 890.

Master and Servant—Safe Place to Work.—On the issue of whether the place in which a servant was working was reasonably safe, evidence as to conditions of similar places during past years held properly excluded.—Mueller v. Northwestern Iron Co., Wis., 104 N. W. Rep. 67.

Bills and Notes—Alteration.—Where, after a note was indorsed and delivered by the indorser to the maker, the latter altered it and delivered it to the payee, who took it without notice of the alteration, the indorser was liable to the payee, under Rev. Laws, ch. 73, secs. 69, 141. Thorpe v. White (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 592.

Digitized by Google

Master and Servant—Duty to keep Car-Step in Repair.—It was the duty of a railroad company to keep a step on a car used by servants in suitable repair, and to see that it was of sufficient strength. Smith v. Thomson-Houston Electric Co. (Mass.), 74 N. E. Rep. 664.

In Barnes v. Long Island R. Co., 93 N. Y. Supp. 616, the New York Supreme Court (trial term, Owens county) decides that the clause in a contract of through shipment limiting the carrier's common-law liability, being void in the State where the contract was made and from which the shipment was made, is void in the State to which the shipment was made, though the loss occurred there and though under the law of that State the liability of a carrier for negligence might be limited.

A certain judge in the years when he ornamented a circuit bench in South Carolina, is said to have bonded considerable of the mountain dew. One day after dinner he had evident difficulty in concentrating attention upon an argument by counsel, who at length in desperation suggested that the case ought to be heard by the full court.

"I think you would have difficulty in finding a fuller court," beamed the justice.

Washington COLLEGE OF LAW

1328 New York Avenue

REOPENS MONDAY, OCTOBER 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,
LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

BOARD ELECTION NOTICE.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Law Reporter Company of Washington City will be held at the office of the company, 518 Fifth st. N. W., on Monday, January 8, 1906, for the purpose of electing nine directors to serve for the ensuing year. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

H. Randall Webb, Secretary.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Stockholders' Meeting (Annual).

Office of Pueblo Mining Company,
Rooms 710-711 Colorado Building,
Washington, D. C., November 29, 1905.

To the Stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company.

Please take notice that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company will be held at the principal office of the company, in the city of Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, the 2d day of January, 1906, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of electing directors and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The stock transfer books of the company will be closed on Saturday, the 30th day of December, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m., and will remain closed until Wednesday, the 3d day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m.

[SEAL.] JNO. T. McCOY, Secretary.
48-3t

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Jos. A. Burkart, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Frank B. Marlow, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. JOS. A. BURKART, 516 Corcoran Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,309. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Celia E. V. Beall, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. LIZZIE B. GLADMON, care of Gordon & Gordon, 330 4½ st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,871. Admn. [Seal.] 49-3t

Lambert & Baker, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Daniel F. Shea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. ANNIE E. SHEA, 1919 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,276. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Filed December 7, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.
L. P. Harlow, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Violet Simpson, Complainant, v. Ollie Simpson, Ella Giesling, Defendants. Eq. No. 25,836. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of December, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

[Seal]

A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 8-15-22

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was, by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Carl A. Lindquist, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 27th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,457. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

F. R. Keys, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
John H. Robinson v. Ella Robinson and George Mahoney, Co-respondent. Equity, No. 25,698.

On motion of plaintiff, by F. R. Keys, his solicitor, it is ordered that the defendant, Ella Robinson, and the co-respondent, George Mahoney, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from the defendant upon the ground of adultery. This order to be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. Done this 3d day of November, 1905. By the Court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 49-3t [Seal]

Berry & Minor and Hugh H. Rowland, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Van Ness Boynton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. HELEN AUGUSTA BOYNTON, care of Berry and Minor, 705 Colorado Bldg., Washington, D. C. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,008. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

John S. Alleman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James P. Wilson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. EMMA FLORENCE WILSON, 811 North Carolina ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,320. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

W. Russell Graham, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Joseph S. Tucker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. DE WITT CLINTON L. TUCKER, 1320 K St., S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,212. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Legal Notices.

W. H. Robeson, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of James Smith, Deceased.
No. 11,789.
ORDER.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court: This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of the administrator, and it appearing to the court that the administrator has appointed the 29th day of January, 1906, for a meeting of persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue out of the estate of James Smith, the said action of the administrator in fixing said date is on this, the 1st day of December, 1905, hereby approved. And it further appearing to the court that all the heirs at law, next of kin, and distributees of the said James Smith, deceased, are non-residents of the District of Columbia, and so far as known to the said Samuel A. Putman, administrator, are named as follows: Walter Harrington, Henry Harrington, Frank Harrington, John A. Smith, Martha Ann David, nee Woodworth, and Charles Woodworth. And it further appearing to the court that the said Martha Ann David is a person of unsound mind and without committee or guardian, William H. Woodwell is hereby appointed a guardian ad litem for the purpose of the preservation of her interests in this proceeding, if any she have. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to said parties by said administrator by registered letter; and also that a copy of this order be published in The Washington Times and The Washington Law Reporter in each week for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to said 29th day of January, 1906. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 49-4t [Seal]

Edward A. Newman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Aretta G. Condict, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. FRANK G. CARPENTER, 1318 Vermont ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,886. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

George C. Gertman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of August C. Romacker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. GEORGE P. ZURHORST, 301 E. Cap. st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,318. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Mabel Huff, Complainant, v. Warren Rutledge Huff, Defendant, Clara De Marr, Co-respondent.
No. 25,658. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the grounds of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this —— day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Warren Rutledge Huff, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 8-15-22 [Seal]

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

Jos. A. Burkhart, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Johanna Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. RICHARD A. O'BRIEN, 319 B St. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,241. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

James F. Bundy and Geo. F. Collins, Solicitors
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard Broadus, Complainant, v. Georgiana Broadus and Alphonso Waters, Defendants.
No. 24,903. Equity Docket No. 55.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the grounds of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alphonso Waters, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, said order to be published in The Law Reporter and The Bee once a week for three weeks; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 49-3t

Geo. E. Tralles and A. A. Birney, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Larguey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of December, 1905. ELLEN KILROY, Oneida, N. Y. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,310. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

D. W. Baker and Fountain Peyton, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William O. Holmes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. WALTER H. BROOKS, 1425 Corcoran st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,012. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Joseph Salomon, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Edward T. Farrar, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Thursday, the 21st day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. LUTHER H. POSEY, by Joseph Salomon, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,515. Admn. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Alexander B. Hagner et al. v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al. No. 25,589. Eq. Doc. 57.
ORDER.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, beginning for same at the northeast corner of said lot 13, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innez Clark, ——Brown, —— Ives (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, Junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month during the ensuing month, and in The Washington Post twice a month for two months, good cause therefor having been shown. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. dec 1, 8, 15; jan 5, 12

Walter A. Johnston, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of James F. Peerce, Deceased.
No. 13,283.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of James F. Peerce and for letters testamentary, by Rebecca Delaney Hooe, as executrix, it is, this 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that Thomas Hunter, Peerce Hunter, and Mrs. Lulu Hersperger, heirs at law and next of kin of said James F. Peerce, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Friday, the 29th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star newspaper, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 48-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Hattie A. Mullican Byrnes et al., Complainants, v. Mary P. Brown et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 20,638. Docket 47.

Upon consideration of the report of A. A. Hoehling, jr., and Blair Lee, trustees, herein filed, wherein it appears that said trustees have received certain offers of purchase, at private sale, of lot Q, square 133, City of Washington, District of Columbia, among others, an offer of John T. Knott, of $1.07 per square foot; terms, one-third (⅓) cash, balance in one year, with interest at five per centum (5%) per annum, secured by deed of trust, it is, thereupon, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that sale of said lot to John T. Knott, at the above price, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Post and in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day. By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. [Seal] True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 48-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to give notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Lucippia A. Jones, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of November, 1905. EDWIN D. JONES, 409 B st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,196. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

John Paul Earnest, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956. Docket No. 49.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 27th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Sue F. Chapman to purchase at private sale for twelve hundred dollars, lot 7, in block 8, of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lot be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 27th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 48-3t

Jesse E. Potbury, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Emma M. Cutting, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of November, 1905. HARRY O. CUTTING, 1818 4th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,300, Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

P. H. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William H. Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of November, 1905. MARY L. LEE, 1740 V st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,299. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of George Washington, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. FRANK P. REESIDE, 1003 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,178. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen W. Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of November, 1905. DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 46 S st. N. W. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 Fifth st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,291. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

J. Paul Earnest, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Maryland, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Julia Fisher Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of November, 1905. JOSEPH A. McKELLIP, 1821 Park ave., Balto., Md. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,284. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

George C. Gertman, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. The Atkinson and Ballard Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Benjamin Stoddert et al., Defendants.
Equity. No. 25,714. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree perfecting and establishing of record the complete title of the complainant to lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Lloyd P. Pumphrey's subdivision of certain lots in square numbered sixty (60), in the city of Washington, in said District, as described in the bill of complaint. On motion of the complainant, by George C. Gertman, its solicitor, it is by the court, this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs and devisees of Benjamin Stoddert; George Scott, executor, and in his own right; Jonathan Scholfield (of Issacker), executor, and in his own right; Mahlon Scholfield; Benjamin Waters, trustee, and in his own right; Sarah Talbot, Ann Dobey, John Balderson, Eliza Cowen, Lucretia Edmonston, John Woods, Rachael A. Levering, Joseph Scholfield, Hannah Scholfield, Sarah Scholfield, Lewis Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Mahlon); Elizabeth Hopkins, Rachael Hodge, Ann Scholfield, Thomas Scholfield, Andrew Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Issacker); Martha Stanton, James Stanton, Jane Anderson, Sarah Anderson, Mary Anderson, William Elliott, Joseph Elliott, Sarah Elliott, Margaret Elliott, Maria Elliott, Thomas Elliott, Mary Elliott, James Evans, (of Jonathan); John Evans (of Theophilus); George Evans, Cadwallader Evans, Oliver Evans (of Oliver); John Lampley, Elizabeth Lampley, Eliza W. Evans, Rachel Evans, Leah Evans, Thomas Evans, Evan Evans, Jesse Evans, Oliver Evans (of Joseph); Abner Evans, George Evans, Joseph Evans, Joseph Ball, William Brackin, Adeline Brackin, Elizabeth Brackin, Margaret Brackin, and Minnie Johnson, or if either or all of them be dead, then the unknown heirs and devisees of any or all of the above-named defendants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in November and three times weekly in December, 1905, prior to said return day, good cause having been shown by the bill and affidavit filed herein, to the satisfaction of the court, that further or longer publication is unnecessary. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] nov. 10; dec. 1, 8, 15

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Tillotson E. Brown et al. v. Charles W. Brown et al.
In Equity, No. 25,580.

Upon consideration of the report filed herein of Benjamin S. Minor and T. Percy Myers, trustees, showing that they have sold at public auction the south 20 feet front of lot numbered 8 in square 417, improved by premises No. 1811 Eighth street N. W., to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $1,425, and sublot numbered 22 in square 417 to Tillotson E. Brown for the sum of $969, it is, this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, by the court, ordered that the said sales be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 22d day of December, 1905. Provided that this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter before said last mentioned date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 47-3t

---

William D. Hoover, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, which was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Helen Morse Janin, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. THE NATIONAL SAFE DEPOSIT, SAVINGS & TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, by George Howard, Treasurer; by William D. Hoover, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,500. Administration.
[Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Richard A. Curtin, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of William Santry, also known as William Sauntry, Deceased.
No. 13,273. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Annie Collins, it is ordered this 20th day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Ellen O'Brien, Jeremiah Driscoll, Patrick Santry, Michael Santry, Jeremiah Santry, Annie Santry, Annie Rawlette, Katie Carpenter, Margaret Carpenter, John Carpenter, Joseph Carpenter, May Carpenter, and Lily Carpenter, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court.
[Seal.] 47-3t

W. L. Pollard and M. N. Richardson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Soloman H. Jones et al. v. Andrew J. Miller et al.
No. 25,108. Equity Docket No. —.

The object of this suit is to remove cloud upon title lot 8, square 315, in city Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, it is, this —— day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Andrew J. Miller, Margaret V. Thompson, and Jessie McGlinchy, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in Washington Law Reporter and Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.
[Seal] 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. W. Clagett, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding an Equity Court.
Arthur Browning et al, Complainants, v. Sue E. Browning et al. Equity No. 23,912.

Upon consideration of the petition of Charles W. Clagett and D. W. Baker, trustees, filed herein on the 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, stating that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, under the original decree filed in this cause on the 26th day of May, 1903, is desirous of purchasing lots sixty-eight (68), sixty-nine (69), and seventy (70) in Frank T. Browning's subdivision of lots in square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367) as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in book 15, page 134, and lot numbered fifty-four (54) in the heirs of John Davidson's subdivision of square numbered three hundred and sixty-seven (367), as per plat recorded in liber N. K., folios 102 and 103, of the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, for the sum of twenty-two thousand five hundred ($22,500.00) dollars cash, free and clear of all incumbrances, provided that one-third (⅓) of the net proceeds of sale is set aside to Percival M. Brown, as trustee for Sue E. Browning, as required by said original decree, dated the 26th day of May, 1903, passed in the above entitled cause, it is this 23d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered, that Percival M. Brown, trustee for Sue E. Browning, be and he is hereby authorized and directed to purchase the real estate hereinabove described upon the terms above set out. It is further ordered: That Charles W. Clagett, D. W. Baker, and Percival M. Brown, trustees for sale herein, be and they are authorized and directed to accept said offer to purchase said real estate, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 18th day of December, 1905. Provided that notice of said sale and this decree be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three weeks prior to the said 18th day of December, 1905. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.
[Seal.] 47-3t

Ernest L. Schmidt, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.
Estate of Richard W. Ryan, Deceased.
No. 13,263. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for letters of administration on said estate, by Edward B. Stumph, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of Richard W. Ryan (deceased), and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Tuesday, the 26th day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned—the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court.
[Seal] 47-3t

Jos. H. Stewart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Special Term in Probate Court.
In re Estate of Milly Cook, Deceased.
No. 12,477.

This cause coming on to be heard upon the supplemental petition of the executor filed herein, and the same having been considered by the court, it is, this 22d day of November, 1905, by the court, ordered that said Frank Rollins, the alleged heir of Milly Cook, deceased, show cause on or before the 22d day of December, 1905, why the last will and testament of said deceased should not be admitted to probate and record. Provided that this order be published once a week in The Washington Law Reporter and The Record, a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., for three successive weeks before said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills.
[Seal] 47-3t

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ulrich Banf, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. AMELIA E. ZIMMERMAN, 628 Q st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,290. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In re Estate of Elizabeth McLaughlin, also known as Elizabeth A. McLaughlin.
No. 10,117. Adm. Docket, 28.

On consideration of the petition of Georgia Anne O'Neill, executrix, it is by the court, this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the sale of lot twenty-one in Webb and Bradley, trustees' subdivision of square five hundred and twenty-eight (528) as per plat recorded in Liber B, folio 65, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, made by said executrix to Jeremiah Murphy, at and for the sum of $6,500, cash, subject to the payment to James F. Shea, of a broker's commission of three per cent (3%) on said amount, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 23d day of December, 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 47-3t

Harry G. Kimball, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Alice M. Peck, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Appelona Whitehair, Deceased, et al., Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,782.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to lot numbered twenty (20) in Babcock's subdivision of original lots eight (8), nine (9), and ten (10) in square one hundred and three (103) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Harry G. Kimball, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Appelona Whitehair, deceased, and the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Justinian Mayberry, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. [Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. nov 10-17, dec 8-15, jan 12-19

Roach & Watkins, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In re the Estate of Rose Bray, Deceased.
No. 13,275.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Margaret Watkins, the executrix named in said will, it is ordered this 22d day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and is hereby given to James Boyle, Laurence Boyle, Rose Ellen Lunny, John Angier, William Bray, Richard Whitehead, Mary B. Clancy, Ann B. Smith, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Friday, the 22d day of December, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 47-3t

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding Probate Court.

Estate of Alonzo J. Eaton, Deceased.
No. 13,248. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, or for letters of administration on said estate, by Alonzo J. Eaton, it is ordered this 21st day of November, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Bernard L. Eaton, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 4th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 47-3t

Carlisle & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of Pennsylvania, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Alexander Campbell, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 20th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 20th day of November, 1905. JAS. J. CAMPBELL, Room 712, Carnegie Bldg., Pittsburg, Pa. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,277. Admn. [Seal.] 47-3t

Arthur Peter, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Frederick L. Collins, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. KATHARINE V. COLLINS, No. 1633 31th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,259. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. Linkins, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Charles J. B. Schutz, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 17th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 17th day of November, 1905. JOHN C. SCHUTZ, 1450 Howard ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,274. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Chas. W. Darr, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Catherine Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of November, 1905. PETER A. DRURY, 1432 Binney st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,266. Administration. [Seal.] 47-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

FOURTH INSERTION.

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Elizabeth Sutton and William H. Fearson v. The Unknown Heirs, Devisees, and Alienees of George Mason and Others. No. 25,700. Equity Docket No 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainants' title in fee simple, by adverse possession, in and to the north 20 ft. front on 19th st. by the full depth thereof, of original lot 12, in sq. 106, in Washington, D. C., improved by premises No. 913, 19th st. N. W. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of George Mason, of William Mason, of A. E. Grimes, and of Elizabeth Hooe, all deceased. On motion of the complainants, by W. Spencer Armstrong, their solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in the Washington Law Reporter and in the Washington Times. By the court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal.]

nov 3-10; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

FIFTH INSERTION.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. Alexander B. Hagner, Complainant, v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al., Defendants. No. 25,588, Eq. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainant's title to parts of lots 9 and 13, square 141, Washington, D. C., beginning for said part of lot 13 at a point in the south line of north H street, distant 25 feet 3½ inches west from the northeast corner of lot 13, running thence west on said south line of H street 40 feet 3½ inches; thence south 133 feet; thence east 65 feet 7 inches; thence north 50 feet; thence west 25 feet 3½ inches; thence north 133 feet to the place of beginning. And beginning for said part of lot 9 at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence south 51 feet 6 inches; thence west 20 feet; thence north 51 feet 6 inches; thence east 20 feet, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainant, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Samuel Westcott, Wilkin Westcott, Nathan Westcott, Mary Westcott, Katherine Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following-named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innes Clark, —— Brown, —— Ives, (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing, (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three months, once a week for three successive weeks, during the month following the publication of this order, and twice a month for each of the two succeeding months, in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov 10-17-24; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Legal Notices.

W. Spencer Armstrong, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. D. H. Roland Drury v. Minnie Fuller and Others. No. 25,650 Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to establish complainant's title in fee simple by adverse possession in and to lot 17, in Emily Fuller's subdivision of lots in square 60, in Washington, D. C., as said subdivision is recorded in the surveyor's office in Book H. D. C., page 40. The defendants to this suit are Minnie Fuller (if living), and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Minnie Fuller (if deceased), of Andrew Scholfield, of Robert Leckie, of Ruth Fuller, of Calhoun Clark, and of Sarah F. Fitzgerald. On motion of complainant, by W. Spencer Armstrong, his solicitor, it is this 1st day of November, 1905, ordered that said defendant Minnie Fuller cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; and that the other defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three successive weeks during the first month, and thereafter twice a month for two months, in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

nov 3-10-17; dec 1-8; jan 5-12

SEVENTH INSERTION.

John B. Larner, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding an Equity Court. Joseph Taber Johnson v. the Unknown Heirs, Alienees, or Devisees of Ann McWilliams et al., Defendants. Equity, No. 25,298.

The object of this suit is to perfect the complainant's title to part of original lot numbered twenty-seven (27), in square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and known and described as follows: Beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot twenty-seven (27) and running thence south with the dividing line between original lots twenty-seven (27) and twenty-eight (28) forty (40) feet, thence west twenty-six (26) feet, thence south twenty (20) feet, thence west twenty (20) feet, thence north sixty (60) feet, and thence east forty-six (46) feet to the place of beginning, and original lot numbered twenty-eight (28) in said square numbered one hundred and twenty-six (126), in the said city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant's solicitor it is this 26th day of September, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Ann McWilliams, Elizabeth Tabbs, Clinton McWilliams, and Albert McWilliams; the unknown children of Hariot Stone, Benjamin Tabbs, Moses Tabbs, and Ann McWilliams, devisees of Barton Tabbs, deceased; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Joseph Stone and Alexander McWilliams, trustees under the last will and testament of Barton Tabbs; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of Edward Gannon and Andrew Gannon; the unknown heirs, alienees, or devisees of William King, George French, trustee, Adam King, trustee, Stuart Williams, and Charles A. Beatty, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three (3) months from the first publication of this order. And it is further ordered that the defendants, Ann Smith, Henry George Morris, Henry W. Skerry, M. D., Gerome George Skerry, infant, Flora Deeley Morris, William George Morris, infant, Mary Joanna Morris, Anna Virginia Fountain and William I. Fountain, her husband, Louisa Frances Louitz and John B. Louitz, her husband, Michael Gannon, Mary Eleanor Shaw, Margaret Drury, Bartholomew Gannon, Elizabeth S. Smith, Isabel Smith, Ann Lane Smith, Virginia P. Smith, Marion B. Smith, Sarah H. Smith, Ella Smith, children, and Mary A. Smith, widow of Thomas Smith, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth (40) day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published for three (3) months once a week for three (3) successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order and twice a month for the two (2) succeeding months in The Washington Law Reporter. HARRY M. CLABAUGH, Chief Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk.

[Seal]

sept 29; oct 6-13; nov 3-10; dec 1-8, 1905

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 50

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - DECEMBER 15, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 785
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
James T. Bradford, appellant, v. National Benefit Association, appellee 786
Computing Scale Company of America, appellant, v. The Automatic Scale Company, appellee 789
Legal Notices 795

Liability of Shopkeeper for Loss of Garment.

In Wornser v. Browning, King & Co., decided by the appellate division of the Supreme Court of New York, and reported in the New York Law Journal, it was held that a shopkeeper is under a duty to exercise ordinary care over a garment removed while a customer is selecting and trying on a new garment. It appeared that plaintiff went to defendant's store to purchase a vest, and at the suggestion of the clerk removed the vest he was wearing, in the pocket of which was his watch, and placed it on a pile of clothing while trying on another. When, after being waited on, he was ready to put on his vest again, it could not be found. In holding the defendant liable the court said that such liability was not limited to the value of the vest, but extended also to its contents. It was also held that the court may take judicial notice of the fact that men ordinarily during business hours wear their watches in their vests.

Accident Insurance—Proximate Cause.

In Ætna Life Insurance Company v. Fitzgerald, decided by the Supreme Court of Indiana (75 N. E. 262), the action was upon a policy of accident insurance which, by its terms, insured "against loss of business time . . . resulting from bodily injuries . . . through external, violent, and accidental means." It was held that the policy covered a loss of business time by disease proximately caused by a bodily injury occurring through external, violent, and accidental causes. It appeared that plaintiff placed his hand on edge, with the thumb next to his head, in order to rest easier at night, and while asleep in such position moved so that his hand, with his head thereon as before, rested on the edge of the bed rail, in which posture he continued for several hours, when he awoke, finding his hand wholly numb, with a black mark thereon where it rested on the rail. Inflammation of the periosteum of the metacarpal bones resulted, necessitating a surgical operation and causing a protracted illness. It was held that, in the absence of evidence that the inflammation was due to any other cause than the long-continued force exerted by the weight of plaintiff's head on his hand, such cause was an efficient proximate cause of the injury, within an accident policy insuring against loss of business time from bodily injuries effected through external, violent, and accidental means.

MR. SAMUEL M. YEATMAN, for many years the secretary of the Georgetown University School of Law, died at his residence in this city on Wednesday morning, December 13, 1905. Mr. Yeatman was a member of the Bar of the District, though not actively engaged in practice, being constantly employed in responsible positions in the Government service. His long and acceptable service as secretary of the Law School gave him a wide acquaintance with the members of our courts and the bar, and they entertained for him a most cordial regard. Mr. Yeatman was a man of high character and fine ability, and a wide circle of friends mourn his untimely death.

THE Court of Appeals of the District has affirmed the judgment of the trial court in the case of Hamilton v. United States. The appellant was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death by hanging, but execution of the sentence was stayed pending the appeal.

Carriers—Care Required in Operating Passenger Elevator.—Persons operating elevators in stores are common carriers of passengers and bound to exercise the highest practicable care to prevent injuries to them. Hensler v. Stix, (Mo.), 88 S. W. Rep. 108.

Broker—Nondelivery of Stock.—A broker, failing to deliver stock purchased for a client, held liable for the money paid by client on account to apply on the purchase price. Hoogewerff v. Flack (Md.), 61 Atl. Rep. 184.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

OCTOBER TERM, 1905.

JAMES T. BRADFORD, APPELLANT,

v.

NATIONAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION, APPELLEE.

JOINT STOCK COMPANY; LIABILITY OF MEMBERS AS PARTNERS; INSOLVENCY; WITHDRAWAL OF MEMBER; EVIDENCE; INSTRUCTIONS; REMARKS OF COUNSEL.

1. In an action against the appellant and others as shareholders in an unincorporated joint stock company conducting a savings bank, and which had become insolvent, to recover the amount of deposits made by the plaintiff, it appeared that, by the articles of agreement, any member might withdraw his funds by giving 30 days' notice, or might transfer his stock to another member of the company without the consent of the directors. Prior to the deposit by plaintiff the appellant sent a letter to the directors notifying them that he had sold his shares to another member and directing the transfer of the same, with which direction the directors, for some reason, refused to comply. The evidence for the plaintiff tended to show that, subsequent to the writing of such letter, and covering the time within which plaintiff's deposits were made, appellant had been elected a director of the bank, had attended meetings of the board, and had participated in its business; that he had also given proxies to other members to represent him at meetings of stockholders. It also appeared that the bank had circulated leaflets in which his name was given as one of the directors, and the circumstances indicated that he had knowledge of such leaflets and their contents. Held, that upon this evidence, the trial court properly charged the jury that if, after writing the letter, the directors refused to transfer the stock, and appellant thereafter acted as director, and in person or by proxy participated in stockholders' meetings, then he was not relieved from liability.
2. Instructions requested on behalf of appellant to the effect that the sale of his shares, with notice thereof to the bank, relieved him from liability as a partner, and that the giving of proxies to members of the company to represent him in stockholders' meetings did not restore him to membership, properly denied.
3. Remarks of counsel for plaintiff, in his argument to the jury, while unjust to appellant, held not so prejudicial as to deprive him of a fair trial.

No. 1561. Decided December 5, 1905.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 45,851, entered upon the verdict of a jury in an action against defendant, as a member of an unincorporated joint stock company conducting a savings bank, to recover the amount of a deposit. Affirmed.

Mr. John Ridout for the appellant.

Mr. A. A. Birney for the appellee.

Mr. Justice MCCOMAS delivered the opinion of the Court:

The National Benefit Association, the appellee, as a depositor with the Capital Savings Bank, which failed November 24, 1902, brought suit to recover the unpaid deposits against James T. Bradford, appellant, and others, as partners, doing business under the name of the Capital Savings Bank.

The appellee claimed that when it became a depositor the appellant was a stockholder and therefore a partner in the bank, which was not incorporated. The appellee introduced evidence tending to prove that the appellant, among others, signed articles of agreement which provided, among other things, that the members signing associated themselves together to carry on a banking business under the firm name of the Capital Savings Bank, from October 1, 1888, to until October 1, 1908, the capital stock being $50,000 in shares of $100 each.

Section 12 of the agreement provides that any member of the company may withdraw his funds by giving thirty days' notice, the company reserving the right to postpone payment ninety days after such notice of withdrawal.

Section 16 provides that no member shall transfer his stock or interest in the company to any person other than a member of the company without the consent of the board of directors.

The appellee became a depositor August 5, 1899, and it alleges that a large balance stood to its credit when the bank closed its doors.

The appellant, who was a stockholder, wrote and mailed the following letter, one Williams named therein being also a stockholder:

BALTIMORE, March 13, 1897.

TO THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE CAPITAL SAVINGS BANK, 609 F st. N. W., Washington, D. C.

I hereby give notice of my withdrawal as per constitution, as a stockholder in said institution, and direct that you transfer the stock standing in my name to Howard H. Williams, Washington, D. C., and oblige,

Yours truly,

JAMES T. BRADFORD,
N. W. corner Center and St. Paul sts.

The shares of stock being transferable only on the books of the company, the appellant delivered the shares to the secretary for transfer, and thereafter received evasive replies from the president and treasurer when he inquired why the stock had not been transferred. The appellant, himself a depositor, during twelve years had $13,000 on deposit when the bank closed its doors. He testified that he understood he had been elected a director, but he never attended a meeting and never consented to act as such. Terrell, the secretary, in 1898, told appellant the board refused to act on his withdrawal; in April, 1902, Terrell saw appellant at a meeting of directors. On October 9, 1899, appellant gave McCary, the cashier, a written proxy to represent appellant at a regular stockholders' meeting. Minutes of a meeting of directors held February 16, 1900, identified by Terrell, secretary, who kept them, recited the presence of appellant, who made remarks concerning a reorganization. At stockholders' meetings on December 6, 1902, appellant's shares were represented by McKinlay, his proxy; appellant's certificates were still in the secretary's possession, and not entered as transferred because the board had refused to so order. Several times appellant protested against such refusal. Williams, who purchased appellant's shares and made a payment thereon, did not complete the negotiation because of the refusal of the directors to make such transfer. Certain leaflets containing the appellant's name as director were in evidence, and Stewart, a depositor, who was anxious, testified that about April, 1902, at the bank, appellant looked over one of these, and remarked that four or five men thereon were worth sufficient to pay all the bank's liabilities. Such was the substance of the testimony on both sides. Upon this conflicting evidence, under the court's instruction, the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff. The appellant, Bradford, was allowed a severance upon his appeal, and the case comes here upon his bill of exceptions.

Digitized by Google

We find no error in the rulings of the learned court below in admitting the evidence objected to. There are seven assignments of error of the court below in admitting testimony.

The testimony on the appellant's behalf tended to show that he had withdrawn from the company and had sold his stock in 1897, that he had terminated his membership and was not liable as a partner to subsequent depositors. On the appellee's part the court admitted subsequent acts and declarations of the appellant, tending to show that he remained a stockholder and acquiesced in his election as a director of the Capital Savings Bank.

Thus the appellee sought to show that on October 9, 1899, the appellant gave McCary, the bank's cashier, his proxy to represent him at a meeting of stockholders; Terrell, secretary of the bank, who also acted as secretary of the meeting of stockholders and directors, identified the minutes in his own handwriting and testified that the minutes record the presence and participation of the appellee on February 6, 1900, and on April 9, 1902, in meetings of the bank's directors, and that he was represented by McKinlay at two stockholders' meetings in December, 1902; that certain printed leaflets bearing the appellant's name thereon as one of the directors were circulated by the bank; that circumstances in evidence indicated that appellant had knowledge of such leaflets and of their contents; that the certificates for the forty shares of stock claimed by appellee to have been sold were in Terrell's custody, some signed by appellee for transfer on the book and some unsigned. All such circumstances, minutes, and other writings were clearly admissible to prove the appellant's participation in the affairs of the bank, as stockholder or director, or both, after the time the appellant claimed to have withdrawn, and certain of these tended to show that the appellant knew and acquiesced in the conduct of the bank's officers in printing his name as a director. Such testimony tended to show how the bank's officers and directors, after the appellant's letter of withdrawal, treated the appellant, and how far he assented to the refusal to transfer his stock, and whether, in fact, he thereafter acted as a director and remained a stockholder. The learned court did not err in admitting such evidence, nor, as claimed in the eighth assignment of errors, did the court err in refusing to permit McKinlay, the proxy of appellant, to testify to appellant's intention in giving him such proxy.

It appears by the record that appellant, in proffering McKinlay to show appellant's intent in being present after April, 1897, at meetings of directors and stockholders, admitted the presence of the appellant at such meetings.

A joint stock company is "a partnership whereof the capital is divided or agreed to be divided into shares, and so as to be transferable without the express consent of all the copartners." 1 Parsons on Contracts, star page 144. Hedge and Horn's Appeal, 63 Pa. St. 273. The articles of the Capital Savings Bank provided for such transfer, and also provided a method for withdrawal from the company.

The court granted the three prayers of the appellee.

First. The jury was instructed that if the appellant, a stockholder, sent the letter of March 13, 1897, and delivered his certificates of stock, that the directors refused to transfer his stock as he requested, and that appellant thereafter acted as director and stockholder, and in person or by his proxy voted at stockholders' meetings, the appellant is not relieved of liability.

Second. The jury was instructed that if during the period when the appellee was making deposits in the bank the appellant acted as a director of the bank, and was to his knowledge held out to the public as such, the appellee should recover.

Third. The jury was instructed that if the letter of March 13, 1897, was sent to the bank officials, but the shares were never transferred, and the appellant continued to act as owner of the shares and to vote in person or by proxy as owner thereof at stockholders' meetings, the jury could infer that the appellant had abandoned his intention to transfer the shares and waive his notice of withdrawal and remain liable as a partner.

These propositions correctly state the law applicable to the evidence from the appellee's standpoint, and there was no error in granting the appellee's prayers containing them.

Respecting the second instruction, it is to be noted that there was evidence tending to show that the appellant knew his name was printed on leaflets of the bank among its directors. This, with other circumstances tending to show that he was a director, justified the court in submitting to the jury to findwhether the appellant acted as a director, and was to his knowledge held out to the public as such by the bank during the period mentioned. Indeed, if they found that the appellant acted as a director it was not necessary to find the latter fact.

We observe, however, these instructions and the learned court's charge to the jury omit a material element, the indebtedness of the Capital Savings Bank to the appellee. This fact was put in issue by the pleadings. It is so manifest from the record that this material fact was not disputed, but was conceded at the trial, that the omission affords no ground for reversal in this instance.

We also think the clause "there being no evidence of any change in the relations of said Bradford to the bank after such acts as director and shareholder," at the conclusion of the appellee's second instruction, as we have before recited it, is objectionable. It makes the court assume the fact instead of leaving it to the jury to find the fact that there was no evidence of any change in Bradford's relations to the bank after such acts. The court responds to the law, the jury to the facts. In this case, however, there appears to have been no such evidence. We are satisfied the fact assumed did not influence the verdict.

Digitized by Google

We find no error in the refusal of the court to grant the appellant's prayers.

The first asked the court to say, as matter of law, that thirty days after the receipt of appellant's letter of withdrawal, dated March 13, 1897, his liability as partner ceased.

The second coupled with this letter the sale or attempted sale of his stock to Williams, with notice to the bank thereof, and asked the court to say as matter of law that these two circumstances taken together put an end to the appellant's liability.

The third, assuming said letter and the sale to Williams to have put an end to appellant's liability, ask the court to say, as matter of law, that appellant's proxy to McCary did not restore the appellant to membership in the savings bank. This instruction, in addition to assuming the correctness of the erroneous propositions of the first and second instructions, segregated testimony as to one act of the appellant from the testimony as to other acts and declarations of appellant tending to show that the appellant had not ceased to be a member, and asked the court to say that this single act did not restore the appellant to such membership.

The fourth asks the instruction that if the jury find the appellant sent the proxy dated October 9, 1899, unless the jury further find the appellant did so with intent to resume membership and find that the sale to Williams (if made) was rescinded, and the appellee, with notice of these facts, made further deposits upon the faith of the appellant's membership, the appellee could recover only for such further deposits.

The fifth, saying that if the stock in the appellant's name was not really his, he would not be liable, is not predicated of the evidence in this case.

The learned court below committed no error in rejecting the five instructions asked by the appellant.

The appellant was a stockholder and liable as a partner in this bank to its depositors under conditions. He could have withdrawn by giving notice and by conforming to section 12, already quoted. Thus he would have terminated his membership and liability. He could have obtained, by following section 16, the same relief from liability by transfer of his stock to another member of this joint stock company. It was not necessary for appellant to ask the approval of the bank to his transfer of his stock to Williams, another member. The appellee's letter of March 13, 1897, could not be a withdrawal, however, under section 12, for that section contemplates a settlement to be made with him, and after ninety days the payment of what was due him, and of course involves the surrender of his certificates of stock. The letter was, therefore, a direction to transfer his stock, under section 16, to Williams, a fellow member, who appears by the record to have agreed to purchase the same. The transfer was never made on the books of the company. The appellant did not persist, and his certificate, as the result of the evasion or refusal of the officials of the bank, remained in the hands of Terrell, the secretary. It does not appear that Williams made efforts to complete the sale and procure the transfer of appellant's shares.

Manifestly the court could not say, as matter of law respecting such inchoate transactions, that what was done by the appellant or on his behalf had terminated his membership and his liability as a partner in the banking business. If the relation of the appellant to the joint stock company because of the letter of March 13, 1897, and the delivery of his certificate to the secretary be, for the purposes of this case, considered a doubtful and uncertain relation, if thereafter at intervals and until the bank closed its doors the appellant acted as a stockholder and as a director by attending the meetings of such, or otherwise suffered himself to be given out to the public as such, thereby he made himself liable as a member to this appellee, a depositor, commencing its deposits in August, 1899. 1 Parsons on Contracts, star page 145.

We have examined the charge of the court below and believe there was enough therein to remind the jury of the material elements of the appellant's defense to prevent the reversal of the judgment for want of it.

During the argument before the jury the appellee's counsel reflected upon the appellant, saying that he knew the bank was in failing circumstances, and yet allowed deposits to be made up to a few days before its doors were closed; "in many States of this Union such conduct would land him in the penitentiary, as it ought to do here." This statement was not warranted by the testimony in the case. It is not disputed that the appellant had lived for many years in Baltimore, and that when the bank failed the appellant was a depositor to the extent of $13,000, and as such suffered a loss greater than that of the appellee.

The controversy in this case itself was whether or not the appellant was a director or even a stockholder. It nowhere appears that the appellant doing business in Baltimore was active in managing the affairs of the Capital Savings Bank. With all the testimony before them, we consider the ardor of advocacy in this instance led appellee's counsel to make a statement unjust to the appellant, yet not so prejudicial as to deprive the appellant of a fair trial.

The Supreme Court said in Dunlop v. U. S., 65 U. S. 498: "If every remark made by counsel outside of the testimony were ground for a reversal, comparatively few verdicts would stand, since in the ardor of advocacy and in the excitement of trial, even the most experienced counsel are occasionally carried away by this temptation."

The court below might have interfered with propriety and required counsel to withdraw the remark, but we would not be justified in reversing the judgment on account of this incident.

The judgment in this case will be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Master and Servant—Engineer's Right to Assume Track in Good Condition.—A railroad engineer has a right to assume that the track is in good condition, unless he has actual knowledge to the contrary.—Southern Ry. Co. v. Stittasen, Ind., 74 N. E. Rep. 898.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

COMPUTING SCALE COMPANY OF AMERICA, APPELLANT,
v.
THE AUTOMATIC SCALE COMPANY, APPELLEE.

No. 1572. Decided November 22, 1905.

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in equity, No. 23,430, dismissing a bill to enjoin the alleged infringement of a patent. Affirmed.

Messrs. Church & Church for the appellant.

Mr. E. Hilton Jackson and Mr. H. P. Doolittle for the appellee.

Mr. Justice DUELL delivered the opinion of the Court:

This suit was brought for the alleged infringement of letters patent No. 700,919, issued May 27, 1902, to the appellant, as assignee of Austin B. Hayden, for alleged improvements in computing scales. The invention relates particularly to computing scales of the spring ballance type, and its main object, as stated, is to increase the computing capacity of scales of this type. It may be said that a computing scale is a device which enables the price of the article weighed thereon to be at once read upon the scales, thus avoiding the necessity of mathematical calculation upon the part of the operator.

The art in question was quite fully developed at the time when Hayden filed the application upon which the patent in suit issued. The record discloses one patent issued some fifty years ago, and, it may be, as urged, that its device was not a commercial success, although the record is silent as to this. Like many other inventions, it very likely was born out of due season, and long before the demands of trade led to a commercial demand for computing scales. Nevertheless, the patent and others set forth in the record cannot be overlooked in considering the state of the art. Other patents were issued at later dates, disclosing various improvements, and Hayden's invention is, therefore, but one of many improvements contributed by one of many inventors. While his application was pending it appears from an examination of the record that other inventors were at work in this art, and improvements similar to those set forth in the Hayden patent were disclosed in other applications for patents. In the absence of testimony the fair inference to be drawn from this fact is that the desirability for such improvements having become known, a solution of the problems occurred to many minds, and when that solution is shown to be the same, that no great exercise of inventive talent was called into play.

Hayden, as the record discloses, is not a pioneer in the art, but as an improver he is entitled to such recognition as his contribution to the art warrants, and his assignees to protection to the same extent, subject, however, to such limitations, if any, as either of them permitted to be imposed upon the grant as disclosed by the file wrapper and contents of the application upon which the patent issued. No such limitations, nor any abandonment of any part of the invention, is to be presumed, but must be shown by clear and convincing proof. While the courts are vigilant to protect the public, which is interested in having even a lawfully patented invention kept within legal bounds, they should be equally zealous to find the contribution which the inventor has made to the art to which his invention relates and to protect him to the full extent of that contribution; but in so doing they must give due weight to any estoppel which he has created by reason of anything done by him, or suffered to be done, either prior or subsequent to the issue of his patent, which prevents him from claiming his invention in its entirety.

To the patent we turn for a description; to the file wrapper and contents of the application, and to the prior art, for the limitations to be imposed upon the claimed invention.

Mr. Brown, appellant's expert, has fairly and clearly set forth the general construction and operation of the device of Hayden's patent. He says:

"The two principal parts of the mechanism are as follows: 1st, a vertically arranged, non-rotating frame, which comprises and includes a vertical cylindrical casing, which encloses, conceals, and protects the major portions of the operating portions of the scale, and upon which are marked the price indications, which indicate the price per pound at which the articles weighed are to be sold. As clearly shown in the drawings, this external casing or frame is provided with a vertically disposed sight opening, through which the coacting mechanism is observable, and along one vertical edge of this sight opening are arranged the numerals indicating the price per pound, these numerals in the illustrated instance running consecutively from 2 to 30.

"The second of these principal parts is a second cylinder, located within the casing, this cylinder constituting a computing cylinder or chart drum, upon which are placed indications indicating the weight in pounds of the article weighed, and also having other indications indicating the price of an article weighed, corresponding to the weight and to the price per pound. This chart drum or computing cylinder extended vertically within the external casing, and it is arranged to rotate on a vertical axis within the external casing. This casing is appropriately connected to the spring balancing mechanism and to the scale pan, so that when the spring balancing mechanism moves up and down on the placing or removing of a load on the scale pan, the chart drum will be rotated in one direction or the other within the external casing or frame.

. . . . . .

"As shown in figure 2 of the drawings, the weight and value-indicating figures are placed in horizontal rows on the external surface or periphery of the rotatable chart drum of the computing cylinder, the weight indications being shown in a horizontal row at the bottom, and the price indications in horizontal rows above, there being as many of these horizontal rows of price-indicating figures as there are 'prices per pound' indicating figures on the fixed external casing. These value-indicating figures on the chart drum are computed at different rates, corresponding to the 'price per pound' figures on the external casing. As indicated in figure 2 of the drawing of the patent, there is supposed to be a weight on the scale pan of pounds, this weight being indicated on the weight scale, and it will be seen that in such instance the various value indications on the chart drum opposite the 'price per pound' indications on the fixed casing are in each illustrated instance five times as great as the corresponding 'price per pound' indications. The drawings illustrate only a portion of the indicating figures on the chart drum, but it will be understood in practice that this drum will be entirely covered on its external surface with figures corresponding to the weights multiplied by the figures indicating 'price per pound' on the non-rotatable external casing. Accordingly, whenever the interior chart drum is turned a distance corresponding to the load placed on the scale pan, the value of the load can be read at once opposite the figures on the external casing, which correspond to the price per pound of the article weighed.

Digitized by Google

"The various price indications on the chart drum are visible through the sight opening in the external casing.

"The mechanism whereby the chart drum is rotated a distance corresponding to the weight of the load plan is as follows: The balancing mechanism is a spring balance comprising two springs, clearly shown in figure 3 of the drawing, which are suspended from a suitable portion of the non-rotating frame of the scale. To the lower ends of these springs is attached a cross-bar, in the middle of which depends a rod indicated by the letter E, this cross-bar and rod constituting the runner of the scale. The scale pan is suspended from the lower end of this rod as illustrated in figure 1. When a load is placed on the scale pan the vertical runner moves vertically downward, distending the spring to an extent proportional to the weight of the load. In order to indicate the weight this vertical movement of the spring-supported runner is converted or translated into a rotary movement of the chart drum by suitable intervening mechanism. In the specific embodiment of the invention, as illustrated in the drawings, this intervening mechanism consists of a spiral groove of high pitch on the vertical rod E and two rollers journaled in suitable bearings carried by the rotatable chart drum, the bearing of one of these rollers being spring pressed, so that the rollers are held in yielding contact with the spiral groove on the rod. Consequently, as the rod moves vertically, the spiral groove thereof causes the chart drum or computing cylinder to rotate on its vertical axis.

"Accordingly, the mechanism is such that the vertical movement of the runner is translated into rotary movement of the chart drum, and the chart drum is rotated to an extent proportional to the vertical movement of the runner."

The specification of the patent ends with eleven claims, of which one, two, six, seven, and eight are alleged to be infringed. It will, however, be necessary to only consider claims one and six. Claim two differs from claim one, barring certain immaterial variations in phraseology, in that it limits the spring-supported, load-bearing, and cylinder-revolving rod to one that is "non-rotably" suspended from the casing. Claims seven and eight admittedly do not differ patentably from claim six, these three claims stating in varying phraseology the same invention—one of the many examples of word painting too often found in letters patent.

Claims one and six are as follows:

"1. In a spring-balance computing scale, the combination of a suitably supported vertical non-rotatable casing provided with a price index, a vertical rotatable computing cylinder journaled in said casing, provided with cost computations, a spring supported load bearing and cylinder revolving rod suspended from said casing, and connecting means between rod and computing cylinder, whereby, by longitudional movement of the rod, rotary movement is imparted to said cylinder, substantially as and for the purpose set forth.

"6. In a spring balance, the combination of a non-rotating frame providing an external casing, and having means for supporting it from above weighing springs secured at their upper ends to rigid parts of said frame, a vertically movable runner which is suspended from the lower ends of said springs and is provided with depending means to support the load, a chart drum rotatably mounted within said casing on a vertical axis and having external horizontal rows of value-indicating figures computed at different rates, said casing having a sight opening through which portions of said value-indicating rows may be seen, and corresponding rate-indicating figures on the outer face of said frame adjacent to the value-indicating rows on the chart drum, and mechanism for translating the vertical movements of the runner into the rotary movements of the chart drum."

The defenses are the ordinary ones of anticipation, non-patentability, non-infringement, and prior invention by one Christopher. While it will not be necessary to consider any but those of non-infringement and absence of patentable invention, we have, however, examined the evidence relating to the alleged priority of invention by Christopher, and from such examination we do not find sufficient to warrant a finding that Christopher is shown to be a prior inventor of the subject-matter set forth in the claims in suit. For a correct determination of the questions of patentability and infringement the claims must be considered in the light of the prior art and of the proceedings in the Patent Office. If the claims are valid and can be taken at their face value they are clearly infringed.

The limitations arising out of the prior art, if any, will be found in the following patents: Phinney, No. 106,869, August 30, 1870; Beckwith, No. 12,249, January 16, 1855; Babcock, No. 421,805, February 18, 1890; Freeman, No. 431,456, July 1, 1890; and Smith, No. 545,616, September 3, 1895.

Phinney discloses a spring-balance computing scale comprising a suitably supported non-rotatable case having a price index, a rotatable computing cylinder journaled in said case provided with cost computations, a spring supported load bearing and cylinder revolving rod suspended from the case, and connecting means between the rod and computing cylinder, whereby a longitudinal movement of the rod rotary motion is imparted to the cylinder.

Digitized by Google

Comparing this device with the patented structure which is the subject of claims one and two, it is apparent that the main difference between the two, broadly considered, is that Hayden's cylinders are arranged vertically, while Phinney's are arranged horizontally. It is shown, however, that such arrangement of a cylinder of a cost computing scale was old long before any date that can be assigned to Hayden. Beckwith's patent No. 12,249, of January 16, 1855, discloses this. Invention cannot be predicated upon differently positioning the cylinders, and this we understand is not seriously controverted. Freeman, No. 431,456, is another example of a rotatable cylinder carrying the computations and mounted to move vertically.

The prior patents to Babcock, No. 421,805, and Smith, No. 545,616, disclose spring-balance computing scales, having suitably-supported horizontal stationary cylinders (or, as in the Babcock patent, an equivalent therefor), provided with price marks and rotatable chart drums operatively connected to the vertically movable load-supporting rod. In the light of these patents, and especially the Smith patent, we can discover little room for broad claims for a combination of elements, such as set forth in the claims in controversy. While Smith's construction differs from that of the patent in suit in the relative arrangement of the casing and cylinder, in other respects they differ patentably only in details of construction. There being no invention, in view of the prior art, in substituting for the horizontal case and cylinder of the Smith patent the old vertical arrangement of those parts, the first and second claims of the patent in suit must, if they are to be held valid, be limited to the specific forms of the parts set forth in the claims. The line of demarcation between Hayden's patented structure and those of the prior art is, at the best, but slight. His device may be commercially better than the prior devices, but there is no evidence before us to show that this has been recognized by the commercial world, or that the patented device has supplanted the prior devices, or that it has gained any recognized position. The record is silent as to all these points.

It being the duty of the court, as stated, to find what contribution Hayden has made to the art, we turn to the specification to find what Hayden had actually contributed. We find that, broadly considered, the elements of the claims, referred to are old, and that they have been arranged in substantially the same manner and thereby have produced substantially the same result. We, however, find some specific forms of parts of the device that apparently are new, and therein lie the novelty of the device. The main novelty seems to reside in the construction of the spring-supporting, load-bearing, and cylinder-revolving rod, and the means by which the longitudinal movement of that rod produces the rotary movement of the cylinder. The specification states that the load-supporting and cylinder-actuating rod is provided with a spiral groove which moves between rollers centrally located on the inner surface of the bottom of the cylinder. It further states that, "It will be noted that in the construction shown, the rod E is non-rotatable, and this is the preferred construction. The spiral rod passing through the lower ends of the casing and serving, by means of its connection with the two cylinders, to rotate the computing-cylinder, is regarded as the essence of this feature, of the invention, however, regardless of the precise details of connection between cylinders and rod. The spiral of the rod E may be regarded as a motion-translating member, and the anti-friction rollers ff, engaging said spiral, may be regarded as an anti-friction member coacting with said spiral. It is necessary that one of said motion-translating members be supported by the spring of the scale to have a simple vertical movement, and that the other motion-translating member shall be connected directly to the computing cylinder to impart rotary motion thereto. Thus one of said motion-translating members moves with the computing cylinder about a vertical axis, while the other acts as a spring-supported runner which engages the cylinder carried or connected member and has its own vertical movement translated into a rotary movement."

We have not overlooked the statement that in the preferred construction the rod is non-rotatable, and that claim one is not limited in terms to a non-rotatable rod. Nor have we overlooked the fact that neither in claims one or two is there a limitation in terms to the specific construction of the rod, and to the specific means by which, in connection with the rod, movement is imparted to the cylinder. It is evident that Hayden thought that his invention was broader than in our opinion it proves to be, and so claimed it. Nevertheless, we can see no escape from the conclusion that claims one and two are devoid of patentable inventions unless limited to combinations, one element of which is a rod provided with a spiral adapted to engage with rollers coacting therewith. It may be that when so construed and limited claim two will not patentably differ from claim three, but it is unnecessary to pass upon that question at this time. If we are correct in limiting claims one and two to the specified form of the rod and the coacting means by which motion is imparted to the cylinder, then, admittedly, the defendant does not infringe, for its structure does not have the rod provided with a spiral, and consequently the means for producing rotary movement of the cylinder are different. It is admitted by appellant's counsel that the appellee is not shown to have used the specific form of translating device shown and described in the patent.

What we have said in reference to claims one and two applies equally to claims six, seven, and eight, for each of these have as an element mechanism for translating the vertical movement of the runner into the rotary movements of the chart-drum. This mechanism is the rod provided with spiral and the rollers journaled on the inner surface of the bottom of the cylinder. The defendant does not employ such mechanism, and its mechanism can not be held to be an equivalent. Claim six, however, in our opinion, can not be held valid in view of the proceedings in the Patent Office, as shown by the file wrapper and contents of the application upon which the patent issued. It appears that a claim was presented identically the same as this claim, save that it omitted the word "depending" before the phrase "means to support the load," or, in other words, was not limited to a structure where the means for supporting the load to be weighed was below the scales. The office held that the claim as presented was not patentably distinguishable from a prior patent, saying:

Digitized by Google

"Upon consideration of claim six, preparatory to the declaration of interference, it is found that the claim does not clearly and patentably distinguish from the scale shown in the patent to Herr, No. 651,801, June 12, 1900, price scales, and it is therefore necessary to reject the claim. It is believed, however, that the claim may be rendered allowable by inserting depending before 'means' in line 6."

This Herr patent is not in evidence, but that is immaterial, for, whether the examiner was right or wrong, the patentee having acquiesced in the ruling, neither he nor his assignee can be heard to question the correctness of the ruling. The courts have gone so far as to hold that even where the ground of an objection, made by the Patent Office and acquiesced in by the applicant, was later held by the Supreme Court not to be a valid one; that, nevertheless, the applicant thereafter is bound by it. Blades v. Rand, McNally & Co., 27 Fed. 93. Of course, it is not contended by appellant that the claim can be read as though the word "depending" had not been inserted, but as we understand it, the rule goes further than merely holding that the limitation can not be read out of the claim. It goes to the extent of holding that "the claim as allowed must be read and interpreted with reference to the rejected claim." Hubbell v. United States, 179 U. S. 77. A claim differing from claim six only in omitting the word "depending" having been rejected, the allowed claim must depend for vitality upon the fact that it involved invention in a computing scales to employ depending means for supporting the load to be weighed. Some means, of course, had to be employed for supporting the load, and the substitution of one old arrangement for another would scarcely involve or show invention. Depending means for supporting the load were old and most common in computing scales. Examples are to be found in the patents to Babcock, Beckwith, Smith, and others heretofore cited. The depending means for supporting the load to be weighed being old and their substitution in an old combination is insufficient to warrant a finding of patentable invention. The patentee having admitted that the claim as presented was met by the reference, and having, to avoid the reference, inserted a non-patentable limitation, his assignee, being bound by such action, can not escape the penalty.

Claims seven and eight, being but restatements in somewhat different phraseology of the same alleged invention as recited in claim six, are also devoid of patentable invention. Our conclusion is that the claims in suit are not infringed when limited, as they must be, by the prior art, and that claims six, seven, and eight are void for lack of patentable invention, as disclosed by the proceedings in the Patent Office and by the prior art.

It follows that the decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia was correct, and it will therefore be affirmed with costs. It is so ordered.

Affirmed.

Definition of "Papers Read in Evidence."

In Chicago & J. Electric R. Co. v. Spence, 72 Northeastern Reporter, 796, which was a personal injury case, an X-ray photograph was admitted in evidence, and the expert who made it testified that he had taken and developed the negative, and that it was an accurate and correct representation. Another X-ray expert, called by the opposition, expressed the opinion that the picture was of little or no value. The point was made that it was error to allow the jury to take the skiograph or X-ray picture with them when they retired to consider their verdict. The law in Illinois permits "papers read in evidence, other than depositions," to be carried by the jury into the jury room. The court holds that skiographs produced in evidence in a trial before a jury are "read" in evidence, within the definition of the word "read," as given by Webster, viz., to discover or understand by characters, marks, features, etc.; to gather the meaning of by inspection; to learn by observation.—American Lawyer.

Liability for False Imprisonment.

In Rush v. Buckley, 61 Atl. Rep. 774, the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine has rendered an important decision regarding liability for false imprisonment. The plaintiff, having been arrested under a warrant from an inferior court, for violating a municipal ordinance which was void because never published as required by law, sued the judge who issued the warrant, the officer who served it, and the person who made the complaint. The court holds that the person who made the complaint was not liable, because he took no part in making the arrest and did nothing more than merely to make the complaint before a magistrate having jurisdiction of the party and of the general subject-matter. The officer who made the arrest was also held not liable, because the warrant did not show on its face that the court issuing it, which had general jurisdiction over the subject-matter, did not have jurisdiction over the particular offense alleged, or that the facts stated in the complaint did not constitute an offense because of the failure to properly publish the ordinance. As to the judge who issued the warrant, the court holds that, although his court was one of inferior jurisdiction, yet, since it was invested with jurisdiction over the general subject-matter, his decision that he had jurisdiction over the particular offense complained of, while erroneous, nevertheless constitutes a judicial decision for which he is not liable, having acted in perfect good faith. Emery, J., delivered a vigorous and impressive dissent to so much of the decision as holds the judge and the officer not liable.—Law Notes.

Digitized by Google

Judicial Notice of Automobiles.

In Ex parte Berry, 82 Pac. Rep. 44, the California Supreme Court, in holding that a county ordinance forbidding the running of automobiles on county roads between sunset and sunrise was not unreasonable, held that the courts may assume to have what is common and current knowledge about the automobile. Part of such knowledge the court states as follows: "Its use as a vehicle for traveling is comparatively recent. It makes an unusual noise. It can be, and usually is, made to go on common roads at great velocity—at a speed many times greater than that of ordinary vehicles hauled by animals; and, beyond doubt, it is highly dangerous when used on country roads, putting to great hazard the safety and lives of the mass of people who travel on such roads in vehicles drawn by horses. Fearful accidents to persons driving animals, which are frightened into unmanageable terror by automobiles, are of common occurrence. And while there are usually laws regulating and limiting the speed at which they may be driven, it is a matter of common knowledge that these laws are frequently violated, and that it is exceedingly difficult for officers, even in the daytime, to stop them when going at forbidden speed, and arrest the drivers. And it is apparent that this would be much more difficult to do in the nighttime. Moreover, in the nighttime even those drivers of automobiles who might be considerate of the safety of others would not be able to see an approaching team in time to take the proper precautions."—Law Notes.

Carriers—Passengers—Shippers of Stock—Authority of Conductor—Waiver of Contract Provisions.

In Illinois Central R. R. v. Jennings, decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois in October, 1905 (75 N. E. 457), it was laid down that where a contract for the shipment of stock entitled the shipper to free transportation in the caboose, the conductor of the train had no implied authority, irrespective of circumstances, to invite the shipper to ride on the engine.

It was held that where a conductor had no express authority to waive a provision of a shipper's contract, or to invite persons to ride on the engine, the question whether the conductor's invitation to a shipper to ride on the engine was a waiver of the provision of the contract requiring him to ride in the caboose was one of fact for the jury.

It was further held that in order to establish a waiver by a conductor of such a provision in a contract, the shipper must affirmatively show, in the absence of evidence of express authority, that such action was within the apparent scope of the conductor's authority, and that the shipper did not know or have reasonable ground to believe that the conductor was exceeding his authority.

Master and Servant—Exemplary Damages as to Malicious Acts of Servants. — Exemplary damages can not be recovered for the malicious acts of railroad agents in failing or refusing to carry a passenger, where ratification is not shown. Townsend v. Texas & N. O. Ry. Co., Tex., 88 S. W. Rep. 302.

Certificate of Deposit—Indorsement—Bona Fide Indorsee—Notice.

Two certificates of deposit were drawn, payable, one to C., "trustee," and the other to C., "trustee of B. F." At the time they were wrongfully indorsed by the trustee in the same form, one of them had almost twelve months to run, and the other six months before maturity, and both drew interest to maturity only, and were not subject to check. Held, that the certificates themselves gave actual notice to the indorsee that the paper represented a trust fund, and obligated such indorsee to inquire into the right of the trustee to dispose of it, within Negotiable Instrument Law, sec. 56 (Acts 1898, p. 150, c. 94), providing that to constitute notice of an infirmity in the instrument or defect in the title of the person negotiating the same, the person to whom it is negotiated must have had actual knowledge of the infirmity or defect, or knowledge of such facts that his action in taking the instrument amounted to bad faith. Ford v. Brown (Supreme Court of Tenn.), 88 S. W. Reports, 1036.

Carriers Who Are Passengers.

In Chicago & A. R. R. v. Walker, decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois in October, 1905 (75 N. E. 520), it was held that a railroad company must furnish a suitable waiting room for passengers and keep the same open for all regular trains and for trains which stop on signals, and that where a passenger on going to the depot finds it locked, she is not a trespasser if she enters the room, which is opened and lighted by one not an agent of the company.

It appeared that a passenger came to defendant's station at night with a ticket, and was admitted to the room by the village marshal, who unlocked the door for her, and that she was injured by falling through a hole in the waiting room floor, which had been there a long time. It was held that the question of defendant's negligence was for a jury.

Employer's Liability—Baltimore Fire.

The case of The Gans Salvage Company v. Byrnes, just decided by the Maryland Court of Appeals, is one of many that arose out of the great Baltimore fire of February, 1904. It appeared that after the fire the appellant company contracted to remove a quantity of canned goods from the cellar of a building destroyed by the fire. While the company was executing the contract, the appellee, who was in its employ, received injuries from the collapsing of a wall. He sued for damages on the ground that the appellant company put him in a dangerous position to work of which he had no knowledge. A judgment recovered by the appellee in the trial court was reversed on the ground that there was nothing to show what caused the walls to fall; that to all appearance they were safe, and that it could not be foreseen that the after half of the vault stack would tumble over.

Master and Servant—Safe Place to Work.—A master held not bound to furnish a servant a safe place to work, where the danger is temporary or arises from the hazard and progress of the work itself. Zeigenmeyer v. Charles Goetz Lime & Cement Co. (Mo.), 88 S. W. Rep. 139.

Digitized by Google

Compromise in the Jury Box.
[London Law Journal.]

Mr. Justice Jelf has found occasion in an action against the London Road Car Company to warn jurymen against the tendency to reach a verdict by compromise. "If one of you," said the learned judge in addressing the jury, "is of opinion that the company is not liable, and another that it is a case for heavy damages, do not settle the matter by awarding small damages. Such a practice, if resorted to by juries, would be disastrous to the administration of justice." That the practice does exist can not be denied. Here, for instance, are the concluding words of the Times report of another action for personal injuries tried before the Lord Chief Justice two or three days later: "After a considerable amount of conflicting evidence as to the way in which the accident happened, the jury, having considered the matter for an hour, sent to inquire whether the parties would accept a verdict of the majority. The parties did not agree to this course, and shortly afterwards the jury came into court with a verdict for the plaintiff for 450*l*." Some, no doubt, will be inclined to think that the interests of justice are better served by a compromise in the jury-box than by a disagreement. That was the abortive result of the action in which Mr. Justice Jelf gave his warning—an action, by the way, in which, a former jury having decided in the plaintiff's favor, the Court of Appeal had ordered a new trial. Surely, however, nobody can pretend that it is a satisfactory thing that a juror who is not convinced of the justice of a plaintiff's claim should agree to surrender his own opinion if his fellow jurors consent to reduce the damages they are prepared to give. It is opposed to the principle of unanimity in our system of trial by jury, and is calculated to weaken the feeling of conscientiousness with which the individual juror should discharge his duties. The disagreement of the jury may, no doubt, be a serious hardship upon the parties, but the surrender of conscientious opinions by dissentient jurymen is fraught with great mischief to the administration of justice as a whole. For the tendency to compromise in the jury box, so far as it exists, judges themselves are somewhat to blame. The dissentient juror has sometimes received but scant courtesy at their hands. "I hope you have made enough a fool of yourself. Now you can go," were the words which Mr. Justice Ridley deemed it proper to address to a dissentient juryman in a recent libel case at Exeter. If the necessity for unanimity works injustice, the remedy is simple—they who hold that view should openly seek its abolition.

Parental Liability for Children's Crime.

The parents of minors who commit crimes, whatever their moral responsibility may be, have not hitherto, at least in most jurisdictions, been held to any legal liability therefor. In New York, however, by chapter 655 of the Laws of 1905, such legal liability is created to a limited extent. If any parent or guardian of a child under sixteen years of age (except in the city of New York) omits to exercise due diligence in the control of such child to prevent violation of the law, such negligence constitutes a misdemeanor. Another provision makes it also a misdemeanor for any person to encourage or contribute to any violation of law by a child. This does not go so far as the Chinese law, by which in some instances it is said parents are executed for heinous crimes of a child, on the theory that, if they raise such a criminal they must take the consequences. This justice, if it be justice, is somewhat crude. But nothing can be reasonably said against the justice of the provisions of the New York law, which limit the liability of the parent or guardian to cases of neglect of the duty to use due diligence for the proper control of the child. The enforcement of this law will undoubtedly create a keener sense of responsibility on the part of some parents and guardians, and consequently prevent much juvenile crime. The law is so obviously just and useful that one may wonder that it was not long ago enacted. It may well be adopted in every state.—Case and Comment.

Master and Servant—Fellow Servants.—A fireman on a passenger engine held a fellow servant with the conductor of a passenger train approaching in an opposite direction, for whose negligence, resulting in the fireman's death, the railroad company was not liable. Crosby v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., U. S. C. C. of App., Second Circuit, 137 Fed. Rep. 765.

Accord and Satisfaction—Acceptance of Conditional Tender.—The acceptance by an employee of a check sent him in payment of wages at a certain rate, with directions to return it if the statement inclosed was not found correct, held an accord and satisfaction of the claim. United States Bobbin & Shuttle Co. v. Thissell, U. S. C. C. of App., First Circuit, 137 Fed. Rep. 1.

Carriers—Measure of Damages for Loss of Goods.—The measure of damages for loss of goods by a carrier is the value of the goods at destination, with interest from the time when the goods should have been delivered, less the unpaid costs of transportation. Chesapeake and O. Ry. Co. v. F. W. Stock & Sons (Va.), 51 S. E. Rep. 161.

Carriers—Negligence of Conductor.—Where the act of a conductor of a car in carrying a passenger by his stopping place in the darkness, etc., was the direct cause of his injury, it would be presumed that the conductor's act was within the scope of his authority. Indianapolis & E. Ry. Co. v. Barnes (Ind.), 74 N. E. Rep. 583.

Master and Servant—Fellow Servants.—Where plaintiff was injured by the negligence of another employee in running an engine against the one plaintiff was at work on, such employees were not fellow-servants. Mullin v. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. (Wash.), 80 Pac. Rep. 814.

Digitized by Google

Washington COLLEGE OF LAW

1328 NEW YORK AVENUE

REOPENS MONDAY, OCTOBER 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

BOARD ELECTION NOTICE.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Law Reporter Company of Washington City will be held at the office of the company, 518 Fifth st. N. W., on Monday, January 8, 1906, for the purpose of electing nine directors to serve for the ensuing year. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

H. RANDALL WEBB, Secretary.

Stockholders' Meeting (Annual).

OFFICE OF PUEBLO MINING COMPANY,
Rooms 710-711 Colorado Building,
WASHINGTON, D. C., November 29, 1905.

To the Stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company.

Please take notice that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Pueblo Mining Company will be held at the principal office of the company, in the city of Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, the 2d day of January, 1906, at 12 o'clock, noon, for the purpose of electing directors and for the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the meeting. The stock transfer books of the company will be closed on Saturday, the 30th day of December, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m., and will remain closed until Wednesday, the 3d day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m.

[SEAL.] JNO. T. MCCOY, Secretary.

48-3t

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Lee Eugene Turner et al. v. Emily A. Moxley et al.

Equity No. 16,375.

Upon consideration of the report of the trustees, this day filed, it is by this court, this 23d day of November, 1905, ordered that the trustees be, and they are hereby, authorized to accept the offer of W. Riley Deeble for the purchase of the property known as Nos. 1117, 1119, and 1121 Thirtieth street northwest, located on the north 12½ feet of lot 188, and the south 24 feet of lot 186, in square 1196, in this city and District, for the sum of $2,750 cash, and upon compliance with the terms of said offer and final confirmation of the sale, to make conveyance of said property to the said purchaser or his assigns. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and [Seal] The Washington Post before said final ratification. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. L. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. W. Darr and R. A. Curtin, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,

Holding a Probate Court.

Estate of Mary E. Cook, Deceased.

No. 13,247. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Matthew E. Cook, it is ordered this 13th day of December, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Hardesty, Reeze Hardesty, Georgiana Penn, Frank C. Farr, and Bowman Farr, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 15th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be [Seal] not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court 50-3t

Ellwood O. Wagenhorst, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Sherman McCallum, Rebecca Alexander, Complainants, v. Mary A. Ellis, Susan E. Hedian, the Unknown Heirs at Law of Susan Decatur, Defendants. Equity, No. 25,785.

The object of this suit is to establish the titles by adverse possession of the complainants to the south 35 feet of original lot 18 of square 198 in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, by their solicitor, it is, by the court, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to her, will be proceeded with as in case of default. And, it is, by the court, further ordered, this 7th day of November, A. D. 1905, that the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, and each of them, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring three months next after the date of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause, as to them, will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order, before the appearance days named for the defendant, Susan E. Hedian, and for the unknown heirs at law of Susan Decatur, respectively, shall be published once a week for four successive weeks, and twice a month for three successive months, in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington [Seal] Evening Star. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk.

nov. 10, 17, 24; dec. 1, 15; jan. 5, 12; feb. 2, 9

Gordon & Gordon, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

William A. Gordon et al. v. William H. Collins et al.

Equity No. 25,185.

The object of this suit is to substitute new trustees under the will of William C. Hazel, deceased, for management of certain property in square 1256, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William Joseph Havenner, Mamie Gray, John Gray, Elizabeth M. Gray, and Jeanne Swart, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. WEN- [Seal] DELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid forat more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 518 Fifth Street, N. W.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor having reported that he has sold premises No. 1617 Fourth street Northwest, Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered forty-eight (48) in square five hundred and twenty (520) according to Jesse D. Gibb's subdivision of part of square aforesaid, as recorded in Liber No. 20, folio 83, of the surveyor's office, District of Columbia, to George W. Ray, for twenty-six hundred ($2,600) dollars, all cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered, that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding the Probate Court.
In re Estate of John J. Reilly, Deceased.
Administration. No. 9121.

On consideration of the report of Julia J. Byrne, administratrix, it is, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered that the offer of William O'Mealey, to purchase the property known as lots 31 and 32, in block 6, Buena Vista Heights, in the county of Washington, D. C., for the sum of $800.00, payable in one-third cash and the balance in one and two years, with interest at 6%, said deferred payments to be secured by deed of trust upon the property sold, be, and the same is hereby, accepted, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

[Seal]

E. F. Colladay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louis Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 8th day of December, 1905. MARIA MEYER, 1744 8th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,125. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

Filed December 8, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Mary Clark et al. v. The District of Columbia et al.
No. 25,461. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to have set aside and declared null and void certain tax sales made by the District of Columbia to the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, of the property known and described as part of lots one (1) and twenty-one (21), in square 581, improved by premises No. 437 and 439 2d st. S. W., Washington, D. C., and lot 35, square 471, improved by No. 616 K st. S. W., and to have certain deeds, based upon said illegal tax sales, set aside and declared dull and void. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 8th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Legal Notices.

John D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Marguerite M. O'Neill, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. HARRY H. NICHOLS, 509 O st. N. W.; JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,292. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

W. E. Ambrose, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Lucinda Bailey, Deceased.
Admn. No. 12,939.

Upon hearing the report of William E. Ambrose, administrator c. t. a. of Lucinda Bailey, deceased, stating that he has sold lot seven (7) in square one thousand and one (1001) to John Appich for the sum of eighteen hundred dollars ($1,800.00), it is, this 8th day of December, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 8th day of January, 1906. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 50-3t

[Seal]

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Carl L. Davis, Ralph P. Barnard, Trustee, Guy H. Johnson, Trustee, and Isadore T. Young, Complainants, v. Henry F. B. Pardon, and his Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees, Defendants. No. 25,759. In Equity, Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to reform a deed recorded in Liber J. A. S. 164, at folio 419, one of the land records of the District of Columbia, conveying part of lot numbered one (1), in square numbered seven hundred and ninety-three (793), improved by the dwelling No. 423 Fourth street southeast, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and to establish of record the title of the complainant thereto, subject to the deed of trust, as prayed for in the original bill in this suit. On motion of the complainant, it is by the court this 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that Henry F. B. Pardon and his unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees (if he be dead) cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter next after the day of this order, good cause for shortening said period of such publication having been shown. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

[Seal]

J. Paul Earnest, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Mary J. Watkins to purchase at private sale for $2,541.78, lots fifteen (15) and sixteen (16), in block nine (9), of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lots be ratified and confirmed as reported, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 14th day of January, A. D. 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

[Seal]

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Worthington, Heald & Frailey, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth A. Pyne, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. JOHN PYNE, 157 E. Ninety-fifth st., New York; HENRY R. PYNE, 106 E. Fifty-fifth st., New York City. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,305. Admn. [Seal.] 50-3t

E. P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William E. Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. ELLWOOD P. MOREY, Wash. Loan and Trust Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,210. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Peter F. Hornig, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of December, 1905. JOHN G. HORNIG, 1020 B st. N. E.; GOTTFRIED HORNIG, 937 H st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,326. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Christian Sproesser, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of December, 1905. KATHARINA SPROESSER, 307 G st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,311. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Julia R. Balch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. WILLIAM C. BALCH, 903 O st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,293. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Legal Notices.

SECOND INSERTION.

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was, by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Carl A. Lindquist, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 27th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,457. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Jos. A. Burkart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Frank B. Marlow, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. JOS. A. BURKART, 516 Corcoran Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,309. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Celia E. V. Beall, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. LIZZIE B. GLADMON, care of Gordon & Gordon, 330 4½ st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,871. Admn. [Seal.] 49-3t

Lambert & Baker, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Daniel F. Shea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. ANNIE E. SHEA, 1919 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,276. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Filed December 7, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.

L. P. Harlow, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Violet Simpson, Complainant, v. Ollie Simpson, Ella Giesling, Defendants. Eq. No. 25,836. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of December, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.

[Seal]

A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 8-15-22

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Jos. A. Burkhart, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Johanna Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906: otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. RICHARD A. O'BRIEN, 319 B St. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,241. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

James F. Bundy and Geo. F. Collins, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard Broadus, Complainant, v. Georgiana Broadus and Alphonso Waters, Defendants.
No. 24,903. Equity Docket No. 55.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the grounds of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alphonso Waters, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, said order to be published in The Law Reporter and The Bee once a week for three weeks; otherwise the cause [Seal] will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 49-3t

Geo. E. Tralles and A. A. Birney, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Larguey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of December, 1905. ELLEN KILROY, Oneida, N. Y. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,310. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

George C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of August G. Romacker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. GEORGE P. ZURHORST, 301 E. Cap. st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,318. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Mabel Huff, Complainant, v. Warren Rutledge Huff, Defendant, Clara De Marr, Co-respondent.
No. 25,658. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the grounds of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this —— day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Warren Rutledge Huff, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the [Seal] cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 8-15-22

Legal Notices

W. H. Robeson, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of James Smith, Deceased.
No. 11,789.
ORDER.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court: This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of the administrator, and it appearing to the court that the administrator has appointed the 29th day of January, 1906, for a meeting of persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue out of the estate of James Smith, the said action of the administrator in fixing said date is on this, the 1st day of December, 1905, hereby approved. And it further appearing to the court that all the heirs at law, next of kin, and distributees of the said James Smith, deceased, are non-residents of the District of Columbia, and so far as known to the said Samuel A. Putman, administrator, are named as follows: Walter Harrington, Henry Harrington, Frank Harrington, John A. Smith, Martha Ann David, nee Woodworth, and Charles Woodworth. And it further appearing to the court that the said Martha Ann David is a person of unsound mind and without committee or guardian, William H. Woodwell is hereby appointed a guardian ad litem for the purpose of the preservation of her interests in this proceeding, if any she have. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to said parties by said administrator by registered letter; and also that a copy of this order be published in The Washington Times and The Washington Law Reporter in each week [Seal] for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to said 29th day of January, 1906. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 49-4t

Edward A. Newman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Aretta G. Condict, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. FRANK G. CARPENTER, 1318 Vermont ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,886. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

F. R. Keys, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
John H. Robinson v. Ella Robinson and George Mahoney, Co-respondent. Equity, No. 25,698.

On motion of plaintiff, by F. R. Keys, his solicitor, it is ordered that the defendant, Ella Robinson, and the co-respondent, George Mahoney, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from the defendant upon the ground of adultery. This order to be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. Done this 3d day of November, 1905. By the Court. WENDELL P. [Seal] STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 49-3t

Berry & Minor and Hugh B. Rowland, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Van Ness Boynton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. HELEN AUGUSTA BOYNTON, care of Berry and Minor, 705 Colorado Bldg., Washington, D. C. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,008. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

John S. Alleman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James P. Wilson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. EMMA FLORENCE WILSON, 811 North Carolina ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,820. Administration. [Seal.] 49-8t

W. Russell Graham, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Joseph S. Tucker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. DE WITT CLINTON L. TUCKER, 1320 K St., S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,212. Administration. [Seal.] 49-8t

D. W. Baker and Fountain Peyton, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William O. Holmes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. WALTER H. BROOKS, 1425 Corcoran st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,012. Administration. [Seal.] 49-8t

THIRD INSERTION.

John Paul Earnest, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956. Docket No. 49.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 27th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Sue F. Chapman to purchase at private sale for twelve hundred dollars, lot 7, in block 8, of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lot be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 27th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 48-3t

Joseph Salomon, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters testamentary on the estate of Edward T. Farrar, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Thursday, the 21st day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. LUTHER H. POSEY, by Joseph Salomon, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,515. Admn. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

J. J. Darlington, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Alexander B. Hagner et al. v. John H. Walter, Trustee, et al. No. 25,589. Eq. Doc. 57.

ORDER.

The object of this suit is to perfect complainants' title to part of lot 13, square 141, beginning for same at the northeast corner of said lot 13, running thence south 133 feet, thence west 25 feet 3½ inches, thence north 133 feet, thence east 25 feet 3½ inches, to the place of beginning. On motion of complainants, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants James Westcott, Augustus Westcott, Ann Eliza Barnard, and William Cary McHenry, John McHenry, Ellen Keyser, and Sophia Stewart, trustees, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, and that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees, and alienees of each of the following named persons, to wit: Julius Forrest, trustee, John Brown, John Innez Clark, ——Brown, —— Ives (late partners trading as Brown and Ives), George Gibbs, Walter Channing (late partners trading as Gibbs and Channing), Samuel Elam, William Cook, James McHenry, John McHenry, Anna Boyd, Ramsey McHenry, Robert Oliver, William Hindman, James Hindman, James Stott, Sallie Stott, Samuel Stott, Charles Stott, Lucy Stott, Mary Stott, Elizabeth Stott, James Stott, junior, and Sarah Westcott, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the rule day occurring after three months from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks during the month following the first publication of this order, and twice a month during the ensuing month, and in The Washington Post twice a month for two months, good cause therefor having been shown. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. dec 1, 8, 15; jan 5, 12

Walter A. Johnston, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of James F. Peerce, Deceased.
No. 13,288.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate and record of the last will of James F. Peerce and for letters testamentary, by Rebecca Delaney Hooe, as executrix, it is, this 28th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that Thomas Hunter, Peerce Hunter, and Mrs. Lulu Hersperger, heirs at law and next of kin of said James F. Peerce, and all others concerned, appear in said court on Friday, the 29th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., and show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star newspaper, once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 48-3t

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Hattie A. Mullican Byrnes et al., Complainants, v. Mary P. Brown et al., Defendants.
Equity No. 20,638. Docket 47.

Upon consideration of the report of A. A. Hoehling, Jr., and Blair Lee, trustees, herein filed, wherein it appears that said trustees have received certain offers of purchase, at private sale, of lot Q, square 133, City of Washington, District of Columbia, among others, an offer of John T. Knott, of $1.07 per square foot; terms, one-third (⅓) cash, balance in one year, with interest at five per centum (5%) per annum, secured by deed of trust, it is, thereupon, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that sale of said lot to John T. Knott, at the above price, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 30th day of December, A. D. 1905. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Post and in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last-named day. [Seal] By the Court: WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 48-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

J. D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Ellen W. Sullivan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 28th day of November, 1905. DENNIS J. O'LEARY, 46 S st. N. W. JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 Fifth st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,291. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of George Washington, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 29th day of November, 1905. FRANK P. REESIDE, 1003 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,178. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

P. H. Marshall, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William H. Lee, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 28th day of November, 1905. MARY L. LEE, 1740 V st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,299. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Jesse E. Potbury, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Emma M. Cutting, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 24th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 24th day of November, 1905. HARRY O. CUTTING, 1818 4th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,300, Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

B. F. Leighton, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to give notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Lucippia A. Jones, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 27th day of November, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 27th day of November, 1905. EDWIN D. JONES, 409 B st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,196. Administration. [Seal.] 48-3t

Legal Notices.

FOURTH INSERTION.

Harry G. Kimball, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Alice M. Peck, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees of Appelona Whitehair, Deceased, et al., Defendants.
In Equity. No. 25,782.

The object of this suit is to establish of record the title in fee simple of the complainant to lot numbered twenty (20) in Babcock's subdivision of original lots eight (8), nine (9), and ten (10) in square one hundred and three (103) in the city of Washington, District of Columbia. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Harry G. Kimball, it is, this 9th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Appelona Whitehair, deceased, and the unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees of Justinian Mayberry, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Times.
[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. nov 10-17, dec 8-15, jan 12-19

George C. Gertman, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The Atkinson and Ballard Company, a Corporation, Complainant, v. The Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Benjamin Stoddert et al., Defendants.
Equity. No. 25,714. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain a decree perfecting and establishing of record the complete title of the complainant to lots numbered twenty-three (23) and twenty-four (24) in Lloyd P. Pumphrey's subdivision of certain lots in square numbered sixty (60), in the city of Washington, in said District, as described in the bill of complaint. On motion of the complainant, by George C. Gertman, its solicitor, it is by the court, this 9th day of November, 1905, ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs and devisees of Benjamin Stoddert; George Scott, executor, and in his own right; Jonathan Scholfield (of Issacker), executor, and in his own right; Mahlon Scholfield; Benjamin Waters, trustee, and in his own right; Sarah Talbot, Ann Dobey, John Balderson, Eliza Cowen, Lucretia Edmonston, John Woods, Rachael A. Levering, Joseph Scholfield, Hannah Scholfield, Sarah Scholfield, Lewis Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Mahlon); Elizabeth Hopkins, Rachael Hodge, Ann Scholfield, Thomas Scholfield, Andrew Scholfield, William Scholfield (of Issacker); Martha Stanton, James Stanton, Jane Anderson, Sarah Anderson, Mary Anderson, William Elliott, Joseph Elliott, Sarah Elliott, Margaret Elliott, Maria Elliott, Thomas Elliott, Mary Elliott, James Evans. (of Jonathan); John Evans (of Theophilus); George Evans, Cadwallader Evans, Oliver Evans (of Oliver); John Lampley, Elizabeth Lampley, Eliza W. Evans, Rachel Evans, Leah Evans, Thomas Evans, Evan Evans, Jesse Evans, Oliver Evans (of Joseph); Abner Evans, George Evans, Joseph Evans, Joseph Ball, William Brackin, Adeline Brackin, Elizabeth Brackin, Margaret Brackin, and Minnie Johnson, or if either or all of them be dead, then the unknown heirs and devisees of any or all of the above-named defendants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in November and three times weekly in December, 1905, prior to said return day, good cause having been shown by the bill and affidavit filed herein, to the satisfaction of the court, that further or longer publication
[Seal] is unnecessary. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. nov. 10; dec. 1, 8, 15

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 51

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - DECEMBER 22, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 801
In Memoriam—Justice Andrew Wylie 803
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Henry U. Rheam et al., appellants, v. James W. Martin 807
Legal Notices 811

Married Women—Mortgage of Separate Property for Debt of Husband—Secs. 1154, 1155, Code D. C., Construed.

A decision of especial importance, construing sections 1154-1155 of the Code of this District, was rendered during this week by Mr. Justice Stafford, holding Equity Court No. 2. The case is that of Darneille v. Tuck et al., and was brought to secure an injunction against the sale of property of the complainant, a married woman, under a deed of trust executed by herself and husband to secure a note for $19,000, and ten interest notes of $570 each, and being the joint and several notes of herself and husband. It appeared that of the sum of $19,000 loaned by one of the defendants $1,226.96 was used to discharge an indebtedness due from the husband to the lender of the money, and that the balance was used in paying off a prior incumbrance on the property, expenses, commissions, etc. So far as the portion of the loan applied in payment of the debt of the husband is concerned the position of the complainant was concededly that of a surety; and it was contended on her behalf that, by virtue of sections 1154 and 1155 of the Code she was incompetent to bind herself as surety for her husband or to charge her real estate by way of mortgage given to secure the debt of her husband. On behalf of the defendant it was contended that, even if the complainant may not be personally bound by the note given for the debt, although signed by herself and husband jointly, yet that the deed of trust given to secure the obligation of her husband upon such a note is valid, notwithstanding it was given upon property which is held to the sole and separate use of the wife. The question presented was, therefore, whether the broad power of disposition of property given the wife by section 1154 is limited in its operation by the proviso to section 1155, in which it is declared "that no married woman shall have power to make any contract as surety or guarantor, or as accommodation drawer, acceptor, maker, or indorser." Mr. Justice Stafford held, in construing these sections, that the proviso is limited in its operation to the section in which it occurs, i. e., section 1155. In reaching this conclusion Mr. Justice Stafford said in part:

"In order to understand what effect the statute was intended to have we must look at the situation as it existed before the enactment of any statute enlarging the powers of married women. The contracts of married women made with reference to their separate estate and upon its faith and credit were enforced in equity against such estate. Where a statute declared that all her property should be held to her sole and separate use as if she were unmarried, equity still retained its jurisdiction to enforce her contracts against it unless the statute also provided that she might be sued at law. But where the statute did so provide she was no longer liable in equity, but was liable at law only. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur., sec. 1125; Emmons v. Harlan, 5 Mack. 521. The statute we are dealing with declares (sec. 1154) that all property of a married woman shall be held to her separate use and be subject to her disposal as if she were unmarried; but it also declares (sec. 1155) in what cases she may make contracts, and that in such cases she binds herself at law and may be sued and her property taken on execution. Her property is no longer liable in equity because, if liable at all, it is liable at law, that is, by virtue of section 1155. It is section 1155 which limits and defines her power to contract, so as to bind herself and her property; the only limitation relates to her contracts as surety, etc. But her power to dispose of her property, wholly or in part, absolutely or upon condition, is entirely separate and distinct, and is conferred by section 1154. By this section no change is made in the law as it existed without legislation, except that now all her property is in her power, whereas formerly only that part which had been conveyed strictly to her separate use was so held. If the legislature had intended to take away from her the power she already possessed to dispose of her property by mortgage, it is probable they would have adopted some other method than this method of a proviso to a section relating to a different matter. Full effect seems to be given to the proviso when it is recognized as limiting her power to contract liabilities enforceable by action and execution at law. It can hardly be held that the legislature intended to prevent her disposition of her property, conditionally, when it gave her power to do so absolutely. It is conceded that she might have conveyed her property in payment and extinguishment of her husband's debt.

"By this construction we limit the operation of the proviso to the section in which it occurs,

Digitized by Google

which is the natural and ordinary way of reading it."

The entire opinion is full of interest and importance, and will be reported in full in a subsequent issue. Mr. L. A. Bailey appeared for the complainant, and Messrs. Gordon & Gordon for the defendants.

Opening of Minor Street—Requisite that Public Interests Require it—Legislative Valuation of Benefits.

In Handley v. Macfarland et al., recently decided by Mr. Justice Stafford, holding Equity Court No. 2, the suit was by the owner of a lot in square 700 in this city, in which proceedings were recently had for the opening of a minor street, to enjoin the enforcement of an assessment made against her lot, for discovery, and for other purposes. The bill alleged that it was not for the public interest that the street should be opened, and that it was not the judgment of the Commissioners that the public interests required it; that the financial interests of certain lot owners alone required it; that nevertheless the Commissioners went through the form of adjudging that the public interests required it, and entered a certificate to that effect upon their records; but it was contended that this certificate was false in fact and not an exercise of judgment, in other words, that the Commissioners acted in bad faith. The Commissioners demurred to the bill. It was held that, under section 1608 of the Code, the judgment of the Commissioners that public interests require the opening of a minor street is an indispensable prerequisite to every proceeding that may be taken to that end, and that the allegation of the bill that the Commissioners acted in bad faith and without the exercise of judgment was admitted by the demurrer for the purposes thereof, and that the proceedings were therefore void from their inception.

It was also contended by the plaintiff that the assessment against her property was greatly in excess of the special benefits received, and that sections 1608–1613 of the Code, in authorizing an assessment in excess of such benefits, were unconstitutional in depriving an owner of his property without just compensation. The court holds that this question is not an open one, in view of the recent decision of the Court of Appeals in Brandenburg v. District of Columbia, 33 Wash. Law Rep. 740, in which the same objections urged against the validity of the statute were held untenable, the court affirming the power of Congress to pass a general act for opening such streets, and declare the property benefited to be that within the block, and that the cost of the improvement should be borne by the owners of such property, and that this was what Congress had done in the act complained—in other words, that the act constituted a legislative valuation of the special benefits. The legislature having the power to put a valuation upon the benefits in advance, and having exercised that power, it can not be said that complainants' property is being taken without due process of law.

The opinion of Mr. Justice Stafford is full of interest, and will repay a perusal. We hope at an early day to place it in full before our readers.

Theater Tickets.

In Collister v. Hayman, decided December 5, 1905, by the Court of Appeals of New York, it is held that the proprietor of a theater may print a condition on tickets of admission to the effect that, if sold on the sidewalk, they will be refused at the door, and may enforce such condition. A theater, though licensed, is not operated under a franchise, and the proprietor may impose reasonable conditions for the protection of his patrons, with respect to the transfer of tickets, and may notify people who are about to purchase them on the sidewalk that they will be refused at the door. Such a condition, attached to the sale of tickets, applying to all classes and persons alike, is not violative of the statute against discrimination, in places of amusement, on account of race, color, or creed.

Commenting on the decision, the New York Law Journal says:

The unanimous decision of the New York Court of Appeals in Collister v. Hayman, reported on the first page today, is of great interest and importance, not so much because of the practical result—which is similar to that reached in the court below and by other courts of this State in former cases—but because of the grounds given for the present determination and the general reasoning of the opinion. It is held that the proprietor of a theater may refuse admission to persons procuring tickets from sidewalk speculators and, therefore, that the action, which was to restrain such a proprietor from interfering with the business of a licensed theater ticket speculator, must be dismissed.

The Appellate Division, 71 App. Div. 316, affirmed an order denying an injunction pendente lite, assigning as its principal ground that "the weight of authority is to the effect that a theater ticket is merely a license given by the proprietor of the place of entertainment to the purchaser of that ticket to enter upon the premises of such proprietor to witness a performance, and that in its nature it is a revocable license." The Appellate Division cites as leading authority Wood v. Leadbitter, 13 M. & W. 838. It also states that courts of other jurisdictions have taken different views of a theater ticket from those expressed by Baron Alderson in the Leadbitter case, but shows that the courts of New York have quite uniformly followed them.

Practically all of the cases on this subject that have been reported up to the present time

Digitized by Google

dealt with the right to exclude objectionable persons or persons who had procured tickets through objectionable means. In promoting that desirable end the courts have not been properly regardful of the wide reaching effects that might follow from the general rules laid down. The present decision is to be commended, because, although the actual controversy related to the control of objectionable features, the Court of Appeals has quite substantially revised the abstract views formerly obtaining. There is really no theoretical justification for holding that a theater ticket is a mere personal license, and as such arbitrarily revocable. The purchase of a theater ticket is a contract, and no amount of casuistry can make it anything but a contract. The Court of Appeals recognizes this truth by treating the relation between proprietor and ticket purchaser throughout as a contractual one. The term "license" is used, but the court says that "the ticket is a license, issued by the proprietor pursuant to the contract as convenient evidence of the right of the holder to admission to the theater at the day named, with the privilege specified." The court then goes on to validate the exclusion of holders of tickets obtained from certain speculators on the logical ground that by printing on the ticket a notice that tickets purchased on the sidewalk will be refused, such proviso is made a condition of the contract of purchase, and, being a reasonable condition, may be enforced. The result is salutary in recognizing, as formerly, certain rights in theater proprietors to regulate the manner of sale of tickets, and abstract principles of law are at the same time set right.

As to the authority of the Tyroler case (157 N. Y. 116), it may be said that the Court of Appeals of New York (by a bare majority vote) is the only court in the Union to our knowledge that has held even the transportation tickets of common carriers independent articles of property, and that a statute enabling the carriers to limit the sale of their tickets to specially authorized agents is unconstitutional. The weight of authority throughout the Union very decidedly supports the view that transportation tickets are mere incidents of the contract of carriage, and that it is competent to authorize reasonable regulation of the sale thereof for the benefit of the public and the carriers themselves. Having taken such an exceptional position, the Court of Appeals does well in the present case to limit the application of its decision to a case where statutory prohibition of ticket brokerage is concerned and not to extend it to cases where certain disabilities as to sale are imposed as conditions of the contract.

The whole gist of the present decision is an assertion and vindication of contractual rights. On this theory proprietors of theaters may impose any restrictions upon the sale of tickets which constitute reasonable conditions. On the other hand, it would seem that a person purchasing a ticket without the violation of any restriction or condition would be entitled to ordinary contractual rights against the proprietor of the theater.

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

In Memoriam.

JUSTICE ANDREW WYLIE.

At the meeting of the Bar of the District, held on the afternoon of November 3, 1905, to pay tribute to the memory of the late Justice Andrew Wylie, Justice Alexander B. Hagner presided, and in taking the chair spoke as follows:

Gentlemen: No one could sympathize more fully than I do with the purpose of this meeting.

Although there are some members of our bar who knew Justice Wylie longer than I did, yet I am the only survivor of his colleagues of the bench; and during a good many of the twenty-two years of his service, I was intimately associated with him, officially and socially.

I have no intention of detaining you with a consideration of his merits as a judge and a man. These will be appropriately presented by the gentlemen who are to address the meeting. But standing in this chamber, associated with so many reminiscences of our friend, I may be excused for saying a few words.

My first appearance after my appointment, in an official capacity, was in this room, at the hearing of an important cause in the general term, in which Justice Wylie participated.

Very shortly afterwards, resolutions passed at a meeting of the bar expressive of its regret at the death of Justice Olin, whom I succeeded on the bench, were presented to the general term in this same room by Justice Wylie, at the request of the bar.

My acquaintance with him, commencing thus early in my experience on the bench, was of the most agreeable character, and from this beginning until his death, it continued uninterrupted in the slightest degree.

When Justice Wylie resigned his commission in 1885, the members of the bar passed resolutions expressing their high sense of his merits as a man and judge, and commending his administration of his office, which are published in one of the volumes of our reports. At the conclusion of one of them, there was an expression of the hope that his life of labor might be crowned by a prolonged age. If the words were intended as a prayer, they seem to have been answered as such, for that life was prolonged for more than twenty years, without decay of mental or physical powers. One is reminded of the words of the poet—

> "More things are wrought by prayer
> Than this world dreams of."

Living forty-two years after his appointment to the judgeship, he attained the unusual age of 91 years.

The death of an honored judge at such an age reminds one of the incident in the life of the venerable judge, Samuel, when he called the people around him and demanded them to witness against him: "Whose ox have I taken? or who have I defrauded or wronged? or at whose hands have I taken a bribe?" And of their reply, which we can likewise make here: "Thou hast done none of these things."

The following named gentlemen were appointed a committee to prepare appropriate resolutions: Mr. Nathaniel Wilson, Mr. James G. Payne, Mr. Wm. F. Mattingly, Mr. R. Ross Perry, Mr. Henry E. Davis, and Mr. A. S. Worthington. The committee presented the following report, which was read by Mr. Mattingly, at the request of the chairman, Mr. Wilson:

Digitized by Google

Andrew Wylie, born at Connorsburg, in the State of Pennsylvania, on the 25th day of February, 1814, and a justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia from March 18, 1863, to May 1, 1885, when he put aside his judicial duties for the rest to which his long, faithful, and distinguished service of more than twenty-two years had justly entitled him, died at the city of Washington, District of Columbia, on the 1st day of August, 1905, in the ninety-second year of his age. On his retirement, the bar of the District of Columbia appropriately expressed its appreciation of his career and services in resolutions which are recorded for a perpetual memorial in the minutes of the court of which he was so long a member and an ornament. The hope of the bar, then expressed, that he might in his retirement enjoy the honorable ease which his career foreshadowed has been abundantly realized, and his fellow-lawyers who extended to him that hope are now met to record their gratification and pride in its justification.

Coming to the bench in the midst of the historic strife which brought this court into being, he met its requirements with a fidelity, industry, and zeal that wrought their natural results, and carried with them their own reward, that of a just appreciation of faithful and fearless duty at all times, unhesitatingly met and fully discharged. The years following his retirement from service have approved the judgment which that service demanded and received, and we now supplement our record of twenty years ago with the expression of our glad conviction that what we then said was an under-statement rather than eulogy of the virtues of which we spoke our recognition.

This minute will be presented to the court of which he was so long a member, with the request that it be placed among its records, and will be communicated to his family, in expression of our gratitude for his services and of our respect and admiration of him as man and public servant.

Mr. NATHANIEL WILSON said: Mr. Chairman, I was admitted to the bar of the old Circuit Court of the District of Columbia in February, 1861. Judge Wylie was then a member of that bar, and had been for several years practicing law in Washington, although residing in Alexandria. He had recently become a resident of Washington.

I came from the first into intimate relations with Judge Wylie, and those relations soon ripened into a friendship that continued through his life.

I had special opportunity to observe from its beginning what came to be a notable judicial career.

Early in the year 1863, Judge Wylie was appointed by President Lincoln to fill a vacancy on the bench of the Criminal Court of the District, occasioned by the death in January of that year of the Honorable Thomas H. Crawford, but he did not enter upon his duties in that court.

There was then pending in Congress a measure vitally affecting the entire judicial system of the District and the tenure of office of its judges.

War against the lawful authority of the Government being then flagrant and waged at the very gates of the capital, and as the issues of the war involved the fundamental principles of constitutional liberty, right, and obligation, it was considered that judicial authority at the seat of Government should be held and exercised only by those who had clear and unequivocal opinions as to the paramount authority of the Government and as to its power and duty to put down the rebellion and to preserve the integrity of the Union.

There was strong hostility towards and mistrust of all who had been identified with the old order of things, or with parties and policies that had brought about the conditions which then seemed to threaten the destruction of the Republic.

The excited condition of the public mind made it easy to obtain quick and radical legislation that promised protection against threatened dangers, and on the 3d of March, 1863, the act of Congress was passed which provided for the immediate reorganization of the courts of the District, and for the appointment of four justices (one of them to be designated Chief Justice) in whom judicial power was to be vested.

Thus in a moment the judicial system which had been so long in force in the District was completely destroyed, and the able and distinguished judges, who had constituted the Circuit Court of the District, Judge Dunlop, Judge Morsell and Judge Merrick, were in effect deposed.

It is due to the memory of these eminent jurists—able, learned, and of spotless character—to say that neither then, nor at any subsequent time, was any word or act revealed that indicated conduct or opinions on their part inconsistent with the truest loyalty and allegiance to the Government.

Soon after the act referred to went into effect, President Lincoln, on the 18th day of March, 1863, appointed Judge Wylie one of the justices of the new court, and at the same time appointed David K. Cartter, Abram B. Olin, and George P. Fisher, justices, naming Judge Cartter Chief Justice.

The first meeting of the court was held in the Circuit Court room of the City Hall on the 23d day of March, 1863, at which time Judge Wylie took his seat on the bench, where he continued in the uninterrupted discharge of his judicial duties until he retired on the first day of May, 1885.

Of the four justices so appointed, Judge Wylie was the only one then a resident of the District, and the only one who was a member of the District Bar.

Judge Cartter was a resident of Ohio, Judge Olin of New York, and Judge Fisher of Delaware.

The selection of Judge Wylie, at such a critical time, for this important judicial position at the capital of the nation, was in consequence of the personal knowledge President Lincoln had of Judge Wylie's lineage, of his education, of the history of his professional life and acquirements, and also of certain events which had then lately transpired, which demonstrated in a conspicuous way the possession by him of elements of character of inestimable importance and value in the emergencies that then existed and in the great crisis that was then impending.

Digitized by Google

Judge Wylie was born on the 25th day of February, 1814, at Connorsburg, Pa., where his father, Andrew Wylie, of Scotch-Irish descent, a man of great learning and force of character, was the president of the Washington University.

In 1828 his father removed to Indiana and became president of the University of Indiana, where Judge Wylie graduated in 1832.

From the university he was sent to the law school at Lexington, Kentucky, and there graduated in 1837.

Thence he went to Pittsburg, Pa., and entered the office of Walter Forwood, a distinguished lawyer and his father's friend.

He commenced there the practice of law, and was at one time district attorney.

While so occupied he married, in 1845, Miss Mary Caroline Bryan, of Alexandria, Va., an accomplished woman, of exquisite loveliness of character and person, whose lamented death, in 1897, took from his life its chief source of happiness.

He continued his residence in Pittsburg until the calamity known as the "Pittsburg Fire" occurred, and made a change in his plans necessary.

He removed with his wife to Alexandria, and there took up his residence with his wife's family.

As the time for the presidential election of 1860 drew near, the tremendous antagonisms that were to be developed by the impending conflict between the North and the South, and the intolerance and enmity with which all adherents in the South to the cause of the Union would be regarded, became apparent. Judge Wylie was, as his father had been, unalterably opposed to the institution of slavery. While he took no active part in politics, he made no concealment of his views and purposes, and he gave it to be plainly understood that he intended to vote for the Lincoln electors.

Threats were made that if he appeared at the polls he would be shot; and when he did appear, pistols were drawn and thrust against his person, but were not fired.

He cast his ballot, and his was the only one cast that day for the Republican electoral ticket in the city of Alexandria. A most significant act!

After the day of election, and while sitting at home on the porch of his house, he was fired at, and a rifle ball struck and broke the glass that was in his hand.

A few days afterward he moved to Washington, where he established his residence on Four-and-a-half street near the City Hall. Within a few months he moved to a house that he purchased on N street N. W., between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets N. W., where he lived until he purchased and occupied the home on Thomas Circle, where he resided until his death, which occurred on the first day of August, 1905.

It has seldom happened that any one has entered upon high judicial position more completely equipped for the performance of his duties than was Judge Wylie.

He had received the instructions of the university and the law school; he had spent years in the office of a great lawyer; he had the experience acquired in his own practice; he was in the full vigor of life, strong in body and in mind, and with infinite capacity for labor. More important than his acquirements were his deep religious convictions, his controlling sense of duty, his unfaltering and intrepid courage, which formed the foundation of his character.

Seldom have the promises of the morning been more completely fulfilled and satisfied by the achievements of the day.

When, after twenty-two years of unremitting labor, he left the bench, his success in the administration of justice during that long period received well-merited recognition, and the unqualified approval and unstinted commendation of the bar and of the community.

The records of this court contain abundant proofs of the industry, learning, sagacity, and uncommon mental vigor which he applied to the disposition of litigation.

Being familiar with the amount and variety of the business that Judge Wylie was obliged to consider during the first years of his service, and the multitude of prize, confiscation, revenue, and other cases, criminal as well as civil, in which the Government was concerned, I soon had occasion to observe the complete control which he at once took of the proceedings of his court, the firm grasp in which he held the details of every case, his speedy decision when the moment for decision arrived. Thus the accumulation of unfinished business and unnecessary delay was prevented, and abundant opportunity secured for careful and adequate consideration of whatever matter or question was of real gravity and importance.

I wondered at first what was the explanation or source of this singular administrative power, apparent from the first moment he sat upon the bench, and the effects of which were so plain and so plainly useful.

About the same time, that is, within a few months after his appointment, I noticed, or thought I noticed, in Judge Wylie's demeanor, a certain reserve that was not inconsistent with the intimacy of friendship, but yet indicative of changed relations and some alien interest.

The explanation came one evening, after the conclusion of a famous trial, when, in a few words of half soliloquy, Judge Wylie spoke of the awful burden and responsibility that rested upon the man appointed to sit in judgment upon the lives and rights of others, and of the inevitable isolation of the judgment-seat.

These, he said, are the hard conditions that belong to the service performed by judges, but if that service were not performed, justice would perish from the earth.

I realized then with what gravity and solemnity his duties seemed to him to be invested, and with what absolute sincerity and completeness he had dedicated himself to their performance.

The times were serious indeed. The streets were full of soldiers. The noises that came in through the windows of this building were the noises of a camp and not of a city.

Digitized by Google

"Everywhere the crimson flower of battle bloomed,
And solemn marches filled the night."

In the midst of the turmoil and gloom, his thoughts and interests were centered in the court-house, in his home, and in the stated services of his church. He was absorbed in and consecrated to the business of his court, and gave to its dispatch unremitting and anxious study and attention.

As month after month, and year after year, went by, the independence of his judgment, the vigor of his understanding, the extent and quality of his learning, his vindications of the rights of the citizen and the supremacy of the civil law, his hot indignation against wrong and swift condemnation of the wrongdoer, manifested in his decisions and opinions, received increasing commendation and respect, and when he left the bench he was recognized and will long be remembered as one of the great and heroic judges of the land, whose labors and whose character have given increased security and stability to the independence of the judiciary and to the liberty of the citizen.

Judge Wylie was on terms of social and friendly intimacy not only with President Lincoln, but with the members of his Cabinet, particularly with Secretary Stanton.

He was deeply concerned for the triumph of the armies of the Union, and for the welfare of those who were charged with the conduct of the war.

The great tragedies that occurred in Washington, almost within his sight, almost within his hearing, the great currents that had swept away and wrecked so many landmarks, so many old associates and friends, made deep impressions upon his mind and upon his heart.

Life afterwards seemed to have lost importance, or rather to have acquired a different importance. His attitude towards the world seemed that of one who had striven with all his might to accomplish that which he was set to do, who had escaped great dangers, who had seen great disasters, but who looked towards the future with serene and untroubled vision, and with calm and confident expectation of a higher life.

It was his good fortune to continue to the last in the home which had been his dwelling-place for more than a generation; the home of his wife until her death, the home of his children and grandchildren, surrounded by his books of history chiefly, in which he was interested to the last, and by the many things that had come to have a sort of personality through long and familiar use.

His was a strong, courageous, manly soul, endowed with great capacity; a clear-headed and a clear-hearted judge, doing justice, giving right judgments, so far as by striving he could find the right; an humble Christian, unafraid to enter upon the realities of the unseen world.

In honoring him, in cherishing with gratitude his memory and his services, we do but honor that which of all things in the world is most worthy of imperishable honor—a just and upright judge.

Mr. JAMES G. PAYNE: Mr. Chairman, the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia was born to being in the midst of the civil war, the war in which the nation was struggling for its united existence. Ending two years after the birth of the court, its shadows still lingered and hung low, and its influences left behind permeated the halls of justice as well as the halls of Congress. It was amid such surroundings that Judge Wylie began the discharge of the duties to which his appointment as justice of that court called him. I came to the bar four years after the creation of the court, something more than four years, and from that time until Judge Wylie's death I enjoyed the good fortune of his acquaintance, both professionally, in the relative attitudes of lawyer and judge, and personally, in our social relations. I came to know him well, and, like all others who were his contemporaries of that day, especially I learned to appreciate the talents which gave him his standing and reputation as a jurist equal to that of any other in American history. It is no disparagement of his colleagues on the bench to say that Judge Wylie was eminently fitted for the position he held; a man of deliberate judgment, who measured with care the proof and the argument and the merits of the case, and who saw but one thing at the end of his consideration, to do justice and equity to all who were interested. He was especially fitted for the work of the equity branch of this court, and to that he was assigned more than either of his colleagues. My recollection is that he held the equity court almost continually during several years of his judicial career.

Little can be added to what has been so well said by my brother Wilson in presenting the memorial prepared by the committee, and I can only say in conclusion that the bar of this court, and especially the elder portion of it, can never forget Judge Wylie. With all the severity of the judge, and yet all the kindness of a man, his treatment of the bar was of that nature. He was not only exact in requiring the duty and the service of the bar in their conduct of cases, but he was considerate of the younger members of the bar, beginning the practice of the law, leading them onward, until they thought as much of him as did their elders, his compeers.

I move, Mr. Chairman, the adoption of the memorial.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted and the meeting adjourned.

Carriers—Injury to Licensee on Track.—Where defendant railroad company had knowingly permitted the public to use its track within the limits of a city as a walkway for a number of years, a person so using the track was a licensee, and not a trespasser. Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Matthews (Tex.), 88 S. W. Rep. 192.

Principal and Agent—Undisclosed Principal.—In an action against an agent of an undisclosed principal and the principal, evidence held admissible and sufficient to make out a case against both the agent and principal. Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. v. Roquemore, Tex., 88 S. W. Rep. 449.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

HENRY U. RHEAM ET AL, APPELLANTS, v. JAMES W. MARTIN.

HUSBAND AND WIFE; AGENCY; BUILDING CONTRACT, CONSTRUCTION OF; INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR; DIRECTING VERDICT.

1. Agency of the husband for the wife can not be implied from the marriage relation subsisting between them, nor from the fact that he may have undertaken an enterprise with a view to her benefit also.
2. Where real estate is owned jointly by husband and wife, the husband may enter into a contract for the erection of a house thereon without thereby bringing the wife under a legal obligation; and it is incumbent upon the other contracting party, if not satisfied with the husband's responsibility, to secure that of the wife in some way recognized by law.
3. When a contract is in writing, it is for the court to declare its meaning and legal effect, when requested so to do, and not leave it for the determination of the jury.
4. In an action against husband and wife for work and materials furnished in the erection of a house on a lot belonging to both, there was no evidence that the wife had any connection with the contract. Plaintiff's contract was with one P, who had a contract with the husband for the erection of the house; but plaintiff sought to show that the latter contract was a mere form, that P was not an independent contractor, but superintendent for the husband, who was doing the work himself. Held, upon a review of the evidence, that the plaintiff had failed to establish his contention, and that the trial court erred in not directing a verdict in favor of both defendants.

No. 1566. Decided November 8, 1905.

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, at Law, No. 47,082, entered upon the verdict of a jury in an action against husband and wife. Reversed.

Mr. Wharton E. Lester for the appellants.

Mr. Joseph A. Burkart and Mr. J. Altheus Johnson for the appellee.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

This is an action of assumpsit begun by James W. Martin against Henry U. Rheam and his wife, Julia A. Rheam, to recover the sum of $355 for work done and materials furnished in the erection of a house for the defendants.

It appears that the lot upon which the house had been erected belonged to the two defendants. Plaintiff testified substantially as follows: That Henry Rheam got an estimate from him for the brickwork of the house which amounted to $600, which was afterwards reduced to $575. That afterwards plaintiff heard that W. S. Plager was going to build the house, and Rheam told him to see Plager and give him an estimate. That he did so, adding $20 for an extra chimney wanted by Mrs. Rheam. That he finished the brickwork, for which he received from Rheam $75 on July 3, and $150 on July 11, 1903. That he could not get the remainder of his money and asked Rheam for it. That Rheam said, "I will stand good for it; you finish your work and get an order and I will pay you." (This was objected to by the defendants as irrelevant, that there was no consideration for the promise, and that it was not in writing.) Witness further said that Rheam was around half the time during the progress of the work and did nothing but give orders. That Rheam gave him no orders directly, but complained to him about not wetting the bricks properly. That he knew Rheam had given the job of building the house to Plager. At request of plaintiff, defendant produced the following writing, addressed by Plager & Co. to H. U. Rheam, and read it in evidence:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., June 8, 1903.

Mr. H. U. Rheam to W. S. Plager, Architect and Builder (Licensed), 708 F street, N. E.

DEAR SIR: I agree to furnish all labor and material to erect and complete one three-story brick dwelling at No. 644 C street, N. E., as per plans and specifications, using chestnut trimmings, doors, etc., for the sum of two thousand three hundred and fifty dollars ($2,350.00). All work to be done in a first-class manner.

Yours truly, PLAGER & Co.

Owner to furnish party walls."

On cross-examination plaintiff said that he knew Rheam had first obtained estimates from several material men, with a view to erecting the house himself. That afterwards he changed his mind and offered the plans and specifications to several contractors for bids. That he gave the contract for building the house to Plager. That he told plaintiff to see Plager and give him his estimate for the brickwork, and the job would be his. That he thereafter saw Plager and gave him the following written bid:

"WASHINGTON, D. C., June 24, 1903.

Mr. Plager to J. W. Martin, Dr., Bricklayer and Contractor, 224 Seventh street, N. E. Jobbing promptly attended to.

I propose to do brickwork on house between 6 and 7th, on C st., N. E., according to plans and specifications prepared by you, for the sum of $575.00, in addition to chimney in rear for the extra sum of $20—$595.

JAMES W. MARTIN.

I agree to pay the same.—W. S. PLAGER."

Plaintiff then further testified that the last line was written and signed by Plager after his work had been completed. That Rheam paid him the sums credited, and that the two receipts, of July 3 for $75 and of July 11 for $150, were for money paid by Rheam, though they read as though received from Plager. That he paid no attention to the name in the receipts. That not being able to collect the balance due him he authorized his attorney to write to Rheam on August 21, 1903. This letter notified Rheam that the work had been completed "according to his contract with Mr. Plager," and unless his claim be settled he would file suit to enforce a lien. It was admitted that plaintiff had filed a mechanic's lien on August 18, 1903. This notice recited the property and the balance due, and concluded in these words: "Being amount due to me for labor upon and materials furnished for the construction of said building under and by virtue of a contract with William S. Plager, original contractor with owner."

W. S. Plager, called as a witness by the plaintiff, testified that he did business alone, under the name of W. S. Plager & Co., as an architect and builder, and had drawn the plans and specifications for the house of the defendants; that Rheam first intended to erect the house himself and get estimates; that afterwards witness made a bid for the entire construction, except party walls, which has been set out above; that other contractors made bids also; that Rheam accepted his bid; that witness was to furnish everything needed for the building, and began operations in June, 1903; that Rheam sent for the excavator Perry, without consulting witness, and told him to go to work; that Rheam paid some money to the men, and some was paid to the plaintiff, but witness could not say who paid it; that there was an extra flue built by plaintiff which had been included in his estimate; that he supposed that there was some change in the stone, and guessed it was ordered by Rheam; he did not order it himself; that he thought Rheam paid some material men, and knew that he had paid some carpenters. Asked who superintended the work, the witness answered: "I tried to superintend it; I think Mr. Rheam ordered the bricklayers; that he stopped the first plumber working, who threw up the job;" that the plumber told him Rheam had stopped him, and witness took the second plumber to Rheam, who thereafter paid him for his work; that Rheam had told him he would like for plaintiff to do the brickwork; that Rheam paid Riley for tarring; that the plans and specifications provided that the contractor should pay for the building permit and make the deposit for permission to cross the sidewalk; that these were paid for, but not by witness. On cross-examination, he said that he was the contractor for the job, and had received bids from several sub-contractors, including plaintiff, to do parts of the work; that from time to time he gave orders to Rheam for the payment of money due material men and workmen, which he supposes were paid. Being shown the two receipts of the plaintiff, he said that they had been written by him, save the signature, which was plaintiff's; that he supposed that he had paid plaintiff the money mentioned in the receipt; "if he had not he would not have taken the receipts;" that the payments were made in Rheam's house, in the presence of him and his wife. He also identified the following receipt as wholly written by him:

Digitized by Google

"WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 8, 1903.

"Received from Henry U. Rheam eleven hundred and thirty-five dollars on house No. 644 O st. N. E., to date."

He further said that Rheam had paid for the work done and material furnished to the amount of said receipt, else witness would not have given it. He also identified an order given by him to Rheam on Aug. 14, 1903, to one Riley, for $9.50, for tarring done on the house. He said, also, that he threw up the job some time in August, and that plaintiff had then finished all the brickwork contracted for except the pillars for the porch.

John W. Scott, a witness for plaintiff, testified that Rheam and plaintiff met in his presence in the fall of 1903; that plaintiff asked him for his money, and Rheam asked him why he did not finish the work, saying: "You go ahead and finish your work, and get an order from Plager, and I will pay you."

L. W. Riley testified, for the plaintiff, that Plager employed him to tar the building, and did not see Rheam about it; that Rheam directed work to be done, and paid him on the order from Plager; "that he did not go after the money, but Rheam came to his house and paid him after he had made a 'draw' from the building association."

William H. Chappell, for plaintiff, testified that he was a stone cutter, and had done work for defendants; that he estimated to furnish Indiana limestone, which he delivered; but it was returned and he furnished brownstone; that this stone was more expensive than that he had agreed to furnish; that no directions were personally given by Rheam; that about two weeks before Plager quit the job he referred witness to Rheam for money, and Rheam said that when he had finished he would pay him; that Rheam told him to get an order from Plager, which he did, and Rheam refused to honor it; but he took it to the building association, and was paid in the "wind up;" that in the "wind up," after Plager quit, Rheam was finishing the house himself.

E. T. Kauffman, for the plaintiff, testified that he had been employed by Plager to do the plumbing, having given the latter a bid, which he accepted; that before starting, Plager took him to Rheam, who told witness that he would be responsible for his money; that Rheam went to a plumbing house and secured the material; that he received instructions for the work from Mr. and Mrs. Rheam; that he was paid in part by Rheam, and a balance was still due. On cross-examination he said that he did not know who paid the money for his work, as his son had received it for him.

John F. Callan, for plaintiff, testified that he first gave an estimate for the tinning and heating to Rheam, and afterwards to Plager, as he understood that the latter had undertaken the job; that Plager did not finish the house; that he overheard Rheam tell another man that "there was dollar for dollar for every man who did work on the building, and that he would see that it was paid; that no man who did work on this building would lose a cent"; that he received money from Rheam on Plager's order, and that he did not finish his work.

Plaintiff having closed, the defendant Julia Rheam moved for an instruction to the jury to return a verdict in her favor, because she had not been shown liable for plaintiff's claim. This motion was denied and exception was taken.

On behalf of defendants, Henry U. Rheam testified, substantially, that Plager drew the plans and specifications for his house, and that he first intended to build it himself; that he changed his mind and submitted the same to Plager and two other independent contractors, I. W. Downing and Mr. Moxley; that he accepted Plager's bid of $2,350, and that the latter began work in June and continued until August 8, at which time the house was under roof and the brickwork completed, except that required for the front porch; that witness retained no control of the work, and looked to Plager for everything; that Martin contracted with Plager, and witness gave him no orders; that when he could not get Plager to attend to wetting the bricks he sent the building inspector to look after it; that he saw plaintiff before Plager quit the job, who complained that he could not get his money from Plager, and witness told him he had better finish his work before talking about money; that Plager had given him two receipts signed by plaintiff; that he had paid no workmen or material men except upon written orders from Plager; that he never promised to pay plaintiff anything; that the first plumber threw up the job because he could not get material on credit and witness refused to stand for it; that Plager brought the second plumber, and at Plager's request, witness agreed to stand good for the material needed; that the price came out of the money he was to pay Plager, and that the tarring was paid for on a written order from Plager, because Riley had refused to do it unless witness promised to pay him; that he did not change the stone; that Plager threw up the job about August 8, and witness notified him he would finish it at his expense; that he had then paid Plager $1,135, which included all money that he had paid on Plager's orders; that after August 8 neither plaintiff nor Plager did any work on the house; that witness was compelled to finish the house on Plager's failure, and paid out altogether $2,559.38, including the $1,135 paid to Plager; that he had lost $209.38 through Plager's failure and had to give his own services in addition, which were worth about $100; that witness had some money when the contract was made, and had arranged with the Perpetual Building Association for the loan of the remainder. On cross-examination he said that he had known Plager for twenty-five years, and had required no bond from him for the performance of his contract; that he did not disburse the money for work on the house; that the $1,135 receipt of Plager included money paid for plumbing material which he had stood for to the dealers; that he did not take any of the bricks that plaintiff bought, to see if they were all right; that he did get some from the brickyard, and called Plager's attention to the fact that they were of an inferior quality; that he was around the building "pretty much all the time."

Digitized by Google

Julia A. Rheam testified, substantially, that she had given no orders to plaintiff or any one else; that she was present in her house when plaintiff received the money mentioned in his receipt to Plager, who paid him the money, and gave the receipts to her.

J. W. Downing, for the defendants, testified that he was a carpenter and contractor, and had bid on the plans for the house; that he knew that Moxley and Plager also made bids; that he did some carpenter's work on the house afterwards, for which he was paid by Plager's foreman; that Martin made him an estimate for the brickwork in writing, which had been lost. Defendants then offered to show by the witness that plaintiff had made an estimate for the same brickwork, but at a less figure than that made to Plager. The court sustained plaintiff's objection to this evidence and defendants excepted.

Upon the close of the evidence, the defendants prayed the court to instruct the jury: 1. To return a verdict for Julia A. Rheam. 2. To return a verdict for Henry U. Rheam. 3. That under the evidence Plager was an independent contractor. 4. That if Plager contracted to erect the house and furnish the labor and material therefor, for a certain sum, free from the control and direction of the defendants, he was an independent contractor, and their verdict should be for defendants, unless they found from the evidence that the defendants legally bound themselves to pay the plaintiff for his work. 5. That even if they believed from the evidence that defendant Rheam told plaintiff he would stand good for the money due him from Plager, or that he would pay him, or see him paid therefor, that such promise was not enforceable unless they found there was a consideration therefor, and that such promise, if made, was one to pay the debt of another, and if not in writing, could not be enforced. These prayers were in turn refused and exception noted.

The court then, over the objection of the defendants, charged the jury, among other things, as follows:

"That the contract of building in this case differed from most contracts of that sort, with which the jury was doubtless familiar, especially with the provisions for a bond and payments to the contractor at stated times as the work progressed; that it was a question for the jury to decide whether or not, under the arrangement between the defendants and Mr. Plager, as it appeared from all the evidence in the case, Plager was an independent contractor, and the contract between the defendants and Plager was a bona fide contract to erect the house, or was a mere form under which some other matters or things were to be done," and said in the course of his charge to the jury, in reference to the receipt of $1,135 given by Plager to Rheam: "I would take it that the receipt is in full payment of money due to date, not that it included all the work done, or that it paid for all the work done;" also, "I suppose it meant cash payment to date, not for all the work done;" but I leave all this for the jury to decide, and that "they were to decide whether the contract between Plager and Rheam was made in good faith, or whether from all the evidence Plager was merely a superintendent."

Under these instructions, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed to be due; and from the judgment entered thereon the defendants have prosecuted this appeal.

We are of the opinion that this judgment must be reversed upon grounds that will be stated as briefly as the conditions permit, without undertaking a separate discussion of the errors that have been assigned upon the numerous exceptions taken on the trial.

The motion on behalf of the wife, Julia A. Rheam, for an instruction to the jury to return a verdict in her favor should have been granted. Aside from the fact that she had an interest in the lot, it does not appear that she had any connection with the subject-matter of the action. It is not pretended that she undertook to have the house erected or invited any bid therefor. Nor is there any evidence tending to show that she entered into any contract with plaintiff, that she undertook to pay him anything, or that she assumed any liability for contracts or promises that her husband may have made. Assuming that a married woman may be separately bound by a contract made on her behalf by an authorized agent, such agency is not implied from her relation to her husband, or from the further fact that he may have undertaken an enterprise with a view to her benefit also. Surely, the husband may enter into a contract, having in view the ultimate benefit of his wife as well as himself, without thereby bringing her under a legal obligation. It is incumbent upon the other contracting party, if not satisfied with the husband's responsibility, to secure that of the wife in some way recognized by the law.

Digitized by Google

After refusing the instruction to return a verdict for each defendant, the case was submitted to the jury upon the theory that there was sufficient evidence from which they might deduce the inference that the contract with Plager, which the plaintiff called for and read, was a mere form or pretense, not intended in good faith to operate as an independent contract for the complete erection of the house, and that Plager was, therefore, nothing more, in fact, than a mere superintendent for the owners and real builders. In this view of the tendency of the evidence, the court should, at least, have charged the jury that the legal effect of the accepted bid was to make Plager an independent contractor for the erection of the house, according to the plans and specifications, at the price stipulated. The contract was in writing, and it was for the court to declare its meaning and legal effect, when requested so to do, and not leave it to the determination of the jury. And then the jury should have been charged that this contract relation so created made a prima facie case, entitling the defendants to a verdict, unless they should believe from the evidence that it was not a bona fide contract, but a mere form intended to conceal the real relations of the parties.

In our opinion, however, the evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, assuming its truth and giving him the benefit of every inference fairly deducible therefrom, was not legally sufficient to warrant the submission of the issue to the jury at all.

It is evident from the testimony of Plager, who was called by the plaintiff, that his bid was made and accepted in good faith, that he invited bids from sub-contractors for parts of the work, and went about the performance of his contract until his failure in August, 1903. It is also evident that the plaintiff regarded him as the contractor. He submitted his bid to Plager, received his acceptance, and required no acceptance or guaranty from the defendants. His receipts for money were given to Plager. As late as August 21, 1903, some time after his work had been done, and Plager had failed, his attorney wrote to Rheam saying that unless his debt should be promptly paid, he would proceed to enforce a mechanic's lien for the value of his labor and materials furnished "under and by virtue of a contract with William S. Plager, original contractor with owner." He had then exhausted all ordinary means to secure payment from Rheam, and knew as much at the time as he did when he testified of the actual relations of Plager and Rheam. Other sub-contractors, who testified for the plaintiff, understood that Plager was an independent contractor and made their bids to him. The circumstances that Rheam was a constant visitor, watching the progress of the work and raising frequent objections to the character of the materials, do not of themselves, or in combination with others, warrant the inference of a fact in opposition to or inconsistent with the fact before mentioned. It was clearly within the right of the owner to ascertain if the work of contractor and sub-contractors was being done in accordance with the plans and specifications, and it was reasonable to exercise that right. Regarding his objection to the Indiana limestone and its substitution by brownstone, the inference is that the latter and not the former was required by the specifications, in the absence of proof to the contrary. Again, it does not appear that the first plumber engaged by Plager was not objected to on the grounds of incompetency or inability to furnish the necessary materials. The circumstance that Rheam guaranteed the payment for the material furnished by the dealer to the second plumber bears, if anything, in favor of the defendant rather than the plaintiff. The dealer, acting upon the assumption that Plager was an independent contractor, and not the superintendent and agent of the owner, was not satisfied to credit Plager, and therefore required the owner "to stand for it." The same course was open to the plaintiff. There was nothing unreasonable or so unusual in the owner's conduct as to warrant an inference that he was concealing his true relations with Plager from the public. Strong reliance is placed upon the following circumstance: Plaintiff testified that some time after the 11th of July he asked Rheam for payment, and Rheam said, "I will stand responsible for it; you finish your work, and get an order, and I will pay you." Another witness gives the date of this statement as in the fall of 1903. If the first is correct, Plager had not then abandoned the contract; if the latter, then he had abandoned it some time before. At any rate, the work for which plaintiff has sued had then been done.

It is more reasonable to suppose, from the reference to Plager and the order from him, that the date given by plaintiff himself is the correct one. As this was not introduced as evidence of a special promise to pay, on which the action was based, but as a circumstance bearing on the true relation of defendant and Plager, it is unnecessary to consider the objections of the defendant that it was a verbal promise to pay the debt of another, as well as without valuable consideration to support it. Considered as such a circumstance, it is entitled to no weight. It simply shows, on the one hand, that plaintiff was trying to get his money, and on the other, that the defendant, his relations with Plager not being then severed, was willing to pay him, as he had done others, on the strength of his obligation to Plager. Plaintiff had not then completed his contract by building the pillars of the porch, nor has he ever done so. Subsequently, and without this completion, he obtained an order from Plager, which the defendant refused to honor. In this connection it is to be remembered that defendant's testimony to the effect that he owed Plager nothing, and that he was compelled to pay out more money to complete the house than Plager's contract called for, was not denied by Plager, who had the opportunity to do so, if untrue. Contracts for the erection of houses would be of little or no protection to the owners of property if they could be overturned by evidence of the character relied on by the plaintiff.

Digitized by Google

For error in not instructing the jury to return a verdict for both defendants, the judgment will be reversed, with costs, and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion. It is so ordered.

Reversed.

Carriers—Liability for Baggage.—An initial carrier of baggage is not liable, except by special agreement, beyond its own route. Soviero v. Wescott Express Co., 94 N. Y. Supp. 375.

Carriers—Failure to Read Express Receipts.—An owner of baggage delivered to an express company for transfer held not guilty of negligence per se in accepting an express receipt containing a limited liability clause without reading the same. Colvin v. Fargo, 94 N. Y. Supp. 377.

Carriers—Care Required of Drunken Passenger.—Where a conductor accepts an unattended passenger who is so drunk as to be unable to look after himself, the railroad company is bound to exercise reasonable care to protect him. Price v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co. (Ark.), 88 S. W. Rep. 575.

Negligence—Care Required.—Where the invitation of the owner of a building leads a person into the basement thereof, the owner is liable for a failure to exercise reasonable care to prevent such person from falling into an ash pit there. Withers v. Brooklyn Real Estate Exch., 94 N. Y. Supp. 328.

Negligence—Doctrine of Discovered Peril.—The doctrine of discovered peril has no application, in the absence of actual and timely knowledge on the part of the person causing the injury of the peril of the person injured. Cardwell v. Gulf, B. & G. N. Ry. Co. (Tex.), 88 S. W. Rep. 422.

Negligence—Fellow Servants.—Where plaintiff was injured by the agency of fellow employees and defendant company, the presence and assistance of the act of the fellow servants held not to exculpate the other agency. Ray v. Pecos & N. T. Ry. Co. (Tex.), 88 S. W. Rep. 466.

Master and Servant—Duration of Relation.—A day laborer held to occupy, towards his master, the relation of servant while going to get his dinner pail after the day's work was done. Taylor v. George W. Bush & Sons Co. (Del.), 61 Atl. Rep. 236.

Master and Servant—Master's Duty to Inspect Street Cars.—A street railroad company held liable for injuries to a servant arising from defective inspection. Crawford v. United Rys. & Electric Co. of Baltimore, Md., 61 Atl. Rep. 287.

Washington COLLEGE OF LAW

1328 NEW YORK AVENUE

REOPENS MONDAY, OCTOBER 2,

7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,

LL. M., DEAN,

'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

BOARD ELECTION NOTICE.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Law Reporter Company of Washington City will be held at the office of the company, 518 Fifth st. N. W., on Monday, January 8, 1906, for the purpose of electing nine directors to serve for the ensuing year. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

H. RANDALL WEBB, Secretary.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Lancaster & Smith, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William Edward Frazier, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of December, 1905. LAURA C. FRAZIER, 769 10th st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,256. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

Worthington, Heald & Frailey, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Albert F. Fox, Executor and Trustee, v. Sophia C. Pitchlyn et al. No. 23,861. Equity.

This cause, being referred to me to report distribution of the fund, I shall proceed with the said reference on Wednesday, the 10th day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the auditor's rooms in the United States Court House in this city. All persons having claims against Caroline M. Pitchlyn, deceased, or her estate, are notified to present the same, with the proofs, at the said time and place. JAS. G. PAYNE, Auditor. 51-3t

The Law Reporter Printing Company's office is now the cleanest, most comfortable and best conducted one in the city of Washington, having a head for every department of the business. It will be kept so, in order that the public may be expeditiously served.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary E. Bryan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of December, 1905. SOPHIA L. KLEINDIENST, 812 23d st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,338. Adm. [Seal.] 51-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hugh Hurney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of December, 1905. MARY A. HURNEY, 930 25th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,228. Admn. [Seal.] 51-3t

John Lewis Smith and James B. Archer, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Gertrude J. Parkinson v. Robert M. Parkinson.
No. 25,670. Equity Docket, No. ——.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the defendant from bed and board upon the ground of desertion and non-support. Provided a copy hereof be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 12th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 51-3t

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
John A. Ruppert et al. v. Rosa Sauter et al.
In Equity, No. 25,809.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

The object of this suit is to obtain a judicial construction or interpretation of the last will and testament of Agnes M. Beuchert, deceased. On motion of complainants, it is, this 12th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Daisy Sauter, Eva Singleton, Joseph Wirth, and Antonio Bohrman, cause their appearance to be entered herein, on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in the case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 51-3t

John S. Alleman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth C. Oppermann, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of December, 1905. ALBERT F. FOX, 911 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,221. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

Legal Notices.

Douglas & Douglas, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William H. Hoeke, Complainant, v. Sidney F. Marshall et al., Defendant.
Equity No. 23,455.

Sydney F. Marshall and Charles A. Douglas, trustees, having reported to the court the sale of all the right, title, and interest of Miletus J. Wine, deceased, subject to all incumbrances, in the following described real estate, situated in the District of Columbia, to wit: All of block X; all of block 1; lots 2 to 13, both inclusive, in block 3; lots 16, and 19 to 27, both inclusive, in block 5; lot 17, in block 7; all of blocks 9, 11, 15, 17, and 18; lots 15, and 25 to 30, both inclusive, in block 19; all of block 20; lots 1, 2, 5 to 19, both inclusive, and 22 to 30, both inclusive, in block 21; all of blocks 22, 23, and 24; lots 1 to 37, both inclusive, and that part of lot 38, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 25; all of blocks 26, 27, 28, and 29; lots 1 to 16, both inclusive, 20 to 33, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 17, 18, 34, 35, and 36, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 30; all of blocks 31, 32, and 33; lots 1 to 11, both inclusive, and 20 to 29, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 12, 13, 14, 30, and 31, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 35; all of blocks 36, 37, 38, and 39; lots 1 to 7, both inclusive, and 20 to 24, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 8, 9, 25, 26, and 27, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 40; all of blocks 41, 42, and 43; lots 1, 2, and 20, and those parts of lots 3, 4, 5, 21, and 22, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 44; all of blocks 45 and 46; lots 1 to 14, both inclusive; 16 to 27, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 15, 28, 29, and 30, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 47; and all of blocks 49, 50, and 51—all in Charles A. McEunn's subdivision known as "Marshall," as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in county book No. 6, at page 39—to John P. F. White for the sum of one thousand two hundred dollars ($1,200), it is, by the court, this 15th day of December, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 16th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Associate Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 51-3t

W. M. Ellison, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Benjamin F. Kincannon, Deceased.
No. 13,330. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration on said estate, by Mattie A. Kincannon, it is ordered this 20th day of December, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Redden, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 25th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 51-3t

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Robert I. Nevitt, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 8th day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 20th day of December, 1905. ANNIE A. NEVITT, by Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,522. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

[Filed December 11, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.]

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Holding an Equity Court.

Ele W. Tuller vs. Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Isaac N. Hansbrough, Deceased. No. 25,780, Equity.

The object of this suit is to construe the conveyance to Ele W. Tuller and Isaac N. Hansbrough, as vesting in the complainant the fee simple title, by survivorship, and of the sale of the real estate situated in the District of Columbia, and in square 113 and bounded and described as follows: being lots 15 and 16 in said square, bounded on the north by Road street, on the south by Stoddard street, on the east by Green street, and on the west by Washington street, said two lots fronting on Washington street, opposite Cook's Park. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs and devisees of Isaac N. Hansbrough, deceased. On motion of the complainant, by Brandenburg & Brandenburg, his solicitors, it is this 11th day of December, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Re-
[Seal] porter and in The Washington Post. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 22-29, Jan. 19-26, Feb. 16-23

Robert P. Shealey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Thomas Montgomery, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of December, 1905. MARGARET M. MONTGOMERY, 401 st. N. E. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,230. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

E. F. Colladay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louis Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 2d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 8th day of December, 1905. MARIA MEYER, 1744 8th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,125. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William A. Gordon et al. v. William H. Collins et al.
Equity No. 25,185.

The object of this suit is to substitute new trustees under the will of William C. Hazel, deceased, for management of certain property in square 1256, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William Joseph Havenner, Mamie Gray, John Gray, Elizabeth M. Gray, and Jeanne Swart, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. WEN-
[Seal] DELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Legal Notices.

John D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Marguerite M. O'Neill, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. HARRY H. NICHOLS, 509 O st. N. W.; JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,292. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

W. E. Ambrose, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Lucinda Bailey, Deceased.
Admn. No. 12,989.

Upon hearing the report of William E. Ambrose, administrator c. t. a. of Lucinda Bailey, deceased, stating that he has sold lot seven (7) in square one thousand and one (1001) to John Appich for the sum of eighteen hundred dollars ($1,800.00), it is, this 8th day of December, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 8th day of January, 1906. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The [Seal] Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Lee Eugene Turner et al. v. Emily A. Moxley et al.
Equity No. 16,875.

Upon consideration of the report of the trustees, this day filed, it is by this court, this 23d day of November, 1905, ordered that the trustees be, and they are hereby, authorized to accept the offer of W. Riley Deeble for the purchase of the property known as Nos. 1117, 1119, and 1121 Thirtieth street northwest, located on the north 12½ feet of lot 188, and the south 24 feet of lot 186, in square 1196, in this city and District, for the sum of $2,750 cash, and upon compliance with the terms of said offer and final confirmation of the sale, to make conveyance of said property to the said purchaser or his assigns. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and [Seal] The Washington Post before said final ratification. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. L. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Chas. W. Darr and R. A. Curtin, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Mary E. Cook, Deceased.
No. 13,247. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Matthew E. Cook, it is ordered this 13th day of December, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Hardesty, Reeze Hardesty, Georgiana Penn, Frank C. Farr, and Bowman Farr, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 15th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be
[Seal] not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court 50-3t

This office and store opens at eight o'clock in the morning and closes at six, but the workshop closes at half past five, and all work wanted after that hour must be paid for at more than day rates. We call your attention to this that there may be no misunderstanding. The Law Reporter Company, 513 Fifth Street, N. W.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

E. P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William E. Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. ELLWOOD P. MOREY, Wash. Loan and Trust Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,210. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Peter F. Hornig, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of December, 1905. JOHN G. HORNIG, 1020 B st. N. E.; GOTTFRIED HORNIG, 937 H st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,326. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Worthington, Heald & Frailey, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth A. Pyne, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. JOHN PYNE, 157 E. Ninety-fifth st., New York; HENRY R. PYNE, 106 E. Fifty-fifth st., New York City. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,305. Admn. [Seal.] 50-3t

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Carl L. Davis, Ralph P. Barnard, Trustee, Guy H. Johnson, Trustee, and Isadore T. Young, Complainants, v. Henry F. B. Pardon, and his Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees, Defendants. No. 25,759. In Equity, Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to reform a deed recorded in Liber J. A. S. 164, at folio 419, one of the land records of the District of Columbia, conveying part of lot numbered one (1), in square numbered seven hundred and ninety-three (793), improved by the dwelling No. 423 Fourth street southeast, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and to establish of record the title of the complainant thereto, subject to the deed of trust, as prayed for in the original bill in this suit. On motion of the complainant, it is by the court this 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that Henry F. B. Pardon and his unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees (if he be dead) cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter next after the day of this order, good cause for shortening said [Seal] period of such publication having been shown. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Justice blanks of every description for sale at this office.

Legal Notices

J. Paul Earnest, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Mary J. Watkins to purchase at private sale for $2,541.78, lots fifteen (15) and sixteen (16), in block nine (9), of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lots be ratified and confirmed as reported, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 14th day of January, A. D. 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a [Seal] week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

Filed December 8, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mary Clark et al. v. The District of Columbia et al.
No. 25,461. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to have set aside and declared null and void certain tax sales made by the District of Columbia to the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, of the property known and described as part of lots one (1) and twenty-one (21), in square 581, improved by premises No. 437 and 439 2d st. S. W., Washington, D. C., and lot 35, square 471, improved by No. 616 K st. S. W., and to have certain deeds, based upon said illegal tax sales, set aside and declared dull and void. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 8th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. [Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Attorneys

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding the Probate Court.

In re Estate of John J. Reilly, Deceased.
Administration. No. 9121.

On consideration of the report of Julia J. Byrne, administratrix, it is, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered that the offer of William O'Mealey, to purchase the property known as lots 31 and 32, in block 6, Buena Vista Heights, in the county of Washington, D. C., for the sum of $800.00, payable in one-third cash and the balance in one and two years, with interest at 6%, said deferred payments to be secured by deed of trust upon the property sold, be, and the same is hereby, accepted, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three suc- [Seal] cessive weeks before said date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

E. H. Thomas, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor having reported that he has sold premises No. 1617 Fourth street Northwest, Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered forty-eight (48) in square five hundred and twenty (520) according to Jesse D. Gibb's subdivision of part of square aforesaid, as recorded in Liber No. 20, folio 83, of the surveyor's office, District of Columbia, to George W. Ray, for twenty-six hundred ($2,600) dollars, all cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered, that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day. [Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Blair & Thom, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Julia R. Balch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. WILLIAM C. BALCH, 908 O st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,298. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Christian Sproesser, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of December, 1905. KATHARINA SPROESSER, 807 G st, N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,311. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

Jos. A. Burkart, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Frank B. Marlow, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. JOS. A. BURKART, 516 Corcoran Bldg. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,309. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Celia E. V. Beall, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. LIZZIE B. GLADMON, care of Gordon & Gordon, 330 4½ st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,871. Admn. [Seal.] 49-3t

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was, by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, granted letters of administration on the estate of Carl A. Lindquist, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Wednesday, the 27th day of December, 1905, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue, are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. EDWIN B. HAY. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,457. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Legal Notices.

James F. Bundy and Geo. F. Collins, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Howard Broadus, Complainant, v. Georgiana Broadus and Alphonso Waters, Defendants.
No. 24,903. Equity Docket No. 55.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce on the grounds of adultery. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 29th day of November, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Alphonso Waters, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order, said order to be published in The Law Reporter and The Bee once a week for three weeks; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default.
[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice.
True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 49-3t

Geo. E. Tralles and A. A. Birney, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the State of New York, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Ellen Larguey, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 1st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 1st day of December, 1905. ELLEN KILROY, Oneida, N. Y. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,310. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Jos. A. Burkhart, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Johanna Kennedy, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. RICHARD A. O'BRIEN, 319 B St. N. E. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,241. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Filed December 7, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.
L. P. Harlow, Solicitor

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
Violet Simpson, Complainant, v. Ollie Simpson, Ella Giesling, Defendants. Eq. No. 25,836. Doc. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce. On motion of the complainant it is this 7th day of December, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times.
[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice.
A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. Dec. 8-15-22

Lambert & Baker, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Daniel F. Shea, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. ANNIE E. SHEA, 1919 17th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,276. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

W. Russell Graham, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Joseph S. Tucker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. DE WITT CLINTON L. TUCKER, 1320 K St., S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,212. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

D. W. Baker and Fountain Peyton, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William O. Holmes, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 4th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 4th day of December, 1905. WALTER H. BROOKS, 1425 Corcoran st. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,012. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

John S. Alleman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of James P. Wilson, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. EMMA FLORENCE WILSON, 811 North Carolina ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,320. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Berry & Minor and Hugh B. Rowland, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Henry Van Ness Boynton, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 5th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 5th day of December, 1905. HELEN AUGUSTA BOYNTON, care of Berry and Minor, 705 Colorado Bldg., Washington, D. C. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,008. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Campbell Carrington, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Mabel Huff, Complainant, v. Warren Rutledge Huff, Defendant, Clara De Marr, Co-respondent.
No. 25,658. Equity Docket No. 57.

The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce upon the grounds of adultery. Provided a copy of this order be published once each week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. On motion of the complainant, by her solicitor, Campbell Carrington, it is this 6th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant, Warren Rutledge Huff, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] Dec. 8-15-22

Legal Notices.

Edward A. Newman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Aretta G. Condict, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 6th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 6th day of December, 1905. FRANK G. CARPENTER, 1318 Vermont ave. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,886. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

F. R. Keys, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.
John H. Robinson v. Ella Robinson and George Mahoney, Co-respondent. Equity, No. 25,698.

On motion of plaintiff, by F. R. Keys, his solicitor, it is ordered that the defendant, Ella Robinson, and the co-respondent, George Mahoney, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the case will be proceeded with as in case of default. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce from the defendant upon the ground of adultery. This order to be published once a week for three consecutive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times. Done this 3d day of November, 1905. By the Court. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 49-3t

W. H. Robeson, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of James Smith, Deceased.
No. 11,789.
ORDER.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court: This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of the administrator, and it appearing to the court that the administrator has appointed the 29th day of January, 1906, for a meeting of persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue out of the estate of James Smith, the said action of the administrator in fixing said date is on this, the 1st day of December, 1905, hereby approved. And it further appearing to the court that all the heirs at law, next of kin, and distributees of the said James Smith, deceased, are non-residents of the District of Columbia, and so far as known to the said Samuel A. Putman, administrator, are named as follows: Walter Harrington, Henry Harrington, Frank Harrington, John A. Smith, Martha Ann David, nee Woodworth, and Charles Woodworth. And it further appearing to the court that the said Martha Ann David is a person of unsound mind and without committee or guardian, William H. Woodwell is hereby appointed a guardian ad litem for the purpose of the preservation of her interests in this proceeding, if any she have. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to said parties by said administrator by registered letter; and also that a copy of this order be published in The Washington Times and The Washington Law Reporter in each week for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to said 29th day of January, 1906. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. [Seal] 49-4t

George C. Gertman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of August G. Romacker, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 7th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 7th day of December, 1905. GEORGE P. ZURHORST, 301 E. Cap. st. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,318. Administration. [Seal.] 49-3t

Digitized by Google

The Washington Law Reporter

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF LEGAL INFORMATION.
ESTABLISHED 1874.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION $3. SINGLE COPIES 10 CENTS

RICHARD A. FORD, Editor. MARK W. MOORE, Gen. Manager.

VOL. 33 (WEEKLY) No. 52

Published by
THE LAW REPORTER COMPANY OF WASHINGTON CITY
Incorporated 1886.
Office of Publication: 518-520 FIFTH STREET, N.W.
Telephone Main 828.

WASHINGTON, D. C. - - - DECEMBER 29, 1905

CONTENTS.

Editorial 817
In Memoriam—William John Miller 818
SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
Emilie M. Darneille v. Phil. H. Tuck et al 821
COURT OF APPEALS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA:
William W. Payne et al, appellants, v. Leigh Robinson, executor, et al 825
Legal Notices 828

Our Thirty-third Volume.

With this issue we conclude the thirty-third volume of THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER. For practically a third of a century the paper has been devoted to the interests of the legal profession in this District; and if we may judge from the expressions of appreciation constantly received, the service rendered has been of no small value. During a portion of the time it afforded the only means for the preservation of the opinions of our courts; and even since provision was made by law for reporting the opinions of the Court of Appeals, its prompt publication of those opinions has proven most helpful and advantageous to the members of the bar and the courts. It yet continues the only medium for preserving in permanent form the decisions of the Supreme Court of the District in important cases. The opinions of that court reported in these columns during the past twelve years, and which will not be found elsewhere, would make several volumes. Many of these are cases of exceptional interest and importance, frequently cited as authorities, not only in our local courts but in other jurisdictions. Several such cases will be found included in the contents of the present volume.

The value of THE LAW REPORTER in this particular could be very greatly enhanced if we could enlist the assistance of the members of the bar. Many of them have placed us under obligations in this respect during past years, and we will be glad to see the number largely increased. Few courts possess the wide jurisdiction exercised by the Supreme Court of this District, by reason of its location at the Capital of the Nation. Questions of interest, not only locally, but to the country at large, are constantly being presented for determination; and we shall be glad to do all in our power to aid in affording a permanent record of such adjudications.

The present volume will be found to contain an even larger number of opinions reported than usual. Many of them deal with questions of great importance, involving the construction of sections of our code. The contents of the volume are practically the equivalent of several volumes of reports.

The table of cases reported and index will be furnished to our readers during the coming week. Meanwhile those who have not placed their orders for the bound volume for 1905 should do so without delay.

The 1905 Supplement to U. S. Compiled Statutes.

We are indebted to the publishers, the West Publishing Company, of St. Paul, Minn., for a copy of the 1905 Supplement to the U. S. Compiled Statutes, 1901, previously issued by that company, and which have proven so valuable and helpful. The present volume is a cumulative supplement, taking the place of the 1903 supplement, and bringing the original work down to date. It contains the general laws of the 57th and 58th Congresses, arranged in the order of the 1901 volume, with annotations explaining fully the relation of the amendments and new legislation to the older statutes, and a full index, complete tables, etc. Matters which are excluded from the text by their temporary nature are referred to in the notes. The Compiled Statutes, with this supplement for 1905, show all the general laws of the United States now in force.

The compilation is made by John A. Mallory, assisted by members of the publisher's editorial staff, which is a guarantee that the work has been well and accurately done. Typographically the volume is all that could be desired, as may be said of all the publications issued by the West Company. The price of the volume is $5 delivered, and it may be ordered through this office.

Principal and Agent—Proof of Agency.—Agency may not be established by the declarations of an alleged agent, nor can his admissions and statements bind the principal until the agency is shown. Higley v. Dennis (Tex.), 88 S. W. Rep. 400.

Digitized by Google

In Memoriam.

WILLIAM JOHN MILLER.

A meeting of the bar of the District was held on October 27, 1905, to pay respect to the memory of the late William John Miller. Mr. Hugh T. Taggart called the meeting to order, and Mr. Chas. W. Clagett acted as secretary.

Mr. Justice Ashley M. Gould was chosen to preside, and in taking the chair spoke as follows:

Address of Mr. Justice Gould.

Brethren of the Bar: The object of this meeting has already been stated by the president of the Bar Association. I do not suppose it is expected that the presiding officer make any remarks, as that office is to be performed by other gentlemen. This has occurred to me, however, as I face this audience. I have a picture, taken in 1897 I think, of the then members of the bar, or a very large number of them, and last evening I happened, without having this meeting in my mind, to look at that picture as it hangs on my library wall, and I was impressed, very deeply impressed, with the large number of those whose pictures formed a part of that group, making up at that time the members of the bar, who have passed beyond the "great divide," and are no longer among us. And Mr. Worthington remarked to me as I sat beside him just now that in his case, after his long experience at the bar, the number of those whose memory he now most cherishes is greater than the number of the actual practitioners at the bar today. And it is fit and proper that as these men who have borne their part honorably and well in discharging the important duties of lawyers in this community pass away, the bar should gather together and express, through formal action, what is in the hearts of every one of us towards those members whose memory we honor, in the form of permanent resolutions.

The following committee was appointed to report appropriate resolutions: Mr. Eugene Carusi, Mr. William F. Mattingly, Mr. Nathaniel Wilson, Mr. Frank W. Hackett, Mr. J. J. Darlington, Mr. R. Ross Perry, Mr. James G. Payne, Mr. William A. Gordon, Mr. T. Percy Myers.

The committee reported, through Mr. Eugene Carusi, who, in presenting the report, spoke as follows:

Address of Mr. Eugene Carusi.

Mr. Chairman, William John Miller died on the 15th day of May last, and on the following day a sketch of his life was published in the columns of The Washington Post. It is, therefore, unnecessary in presenting these resolutions for me to repeat what has already been said about our deceased brother. But the long and intimate association that existed between us prompts me to bear testimony to the noble qualities of heart and mind which so eminently distinguished him, and which endeared him to every one who knew him; and yet, this very intimacy, and the esteem and affection engendered by it, makes it difficult for me to pronounce even the simplest words of eulogy.

Mr. Chairman, he was an honest, brave, and loyal man. Not only did he never do a dishonorable thing, but I believe he never entertained a dishonorable thought. He was incapable of a mean or dishonest action. His perfect integrity impressed itself upon everybody who came into business relations with him, and during his long career at this bar, in no instance has anyone ever questioned his honor, his truthfulness, or his fairness. But not the least of his virtues, sir, was his charity. I do not mean charity in that sense which consists of almsgiving, although his hands were ever ready to reach out to help the poor and afflicted, but charity in that broader sense which recognizing the brotherhood of man, renders him kind and lenient in his judgment of others. Ever mindful of the precept which commands us to say nothing of the dead except what is good and true, he extended the scope of that obligation by applying it to the living as well as to the dead. Nobody ever heard him speak a word of evil about another. He was loyal to all his obligations, professional and otherwise. Seeing his duty clear, he never hesitated to perform it. No influence could swerve him; no personal considerations could make him deviate from the path of right. He was insensible to fear, either physical or moral.

Mr. Chairman, in the death of William John Miller the community has lost a good and useful citizen, and the profession of the law, in the practice of which he continued up to the last days of his life, has lost an honored member.

I will now read the resolutions which have been prepared by the committee:

Resolved: That in the death of William John Miller, who for nearly half a century was an active member of the bar of this District, the bar has suffered a loss which is deeply felt by his contemporaries and by all of the profession who knew him.

During his long and honorable career he was a consistent example of the best traditions of the bar. He was universally respected for his courage, his integrity, his courtesy, and remarkable industry, and was noted to an unusual degree for the fairness and generosity which characterized all his dealings with his brother lawyers, the younger as well as the older, in court and out of court.

So perfect was the confidence placed in his integrity and truthfulness that his simple word carried all the weight of the most formal stipulation.

His perfect integrity won for him a secure place in the respect and confidence of all his fellow citizens that knew him, and his long and active participation in a broad and varied field of charitable enterprise has made the whole community his debtor, and entitles him to an abiding place in their grateful and charitable remembrance.

Resolved: That our sympathy, with a copy of these resolutions, be tendered his widow and children and that the Court of General Terms be requested to cause a copy of these resolutions to be entered upon its records.

Address of Mr. Frank W. Hackett.

Mr. Chairman: The motion for the adoption of these resolutions I second with all my heart.

Digitized by Google

They are expressed in moderate terms, but so far as they describe our brother Miller, every word of them is true.

It is the pride of our profession, and one of the bright incentives to a young man entering our profession, that the world can observe how cordial and genuine is the sympathy between brother lawyers, how they esteem each other, and how that esteem in time ripens into affection.

To the layman it may seem somewhat strange that these periods recur of coming together and passing resolutions with regard to our brothers who have passed away, but a little reflection will show how natural it is. This mark of esteem is reserved for men who have been long at the bar and who have been conspicuous for ability and high professional character. At the outset, when a young man enters upon the serious duty of becoming an officer of the court, as an attorney of the court, he is required to be of good moral character. As he proceeds he acts in the open. Every member of the bar, sooner or later, is likely to know something about him. Thus, everything being fair and above board, we get to understand each other, we trust each other, and we recognize the qualities of character, of mind and of heart that each of us may possess. Consequently, we are only too willing to come together and take the satisfaction that there may be in expressing, on occasions like this, our genuine feelings with regard to a brother who has passed away.

It was my fortune to occupy an office in the same building with William John Miller for nearly a quarter of a century, and all of you here, practicing lawyers, know how much propinquity has to do with acquaintance, and also with friendship. We lived in the same quarter of the city, and time and time again have I walked home with him of an evening. Little by little I got to know him very well indeed; and, before I was aware of it, I found that there was hardly anyone in the profession who had laid a firmer hold of my affections than William John Miller. He had animation and buoyancy of spirit; so much so that I was astonished when, at a later period of our intimacy, I found out what his age really was. He was one of the happiest men that I ever knew.

Mr. Miller was a good lawyer. He had a retentive memory, and he prepared his cases with scrupulous care. He had a habit of applying himself to his work with an industry that seemed to have no end. When he drafted a bill in equity, he would follow the old style, and he seemed to think it very important that every word of the old-fashioned, long, and involved English chancery forms should be there.

Now, that was not because he did not see the force and application of brevity, but it was from an ingrained spirit of duty, from the determination that he was going to do for his client everything that mortal man could do; I think it is not an exaggeration to say that no member of this bar ever applied himself more assiduously or with greater fidelity to the cause of a client than did he; and what is better than that, I think our brother Miller had more of an instinctive sense of justice, he knew to a certainty what was right quicker than almost any lawyer whom I can now recall. Mr. Miller never took up the case of a client unless he thought his client was in the right; and he carried that belief up to the very last stage in which he could be of service. I doubt whether any practitioner at this bar has ever been more faithful to his clients than was William John Miller. He has left behind him a bright example of an unbroken devotion to his profession over a long period of years.

But I must not trespass upon the time of this meeting. Let me say to any of the younger members of the bar present who did not happen to know Mr. William John Miller well, that they may be sure that every word of these resolutions voices the man.

Address of Mr. T. Percy Myers.

Mr. Chairman, I do not feel that I can allow this occasion to pass without saying a few words in respect to the memory of Mr. Miller. It was my privilege within a few months after my admission to the bar in this District to have him meet me on the street, I may say, and ask me to take adjoining offices with him, his former associate, Mr. Carusi, having at that time changed his vocation for the time being, and accepted the office of president of a local title insurance company. I was daily associated with Mr. Miller for thirteen years. I think I may say that no man at this bar now, with the exception of Mr. Carusi, knew Mr. Miller better than myself. My friendship and relations with him, as I have said before, began when the association in practice with Mr. Carusi parted.

Mr. Miller was a man who looked into every case before he accepted it, and if he did not believe, and conscientiously believe, that his client was in the right, he would unhesitatingly decline to accept the case. I have known that to occur many, many times. But, as Mr. Hackett has said, when he undertook a case for a client, nothing was left undone. The size of the case counted for naught with him; whether it involved $25 or $50,000 his client received the benefit of the same work, his interests the same consideration. And I think that if we look over the docket of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the cases in which Mr. Miller participated, we will find that he was usually on the right side. I know that of personal knowledge during the thirteen years for which it was my privilege to be associated with him.

Now, as to Mr. Miller's integrity. Sitting side by side with him for thirteen years, seeing, not only his clients come into the office, but people interested on the other side—interested in many ways—I have never once heard a man question Mr. Miller's integrity or truthfulness. I think I can fairly say that there is not a member of the bar who would not have accepted Mr. Miller's word as soon as have accepted his bond.

I have thought, in many cases, that he went to extremes in his conscientiousness, because, in these days of more active life than when he first began practice, I do not think it is the practice of all of us to give the same care to small details that he did. On one occasion I remember of a trusteeship of many years' standing, where there was a small balance in bank, which was counted in the pennies and not in the dollars, and yet Mr. Miller took the better part of a day in ascertaining to whom those few pennies belonged, and he saw that every man entitled received his share.

Digitized by Google

In regard to Mr. Miller as a man and citizen, I think we may look beyond him, to what he has left behind him, and by that I mean his boys. Mr. Miller left surviving him six sons, and I am sure that not one, here or elsewhere, ever heard of a disparaging word spoken of one of them. Their success in life—and there are four of them who have attained success—has been entirely due to the example set by their father. They show today the same industry and integrity and, consequently, are attaining the same success. And when we come to regard the life of a man as a citizen, I do think we should give full credit to the man whose sons are examples and followers of his successful life, for without the example and teachings of the father the career of the sons might be far different.

As my brother Hackett has already said, he had a joyful spirit and a spirit of fairness to all men. He did not judge the man always when he was judging the act. He would many times condemn an act, yet when the condemnation was applied to the person who had committed the act, there was in his charitableness, his generosity of heart, always something that softened his feelings toward the wrong-doer; and I do not think that I have ever known a man—I know that I have not—who so completely won my esteem and loving affection as William John Miller. Had I lost one of my own family I could not have been more deeply grieved, and, I may say, afflicted.

Address of Mr. Samuel R. Bond.

Mr. Chairman: I had not expected to say anything on this occasion, but I am moved at this moment to add a very few but very earnest words of commendation of the life and character of him whose loss we are met to commemorate. I was acquainted with Mr. Miller for nearly, if not quite, forty years. During a large part of that time our residences have been near together, and our offices equally near. We have gone to and fro very frequently; our paths have crossed almost daily: never without a friendly and cheerful greeting between us. I recall just now that on the occasion of the funeral of the late Mr. Justice Cole I was driving to the church where the funeral services were to occur, and met, in front of this courthouse, Mr. Miller, who was crossing toward his office. I accosted him and asked him if he would ride with me to the church where the services were to take place. He said at once that he would be glad to do so; that he had returned that morning from a visit to his son in New York, and he expressed his great surprise and great regret at the sudden death which was the occasion of that meeting. In driving to the church he spoke of others who had recently left our ranks and raised the question, "who among us will be next," and "who of us two will be next?" Little did I think that he would be, if not the next, almost the next, to follow Mr. Justice Cole to that country from whose bourne no traveler returns.

I can agree with everything that has been said in commendation of Mr. Miller; I have felt in my intercourse with him that his spoken word was as good as his written stipulation.

I knew his charitable disposition, and I never, in my intercourse with him, heard him speak harshly toward any other member of this bar. His character was built up from the foundation with virtue, acquirements, and principles of honesty and honor and sterling worth, which, although his loss is great to us, will assure to him—I believe firmly will assure to him—a lasting and eternal reward.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted and the meeting adjourned.

Bankruptcy—Dismissal of Involuntary Petition—Creditors Liable for Expense of Receivership.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, in a recent bankruptcy proceeding (In re Lacoy, reported in the New York Law Journal), held that where, upon commencing a proceeding against a debtor to have him adjudicated a bankrupt, the petitioning creditors applied for and obtained the appointment of a receiver of the debtors' property, and the proceeding was subsequently dismissed as unfounded, the receiver in the meanwhile having entered upon his duties, taken charge of the property, and incurred expenses, the petitioning creditors are liable for the costs and expenses of the receivership. Although there is no express provision in the bankruptcy act to compel the petitioning creditors to pay such costs, the court has implied authority so to do.

As the bankruptcy court has power to make an order directing the payment of the costs of the receivership, it also has power to enforce its lawful order by a proceeding for contempt. Semble, that the enforcement of the contempt proceeding is not equivalent to imprisonment for debt within the meaning of section 990 of the United States Revised Statutes. Semble, section 990 is, by implication, repealed so far as it may conflict with the express provision of section 2, subdivision 13, of the bankruptcy act.

Section 990 has no application to a case in which imprisonment for failure to obey the lawful order of the court is permitted by the law of this State. By such law (section 1241 of the Code of Civil Procedure), disobedience of an order is punishable as and for a contempt where it requires the payment of money to a court or an officer of the court, and the order under review, requiring the payment to the receiver, being an officer of the bankruptcy court, can, therefore, be enforced by punishment for contempt.

Trusts—Transactions with Beneficiaries.—Where sale of property from trustee to beneficiaries was conducted fairly, beneficiaries could not, after lapse of four years, repudiate the transaction and have the sale set aside. Skelding v. Dean (Mich.), 104 N. W. Rep. 410.

Bankruptcy—Claims Against Estate.—Where a claim against a bankrupt's estate was in proper form and duly verified, except in particulars waived, the burden of proof was shifted to the objectors. In re Carter, U. S. D. C., W. D. Ark., 138 Fed. Rep. 846.

Digitized by Google

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

EMILIE M. DARNEILLE
v.
PHIL. H. TUCK ET AL.

MARRIED WOMEN; MORTGAGE OF SEPARATE PROPERTY FOR DEBT OF HUSBAND; SECS. 1154, 1155, CODE D. C., CONSTRUED.

1. Under Sec. 1154, Code D. C., providing that all property of a married woman shall be held to her separate use as fully as if unmarried, and may be disposed of by her by deed, mortgage, etc., as fully as if she were unmarried, a deed of trust of her separate property, executed by her jointly with her husband, to secure an indebtedness of the husband, is valid and enforceable.
2. The proviso to section 1155, Code D. C., declaring "that no married woman shall have power to make any contract as surety or guarantor, or as accommodation drawer, acceptor, maker, or indorser," is limited in its operation to the section in which it occurs—that is, as limiting her power to contract liabilities enforceable by action and execution at law.

No. 25,550, Equity Docket 57. Decided December 22, 1905.

HEARING on bill in equity for an injunction. Bill dismissed.

Mr. L. A. Bailey for the complainant.

Messrs. Gordon & Gordon for the defendants.

Mr. Justice STAFFORD delivered the opinion of the Court:

The complainant is a married woman and the wife of one of the defendants, Philip A. Darneille. The bill is brought to secure an injunction against the sale of her real estate under a deed of trust and also to have a will affecting her title construed. She alleges that she holds the property to her sole and separate use by virtue of a devise from her mother; that the deed of trust in question was executed by herself and her husband March 29, 1904, to secure a note for $19,000 and various interest notes; that there was a previous deed of trust given June 15, 1901, for $15,000, which was in default in the spring of 1904, and the new deed of trust was given to procure means for taking up the former deed of trust to pay interest, taxes, and incumbrances upon the property, and to pay certain debts of the husband; that defendant Keyser lives in Baltimore and is the beneficiary under the present deed of trust, and was also the beneficiary under the $15,000 deed of trust; that the defendant Tuck is a lawyer and acted as attorney for Keyser; that the property has been advertised by the trustee, the defendant Tuck, for sale; that the deed of trust in question was also signed by the daughters of the complainant, and by its terms the surplus upon sale was to be paid to the complainant, her husband and children. She alleges that she signed the notes and deeds solely at the request of her husband and for his benefit, under his persuasion, without advice of counsel, and unconscious that she was incurring any danger of losing the property; that she never read the deed, but relied entirely upon her husband's request; that Keyser never loaned any money to the complainant or to her and her husband; that neither the complainant nor the complainant and her husband were ever indebted to him; that the note for $19,000 and the interest notes were signed by herself and her husband jointly, but were signed by her merely as an accommodation maker, as all the defendants knew; that the deed as to her was without consideration, and she was only a surety or guarantor, as the defendants knew. She alleges that it was without her knowledge or consent that the deed was so drawn as to create, or attempt to create, a trust estate in said property for her husband and children; that the deed was so drawn by some one acting in the interest of Keyser, with full knowledge of the true state of the title; that the property is the complainant's home, and, if offered for sale as a whole, is in her belief worth $40,000, and, if subdivided, much more; that by said will, after the devise of said property to the complainant and her heirs, it is provided that after the complainant's death said property shall be the property of her children in fee simple, to be assigned and partitioned as the complainant by will may direct, and in case of complainant's death not leaving issue, then to complainant's sister, Harriet B. Chesley; that she claims the title in fee simple, but that her title is in question among experts; that owing to said uncertainty the sale before a judicial determination of the effect of said will would be disastrous to all concerned; that the note for $15,000 was the joint and several note of the complainant and her husband, but it was without consideration as to her, and was signed by her only for the benefit of her husband, as the defendants knew; that Keyser was about to foreclose the deed of trust of 1901, through his agent Tuck, to avert which the complainant and her husband gave the note and deed for $19,000; that the complainant never received any part of the $15,000 or the $4,000 going to make up the $19,000; that a part thereof was for commission for Tuck on the loan, and part for half commission on the withdrawn sale, and part for money claimed to be owing to Keyser from her husband. She prays for an injunction to prevent Tuck from selling or proceeding further under the advertisement until further order; that the court determine and declare the true meaning and effect of the will; that she be declared to have a fee simple; that the deed and note of March 29, 1904, be canceled, so far as she or her property is concerned; that if said note and deed be valid as to her in whole or in part, that she may have an accounting to ascertain the amount due from her or chargeable against her property, and that the deed be corrected in respect to the creation of the trust for her husband and children; that Tuck be restrained from proceeding under said deed or interfering with complainant's possession until all question as to title and indebtedness as to complainant shall have been determined; that if said property is to be sold it may be sold in parcels under direction of the court.

The bill was filed July 10, 1905, and on the same day a rule was issued for the defendants to show cause on July 13 why an injunction should not issue as prayed. On July 13 defendant Keyser answered the rule admitting the ownership of the note secured by the deed of 1904, and saying that he loaned the complainant and her husband $19,000 through said Tuck after an examination and report on the title which satisfied him; that he received from complainant and her husband their principal note for $19,000, payable in five years, and ten interest notes for $570 each, payable at intervals of six months; that the first fell due September 29, 1904, and was not paid, but has since been paid to the extent of $300; that the second, due March 29, 1905, has not been paid in any part; that the taxes for the year ending June 30, 1905, are unpaid; that the debt amounts to twenty thousand one hundred and ninety-three dollars and eighty-one cents ($20,193.81); that from the $19,000 loaned by him to complainant and her husband he was paid the $15,000 and interest due under the deed of 1901, and the sum of twelve hundred and twenty-six dollars and ninety-six cents ($1,226.96) due him from the husband for moneys put in his hands to loan; that said deed of 1901 had been signed by complainant, her husband, and children, and was to secure $15,000 loaned by him to complainant and her husband; that the new loan of $19,000 was made on request of complainant on condition that the debt of $15,000 with interest, and the $1,226.96 due from her husband should be paid back to him; that the new loan was made for $19,000 in order to pay off incumbrances subsequent to the loan of 1901. On belief he denies that the complainant was ignorant of the contents or legal effect of the deed of 1904 and charges that she was fully informed thereof. He denies on advice that she is an accommodation maker, or surety, or guarantor. He says that the provisions in the deed were made by counsel learned in the law for the purpose of conveying the whole title; that he believes the property will sell to better advantage as a whole than if divided, and that its value is little, if any, more than the amount due him. On the same day the defendant Tuck answered the rule, saying that the loan of $19,000 was made through him; that the payments therefrom to Keyser were made by direction of complainant, and the balance, after payment of charges and expenses, was paid by check of said Tuck to order of complainant and her husband; that the payments to said Tuck were for commissions and were made willingly by complainant; that she acted throughout of her free will. On July 18, defendant Keyser filed a further answer to the rule saying that he advanced in cash the loans of $25,000 and $19,000, and at the time believed they were for complainant's use and benefit; that the loan of $15,000 was made through Phil. W. Chew, and that since filing his original answer he has learned that the loan was made at the personal request of the complainant and distributed by Chew under her direction, and annexes the affidavit of said Chew. Said affidavit is that the affiant is a lawyer who negotiates loans; that in May or June, 1901, he was applied to by complainant's husband as an agent for a loan on the property in question and was informed by complainant herself that the loan was for her use, to be applied in part to pay a trust then on the property; that he obtained a loan from the defendant Keyser, of Baltimore; that the proceeds of the loan were distributed by complainant's direction in accordance with the statement annexed to his affidavit, in which distribution $500 was paid to him for services, and $11,150 to one Green, the holder of a note secured on the property; that $50 was advanced to complainant at her request, and the balance paid by checks to order of her husband by her direction, one of which she endorsed. On said 18th of July, upon hearing had on the rule and answers, an order was issued restraining said Tuck, as trustee, from selling until the 20th of October, 1905.

Digitized by Google

At the November term, 1905, the cause came on again for hearing upon the rule and the answers, as to the continuance of the restraining order, and the law questions involved were argued by counsel. Thereafter, both parties desiring that the cause should be treated as set for hearing upon bill and answers, treating the answers to the rule as answers to the bill itself, it was further considered upon briefs.

Taking the answers to be true, so far as they are responsive to the bill and are made upon knowledge, there is still a portion of the new loan of 1904 in which the complainant was not concerned, except as surety. That sum is stated to be $1,226.96, the amount due from the complainant's husband to Keyser for moneys which had been placed in his hands to be loaned, and which had been let up on unsatisfactory security. There may be some other portions of the loan standing in the same legal situation, but certainly this portion of the $19,000 note represents an old indebtedness of the husband to Keyser, and as to that portion the wife, although she signed the note jointly with the husband, was, as Keyser well knew, only an accommodation maker or surety for the husband.

The position of the complainant is that by virtue of sections 1154 and 1155 of the Code of laws for the District of Columbia she was incompetent to bind herself as surety for her husband and incompetent to charge her real estate by way of mortgage given to secure a debt of her husband. So far as the old encumbrances are concerned which rested upon the property when the $19,000 loan was made, encumbrances which were valid and enforceable liens against said real estate, she is not to be treated as a surety for her husband. Those encumbrances were to be and were discharged out of the proceeds of the loan in question, and she received the benefit. As to all that part of the loan it was, in legal effect, a loan made to her, and she is a principal. Cupp. v. Campbell, 103 Ind. 213. As to the remaining portion the situation is different, and the question is, whether, under the sections of the Code referred to, a married woman has power to mortgage her real estate to secure a debt of her husband.

It is not claimed that she is personally bound by the note given for the debt, although signed by herself and her husband jointly. If that portion of the loan had been represented by a separate note the legal situation would be exactly the same as it is now—she could not be sued upon the note itself. But it is insisted that the deed of trust given to secure the obligation of her husband upon such a note is valid, although it is given upon property which is held to the sole and separate use of the wife. This position requires us to consider the two sections referred to and determine what is the true construction to be given them.

Digitized by Google

Section 1154 declares that married women shall hold all their property of every description for their separate use as fully as if they were unmarried, and shall have power to dispose of the same as if they were unmarried. Section 1155 declares that they shall have power to engage in any business and to contract, whether engaged in business or not, and to sue and be sued in all respects as if unmarried, provided that they shall not have the power to make any contract as surety or guarantor or as accommodation drawer, acceptor, maker, or endorser.

On the part of the complainant the argument runs as follows: Is the deed of trust which the complainant gave to secure the debt due from her husband to Keyser a contract made by her as surety or guarantor or as accommodation maker for her husband? What is the legal effect of such a transaction? It is to enable the beneficiary to enforce the performance of the husband's obligation. A portion of the wife's property is put at the disposal of the husband's creditor in case the husband shall fail to perform his obligation. By seeing to it that the husband performs that obligation the wife relieves her property from the burden and it is hers again. The same is true when the property put at the disposal of the creditor is personal in its nature instead of real. The legal situation would have been the same if the wife had given a chattel mortgage upon her horse and carriage, or had pawned her watch and jewels at the sign of the three balls, or had made a deposit of money as security, or had given an assignment of her bank account as security. Under the powers conferred upon her by section 1154 she may, unless restrained by the provision in 1155, put all of her property, both real and personal, into the hands of her husband's creditors to be disposed of by them and applied upon her husband's debts, if she fails to see that her husband pays them. That a mortgage to secure the debt of another is in substance and effect a suretyship arrangement has been repeatedly recognized by the courts. Vries v. Nussbaum, 131 Ind. 267; Goff v. Hankins, 11 Ind. App. 456; Brown v. Will, 103 Ind. 71; Cupp v. Campbell, 103 Ind. 213; Beatie v. Calhoun, 73 Ga. 269; Bank v. Carleton, 96 Ga. 469; Gafford v. Speaker, 125 Ala. 498; Dial v. Gambril, 119 Ala. 330. What was the intention of the legislature in enacting the proviso to section 1155? Was it not to protect the property of married women from the debts of their husbands and others, and to prevent their losing their estates through becoming sureties for the debts of others, especially of their husbands? How can this purpose be accomplished if the wife is at liberty to pledge her whole estate, real and personal, for the payment of debts which are not hers? If she were personally bound by her signature to a note representing a debt of a cosigner, it would only mean that she put some unspecified part of her estate to the hazard of an execution in case a judgment should be procured against her. It is conceded that she can not do that since the enactment of this proviso, yet when she mortgages her land or pledges her personalty for another's debt she creates a direct, immediate, paramount lien upon specific property, which may be all the property she has, which may be taken and sold without the formality of a suit, judgment, and execution. Can it be that the legislature intended to protect her property from the former risks and not from the latter? It may be suggested that, under section 1154, she has power to pay her husband's debt, absolutely, if she will, and that the power to secure the payment is a less extreme exercise of authority; but it may well be supposed that the legislature considered that there was more danger of a wife hazarding her property by way of a mortgage or a contract to secure the performance by her husband of his obligation than there was of her parting at once and absolutely with her property. In making the contract as surety, or in mortgaging her property by way of suretyship, she would rely upon her husband performing his obligation, and would not really expect that she would finally lose her property. It is true that before the enactment of these sections the wife had the power to create a lien upon her real estate, by way of mortgage, in favor of her husband's creditors, although she had not the power to bind herself, personally, to pay the debt. Such was the holding in this jurisdiction and generally. Kleindinst v. Johnson, 18 D. C. 356, 365; Stephen v. Beale, 22 Wall. 329; Hitz v. Jenks, 123 U. S. 297. But the state of affairs exemplified by the decision in the Kleindinst case may well have been the very reason for the enactment of those sections. If the proviso in question is to be considered as nothing more than an exception from, or a qualification of, the new powers conferred upon the wife, then it might not be held to be a prohibition upon her mortgaging her real estate to secure the debt of another, since she had that power before; but if it is to be considered as an effort on the part of the legislature to safeguard the property of the wife against her own improvidence, or that of her husband, it seems necessary to hold that it does restrain her from encumbering her property for debts which do not concern her. Very little regard ought to be given to the fact that the provision forms a part of section 1155, instead of standing as a separate section. The intent of the legislature, as revealed by a reading of the sections relating to the same subject, is clear and must prevail.

On the part of the defendants great reliance is placed on the position in which the clause in question stands, viz.: as a part of section 1155, and various cases and authors cited with a view to showing that the proviso is limited in its operation to the section in which it occurs. Minis v. U. S., 15 Peters, 423; Savings Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. 236; Galloway v. Harding, 23 Grattan, 547; Commonwealth v. Kelly, 177 Mass. 221; Lehigh v. Meyer, 102 Pa. St. 479. From the case in Grattan we quote the following: "There is no rule of construction by which a proviso to one section of an act can be applied to another section unless it manifestly appears by reference to the whole act that it is the intention of the legislature that such proviso should limit the operation of other sections than that to which it is appended." Where, however, it is manifest that the proviso is intended to have the broader scope, that intention must prevail. U. S. v. Babbett, 66 U. S. (1 Black), 55; Endlich on Interpretation of Statutes (ed. 1888), sec. 186. All sections relating to the same subject-matter should be read and considered together. State v. Popp, 45 Md. 432, 437, 438; Lewis' Sunderland on Statutory Construction (2d edition), secs. 352 and 420. Using these principles for our guidance, let us turn again to the sections we are attempting to construe.

Digitized by Google

"In order to understand what effect the statute was intended to have we must look at the situation as it existed before the enactment of any statute enlarging the powers of married women. The contracts of married women made with reference to their separate estate and upon its faith and credit were enforced in equity against such estate. Where a statute declared that all her property should be held to her sole and separate use as if she were unmarried, equity still retained its jurisdiction to enforce her contracts against it unless the statute also provided that she might be sued at law. But where the statute did so provide she was no longer liable in equity, but was liable at law only. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur., sec. 1125; Emmons v. Harlan, 5 Mack. 521. The statute we are dealing with declares (sec. 1154) that all property of a married woman shall be held to her separate use and be subject to her disposal as if she were unmarried; but it also declares (sec. 1155) in what cases she may make contracts, and that in such cases she binds herself at law and may be sued and her property taken on execution. Her property is no longer liable in equity because, if liable at all, it is liable at law, that is, by virtue of section 1155. It is section 1155 which limits and defines her power to contract, so as to bind herself and her property; the only limitation relates to her contracts as surety, etc. But her power to dispose of her property, wholly or in part, absolutely or upon condition, is entirely separate and distinct, and is conferred by section 1154. By this section no change is made in the law as it existed without legislation, except that now all her property is in her power, whereas formerly only that part which had been conveyed strictly to her separate use was so held. If the legislature had intended to take away from her the power she already possessed to dispose of her property by mortgage, it is probable they would have adopted some other method than this method of a proviso to a section relating to a different matter. Full effect seems to be given to the proviso when it is recognized as limiting her power to contract liabilities enforceable by action and execution at law. It can hardly be held that the legislature intended to prevent her disposition of her property, conditionally, when it gave her power to do so absolutely. It is conceded that she might have conveyed her property in payment and extinguishment of her husband's debt.

"By this construction we limit the operation of the proviso to the section in which it occurs, which is the natural and ordinary way of reading it."

A discussion, bearing more or less directly upon the question here presented, will be found in Brandt on Suretyship (edition of 1905), secs. 9 and 10, as well as a full review of cases and statutes in the new edition of Pomeroy's Equity Jurisprudence, sec. 1126, and notes.

The following decisions have been consulted and found to throw some light upon the subject: Stone v. Billings, 167 Ill. 170, 180; Watson v. Thurver, 11 Mich. 457; DeVries v. Comklin, 22 Mich. 255 (opinion by Cooley, J.); Russell v. Bank, 39 Mich. 671; Harris v. McCasslan, 31 S. C. 420, 427; Hart v. Grigsby, 14 Bush (Ky.) 542, 552; Mayo v. Hutchinson, 57 Me. 546; McNeill v. Bank, 62 Neb. 608; DeVries v. Nussbaum, 131 Ind. 267; Goff v. Hankins, 11 Ind. App. 466; Brown v. Will, 103 Ind. 71; Cupp v. Campbell, 103 Ind. 213; Saulsbury et al. v. Weaver, 59 Ga. 254; Beattie v. Balhoun, 73 Ga. 269; Freeman v. Coleman, 86 Ga. 590; Bank v. Carlton, 96 Ga. 469; Williams v. Urmston, 35 Ohio St. 296; Pelzer v. Campbell, 15 S. C. 581; Sweazy v. Kammer, 51 Iowa, 642; Gafford v. Speaker, 125 Ala. 498; Dial v. Gambrel, 119 Ala. 320.

If any other questions are presented by the bill, they have not been urged in argument nor considered in deciding the case.

Accordingly the bill is dismissed with costs.

Postoffice—Issue of Fraud Orders—Conclusiveness of Finding.

In People's United States Bank v. Gilson, decided by the United States Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Missouri (140 Fed. 1), the following points were decided:

1. The use of the postal service of the United States is not a matter of right, but of privilege, limited by the statutes declaring certain classes of matter to be non-mailable, and it is competent for the Postoffice Department to determine ex parte that a concern is using the mails in conducting a scheme to defraud, in violation of the statute, and to base an order excluding it from such use on such finding. If a hearing is granted before the issuance of such an order, the concern affected may properly be required to assume the burden of proof, and to show affirmatively that its business is legitimate and honest.

[Ed. Note.—Use of mails to defraud, see note to Timmons v. United States, 30 C. C. A. 86.]

2. Under Rev. St., secs. 3929, 4041, as amended by act Sept. 19, 1890, c. 908, sec. 2, 26 Stat. 466, and act March 2, 1895, c. 191, sec. 4, 28 Stat. 964 (U. S. Comp. St. 1901, pp. 2686, 2749), which confer upon the Postmaster-General power, "upon evidence satisfactory to him" that any person or company is engaged in conducting any scheme to defraud through the mails, to direct the postmaster not to deliver registered letters nor pay money orders to such person or company, the Postmaster-General may find that a concern is using the mails in conducting a scheme to defraud which warrants the issuance of such an order on the evidence of the agents and inspectors of the department, and such a finding can not be reviewed by the courts in so far as it involves questions of fact, nor unless a plain error of law is shown.

Bankruptcy — Objections to Discharge.—A bankrupt, though entitled to file papers in resistence of specifications against his discharge, is not bound to do so. In re Hendrick, U. S. D. C., D. Conn., 138 Fed. Rep. 473.

Digitized by Google

Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

WILLIAM W. PAYNE ET AL, APPELLANTS,
v.
LEIGH ROBINSON, EXECUTOR, ET AL.

WILLS; BEQUEST FOR LIFE; RIGHT OF LIFE TENANT TO POSSESSION OF FUND; DUTY OF EXECUTOR TO INVEST.

1. Where there is a bequest of money to one for life, with remainder over, and no trustee is specially named, it is the duty of the executor to invest the money and pay the interest only to the person entitled for life and preserve the principal for the remainderman.
2. This rule will obtain unless the language of the will shows with reasonable certainty that the testator intended the fund should be delivered into the possession of the tenant for life.
3. Testator, after reciting that, for reasons adequate and satisfactory to him, he had separated the share of one son from those of the rest of his children, bequeathed to said son $26,000 for the joint lives of himself and wife, the same to go to the son absolutely if he survived his wife, and if she survived the fund to be held in trust by a trust company, the income to be paid her during life, with power to bequeath the same to such of testator's children or grandchildren as she may elect, and in her failure so to do the fund to be distributed among testator's next of kin. Held, that the will did not require the fund to be paid over to the son, but that it was the duty of the executor to hold the same during the joint lives of the son and his wife, investing it and paying over to him its income merely; in the event the son survived his wife the whole being payable to him at once, and if she survived him, then it was to be paid over to the trustee named for her life.

No. 1552. Decided December 5, 1905.

APPEAL by remaindermen from a decree of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding the Probate Court, Probate No. 12,117, directing the payment of the principal of a legacy to the life tenant. Reversed.

Mr. J. J. Darlington for the appellants.

Mr. Fred. Harper, for the appellees.

Mr. Chief Justice SHEPARD delivered the opinion of the Court:

General William H. Payne, a resident of the District of Columbia, died therein on March 29, 1904, leaving a will disposing of his estate, executed January 28, 1904. By the terms of said will Leigh Robinson, Esq., was made executor thereof without security. Having procured the due probate of said will, the executor filed a petition in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, sitting for probate business, praying a construction of the eighth clause thereof, and that direction be given him as to the payment or retention of the legacy therein bequeathed to Arthur Morson Payne.

The eighth clause reads as follows:

"8th. In wills and codicils heretofore made I have separated the share of my son Arthur from the shares of the rest of my children for reasons adequate and satisfactory to me. The reasons still continue, and I now bequeath to my son Arthur Morson Payne the sum of twenty-six thousand dollars ($26,000), for and during the joint lives of himself and his wife Bettie; and if my said son Arthur survives his said wife, then upon her death to him absolutely; and if his said wife survive him, then upon his death I give and bequeath the said legacy to the company now having an office on G street between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets northwest, in the city of Washington, and known as "American Security and Trust Company" in and upon the following trusts and none other—that is to say, in trust to invest, reinvest, and keep invested, and pay over the income to my said daughter-in-law Bettie for the full term of her natural life, and my said beloved and honored daughter-in-law is hereby empowered to bequeath said legacy to such of my children or grandchildren as she may elect; and in case she does not exercise this power, then from and after her death the said legacy shall go to and be distributed among my own heirs; I should say my own next of kin."

Upon the hearing of the petition, with all the necessary parties before it, the court entered a decree directing the executor to pay over to Arthur Morson Payne the said legacy of $26,000, and ordering that the receipt of said legatee shall acquit the said executor from further liability therefor. From this decree William W. Payne, Harry F. Payne, J. Winston Payne, C. Bland Payne, and Virginia Payne Hunton, being all, save the appellee, of the next of kin of the testator, have appealed.

1. The will makes certain bequests in addition to that to Arthur Morson Payne, contained in the eighth paragraph, and in the residuary clause gives one-fourth of the remainder of the estate, after the payment of all charges and legacies, to each of the testator's four sons, William W., Henry F., John W., and Charles Bland Payne.

In the eighth paragraph the testator, after reciting that he has, for reasons adequate and satisfactory to him, separated the share of his son Arthur from the shares of the rest of his children, bequeaths to said Arthur Morson Payne the sum of $26,000, for and during the joint lives of himself and his wife Bettie. It is further provided that if said son survives his said wife, the same is bequeathed to him absolutely, but if his said wife shall survive him, then the said legacy is given in trust to the American Security and Trust Company, of the city of Washington, to invest, reinvest, and keep invested, and pay over the income to the said wife for the full term of her natural life, with power conferred upon her to bequeath the said legacy to such of the testator's children or grandchildren as she may elect. In case she does not exercise the said power, then, from and after her death, the same shall go to and be distributed among the testator's next of kin.

The question involved is, whether the executor shall at once pay over the entire amount of of this legacy to Arthur Morson Payne, and be thereby discharged; or whether he shall retain the same during the life of the legatee's wife, paying to him only the income derived therefrom.

The rule of the English chancery in respect of the custody of chattels bequeathed to one for life with remainder over, has been stated by Chancellor Kent as follows: "The interest of the party in remainder is precarious, because another has an interest in possession; and chattels, by their very nature, are exposed to abuse, loss, and destruction. It was understood to be the old rule in chancery, that the person entitled in remainder could call for security from the tenant for life, that the property should be forthcoming at his decease, for equity regards the tenant for life as a trustee for the remainderman; but that practice has been overruled. Lord Thurlow said that the party entitled in remainder could call for the exhibition of an inventory of the property, which must be signed by the legatee for life, and deposited in court, and that is all he is ordinarily entitled to. But it is admitted that security may still be required in case of real danger, that the property may be wasted, secreted, or removed. And where there is a general bequest of a residue for life, with remainder over, the practice now is to have the property sold and converted into money by the executor, and the proceeds safely invested, and the interest thereof paid to the legatee for life." 2 Kent Com. 354. See, also, Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 137; S. C. 2 L. C. Eq. (4 Am. Ed.) 676, and English and American notes.

Digitized by Google

In Maryland, from whence our jurisprudence is derived, the later English rule has been adopted and made to depend not so much on the difference between a specific and a residuary bequest as on whether the nature of the property is such that it can be enjoyed without being actually possessed. Evans v. Iglehart, 6 Gill. & J. 171, 196; Worten v. Burch, 2 Md. Ch. 190, 199; Miller v. Williamson, 5 Md. 219, 236; Taylor v. Brown, 64 Md. 97, 100.

The distinction that has been made between chattels of one kind and another as regards their uses, is of no importance in the determination of this case, because we have here a specific bequest of money that is clearly governed by the rule, in the absence of an express intention of the testator to the contrary. The same rule prevails in the other States, generally, where unaffected by statutes relating to wills and the administration of estates. In a case in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, where there was a bequest of money for life with remaineer over, Chief Justice Shaw said: "I take it that nothing is now better settled than that such a gift is a gift of the interest only, and if no trustee is specially named, it is the duty of the executor to invest the money, and pay the interest only to the person entitled for life, and preserve the principal for him who is to take afterwards." Field v. Hitchcock, 17 Pick. 182. The principal in such case must be held by the executor in trust. Hooper v. Brandburg, 133 Mass. 303, 307; Ballard v. Chandler, 149 Mass. 532, 537; White v. Institute of Technology, 171 Mass. 84, 96. The same rule prevails in Virginia, of which State it was said on the argument that the testator, himself a distinguished lawyer, was a native, and also a resident until within a few years of his death. Hawthorne v. Beckwith, 89 Va. 786, 791. See, also, Matter of McDougall, 141 N. Y. 21, 27. Many other authorities may be found on appellants' brief and in Hare and Wallace's notes, 2 L. C. Eq. (4 Am. Ed.) p. 697 et seq.

That this rule is founded on broad principles of equity and sound public policy there seems to be no reasonable doubt. Under its operation the legatee, who is entitled only to the use of the fund for life, whether delivered into his possession or not, receives all the benefit to which he is justly entitled, while the interests in remainder are fully protected.

2. It remains to consider whether there is a reasonable indication in the will of an intention that the possession of this legacy, during the life of the first taker, shall not be governed by the foregoing rule. If such an intention can be fairly deduced from the language used by the testator, not only in the eighth, but in other clauses of the will, it must necessarily control. The appellees, while not denying the existence of the rule, contend that very slight indications in the will will be construed as showing that the testator intended the life tenant, rather than the executor, to be the trustee. In support, they rely especially upon the case of In re Garrity (108 Cal. 463), where the foregoing language is used in the opinion. The indications of the intention in that case, as recited in the opinion, were not slight, but rather strong.

The clause of the will was both a devise and bequest of all property, of every kind and character, to the wife, "to have, to hold, and to enjoy for the term of her natural life." The devise and bequest over was of the residue and remainder "remaining" after the termination of the life estate. It is to be noted, also, that, under the law of California, the wife was entitled absolutely to one-half of the entire estate as community property, and the husband could not deprive her of it. The powers and duties of executors are limited, also, by the civil code of that State. Influenced by all of these conditions, the court held the wife entitled to the possession. The Maryland case, also relied on to show that slight indications will be sufficient to show an intention to give the fund into the possession of the life tenant, seems, rather, to lead to a contrary conclusion. Boyd v. Boyd, 6 Gill & J., 25, 32. The will in that case consisted of a letter written by the testator to his brother, the legatee, as follows: "Ten thousand dollars, of which you are already in possession of the greatest part, is to be at your disposition and for your use, free of interest, during your natural life, but, after your death, to be invested in bank stock, in the name of, and for the account jointly and severally of the children of Jeremiah L. Boyd." Here, again, the indication of the intention was rather strong than slight. The life tenant was already in possession of the greatest part; it was declared to be at his disposition, and for his use, free of interest. There was nothing to justify the rejection of the words "free of interest," and unless the fund was intended to remain in the possession of the legatee, they would be meaningless. That this was the view taken by the court appears in the following extract from the opinion: "The language of the will is peculiarly strong and emphatical; he was to have the use and disposition of the property free of interest during his life, and in the exercise of this right of limited ownership over it, secured to him by the will, we do not think he ought to be disturbed or controlled, unless the interests of those who were the secondary objects of the testator's bounty manifestly required it." The later cases, before cited, show the adoption of the later English doctrine, that the possession shall be retained by the executor in trust, rather than committed to the tenant for life, with leave to the remaindermen to enforce security from him upon good cause shown therefor. And, as is the case in Massachusetts, they seem to require the enforcement of that rule in the absence of a certain intention of the testator to the contrary. Viewed in the light of what we must regard as the established doctrine, the body of this legacy must be retained by the executor, unless the language of the will shows with reasonable certainty that the testator intended it should be delivered into the possession of the tenant for life. Examining with care not only the language of the particular clause, but that of the entire will also, we are unable to ascertain the existence of such a certain intention. We attach no importance to the fact that the testator mentions the share of his son Arthur in the recital, that, "for reasons adequate and satisfactory," he had separated the same from the shares of the rest of his children. The word share is used as description, and looking at the amount of the inventory, as set out in the record, it will appear that the rest of the children will receive about $26,000 each, after the discharge of all legacies and charges. The separation of this share from the others consists in the limitations imposed upon it. It is argued, however, as the testator required the fund to be given over to the American Security and Trust Company, as trustee for the legatee's wife, in the event that she shall survive him, that it must follow that he intended the life tenant to have the possession during his life. This seems to us to be conjectural only. It may be conjectured, with fully as much reason also, that the testator was informed in respect of the rule of law governing such bequests, and that having implicit confidence in his executor, to whom he had entrusted the management of a large personal estate, without requiring security therefor, and that he was aware of the relations between him and the legatee, and was therefore satisfied with the disposition of the possession for the latter's life which the law provided. Without knowing the conditions operating upon the mind of the testator, we can only further conjecture why he should have named another and independent trustee for the wife in case of her possible survival.

Digitized by Google

We also fail to find anything in the fourth clause which sheds any satisfactory light upon the intention of the testator as to the possession of the legacy given in the eighth. It simply directs the executor, in the event of the survival of the testator's wife, to invest the sum of $10,000, and pay the interest thereon to her during her life; and this fund, after her death, he is directed to restore to his estate for distribution, as provided in said will. That he should, in this instance, have directed investment specially by the executor does not, of itself, imply an intention to have the legacy in the eighth clause turned over to the first legatee therein named.

Not without some doubt, it must be confessed, we are constrained to hold that the proper construction of the will does not require the executor to pay over the fund to Arthur Morson Payne, but that it is his duty thereunder to retain the same during the life of the legatee's wife, investing it and paying over to him its income merely. In the event of his surviving her, then the whole becomes payable to him at once. If she survive him, then it is to be paid over to the trustee specially named during her life. The doubt that has been expressed is no more than that which so often arises in endeavoring to ascertain the intention of a testator where, not being express, it must be deduced from the language of his will, and nothing else.

The conclusion which we have reached will, at least, work no special injury to the tenant for life, while removing the possibility of injury to the interests in remainder.

The decree will be reversed with costs to be paid by the executor out of the assets of the estate in his hands, and the cause remanded with direction to enter a decree in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed.

Accord and Satisfaction by Marriage.

The doctrine of accord and satisfaction is not one of those which an admirer of English law would point to as exhibiting the "perfection of reason." As Sir George Jessel remarked, and as we all know, a creditor may accept anything in satisfaction of his debt except a less amount of money. He may take a horse, a canary, a tomtit, if he chooses, even a cheque, and that is accord and satisfaction, but he can not take 19*s.* 6*d.* in the pound in cash. America seems in this matter to have its anomalies too. The accord and satisfaction which in a recent case there a gentleman creditor agreed to accept was the hand of the lady who was in his debt; but, unfortunately for the lady, he agreed to accept it orally—perhaps in the very act of proposing—and though she faithfully performed her part by marrying him, this unconscionable husband proceeded after marriage to sue the lady on her original obligation. She set up accord and satisfaction. The husband replied by pleading the Statute of Frauds making contracts in consideration of marriage, where not in writing, unenforceable, and the court held such plea good. But what is the true nature of accord and satisfaction? Is it merely an agreement not to sue on the original cause of action, or is it not rather a complete extinguishment of the original cause of action? Surely the latter, both in American and English law. If so, the debt was gone so soon as the lady made satisfaction by marriage.—London Law Journal.

Bankruptcy—Effect of Filing Petition.—The filing of a bankruptcy petition and a bankruptcy adjudication held not to prevent existing creditors from proceeding to reduce their claims to judgment and execution against the holder of an unfiled chattel mortgage executed by the bankrupt. In re Beede, U. S. D. C., W. D. N. Y., 138 Fed. Rep. 441.

Death—Measure of Damages.—Under a statute authorizing a recovery for wrongful death, a recovery held limited to the pecuniary assistance the jury believes the next of kin would have received from deceased, had he lived. Hirschkovitz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., U. S. C. C., S. D. N. Y., 138 Fed. Rep. 438.

Digitized by Google

The Ohio Anti-Gambling Statute Upheld.

The United States Supreme Court, in the case of Marvin v. Trout, upheld the Ohio anti-gambling statute. In the opinion, which is by Peckham, J., it is said:

"The power of the State to enact laws to suppress gambling can not be doubted, and as a means to that end we have no doubt of its power to provide that the owner of a building in which gambling is conducted, who knowingly looks on and permits such gambling, can be made liable in his property which is thus used to pay a judgment against those who won the moneys, as is provided in this statute.

"The main object of this legislation is to discourage, and, if possible, prevent gambling. The liability of the owner of the building to make good the loss sustained under the circumstances set forth in the statute was clearly part of the means resorted to by the legislature for the purpose of suppressing the evil to the public morals and welfare.

"We are aware of no provision in the Federal Constitution which prevents this kind of legislation in a State for such a purpose.

"To say that it must be limited to a provision allowing a recovery of the money by one who lost it, would be in effect to hold invalid all legislation providing for proceedings in the nature of 'qui tam' actions.

"The contention on the part of the plaintiff in error that the statute violates the Federal Constitution, because it does not provide for or permit a trial by jury, is equally without merit."

Swearing and Affirming.

Judge David D. Shelby, of the Alabama Circuit Court, was talking about the difference between swearing and affirming.

"Whatever the difference is," he said, "it is assuredly not what a certain old colored man understood it to be last week.

"The colored man, entering the witness box, said he thought he wouldn't swear. He thought he would just affirm.

"'Erastus,' I said, 'how is this? A month ago, when you appeared before me you consented readily enough to swear. Why is it that you will only affirm now?'

"'Well, your honah,' said Erastus, 'de reason am dat I specks I ain't quite so sure about de facks o' dis case as I was o' de odder.'"

Carriers—Assault on Passenger—Liability.

In Brown v. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry., decided by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Eighth Circuit, in August, 1905 (139 Fed. 972), it was held that the liability or non-liability of a carrier of passengers for hire for an injury inflicted upon a passenger, by reason of a third person making an unprovoked assault upon him, depends upon the presence or absence of evidence showing the employees of the carrier either knew, or by the exercise of due care should have known, from all the attendant facts and circumstances of the particular case, that injury to the passenger was threatened or impending, and which injury, by the exercise of that high degree of care which the law requires, might have been guarded against.

Master and Servant—Injuries to Brakeman.—A railroad is not required to expressly warn trainmen that the upright sides of a bridge of standard width are dangerously near the track. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Haas (Ind.), 74 N. E. Rep. 1003.

Fire Insurance—Unauthorized Companies.—A policyholder in a fire insurance company not authorized to transact business in the State is not in pari delicto with the company or its agents. Latham Mercantile & Commercial Co. v. Harrod (Kan.), 81 Pac. Rep. 214.

Ambassadors and Consuls—Liability of Surety on Bond.—The surety on the bond of a consular officer can not be held liable for the statutory penalty incurred by the principal, under Rev. St., sec. 1723, for charging excessive fees, where such fees, including the excess, have been charged against him in his account and paid to the Treasury Department. United States v. Ballantine, U. S. C. C. of App., Second Circuit, 138 Fed. Rep. 312.

Trade Unions—Breach of Contract.—A suit for breach of contract by an unincorporated local labor union held improperly brought against four of its members, individually and for themselves and others as officers and members of the union. Ehrlich v. Willenski, U. S. C. C., E. D. Penn., 138 Fed. Rep. 425.

Washington
COLLEGE OF LAW
1328 NEW YORK AVENUE
REOPENS MONDAY, OCTOBER 2,
7 P. M. PUBLIC INVITED.

Sessions From 6.30 to 9 P. M.

Open to women and men properly qualified. Three years' law course, leading to degree Bachelor of Laws. Graduate course one year, leading to degree Master of Laws. Tuition, $50 a year.

For catalogues and information apply to

ELLEN SPENCER MUSSEY,
LL. M., DEAN,
'Phone Main 4585. 416 Fifth Street N. W.

BOARD ELECTION NOTICE.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Law Reporter Company of Washington City will be held at the office of the company, 518 Fifth st. N. W., on Monday, January 8, 1906, for the purpose of electing nine directors to serve for the ensuing year. Polls open from 12 M. to 1 P. M.

H. RANDALL WEBB, Secretary.

RULE OF COURT.

RULE 17, SEC. 3. Hereafter all notices which relate to proceedings in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the publication of which is required by law or by Rules of Court or by any order of court, shall be published in THE WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER, during the time required by law, in addition to any other papers which may be specially ordered or which may be selected by the parties.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

FIRST INSERTION.

Lester and Price, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Patrick McCormick, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of December, 1905. JOHN B. GEIER, 1113 7th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,253. Administration. [Seal.] 52-3t

Wilton J. Lambert, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

In the Matter of the Estate of Margret Love Skerrett, Deceased. Administration, No. 13,337.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by David Milne and Frederick William Matteson, the executors named in said will, it is, this 27th day of December, 1905, ordered that notice be and the same hereby is given to Robert G. Skerrett, and all others concerned, to appear in said court on the 30th day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why said application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each week for three consecutive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less [Seal] than thirty (30) days before said return day. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 52-3t

George F. Collins, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of Elizabeth A. Rawlings, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of December, 1905. JAMES S. RAWLINGS, 1207 T st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,019. Admin. [Seal.] 52-3t

Walter C. Clephane, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Henry O. Towles, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against, the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 22d day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 22d day of December, 1905. FANNIE E. TOWLES, 1124 12th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,343. Administration. [Seal.] 52-3t

SECOND INSERTION.

Worthington, Heald & Frailey, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Albert F. Fox, Executor and Trustee, v. Sophia C. Pitchlyn et al. No. 23,861. Equity.

This cause being referred to me to report distribution of the fund, I shall proceed with the said reference on Wednesday, the 10th day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., at the auditor's rooms in the United States Court House in this city. All persons having claims against Caroline M. Pitchlyn, deceased, or her estate, are notified to present the same, with the proofs, at the said time and place. JAS. G. PAYNE, Auditor. 51-3t

Legal Notices.

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Mary E. Bryan, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 15th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 15th day of December, 1905. SOPHIA L. KLEINDIENST, 812 23d st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,388. Adm. [Seal.] 51-3t

J. A. Sweeney, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Hugh Hurney, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 14th day of December, 1905. MARY A. HURNEY, 930 25th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,223. Admn. [Seal.] 51-3t

John Lewis Smith and James B. Archer, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Gertrude J. Parkinson v. Robert M. Parkinson.
No. 25,670. Equity Docket, No. ——.

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the defendant from bed and board upon the ground of desertion and non-support. Provided a copy hereof be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter and Washington Post. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 12th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendant cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in [Seal] case of default. By the Court. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 51-3t

John S. Alleman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth C. Oppermann, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of December, 1905. ALBERT F. FOX, 911 F st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,221. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

Lancaster & Smith, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters of administration on the estate of William Edward Frazier, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 21st day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 21st day of December, 1905. LAURA C. FRAZIER, 769 10th st. S. E. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,256. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices

W. M. Ellison, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Benjamin F. Kincannon, Deceased.
No. 13,330. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters of administration on said estate, by Mattie A. Kincannon, it is ordered this 20th day of December, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Redden, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Thursday, the 25th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Times once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. [Seal] 51-6t

Douglas & Douglas, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

William H. Hoeke, Complainant, v. Sidney F. Marshall et al., Defendant.
Equity No. 23,455.

Sydney F. Marshall and Charles A. Douglas, trustees, having reported to the court the sale of all the right, title, and interest of Miletus J. Wine, deceased, subject to all incumbrances, in the following described real estate, situated in the District of Columbia, to wit: All of block X; all of block 1; lots 2 to 13, both inclusive, in block 3; lots 16, and 19 to 27, both inclusive, in block 5; lot 17, in block 7; all of blocks 9, 11, 15, 17, and 18; lots 15, and 25 to 30, both inclusive, in block 19; all of block 20; lots 1, 2, 5 to 19, both inclusive, and 22 to 30, both inclusive, in blocks 21; all of blocks 22, 23, and 24; lots 1 to 37, both inclusive, and that part of lot 38, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 25; all of blocks 26, 27, 28, and 29; lots 1 to 16, both inclusive, 20 to 33, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 17, 18, 34, 35, and 36, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 30; all of blocks 31, 32, and 33; lots 1 to 11, both inclusive, and 20 to 29, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 12, 13, 14, 30, and 31, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 35; all of blocks 36, 37, 38, and 39; lots 1 to 7, both inclusive, and 20 to 24, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 8, 9, 25, 26, and 27, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 40; all of blocks 41, 42, and 43; lots 1, 2, and 20, and those parts of lots 3, 4, 5, 21, and 22, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 44; all of blocks 45 and 46; lots 1 to 14, both inclusive; 16 to 27, both inclusive, and those parts of lots 15, 28, 29, and 30, lying in the District of Columbia, in block 47; and all of blocks 49, 50, and 51—all in Charles A. McEunn's subdivision known as "Marshall," as said subdivision is recorded in the office of the surveyor for the District of Columbia, in county book No. 6, at page 39—to John P. F. White for the sum of one thousand two hundred dollars ($1,200), it is, by the court, this 15th day of December, 1905, adjudged, ordered, and decreed that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 16th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said last-mentioned date in The Washington Law Reporter. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Associate Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 51-3t

Lester & Price, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

John A. Ruppert et al. v. Rosa Sauter et al.
In Equity, No. 25,809.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, ss:

The object of this suit is to obtain a judicial construction or interpretation of the last will and testament of Agnes M. Beuchert, deceased. On motion of complainants, it is, this 12th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Daisy Sauter, Eva Singleton, Joseph Wirth, and Antonio Rohrman, cause their appearance to be entered herein, on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in the case of default. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. E. Cunningham, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] 51-3t

Legal Notices.

Robert P. Shealey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration c. t. a. on the estate of Thomas Montgomery, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 18th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 18th day of December, 1905. MARGARET M. MONTGOMERY, 401 st. N. E. Attest: M. J. GRIFFITH, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,280. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

[Filed December 11, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.]

Brandenburg & Brandenburg, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding an Equity Court.

Ele W. Tuller vs. Unknown Heirs and Devisees of Isaac N. Hansbrough, Deceased. No. 25,780, Equity.

The object of this suit is to construe the conveyance to Ele W. Tuller and Isaac N. Hansbrough, as vesting in the complainant the fee simple title, by survivorship, and of the sale of the real estate situated in the District of Columbia, and in square 113 and bounded and described as follows: being lots 15 and 16 in said square, bounded on the north by Road street, on the south by Stoddard street, on the east by Green street, and on the west by Washington street, said two lots fronting on Washington street, opposite Cook's Park. The defendants to this suit are the unknown heirs and devisees of Isaac N. Hansbrough, deceased. On motion of the complainant, by Brandenburg & Brandenburg, his solicitors, it is this 11th day of December, 1905, ordered that the defendants cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of three months from this date; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order shall be published twice a month during said three months in The Washington Law Reporter and in The Washington Post. By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. [Seal] Dec. 22-29, Jan. 19-26, Feb. 16-23

Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, who was by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia granted letters of administration on the estate of Robert I. Nevitt, deceased, has, with the approval of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, appointed Monday, the 8th day of January, 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., as the time, and said court room as the place, for making payment and distribution from said estate, under the court's direction and control, when and where all creditors and persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue are notified to attend, in person or by agent or attorney duly authorized, with their claims against the estate properly vouched. Given under my hand this 20th day of December, 1905. ANNIE A. NEVITT, by Geo. C. Gertman, Attorney. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 12,522. Administration. [Seal.] 51-3t

THIRD INSERTION.

John D. Coughlan, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Marguerite M. O'Neill, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. HARRY H. NICHOLS, 500 O st. N. W.; JOHN D. COUGHLAN, 500 5th st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,292. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

Barnard & Johnson, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Carl L. Davis, Ralph P. Barnard, Trustee, Guy H. Johnson, Trustee, and Isadore T. Young, Complainants, v. Henry F. B. Pardon, and his Unknown Heirs, Alienees, and Devisees, Defendants. No. 25,759. In Equity, Docket 57.

The object of this suit is to reform a deed recorded in Liber J. A. S. 161, at folio 419, one of the land records of the District of Columbia, conveying part of lot numbered one (1), in square numbered seven hundred and ninety-three (793), improved by the dwelling No. 423 Fourth street southeast, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, and to establish of record the title of the complainant thereto, subject to the deed of trust, as prayed for in the original bill in this suit. On motion of the complainant, it is by the court this 11th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that Henry F. B. Pardon and his unknown heirs, alienees, and devisees (if he be dead) cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring forty (40) days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the first publication of this order; otherwise this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. This order to be published once a week for three (3) successive weeks in The Evening Star and The Washington Law Reporter next after the day of this order, good cause for shortening said [Seal] period of such publication having been shown. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wms. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

E. P. Morey, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of William E. Myers, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. ELLWOOD P. MOREY, Wash. Loan and Trust Building. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,210. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Worthington, Heald & Frailey, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the State of New York, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Elizabeth A. Pyne, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 11th day of December, 1905. JOHN PYNE, 157 E. Ninety-fifth st., New York; HENRY R. PYNE, 106 E. Fifty-fifth st., New York City. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,305. Admn. [Seal.] 50-3t

Gordon & Gordon, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
William A. Gordon et al. v. William H. Collins et al.
Equity No. 25,185.

The object of this suit is to substitute new trustees under the will of William C. Hazel, deceased, for management of certain property in square 1256, in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia. On motion of the complainants, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, William Joseph Havenner, Mamie Gray, John Gray, Elizabeth M. Gray, and Jeanne Swart, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Evening Star once a week for three successive weeks. WEN- [Seal] DELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. True copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by J. W. Latimer, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

Legal Notices.

Chas. W. Darr and R. A. Curtin, Attorneys

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
Estate of Mary E. Cook, Deceased.
No. 13,247. Administration.

Application having been made to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, for the probate of the last will and testament of said deceased, and for letters testamentary on said estate, by Matthew E. Cook, it is ordered this 13th day of December, A. D. 1905, that notice be and hereby is given to Thomas Hardesty, Reeze Hardesty, Georgiana Penn, Frank C. Farr, and Bowman Farr, and to all others concerned, to appear in said court on Monday, the 15th day of January, A. D. 1906, at 10 o'clock A. M., to show cause why such application should not be granted. Provided this notice be published in The Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post once in each of three successive weeks before the return day herein mentioned, the first publication to be [Seal] not less than thirty days before said return day. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court 50-3t

E. F. Colladay, Attorney

Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Louis Meyer, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 3d day of October, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 8th day of December, 1905. MARIA MEYER, 1744 8th st. N. W. Attest: JAMES TANNER, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,125. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

W. E. Ambrose, Attorney

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia,
Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of Lucinda Bailey, Deceased.
Admn. No. 12,989.

Upon hearing the report of William E. Ambrose, administrator c. t. a. of Lucinda Bailey, deceased, stating that he has sold lot seven (7) in square one thousand and one (1001) to John Appich for the sum of eighteen hundred dollars ($1,800.00), it is, this 8th day of December, 1905, ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown, on or before the 8th day of January, 1906. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The [Seal] Washington Law Reporter prior to said date. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Lee Eugene Turner et al. v. Emily A. Moxley et al.
Equity No. 16,375.

Upon consideration of the report of the trustees, this day filed, it is by this court, this 23d day of November, 1905, ordered that the trustees be, and they are hereby, authorized to accept the offer of W. Riley Deeble for the purchase of the property known as Nos. 1117, 1119, and 1121 Thirtieth street northwest, located on the north 12½ feet of lot 188, and the south 24 feet of lot 186, in square 1196, in this city and District, for the sum of $2,750 cash, and upon compliance with the terms of said offer and final confirmation of the sale, to make conveyance of said property to the said purchaser or his assigns. Provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and [Seal] The Washington Post before said final ratification. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by F. L. Williams, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

New corporations can procure from the Law Reporter Company, 518 5th street northwest, Stock Certificates (steel lithograph) with State, corporate title, and all details printed in, perforated numbered and bound.

Digitized by Google

Legal Notices.

E. H. Thomas, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.
In re Estate of Reuben B. Detrick, Deceased.
Adm. No. 12,549.

The executor having reported that he has sold premises No. 1617 Fourth street Northwest, Washington, District of Columbia, being lot numbered forty-eight (48) in square five hundred and twenty (520) according to Jesse D. Gibb's subdivision of part of square aforesaid, as recorded in Liber No. 20, folio 88, of the surveyor's office, District of Columbia, to George W. Ray, for twenty-six hundred ($2,600) dollars, all cash, less three (3%) per cent brokerage commission, it is by the court, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered, that said sale be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for each of three successive weeks before said last named day.

[Seal] WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

Hamilton & Colbert, Attorneys
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding the Probate Court.
In re Estate of John J. Reilly, Deceased.
Administration. No. 9121.

On consideration of the report of Julia J. Byrne, administratrix, it is, this 12th day of December, 1905, ordered that the offer of William O'Mealey, to purchase the property known as lots 31 and 32, in block 6, Buena Vista Heights, in the county of Washington, D. C., for the sum of $800.00, payable in one-third cash and the balance in one and two years, with interest at 6%, said deferred payments to be secured by deed of trust upon the property sold, be, and the same is hereby, accepted, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 12th day of January, 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said date in The Washington Law Reporter. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Justice. A true copy. Attest: Wm. C. Taylor, Deputy Register of Wills. 50-3t

[Seal]

Hamilton & Colbert, Solicitors
Filed December 8, 1905. J. R. Young, Clerk.
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Mary Clark et al. v. The District of Columbia et al.
No. 25,461. Equity Docket No. 56.

The object of this suit is to have set aside and declared null and void certain tax sales made by the District of Columbia to the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, of the property known and described as part of lots one (1) and twenty-one (21), in square 581, improved by premises No. 437 and 439 2d st. S. W., Washington, D. C., and lot 35, square 471, improved by No. 616 K st. S. W., and to have certain deeds, based upon said illegal tax sales, set aside and declared dull and void. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three weeks in The Washington Law Reporter. On motion of the complainant, it is, this 8th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that the defendants, Charles H. Wiltsie, Emily W. Wiltsie, and Mary A. Wadhams, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default.

[Seal] By the Court: THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. True copy. Test: John R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

J. Paul Earnest, Solicitor
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.
Champe B. Thornton et al., Complainants, v. Jennie T. Powers et al., Defendants. Equity No. 21,956.

Upon consideration of the report of John P. Earnest, trustee, filed herein, it is, this 14th day of December, A. D. 1905, ordered that said trustee be authorized to accept the offer of Mary J. Watkins to purchase at private sale for $2,541.78, lots fifteen (15) and sixteen (16), in block nine (9), of the lots decreed to be sold in the above-entitled cause, and further that said sale of said lots be ratified and confirmed as reported, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 14th day of January, A. D. 1906. Provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Law Reporter once a week for three successive weeks before said date. THOS. H. ANDERSON, Justice. A true copy. Test: J. R. Young, Clerk, by Wm. F. Lemon, Asst. Clerk. 50-3t

[Seal]

Legal Notices.

Sheehy & Hogan, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscribers, of the District of Columbia, have obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia letters testamentary on the estate of Peter F. Hornig, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscribers, on or before the 12th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under our hands this 12th day of December, 1905. JOHN G. HORNIG, 1020 B st. N. E.; GOTTFRIED HORNIG, 937 H st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,326. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Blair & Thom, Attorneys
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters of administration on the estate of Julia R. Balch, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 11th day of December, 1905. WILLIAM C. BALCH, 903 O st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,293. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

Chas. H. Bauman, Attorney
Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.

This is to Give Notice That the subscriber, of the District of Columbia, has obtained from the Probate Court of the District of Columbia, letters testamentary on the estate of Christian Sproesser, late of the District of Columbia, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated, to the subscriber, on or before the 13th day of December, A. D. 1906; otherwise they may by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. Given under my hand this 13th day of December, 1905. KATHARINA SPROESSER, 307 G st. N. W. Attest: WM. C. TAYLOR, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. No. 13,311. Administration. [Seal.] 50-3t

FOURTH INSERTION.

W. H. Robeson, Attorney
In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Holding a Probate Court.
In the Matter of the Estate of James Smith, Deceased.
No. 11,789.
ORDER.

In the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court: This cause coming on to be heard upon the petition of the administrator, and it appearing to the court that the administrator has appointed the 29th day of January, 1906, for a meeting of persons entitled to distributive shares or legacies or a residue out of the estate of James Smith, the said action of the administrator in fixing said date is on this, the 1st day of December, 1905, hereby approved. And it further appearing to the court that all the heirs at law, next of kin, and distributees of the said James Smith, deceased, are non-residents of the District of Columbia, and so far as known to the said Samuel A. Putman, administrator, are named as follows: Walter Harrington, Henry Harrington, Frank Harrington, John A. Smith, Martha Ann David, nee Woodworth, and Charles Woodworth. And it further appearing to the court that the said Martha Ann David is a person of unsound mind and without committee or guardian, William H. Woodwell is hereby appointed a guardian ad litem for the purpose of the preservation of her interests in this proceeding, if any she have. It is further ordered that a copy of this order be mailed to said parties by said administrator by registered letter; and also that a copy of this order be published in The Washington Times and The Washington Law Reporter in each week for four successive weeks, the last publication to be at least twenty days prior to said 29th day of January, 1906. WENDELL P. STAFFORD, Associate Justice. A true copy. Attest: James Tanner, Register of Wills. 49-4t

[Seal]

Digitized by Google

DIGEST OF CASES AND INDEX.

WASHINGTON LAW REPORTER. VOLUME XXXIII. 1905.

Accident Insurance.
A strain received in the ordinary course of assured's business an accident within the meaning of the policy. Patterson v. Guarantee Corpn., 274.
Interpretation of contracts of insurance. Id.
Policy construed and held that pre-existing diseased condition of assured did not preclude recovery where accidental injury was direct cause of death. Id.
The question whether the death was the result of accidental injury held for the jury. Id.
Right of medical adviser of insurer to examine body of insured held not to include right of autopsy or dissection. Id.
Acknowledgments, Defects in. See Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Administration.
Order appointing a child as administrator jointly with widow and against her protest reversed. Williams v. Williams, 132.
Probate Court may appoint either widow or child, or both jointly with their consent, but not otherwise. Id.
Admiralty.
Services rendered held salvage and not to be compensated on principle of quantum meruit. Clark Co. v. Columbia, 519.
Costs awarded to libellant. Id.
Adulteration of Drugs, Etc.
Refusal of milk dealer to sell sample. D. C. v. Garrison, 345.
Alimony Pendente Lite.
Order granting alimony and expenses of defending appeal affirmed. Sparks v. Sparks, 344.
Alleys, Opening of. See Brandenburg v. D. C., 740; Martin v. D. C., 742.
Anti-Trust Act. See Leonard v. Brewing Co., 211.
Apartment Houses. Duehay v. D. C., 422.
Appeal Bonds. See Darlington v. Turner, 114.
Appeals.
Bond for costs not required where supersedeas bond is given. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Appeal dismissed for insufficiency of transcript of record. Neely Co. v. Browning, 152.
In case heard by trial court without a jury, questions of fact determined not reviewable on appeal. Id.
In order for appellate court to pass upon correctness of ruling of trial court the record must purport to give all the testimony bearing thereon. Klopfer v. D. C., 153.
Entry of notice of appeal not sufficient to prevent issue of execution. Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Court of Appeals without power to order payment by husband to wife for expenses of appeal where transcript has not been filed. Morgan v. Morgan, 409.
Failure to serve citation held waived. Dowling v. Buckey, 774.
Appeals—Continued.
Allowance for counsel fees, etc., pending appeal, denied. Bernsdorff v. Bernsdorff, 775. Granted. Lane v. Lane, 775.
Power of Court of Appeals to order payment of. Id.
Appeals from Justices of the Peace.
Notice of appeal held sufficient, and approval by justice of bond required. Bundy v. U. S., 434.
Right of relator to use name of United States. Id.
Appellate Practice.
Objection not raised below. Railway Co. v. Smith, 261; Whipple v. Gaddis, 309.
In order for appellate court to determine whether there was error in directing a verdict, bill of exceptions must show that all the evidence is set forth. Rockwell v. Traction Co., 338.
Vague and indefinite exceptions to report of auditor will not be considered. Waggaman v. Earle, 420.
Attachment and Garnishment.
Sec. 473 Code, providing for attorneys' fee where judgment is in favor of garnishee, held valid. Morimura v. Samaha, 258.
Property in safe deposit box in trust company subject to. Trust Co. v. Coal Co., 738.
Trust company may be required to answer interrogatories. Id.
Attorney and Client.
Agreement by party having claim against United States giving attorney a fee of one-half the amount collected and making it a lien upon the draft, held valid. Roberts v. Consaul, 98.
Where the claimant is a non-resident and refuses either to pay the fee or empower the attorney to receive the draft, a court of equity will appoint a receiver therefor at the suit of the attorney. Id.
Bill of Review. See Perkins v. Tyrer, 55; Landram v. Jordan, 243.
Board of Medical Supervisors.
Order revoking license of physician reversed. Czarra v. Board, 470.
Bonds.
Can not be shown to have been delivered to obligee upon a condition not expressed on face of bond. Bieber v. Gans, 51.
A waiver, to be binding, must be supported by a consideration or by estoppel. Id.
In action on bond, where amount claimed is liquidated, and defendant's pleas are insufficient, judgment may be entered for amount claimed. Id.
Defense to action on bond by way of set-off. McGuire v. Gerstley, 754. See also Principal and Surety.
Building and Loan Associations. See Whelpley v. Ross, 371.
Building Contract, Construction of. Rheam v. Martin, 807.

Digitized by Google

Carriers.
Company supplying messenger service held a common carrier and liable for negligence. White v. Postal Co., 295.
It is not presumed that such a company assumes to act as common carrier of money; and its assumption of that status must be proved by party alleging it. Id.
Company held not liable for money alleged to have been lost. Id.
Cemetery.
Right of life tenant of private cemetery to grant burial permits. Hill v. Moore, 549.
Cemetery Companies.
Right of, to take devise or bequest in trust. Iglehart v. Iglehart, 711.
Champerty. See Rockwell v. Traction Co., 338.
Charitable Trusts. See University v. Taylor, 181.
Citation on Appeal. Dowling v. Buckey, 774.
Civil Service. Rules.
Porto Rican entitled to registration by board of labor employment at Navy Yard. U. S. v. Bowyer, 164.
Claims against United States. See Roberts v. Consaul, 98.
Code D. C., Sections Cited and Construed.
Secs. 31, 35. Undertaking on appeal from justice of the peace. Bundy v. U. S., 434.
Sec. 105. Service by publication. Jones v. Rutherford, 498.
Secs. 116–119, 122, 129. Probate Court, jurisdiction of. Richardson v. Daggett, 24; Guthrie v. Welch, 162.
Sec. 276. Administration, who entitled to. Williams v. Williams, 132.
Sec. 304. Letters ad colligendum. Guthrie v. Welch, 162.
Sec. 447, 456, 470. Attachment and garnishment. Trust Co. v. Coal Co., 738.
Sec. 473. Attorneys' fees in attachment proceedings. Morimura v. Samaha, 258.
Sec. 493. Acknowledgment of deeds. Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Sec. 499. When deeds to take effect. Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Sec. 605–644 (sub-ch. 4, ch. 18). Manufacturing, etc., corporations. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Sec. 669. Right of cemetery company to take devise in trust. Iglehart v. Iglehart, 711.
Sec. 815. Criminal libel. Raymond v. U. S., 514.
Sec. 838. Embezzlement by commission merchant. Green v. U. S., 535.
Sec. 901. Pollution of waters of Potomac River. Holden v. U. S., 34.
Sec. 1074. Execution, when issued. Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Sec. 1089. Interrogatories to garnishee. Trust Co. v. Coal Co., 738.
Sec. 1151. Separate estate of married women. Dobbins v. Thomas, 743.
Sec. 1154, 1155. Mortgage of wife's property for debt of husband. Darneille v. Tuck, 821.
Secs. 1155–1156. Powers of married women as to property. Dobbins v. Thomas, 743.
Sec. 1160. Right of husband to personal estate of deceased wife. In re estate of Harris, 290.
Sec. 1177. Husband's liability for necessaries. Dobbins v. Thomas, 743.
Code Sections—Continued.
Sec. 1214. Lien of judgment or decree. Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Sec. 1219. Notice to quit. Byrne v. Morrison, 215
Sec. 1233. Appeal in landlord and tenant cases, judgment on. Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Secs. 1272–1282. Mandamus. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Sec. 1538, et seq. Quo warranto. Hayes v. Burns, 200.
Sec. 1563. Set-off. McGuire v. Gerstley, 754.
Commission merchant, Embezzlement by. Green v. U. S., 535.
Condemnation proceedings. See Macfarland v. Saunders, 393; Brandenburg v. D. C., 740; Martin v. D. C., 742.
Conditional Delivery. See Bieber v. Gans, 51.
Confessions. See Ryan v. United States, 516.
Conspiracy in Restraint of Trade.
Jurisdiction of equity to enjoin. Leonard v. Brewing Co., 211.
Constitutional Law.
Constitutionality of union station act sustained. Millard v. Roberts, 198.
Contempt.
Attempt to influence juror in pending cause held a contempt committed in presence of court. McCaully v. U. S., 306.
Evidence held sufficient to establish charge. Id.
Violation of an injunction issued without an undertaking being given not a contempt of court. Drew v. Hogan, 488.
Corporations.
Right of rival claimants to corporate office to be determined by quo warranto, not by bill in equity. Hayes v. Burns, 200.
Corporations under District Code.
Mandamus will not issue to compel the recorder of deeds to receive and record certificate of incorporation where such certificate is invalid on its face. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Corporations under sub-ch. 4, ch. 18, restricted to single business. Id.
Trustees of corporations formed thereunder must at all times be stockholders. Id.
Certificate naming five persons as trustees, three only of whom acknowledge it, fatally defective. Id.
Creditors' Bill. See Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Criminal Libel.
A written communication charging misfeasance in office not privileged. Raymond v. U. S., 514.
Criminal Procedure.
Imposition of extreme penalty imposed by law not "cruel and unusual punishment" prohibited by Eighth Amendment Const. U. S. Raymond v. U. S., 514.
Taking of additional testimony when defendant is called for sentence reversible error. Id.
In such case, however, only the judgment and sentence vacated, leaving the other proceedings unaffected. Id.
Exception to refusal of trial court to direct a verdict waived by subsequent testimony. Green v. U. S., 535.

Digitized by Google

Cross-Examination. Holtzman v. Const. Co., 531.
Damages.
Assessment of, by court. Bieber v. Gans, 51.
In personal injury cases damages to time of trial may be recovered. Hubbard v. Perlie, 482.
Evidence of medical treatment after filing suit held admissible. Id.
Damages in personal injury cases largely in discretion of jury. Holtzman v. Construction Co., 531.
The question in such cases is whether that discretion has been abused. Id.
A verdict of $10,000 held not so large as to show that it was given under the influence of mistake, passion, or prejudice. Id.
Decedents' Estates.
Primary fund for payment of debt secured by mortgage. In re Estate of Harris, 290.
Deeds.
Record not essential to validity of deed, though withheld by agreement of parties. Bunten v. Trust Co., 247.
Delivery of deed in trust held to vest legal estate in trustee, and attempted revocation ineffectual. Id.
Defective acknowledgments. Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Distribution. See Marfield v. McCurdy, 450.
Divorce.
Proof of confessions by defendant must be clear and corroborated by independent facts and circumstances. Michalowicz v. Michalowicz, 442.
Domicile. See Travers v. Reinhardt, 406.
Drunkenness as Defense. See Ryan v. U. S., 516.
Embezzlement. See Staples v. Johnson, 183; Green v. U. S., 535; Byram v. U. S., 548.
Equitable Conversion. See Vogt v. Vogt, 390; Iglehart v. Iglehart, 711.
Equitable Liens. See Roberts v. Consaul, 98; Jones v. Rutherford, 498.
Equity.
Judgment at law not merged in decree on creditor's bill to reach equitable assets. Davis v. Sanders, 101.
The rule in such case is not changed by the fact that the decree, on a cross-bill filed by defendants, apportions the liability among solvent debtors. Id.
Right to file bill of interpleader not defeated by fact that one of the defendants has brought suit in another jurisdiction. Kellogg v. Insurance Co., 103.
Sufficient showing for filing bill of interpleader held to have been made. Id.
Payment by trustee to father of beneficiary held in violation of trust, and not to relieve trustee from liability. Darlington v. Turner, 114.
Laches of complainant held not available as defense. Id.
Allowance of interest upon funds in hands of trustee held proper. Id.
The rule that undisclosed principal can not sue on sealed instrument is not applicable in equity. Whelpley v. Ross, 371.
Undisclosed principal held entitled to sue in equity to secure release of property from deed of trust. Id.
Equity—Continued.
Where promise to pay a sum above legal interest depends upon a contingency, the loan is not usurious. Id.
Agreement between a building association and a borrower held not usurious. Id.
Complainant held entitled to have his property released. Id.
Bill seeking to create express trust in land by parol dismissed. McIntosh v. Green, 423.
Deed set aside as having been executed without consideration and induced by fraud. Slater v. Rudderforth, 424.
Part performance of parol agreement sufficient to take case out of Statute of Frauds. Cherry v. Whalen, 485.
Specific performance of parol agreement. Id.
It is a condition precedent to granting an injunction that an undertaking be executed and filed. Drew v. Hogan, 488.
Requirement of undertaking not waived by defendants appearing and pleading to merits. Id.
Restraining order issued without undertaking given is inoperative and void. Id.
Evidence held insufficient to show mental incapacity sufficient to avoid a deed. Critchfield v. Easterday, 504.
Reformation of contract of insurance for mistake of fact. Church v. Ins. Co., 692.
Reformation of policy on ground that "reduced rate clause" had been inserted by accident or mistake denied. Id.
Equity Pleading and Practice.
Performance of decree before filing of bill of review excused by poverty or inability to perform decree. Perkins v. Tyrer, 55.
Refusal of motion to strike bill of review from the files for failure to perform decree equivalent to permission to file the bill without such performance. Id.
Facts charged in bill admitted by decree pro confesso, but not conclusions drawn therefrom. Id.
Failure of bill to state cause of action is error apparent on the record so as to authorize filing of bill of review. Id.
Upon demurrer to bill of review filed for error apparent on the face of the decree being overruled, defendant not entitled to plead over. Id.
Objection of multifariousness held not maintainable. Kann v. King, 147.
Conclusions of law not admitted by demurrer. Columbian University v. Taylor, 181.
Irregularity in obtaining order for service by publication waived by general appearance. Landram v. Jordan, 243.
Right to file bill of review held not lost by laches. Id.
Whether party interested but omitted from original bill is a necessary party to bill of review, quære. Id.
A decree declaring a trust created by will invalid reviewed, and the provision for complainant held valid. Id.
Power of court to vacate void judgment or decree after lapse of term. Macfarland v. Saunders, 393.
Right of complainant to dismiss bill sustained. Mertens v. Proctor, 565.

Digitized by Google

Evidence.
Admissibility of photograph of accused in homicide case. Shaffer v. U. S., 4.
Leading question, when allowance of, will be substantial error. Id.
Proof of handwriting by circumstantial evidence showing a reasonable probability that it was made by the person purporting to have done so. Id.
Proof of destruction of letter so as to admit secondary evidence of contents. Id.
Where list of witnesses furnished under section 1033 R. S. contains names of two persons at same address whose names are identical, defendant not justified in assuming both refer to same person; and both are competent witnesses. Id.
Medical witness may give opinion as to sanity of accused based upon a full personal examination. Id.
Application for admission of testator to an insane asylum and certificate of two physicians upon which commitment was made not admissible on question of testamentary capacity. Keely v. Moore, 134.
Declaration of party injured showing that he was suffering pain admissible as part of res gestæ. Patterson v. Guarantee Corpn., 274.
Statements made the day after the injury as to its cause held inadmissible. Id.
Jury not at liberty to disregard positive and uncontradicted and not inherently improbable testimony. Brown v. Petersen, 310.
Rejection of entire testimony of witness not required by her admission that she had testified falsely in one particular. Travers v. Reinhardt, 406.
Where defendant makes confession, erroneous admission of evidence is immaterial. Ryan v. U. S., 516.
Cross-examination to show bias. Holtzman v. Construction Co., 531.
Admission of incompetent evidence held waived. Id.
Evidence as to pecuniary condition of plaintiff in action for libel. Times Co. v. Downey, 770.
Excessive Damages. See Holtzman v. Construction Co., 531.
Execution, Issue of. See Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Execution.
Notice of claim by third person to chattels levied upon given on day of sale held sufficient. Brown v. Petersen, 310.
Person in possession of property under a lien has right to hold same until lien is paid. Id.
Right of landlord as to property held by him as security for rent. Id.
Executors and Administrators. See Marfield v. McCurdy, 450.
Fellow Servants. See Looney v. Railroad, 39.
Fire Insurance.
Condition against chattel mortgage held broken by execution of chattel deed of trust. Hunt v. Insurance Co., 154.
Insertion of "reduced rate clause" in policy held not shown due to accident or mistake. Church v. Insurance Co., 692.
Foreign Judgments. See Karrick v. Wetmore, 435.
Forfeitures. See Kann v. King, 147.
Fraternal Beneficial Associations.
Forfeiture and disconnection for non-payment of assessment. Golden Cross v. Bernard, 722.
Reinstatement on payment of assessment and fine a personal privilege, and does not survive to legal representative. Id.
Fraudulent Conveyances.
In case of sale by vendor to defraud creditors purchaser has burden of proving payment of consideration. Morimura v. Samaha, 258.
Creditors attacking sale have burden of showing notice by purchaser of vendor's fraud. Id.
Bad faith on part of purchaser may exist where facts and circumstances of transaction are such as to put him on inquiry. Id.
If, in such case, he fail to make inquiry, his situation is not different in law from one who has actual notice of the fraud. Id.
Homicide.
Photograph of accused as evidence. Shaffer v. United States, 4.
Charge of court as to weight to be given opinions of lay witnesses as to sanity held proper. Id.
Husband and Wife.
Court has no power to require husband to pay costs of appeal where transcript has not been filed in this court. Morgan v. Morgan, 409.
Wife can not be member with her husband in a partnership. Norwood v. Francis, 455.
Provision in will for wife to be liberally construed. Montgomery v. Brown, 468.
Husband not released from liability for necessaries by Sec. 1177 Code. Dobbins v. Thomas, 743.
Agency of husband for wife not implied from marriage relation. Rheam v. Martin, 807.
Independent Contractor. See Rheam v. Martin, 807.
Indian Tribes.
Powers of Congress over tribal property. Naganab v. Hitchcock, 248.
Indictment and Information. See Holden v. U. S., 34; U. S. v. Johnson, 776.
Infants, Disaffirmance of Contract. Slater v. Rudderforth, 424.
Injunction.
Effect of failure to give bond. Drew v. Hogan, 488.
Insolvent Corporations.
Creditors held not entitled to enforce, in a single suit against a number of subscribers for the stock of the corporation, a liability for the unpaid portion of their subscriptions. Bank v. Saville, 178.
Interest. See Darlington v. Turner, 114.
Interpleader. See Kellogg v. Insurance Co., 103.
Joint Stock Companies.
Members of unincorporated joint stock company liable as partners. Norwood v. Francis, 455.
Member giving notice of withdrawal as provided in by-laws not liable to subsequent creditors. Id.
Married woman owning stock in such company liable as other shareholders. Id.
Married woman can not become a member with her husband in such a partnership, and is not liable for its debts. Id.

Digitized by Google

Joint Stock Companies—Continued.
Whether a member had withdrawn so as to relieve himself from liability as a partner held for the jury. Bradford v. Benefit Assn., 786.
Judgments.
Not merged in decree on creditor's bill to reach equitable assets. Davis v. Sanders, 101.
Order striking out dismissal of cause without notice to defendant held void. Karrick v. Wetmore, 435.
Judgment, Lien of.
Sec. 1214 Code, making judgments a lien on equitable interests, does not operate in favor of judgments existing when Code went into effect. Bank v. Berlin, 726.
Filing of bill by judgment creditor to reach equitable interest of debtor gives him a lien on such interest. Id.
Such lien is superior to the right of an assignee from the judgment debtor whose assignment was recorded subsequent to the filing of the bill. Id.
Landlord and Tenant.
No implied covenant on part of landlord that premises are tenantable. Howell v. Schneider, 82.
Parol promise to repair held not to extend to other repairs than those pointed out by tenant after inspection of premises. Id.
Landlord not liable for injuries caused by negligent construction of water box in bathroom where he has no knowledge of dangerous condition and makes no representation in relation thereto. Id.
Forfeiture by a lessee for non-payment of taxes as required by lease, relieved against under the circumstances of the case. Kann v. King, 147.
Notice to quit need not specify date of termination of lease. Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Receipt of rent for current month pending notice to quit not waiver of notice. Id.
Motion in arrest of judgment on ground of irregularity in verdict properly denied. Id.
Unless suspended by agreement, injunction, or appeal, writ of execution may issue immediately on rendition of judgment. Id.
Entry of notice of appeal will not suspend issue of execution. Id.
Right of landlord as to property held as security for rent. Brown v. Petersen, 310.
Larceny.
Drunkenness, unless to the extent of rendering accused incapable of forming intent to steal, not a defense. Ryan v. U. S., 516.
Such evidence immaterial where, on becoming sober, defendant, instead of returning goods, converted them to his own use. Id.
Evidence held to show commission of larceny in this District. Id.
Where accused has made confession, erroneous admission of evidence is immaterial, Id.
Letters ad Colligendum. See Guthrie v. Welch, 162.
Libel.
Of public officer. Raymond v. U. S., 514.
Privileged communications. Best v. Walker, 610.
Newspaper article held libelous per se. Times Co. v. Downey, 770.
Libel—Continued.
Mental suffering an element of recoverable damages in action for libel. Id.
Evidence that plaintiff had no parents living and was dependent on her own exertions held competent. Id.
License Taxes.
The term "claim agents" in personal tax law held too indefinite to be enforced. Lockwood v. D. C., 131.
Wholesale dealer in wood and coal not liable to license tax imposed by act of 1902 on "building and other contractors." D. C. v. Chapman, 232.
Right of party paying under protest to recover. Id.
Master bricklayer not subject to license tax. Wilson v. D. C., 502.
Liens. See Brown v. Petersen, 310.
Limitations, Statute of. Jackson v. Emmons, 165.
Lobbying Services. Waggaman v. Earle, 420.
Malicious Prosecution.
Plaintiff has burden of proving both malice and want of probable cause. Staples v. Johnson, 183.
Retention of money under claim of right made in good faith not embezzlement. Id.
Refusal to direct a verdict for defendant held proper. Id.
Mandamus.
Use of name of United States in petition for mandamus a mere formality. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Appeals in Patent Office proceedings. Allen v. U. S., 354.
To compel approval of appeal bond. Bundy v. U. S., 434.
Marriage.
Whether a valid marriage existed between parties domiciled in New Jersey at death of one of them depends on laws of that State. Travers v. Reinhardt, 406.
Evidence held sufficient to show valid marriage under laws of that State. Id.
Married Women.
Can not be member of partnership with husband. Norwood v. Francis, 455.
Power of, to exchange property. Dobbins v. Thomas, 743.
Liability of married woman for necessaries. Id.
Mortgage of separate estate for husband's debt. Darneille v. Tuck, 821.
Master and Servant.
A private watchman, commissioned but without compensation as a special policeman, is not precluded from recovering for injuries caused by a defective sidewalk. Klopfer v. D. C., 153.
Duty of master to provide suitable and reasonably safe machinery. Butler v. Frazee, 387.
Servant has burden of showing negligence on the part of master. Id.
When servant has notice of defect in machinery, and continues in its use, he assumes the risk of injury. Id.
Mental Incapacity. See Critchfield v. Easterday, 504.
Merger. See Davis v. Sanders, 101.

Digitized by Google

Messenger Service. See White v. Postal Co., 295.
Mistake. See Church v. Insurance Co., 692.
Multifariousness. See Kann v. King, 147; Bank v. Saville, 178.
Negligence.
When a question of law for the court. Ward v. D. C., 71.
In action against District for injuries caused by the fall of a tree being removed by its agents, question of negligence held for the jury. Id.
Act done in presence of impending danger may not be contributory negligence. Id.
Liability of owner of building for negligence of contractor in removing refuse material. Swart v. Justh, 149.
Contributory negligence of plaintiff will not preclude recovery if defendant by reasonable care, might have avoided the consequence of such negligence. Hawley v. Railway Co., 150.
Question of negligence held one for the jury to determine. Id.
Water plug in parking. Doty v. D. C., 293.
District held not liable for negligence of railroad company in constructing its tracks. Smith v. D. C., 418.
New Trial. Holtzman v. Construction Co., 531.
Notice to Quit. See Byrne v. Morrison, 215.
Panama Canal.
Power of United States to construct. Wilson v. Shaw, 328.
Parties. See Landram v. Jordan, 243.
Partnership. See Norwood v. Francis, 455.
Part Performance. Cherry v. Whalen, 485.
Patent Office Practice.
Interlocutory decisions in interference proceedings not appealable. Allen v. U. S., 354.
Perjury.
False statement in application for civil service examination. Johnson v. U. S., 679.
Photographs as Evidence. Shaffer v. U. S., 4.
Physicians, Revocation of License of. See Czarra v. Board, 470.
Pleading and Practice.
In action on bond pleas setting up a parol condition not expressed on its face held bad. Bieber v. Gans, 51.
General exception to entire charge of court held insufficient. McDermott v. Severe, 226.
Declaration in general assumpsit need not allege promise to pay. Laundry Co. v. Miller, 773.
Police Regulations.
Evidence held insufficient to support a conviction for violation of regulation as to hackmen. Barnes v. D. C., 53.
Regulations as to occupation of sidewalks, etc., by farmers and truckmen held valid. Taylor v. D. C., 67.
Obstructing streets. Gassenheimer v. D. C., 197.
Regulation for removal of snow and ice from sidewalks held invalid. Coughlin v. D. C., 376.
Evidence insufficient to support conviction for obstructing street. Probey v. D. C., 482.
Discharge of firearms within city limits. D. C. v. Lewis, 691.
Storage of gasoline, etc. Cahill v. D. C., 759.
Potomac River, Pollution of.
Discharge by gas company of refuse water containing percentage of tar and oil, a violation of sec. 901 Code. Holden v. U. S., 34.
Principal and Agent.
Payment of money to agent. Held v. Walker, 440.
Principal and Surety.
Right of surety to set-off damages for breach of contract between creditor and principal. McGuire v. Gerstley, 754.
Surety not discharged by failure of obligee to notify him of principal's default. Clark v. Gerstley, 758.
In order for it to discharge the surety an extension of time must be for a valuable consideration and for a definite period. Id.
Privilege. Raymond v. U. S., 514.
Probate Court.
Without jurisdiction to determine question of title to and control possession of property. Richardson v. Daggett, 24.
Has jurisdiction to remove a collector on ground of interest in result of litigation. Guthrie v. Welch, 162.
Proximate Cause. See Patterson v. Guarantee Corpn., 274.
Public Schools.
Board of school trustees without power to bind District to pay for services rendered schools in absence of express authority or of appropriation to pay for such services. Myers v. D. C., 290.
Quo Warranto. See Hayes v. Burns, 206.
Railways.
Liability for negligence in construction and maintenance of track at crossing. McDermott v. Severe, 226.
Negligence of motorman in failing to get car under control in time to stop it after seeing plaintiff had caught his foot at the crossing held for the jury. Id.
Prospective pecuniary injury to child from loss of leg properly taken into account in estimating damages. Id.
Whether passenger on street-car is negligent in protruding arm from car is for the jury. Railway Co. v. Smith, 261.
Negligence of railway company in using cars which almost touch in passing. Id.
Carrier must so construct its road and use such equipment as not to endanger safety of passengers. Id.
Recorder of Deeds. Dancy v. Clark, 18.
Recoupment. See McGuire v. Gerstley, 754.
Release.
In action for personal injuries plaintiff may avoid effect of release pleaded in bar by showing fraud in its procurement. Rockwell v. Traction Co., 338.
To avoid release for fraud plaintiff must return or offer to return the consideration received; but tender made after release is pleaded is sufficient. Id.
Evidence on question of fraud held to require its submission to the jury. Id.
Remarks of Counsel. See Holtzman v. Construction Co., 531; Bradford v. Benefit Assn., 786.
Respondeat Superior. Parks v. University, 579.
Resulting Trusts. University v. Taylor, 181.

Digitized by Google

Rule in Shelly's Case. See Vogt v. Vogt, 390; Slater v. Rudderforth, 424.
Sales of Merchandise in Bulk.
New York statute regulating sales of merchandise in bulk unconstitutional. Wright v. Hart (N. Y.), 658.
Savings Bank Deposits.
Deposit held to create trust. Littig v. Vestry (Md.), 567.
Second Class Mail Matter.
Joint stock company conducting correspondence college for profit not an institution of learning within the meaning of the act of 1894. College v. Wynne, 230.
Service by Publication. See Jones v. Rutherford, 498.
Set-off.
Requisites of plea of set-off. McGuire v. Gerstly, 754.
Damages for tort can not be made basis of plea of set-off. Id.
Seventy-third Rule. See Dobbins v. Thomas, 743; Laundry Co. v. Miller, 773.
Sidewalks, Obstructions in.
Stepping stone near curb not an unlawful obstruction. Wolff v. D. C., 137.
District not charged with duty to so light streets as to show the presence of such stone on sidewalk. Id.
Liability of District for injuries caused by falling over water plug in parking, Doty v. D. C., 293.
Smoke Law.
Liability of public officer for violation of. Palmer v. D. C., 402.
Apartment house not a private residence within the meaning of the smoke law. Duehay v. D. C., 422.
Specific Performance. Cherry v. Whalen, 485.
Street Railways.
Relations of employees of two companies operated by same management. Looney v. Railroad Co., 39.
Negligence, if any, held that of fellow servant, precluding a recovery. Id.
Taxation.
Assessment of property in name of a decedent instead of in name of those deriving title from him not a compliance with law. Kann v. King, 147.
Failure to assess in name of new owner is an irregularity which will vitiate a tax sale. Id.
Report of tax sale held not to comply with requirements of law, and the sale and deed thereunder held void. Id.
Certiorari to review a tax sale properly quashed. Guy v. D. C., 165.
Trial of Right of Property. See Brown v. Petersen, 310.
Trust Company.
Property in safe deposit box subject to attachment. Trust Co. v. Coal Co., 738.
Trusts and Trustees.
Payment by trustee to person other than beneficiary. Darlington v. Turner, 114.
In case of several independent trusts, one legal and the others illegal, the estate of the trustees will be upheld so far as the valid trust is concerned. Landram v. Jordan, 243.
Trusts and Trustees—Continued.
A trust created by will construed valid so far as estate given complainant was concerned. Id.
One of several trustees may act as agent of all in cases of emergency, and there may be ratification by all of the act of one. Ubhoff v. Brandenburg, 473.
Agreement by one of two trustees held binding on both. Id.
United States Mails.
Embezzlement of decoy letter held punishable under sections 5467–5468, R. S. Byram v. U. S., 458.
Usury. See Whelpley v. Ross, 371.
Vagrancy. See Fields v. D. C., 501.
Waiver. See Bieber v. Gans, 51.
Wills.
Certificate of vice-consul held sufficient as an attestation. Keely v. Moore, 134.
An instruction upon the question of testamentary capacity held correct. Id.
In construing a will the policy of the law in favor of the heir yields to the clear intent of testator. McCaffrey v. Manogue, 167.
Devise held to pass estate in fee and not merely life estate. Id.
In construing wills courts are not required to adhere strictly to precedents. Id.
Devise to incorporated educational institution held to create valid charitable trust. Columbian University v. Taylor, 181.
Intent of testator is first and great rule in interpreting will. Cruit v. Owen, 323.
Devise in trust construed. Id.
Where a present interest in remainder, to be enjoyed in futuro, passes to a certain person, the remainder is vested. Vogt v. Vogt, 390.
Rule in Shelly's case inapplicable where one estate is equitable and the other legal. Id.
A trust estate is not to continue beyond time required for purposes of trust. Id.
Rule in Shelly's case held inapplicable. Id.
Construction of devise. Travers v. Reinhardt, 406.
Devise in trust for married woman for life and to her lawful issue at death held not within rule in Shelly's case. Slater v. Rudderforth, 424.
Provision for compensation of executor construed. Marfield v. McCurdy, 450.
Distribution of principal before period fixed by will denied. Id.
Intent of testator must prevail if consistent with law. Montgomery v. Brown, 468.
Provision for benefit of wife to be liberally construed. Id.
Estate given by one clause of will can not be taken away by raising a doubt from other clauses, but only by express words or clear implication. Id.
Bequest to wife held to give her entire estate in life insurance the subject thereof. Id.
Bequest to erect monument held valid. Iglehart v. Iglehart, 711.
Devise to foreign cemetery held valid. Id.
In case of bequest of money for life, with remainder over, it is executor's duty to invest fund and pay only income to life tenant. Payne v. Robinson, 825.
Witnesses. U. S. v. Shaffer, 4.

Digitized by Google

Editorial Notes, Etc.

Page
Accident insurance—proximate cause..... 785
Accounting by justices of the peace..... 49
Administration of estates of absentees..... 481
Adverse possession 513
Agent, competency of, to testify as to extent and character of his authority..... 529
Amendment of Common Law Rule 2, relating to attorneys..... 370
Amendment of general incorporation law of District..... 66
Amendment to rules of justices of the peace..... 257
American Bar Association..... 466
Antecedent debt as consideration for note... 753
Apartment house—liability of owner for injury to child of tenant..... 561
Appeals from justices of the peace—right of appellant to dismiss appeal..... 721
Bad dreams as an element of damage..... 433
Bankruptcy—right of trustee as to property incumbered by trust deed..... 529
Banks—stockholder's liability..... 33
Carriers—injury to passenger—negligence of conductor..... 305
Charges of professional misconduct..... 193
Children as witnesses..... 449
Competency of insane person as witness..... 417
Conditional sales—remedy of vendor on refusal of vendee to accept goods..... 721
Conduct of party as admission..... 753
Constitutionality of act regulating sales of merchandise in bulk..... 657
Contract for sale of real estate—enforcement by undisclosed principal..... 578
Corporations under District laws—forfeiture of charter..... 289
Criminal procedure—questioning jury as to how they are divided..... 129
Cumulative sentences in Police Court..... 33
Damage for lowering grade of street..... 641
Decedents' estates—primary fund for payment of mortgage debt..... 161
Ecclesiastical controversies..... 497
Ejection of trespasser from street-car..... 417
Elevator accident—negligence..... 550
Equitable estoppel..... 289
Evidence—res gestæ—statement by conductor 618
False representations to commercial agency 433
Fixtures—rights of mortgagee without notice of agreement reserving ownership.... 129
Foreign corporations—service of process... 449
Foreign judgments—right of assignee to sue in his own name denied..... 337
Fraternal benefit associations — by-laws adopted after issue of certificate..... 289
Fraud in sale of land—caveat emptor..... 689
Fraudulent procurement of note..... 353
Homicide—presumption of sanity..... 113
Incorporations under District laws..... 33
Indirect advertisement by lawyers..... 578
In Memoriam—Andrew Brown Duvall..... 707
In Memoriam—Andrew Wylie..... 803
In Memoriam—Charles C. Cole..... 546
In Memoriam—Franklin H. Mackey..... 194
In Memoriam—William John Miller..... 818
Insane delusions—belief in particular religious creed..... 49
Iowa cigarette cases 513
Judgments—jurisdiction over garnishee temporarily within State—notice..... 465
Labor unions..... 641
Landlord and tenant—covenant to keep premises in good repair..... 50
Legal effect of use of terms "wilful, abandoned, reckless, and wanton" neglect..... 568
Liability of master for failure to employ competent servants..... 257
License tax—contractors..... 113
Limitation of actions—no provision of Code applicable to foreign judgments..... 385
Married women—mortgage of separate property for husband's debt..... 801
Master and servant—danger from separate work of fellow servant..... 353
Master and servant—liability of master for acts of vice-principal..... 97
Minor streets, opening of..... 802
Mr. Justice Louis E. McComas..... 401
Mortgages—priority..... 641
Note—bona fide purchaser—discount by bank..... 305
Ohio anti-gambling statute upheld..... 828
Organization and management of business corporations..... 65
Personal injury—contributory negligence—promptness in leaving car..... 612
Present system of transferring stock..... 721
Railroads—injury to brakemen—automatic couplers 17
Real estate brokers—compensation where property is exchanged..... 97
Renewal by implication of contract of employment for definite time 593
Retirement of Chief Justice Alvey..... 2
Retirement of Mr. Justice Morris..... 401
Riding on platform of crowded railway car. 66
Right of life tenant of private cemetery to grant burial permits..... 545
Shopkeeper—liability for loss of garment... 785
Stock dividend as income..... 513
Stockholder's liability to creditors..... 114
Street railroads—care in equipping cars..... 513
Suretyship—change of contract..... 337
Unfair competition—use of family name.... 353
Theatre tickets..... 802
The right of privacy..... 337

Communications.

A Municipal Court for the District of Columbia. Henry Randall Webb..... 626
An act to prevent fraudulent sales of merchandise in the District of Columbia..... 680
Citizenship by marriage—a bill to restore American born widows of aliens to citizenship—attitude of State Department. Crammond Kennedy..... 73
Reduction in number of justices of the peace. S. R. Church..... 242

Legal Miscellany.

Accord and satisfaction by marriage..... 827
Architect's plans..... 649
Bankruptcy Law, The..... 681
Bankrupt Law, The—Report to American Bar Association..... 562
Celebrated "steer case," The 573

Digitized by Google

Page
Compromise in the jury box 794
Court, power to act on its own motion..... 666
Disqualification of executors on other than statutory grounds—personal unfitness..... 571
Interstate rendition of paroled convict..... 616
In the matter of clothes..... 697
Ironies of Lord Justice Knight-Bruce 585
Marshaling, The equity of..... 572
Microscopic study of pen and ink lines. Marshall D. Ewell..... 584
Mistaken identity 647
New trials after verdicts of acquittal..... 26
Parental liability for children's crimes..... 794
Pensioning judges in England..... 566
Prohibition of marriage of epileptics..... 645
Provocation in mitigation of damages..... 644
Reciprocal rights of street railway companies and general public in streets..... 88
Right of jurors to consider their own knowledge and experience..... 642
Sentimental damages..... 588
"Strikes" against estate 633
The motorist and the law..... 696
Uniform divorce laws..... 587
Who are passengers..... 265

Notes of Decisions.

Accident insurance—burden of proof..... 761
Accident insurance—exception 426
Accident insurance—expense of defending suit..... 138
Accident insurance—misrepresentations..... 11
Accident insurance—total disability..... 554
Accident insurance.....297, 360, 651
Accord and satisfaction.....51, 599
Accord and satisfaction—conditional tender..... 794
Accord and satisfaction—written receipt..... 761
Admiralty—maritime contracts 102
Adverse possession.....170, 297, 362, 730
Adverse possession—abandonment..... 649
Adverse possession—subsequent survey..... 133
Aerolite, title to..... 583
Agent—authority to execute notes..... 667
Agent—waiver of provisions of policy..... 667
Alteration of instruments..... 362
Animals—Liability of owner for personal injury inflicted by..... 597
Arrest—what constitutes offense of rescue.. 105
Assault—elements of damages..... 27
Assault—unauthorized surgical operation... 632
Attachment, grounds of..... 459
Attorney and client—act of attorney..... 390
Automobile accidents—liability..... 386
Automobiles—duty of driver to slow down when turning corners..... 553
Automobiles—judicial notice of..... 793
Bailments..... 410
Bankruptcy.....89, 186, 282, 362, 378, 410, 603, 689, 725, 827
Bankruptcy—assignment of future wages... 713
Bankruptcy—composition—ratification 343
Bankruptcy—deposit in bank..... 104
Bankruptcy—insolvent partnership..... 596
Bankruptcy — involuntary petition — expenses of receivership..... 820
Bankruptcy—mortgage lien..... 491
Bankruptcy—proceeds of life insurance..... 713
Bankruptcy—set-off—damages for tort..... 663
Banks and banking 59, 155, 169, 346, 651, 689
Banks—checks as payment..... 122
Banks—collection of drafts—insolvency..... 266
Banks—deposit by gambler..... 121
Banks—fraud of officer..... 713
Banks—purchasing stock of other banks... 130
Bank—loan to insolvent..... 58
Bank deposit—certificate—gift..... 50
Benefit societies..... 347
Bills and notes 170, 282, 378, 603, 689, 730, 745
Bills and notes—alteration 777
Bills and notes—failure of consideration..... 667
Bills and notes—negotiability..... 713
Bills and notes—parol evidence..... 614
Bills and notes—procurement by fraud 569
Bills and notes—transaction with decedent. 713
Bill of lading—value—damages 53
Bloodhounds..... 507
Boarding-house keepers and stolen property..... 583
Brokers.....266, 378
Brokers—acting for both parties..... 426
Builders' bond—mortgage—condition..... 635
Carrier and passenger—when relation begins—negligence..... 536
Carriers.....58, 130, 170, 282, 540, 725, 729, 745, 811
Carriers—alighting from car..... 75
Carriers—assault on passenger..... 828
Carriers—damages for wrongful expulsion 75
Carriers—collision—burden of proof..... 647
Carriers—damages for loss of goods..... 794
Carriers—duty to look and listen..... 138
Carriers—duty to stop at station..... 761
Carriers—injury to belated passengers..... 66
Carriers—injury to passenger.....3, 454, 667
Carriers—jewelry as baggage..... 667
Carriers—jumping from moving train..... 587
Carriers—limiting liability..... 102
Carriers—loss of jewelry in stateroom..... 507
Carriers—negligence of connecting carrier.. 667
Carriers—passenger elevator..... 785
Carriers—presumption of negligence..... 70
Carriers—prospective passengers..... 98
Carriers—who are passengers..... 793
Carriers of freight—unsuitable cars—selection by shipper..... 26
Certificate of deposit—bona fide holder..... 793
Checks—stoppage of payment—disregard by bank—waiver..... 506
Collision—electric car—negligence..... 578
Collision—street-car—negligence..... 596
Consequential damages..... 507
Contract of hiring—breach—damages..... 90
Contracts—rescission for non-performance. 729
Contracts—tender after action brought..... 386
Contracts—time for performance..... 616
Contributory negligence—last chance..... 664
Conversion of household goods—damages... 585
Copyright 169, 603
Copyright—penalty for infringement..... 570
Corporations.....312, 603, 729
Corporations—agent's authority—usage..... 346
Corporations—authority to execute notes... 90
Corporations—purchase of stock by directors..... 104
Corporations—trust deeds passing property to trustee in bankruptcy..... 581
Corporation—validity of debts..... 667
Damages—injury to child..... 105

Digitized by Google

Page
Damages, measure of, for conversion by stock-brokers 599
Death—limitations on action for 459
Death—master's liability for negligence of driver 459
Deeds—delivery 465
Deeds—sufficiency of delivery 427
Defective machinery—negligence 650
Definition of "papers read in evidence" 792
Depositions—right to compel answers 597
Discharge of employee for disobedience of reasonable requirement 746
Divorce—benefit certificate 104
Dying declarations 539, 586
Elevator accident—contributory negligence 523
Eminent domain—damages 507
Employee—negligence of master 598
Employee—negligence of third person 598
Employer's liability—Baltimore fire 793
Employer's liability for tort 90
Estoppel, how created 361
Escrow—delivery after grantor's death 761
Escrow—failure to deliver 761
Escrow—performance of condition 530
Evidence 100, 346, 360, 745
Evidence—res gestæ 82
Evidence—varying accommodation note 70
Executors—direction to erect monument 646
Fidelity bonds—notice of default 663
Fire insurance—breach of condition 100
Fraud—false representations 90
Gifts causa mortis 651
Handwriting—evidence—testing witness 650
Homicide 169, 297, 651
Homicide—degrees of offense 503
Homicide—persons engaged in affray 503
Husband and wife 169, 361
Husband and wife—gifts 371
Husband and wife—medical services 155
Imputed negligence of parent or guardian 615
Indemnity insurance—extent of liability 58
Innkeeper, Liability of 600
Insurance 98, 282, 297, 361, 540, 745, 828
Insurance—agent's authority 90
Insurance—apportionment of assessment 186
Insurance—breach of warranty 572
Insurance—change of location — increased premium 757
Insurance—construction of "loss payable" indorsement—stipulation against chattel mortgage 564
Insurance—loss payable to mortgagee 98
Insurance—referee—waiver 746
Interest—method of computing 746
Landlord—injury to third persons 450
Landlord and tenant 122, 170, 282, 297, 650
Landlord and tenant—rent not due 441
Landlord and tenant—rights of lessee 454
Landlord and tenant—sublease 155
Law partnership—purchase of books 578
Lease—covenant as to insurance 426
Lease—remodeling building 346
Liability for false imprisonment 792
Liability of landlord for repairs 646
Life insurance—assignment of policy 777
Life insurance—incontestability clause 777
Life insurance—suicide 745
Limitations—new promise 454
Limitations—part payment 12
Malicious prosecution—probable cause 450
Marriage brokerage contract 557

Page
Marriage by estoppel 507
Marriage—payment of debt 491
Master and servant 59, 138, 169, 297, 378, 651, 682, 689, 729, 511, 828
Master and servant—apprentice—discharge for disobedience 42
Master and servant—assumed risk 552
Master and servant—duty of master 667
Master and servant—fellow servants—telegraph operator and train crew—res ipsa loquitur 760
Master and servant—fellow servants 794
Master and servant—infant 761
Master—malicious act of servant 793
Master and servant—procuring discharge of non-union man 770
Master and servant—release 761
Master and servant—safe place to work 713
Master and servant—safe appliances 441, 427, 450
Master and servant—tort of servant 777
Master and servant—transitory perils 459
Mechanics' lien—change in ownership 503
Municipal corporations—official acts 667
Murder—inciting to suicide 104
National banks—comptroller's assessment 266
Negligence 105, 312, 361, 410, 540, 689, 811
Negligence—automobile—liabilty of owner 523
Negligence—dangerous premises 522
Negligence—defective streets 467
Negligence—driving over child in street 427
Negligence—duty to muffle sound 475
Negligence—dynamite—children 596
Negligence—independent contractor 104
Negligence—injury to licensee 122, 667
Negligence—injury to servant of independent contractor 667
Negligence of parent as defense to action for injuries to child 185
Negligence of vice-principal 104
Negligence—other negligent acts 713
Negligence—res ipsa loquitur 475
Negligence—right of workman in place of danger to expect customary warning 602
Nonsuit—reopening case 491
Note—negotiability—definite amount 392
Nuisance, abatement of 713
Opinion evidence 3
Ownership of property in case of robbery 698
Partnership 170, 361, 713
Partnership—estate of deceased partner 713
Payment—receipt—duress 682
Physicians—contract for services—right to practice 41
Posthumous libel 599
Postoffice Department—fraud orders 824
Powers—purchase from life tenant 722
Principal and agent 313, 806
Principal and surety 170, 616
Principal and surety—contribution 353
Railroad accident—negligence 596, 629
Railroad accidents—shipper's pass 386
Railroad employee—assumption of risk 523
Railroads—injury to child on track 353
Railroads — negligence — obeying conductor's direction 616
Railroad yards—injury to trespasser 598
Receivers—attorneys' fees 634
Release, construction of—general and particular words 475
Rescission—restoration of status quo 601

Digitized by Google

Page
Restraint of trade..... 90
Right of privacy declared..... 537
Sale by commercial traveler—evidence..... 426
Sale by sample—acceptance..... 729
Sales—mortgage by conditional vendee..... 548
Sales—right of buyer to return goods..... 90
Sale—warranty—acceptance—notice..... 12
Seduction—artifices..... 490
Slander—words imputing larceny..... 522
Specific performance—defect of title..... 491
Statute of frauds—sale..... 42
Stockholders' liability—transfer 266
Stockholders, suits by..... 266
Street railroads—contributory negligence.. 503
Street railroads—crossings..... 487

Page
Street railways—persons approaching car not passengers..... 42
Strike—conspiracy—picketing..... 729
Subrogation—paying incumbrance for another—agreement for subrogation..... 555
Suits in forma pauperis..... 650
Sunday law—public policy..... 12
Taxation—notice of tax sale to owner..... 484
Telegrams—delay in delivery..... 487
Trademark—registration..... 89
Trade unions—breach of contract..... 828
Unfair competition 648
Vendor's lien—limitations..... 3
Wills—incorporation of documents by reference..... 70

Ex. J.N.
1/10/06

Digitized by Google

5026 030

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

ACME
BOOKBINDING CO., INC.
JUN 1 4 1984
100 [illegible] STREET
CHARLESTOWN, MASS.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google